HOOVER BOOM GROWS AS G. O. P. CONFAB NEARS

Victory Is Possible on First Ballot.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 28.—[Special.]—Herbert Hoover appears destined to go into the Republican national convention with a delegate strength so close to a majority that his nomination for President on the first ballot would not be surprising.

Furthermore, it is entirely possible that Hoover will gain a sufficient number of delegates in the next three or four weeks to establish his nomination on the first ballot as a certainty, in which event the convention battle will be over before it is begun.

These conclusions are the result of a survey of the fortunes of the respective candidates for the Republican nomination at the close of this week. Hoover now has approximately 330 of the 1,089 delegates who will sit in the Kansas City convention. Exclusive of Indiana and other states in which the fate remains to be seen, the commerce secretary is assured of about [illegible] additional delegates who will be chosen in the next five weeks.

Needs 545 Votes to Win.

It therefore is reasonable to calculate that Hoover will go to Kansas City with not less than 500 delegates to his credit. The majority of the convention necessary to nominate is 545. It would take only 45 band wagon jumpers to put him across on the first ballot.

With Hoover forging so sensationally toward a majority the corn belt leaders are preparing for a last desperate stand in the convention to halt Hoover and nominate Lowden or Dawes and to write a corn belt farm relief plank into the Republican platform. In the effort to stop Hoover the corn belt is receiving the coöperation of the eastern Republican leaders who are dissatisfied with the secretary of commerce and have not given up hope of deadlocking the convention and drafting President Coolidge for another term.

Lowden now has approximately 185 delegates and is destined to pick up [illegible] or 90 more in primaries and conventions yet to be held. He might get a few more from contests under favorable circumstances. Altogether, however, it does not seem likely that he will have more than 250 votes on the first ballot. To nominate Lowden it will be necessary to gather to his support virtually all of the anti-Hoover elements in the convention with their conflicting interests and to do so in the face of an opponent who is almost within reach of his goal, is an exceedingly difficult undertaking.

Farmers Like Dawes.

It is evident that under the circumstances likely to obtain at the time it is going to be far easier to combine all the anti-Hoover elements on Dawes than on Lowden, for Dawes is acceptable not only to the farmer contingents supporting Lowden, but to influential financial interests in the east, which are cold to the former Illinois governor. The Vice President, however, is stanchly devoted to Lowden and will not allow the anti-Hoover forces to put him forward unless Lowden should withdraw. By that time, the Vice President's friends fear, it may be too late.

The corn belt plans to halt Hoover by the threat of bolting the Republican ticket unless the party names a candidate and writes a platform acceptable to the western farmers who are fighting for farm relief legislation of the character of the McNary-Haugen bill. The corn belt leaders have based their convention campaign on [illegible] which they are confident will demonstrate most impressively the danger of losing the middle west the party will court if it nominates Hoover or any other opponent of the corn belt brand of farm relief.

The first battle will be fought over the farm plank of the platform. The corn belt will seek to procure the insertion of a plank declaring for [illegible] to enhance the prices of farm products on the domestic market along the lines of the McNary-Haugen bill, which presumably by that time will have gone into the discard by virtue of a second veto by President Coolidge. This prospective veto will make the issue between the western farmers and the eastern industrialists [illegible].

Corn Belt Wants Showdown.

The corn belt intends to force a showdown with the G. O. P. on the issue whether agriculture is to be given legislation to enable it to boost its income while industry, finance, the railroads and labor continue to receive

SENATOR HERE; DEMANDS PARTY FACE ISSUES

Calls Soft Campaign Omen of Defeat.

Senator William E. Borah of Idaho, in an address before the Hamilton club last night, issued a warning to the Republican party leaders meeting at Kansas City next June. His warning was both as to candidate and platform.

"It is my opinion," he said in his first address outside Washington this year, "that the world will judge the Republican party not by what took place prior to the time the facts became known, but by what the party did after the facts were known."

Takes Teapot as Text.

Senator Borah took for his topic the corruption that has been revealed in the Teapot Dome and other scandals, ignoring prohibition and declaring that he was not out to oppose or help any aspirant for the presidential nomination.

"Nothing could be worse," he said "than the facts lately revealed at Washington.

"This is the year of the great election. I seem to see an aroused and deeply interested electorate. Nothing could be more imperative. Ours is the best of governments when the people are vigilant—the worst when the people are indifferent. Above all things, I trust we will have an aroused people, a fighting campaign.

"If I were going to stress one thing, more than all others essential to successful political warfare, it would be a courageous statement of position on the part of candidates.

Courageous Leaders Needed.

"The party is not responsible for what has taken place in secret, but it is responsible for what it does in the future.

"Courageous leaders, a clean platform of principles, are all that the party is waiting for. Give the voters these and the voters will demonstrate that the Republican party belongs neither to crooks or cowards. If this is not done, I do not seek to penetrate the veil.

"If money can control affairs in politics, the people are disfranchised. This fight is to solve the problem of how the selfish interests in politics can be restrained from domination. There never will be a greater moral problem to present to the American people than clean government, at a time when it is being assailed throughout the United States.

Asks for Principles First.

"Organization, strategy, the card index and the check book have their place, but they must remember that the American people never respond to anything so much as a great principle.

"We hear it said that the democratic form of government is breaking down. Make no mistake that upon the great fundamental questions of national honor there is an unsatiated interest and a sure instinct. No organization dare go into the campaign forgetting for a moment that the people believe in clean government and clean politics. You have had a manifestation of that in Illinois.

"It is a safe proposition for a man seeking the presidency, if he hasn't any views to hunt up some and state them.

Cites Lincoln's Conviction.

"Lincoln had a conviction. He did care. He had an issue and he stepped into the presidency. If the candidates do not present the issues in this campaign there are those who are not candidates who will present them. We must present the questions on which the people are thinking. In my judgment the convention at Kansas City will do that. If so the nominee in all probability will be the next President.

"The issue is here. It is no ordinary situation. The future of our party turns on how we propose to meet it.

Mentions Tax Laws.

"I would not overlook the great questions which make for our material welfare. Our tax laws, our revenue laws, economy in government, the rehabilitation of the farms, the control of our rivers, the staying of the growth of bureaucracy, which is as arbitrary as fascism, as demoralizing as communism.

"But I would place above them all, in the platform and in the program and purposes of the party, as first in imminence and first in importance, a pure ballot, a clean government and the integrity of the constitution under which we live."

THE MASTER OF THE WORLD

SYNOPSIS.

Paul Rayburn, a scientist employed by the Grannett company, discovers a method by which he thinks he can talk to Mars. He loses his job, but continues his experiments, and, after financial difficulties, in which he is aided by Theodora Downs, the rather plain cousin of his former employer's daughter, Eleanor Grannett, he gets into communication with Mars, learning, among other things, how to change gold into platinum and how to make women beautiful.

He tries the latter experiment on homely Theodora and she blossoms forth into a beautiful girl. When public announcement is made that he can change gold into platinum it causes a sensation and he is besieged with callers and messages from all over the world. The announcement causes Grannett and his daughter to postpone a trip to Europe and Grannett takes up with his lawyers the question of getting control of Rayburn's inventions.

Later Rayburn astounds the world by conquering the secret of utilizing atomic power, but when a delegation of citizens called on him to use his new power cautiously he told them to reserve some of their surprise, as he had greater discoveries to reveal.

While two million people waited to witness the demonstration which Rayburn had promised, he appeared over their heads in an airplane, which he stopped in mid-air. While the crowd gazed in horror he released the landing gear and wings and then caused the plane to rise and descend, apparently without any power.

Rayburn is waited upon by a group of eminent financiers who have agreed to offer him $1,000,000 for his inventions, while admitting among themselves that they are worth five billions, but, reading their minds, he laughs at them and leaves them astounded. For his next experiment, Rayburn selects Fay Thornton, known on the stage as the world's homliest woman, and announces that he will make her beautiful.

CHAPTER XXVI.

Every performance of "The Homely Heroine," starring Miss Fay Thornton, had been packed since the widely heralded "beauty" experiment had begun.

During the first two weeks Miss Thornton appeared as usual, superlatively homely, irresistibly funny. Then public interest was intensified when she appeared wearing a gauzy veil that blurred the outlines of her features. At the end of the third week this veil was replaced by a heavy one, wholly obscuring her face.

Thenceforth at no time was the public permitted to see her unveiled. Even in the privacy of her hotel she maintained this baffling screen. Bell boys and chambermaids, liberally subsidized, were unable to catch her unawares.

"Press agent stuff," scoffed the cynical, "but darned clever and effective, just the same. Fay must be getting a big laugh out of all this ballyhoo."

But not so. With her manager and her press agent she was holding a conference in her rooms. Doors were locked against intruders, and window curtains were carefully drawn. The two men sat with solemn, dazed faces regarding Fay Thornton, queen of laughter, but now a tragic queen.

"Well, what are we to do?" she demanded. "For heaven's sake, say something! Don't sit there like bumps on a log." For the twentieth time she nervously leaped from her chair to pace the apartment, each time glancing with awed fascination into a tall mirror. "What effect will this have on my career?"

With an effort the manager roused from his trance. He must say something cheery.

"Why, Fay, you'll go bigger than ever before. Every woman in the world will want to see you now."

"Yes, maybe so, but will you please tell me how I am to play my type of rôles looking like this? Imagine me in a comedy rôle!"

"Forget it! You'll draw bigger than ever. You don't believe it? All right. I'll sign you up for a new contract for double the figure. That's how I feel."

Her face relaxed. "That's different again," she said. "Mind you, I don't object to this change. I'm tickled pink. After living with that face for at least forty years I find the change refreshing, to say the least—even though I nearly lose an eye every time I look in the mirror."

Again she arose and paused before the glass, gazing wonderingly at the reflection of loveliness it revealed. She smiled gently and it was as though a sunbeam had glorified the room. There was a suspicion of moisture in her eye.

The two men, staring as at something their senses refused to credit, were silenced by the transcendent change in her appearance. It partook of the supernatural. It was difficult to speak lightly in the presence of this miracle.

They shuffled uncomfortably, cigars long gone out, never removing their entranced eyes from the vision before them.

She came and sat down.

"Listen," she said, "I'll go through with it. Last week when I first saw the change I was tempted to call it off. My homeliness has been my greatest asset. I've capitalized it. I took no stock in Rayburn's stuff, but it meant a lot of free advertising." She shrugged her shoulders. "Now it's different. He has succeeded. I can never play comedy rôles again looking like this. But I'll go through with it."

"When will Rayburn be through?" asked the manager.

"Another week, he says."

"Well, then, here's the dope. We'll announce that you will appear unveiled one week from tonight. We'll make no claims, but we'll run full page ads in all the papers, and when people see those, they'll know something's doing. They can't buy a seat as it is."

The eventful evening came. The house, even the aisles, was packed. Fire regulations were swept down. Out in the street thousands of people milled about, unable to get in. Traffic was blocked. An army of photographers and reporters thronged the stage entrance awaiting the signal for their admission.

The curtain arose. The introductory scene, in which the lesser characters appeared, was played in an atmosphere of electric excitement, reminding one of the preliminaries before a heavyweight fight for the world's championship.

As the moment for Fay Thornton's first appearance drew nearer there was a hush of expectancy, of nervous tenseness almost unbearable. A woman screamed and fainted, and was carried out almost unnoticed by the audience.

Abruptly the orchestra stopped. A breathless moment passed. Then from the right wing Miss Thornton entered with head bowed, like a Madonna.

There was a second of stunned silence, then a gasp that swept the house—then pandemonium! An explosion of cheers like the bursting of a shell rocked the house. Everybody was up shouting like mad.

She approached the footlights, then raised her face, fully revealing its unearthly loveliness, and with a slight motion of her hand signaled for quiet.

ARE YOUR CLOCKS AN HOUR FAST? THEY SHOULD BE!

Good morning! Did you set your clock ahead one hour before you went to bed last night? Because if you didn't you're just sixty minutes behind the rest of the city where daylight saving time officially went into effect at 2 a. m. today.

More than 3,000,000 hours of sleep are lost each spring on the last Sunday in April when the time saving schedule goes into effect. Those who regret the loss will have the opportunity of making up the hour while they sleep on the last Sunday in September, when the clocks are set back again.

The following railroads will remain on standard time, but adjust their suburban service to agree with the change: Northwestern, Pennsylvania, New York Central, Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific; North Shore and South Shore electric lines. The Illinois Central, Burlington, Rock Island, and Chicago, Aurora and Elgin will operate on the daylight saving schedule.

Harry Langdon's Wife for 25 Years Granted Divorce

Hollywood, Cal., April 28.—[Special.]—Mrs. Rose Francis Langdon, for 25 years the wife of Harry Langdon and for 22 years his partner in vaudeville, won an uncontested divorce decree today. Cruelty charges and allegations of association with other women were not pressed at the hearing, the decree being awarded on the ground of desertion. It was stated that Langdon had paid his wife $70,000 and tendered her an interest in his profits from several films.

Surface Cars Crash in Loop; Twenty Hurt

More than twenty persons were injured, several of them seriously, yesterday afternoon in a crash of two surface cars at Madison and Franklin streets.

The accident occurred while a rerouted Madison street car, with a trailer, was turning from Franklin street, east on Madison.

During the swing the coupling bar snapped, the trailer jumped the track and ran onto the westbound track into the path of a crowded Armitage-Grand avenue car.

The Armitage car struck the trailer in the center, crushing one side. Some of the injured were pinned against the seats and others were hurled against the windows and the floor.

Aged Woman May Die.

Most seriously injured was an unidentified woman about 70 years old. She was taken to the Iroquois hospital. There it was discovered she had a skull fracture. She later was removed to the county hospital.

Others on the list of injured were: Joseph Pykosz, 15, of 1916 North Oakley boulevard; Miss Anna Pearson, 30, and her sister, Miss Elvira Pearson, 28, of 103 Berteau avenue, Elmhurst; Mrs. Jennie Opotowsky, 34, of 1504 North Washtenaw avenue, and her husband, Daniel; Stanley Kadae, 34, of 1461 Tell place; Mrs. Anna Stetcher, 33, of 2926 Narragansett avenue, and her 12 year old daughter, Glennes; Mrs. Amanda Matefski, 30, of 2312 North Central Park avenue, and John Francis, 50, of 1013 West Madison street.

Many Others Hurt.

Mrs. Netta Henschein, 1900 North Richmond street, suffered injuries to her legs; James Campbell, 59, of 3236 West Monroe street, was internally injured. Mrs. Pearl Somers of Des Plaines was crushed against a seat and seriously hurt, as was Miss Jean Krouse, 22, of 11 North Paulina street, a reporter for the Detroit Free Press.

George Wright, a member of THE TRIBUNE editorial staff, suffered a wrenched back and cuts on the legs. Mrs. James Deubel, 36, of 404 South Maple street, Oak Park, and her 7 year old son, Bernard, were slightly injured.

Most of the victims were treated at the Iroquois hospital by Drs. Edwin Wachlin and C. H. Richburg.

Bets $6,000 to $5,000 Hoover Wins Nomination

New York, April 28.—[Special.]—Herbert Hoover was quoted today for the first time in election betting as an odds on favorite for the Republican nomination for president when J. S. Fried & Co. reported a wager of $6,000 to $5,000 on the secretary of commerce.

P. E. Anderson Is Victim of Heart Disease

Palmer E. Anderson, United States marshal for the northern district of Illinois, was found dead yesterday afternoon in his room at the Hotel La Salle, where he had resided for about two and a half years. Heart disease apparently was the cause of death

Mr. Anderson, who was about 60 years old, had returned to Chicago on Friday from Washington, where he went on business connected with his office. Yesterday morning he was in the Federal building and appeared in good health and spirits.

Fails to Answer Phone.

Shortly after 2 p. m. he retired to his room, leaving instructions that he be called at 4:30 o'clock. When he failed to answer the ringing of his telephone bell, the operator notified D. C. Hughes, assistant hotel manager. Hughes and a house detective, J. Warren, entered the marshal's room with a skeleton key.

They found the body of Mr. Anderson, clad only in undergarments, on the floor. It is believed that he was stricken as he dressed. Dr. Samuel Graden, house physician, was summoned, and after making an examination asserted that all the evidence pointed to a heart attack.

Protégé of Senator McKinley.

Mr. Anderson, a resident of Princeton, became a powerful political figure as the protégé of the late United States Senator William B. McKinley. In July, 1921, he was made chief deputy collector of internal revenue here, a position he held until February, 1925, when he was appointed marshal to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Robert R. Levy.

Recently he had been on friendly terms with the Deneen faction in Republican politics. Shortly before the recent primary election he suggested to his superiors in Washington that the federal forces should furnish polls guards in the interest of a clean primary election. The suggestion was not accepted.

Plans to Attend Madden Rites.

During the morning yesterday Mr. Anderson was in conversation with Anthony Czarnecki, collector of the port, and they had made arrangements to attend the funeral of Congressman Martin B. Madden, who died Friday.

Mr. Anderson is survived by his widow and one daughter, who are in Boulder, Colo., where the daughter was taken in the hope of benefit to her health. Postmaster Arthur C. Lueder, a close friend of the marshal, was trying to locate Mrs. Anderson last night to inform her of her husband's death.

No funeral arrangements will be made until her wishes have been ascertained. The body was taken to the Western undertaking establishment at 226 West Randolph street, where an inquest will be held tomorrow.

AMBUSH POLICE CHIEF IN SUBURB; COMPANION SHOT

Police Sergt. Fred L. Molkentine, 40 years old, of Riverside, was shot and probably fatally wounded last night while riding with Chief Arthur A. Beltz of the North Riverside police in the latter's squad car. The shooting was done by men in two large automobiles which met the chief's machine just north of 22nd street on Des Plaines avenue. Beltz had been lured to the place by a false report of an automobile wreck.

As the first of the gangsters' car passed, a volley was fired into Beltz's machine, which he turned into the ditch. One bullet struck Molkentine under the right eye. Almost immediately the second machine passed and another volley was fired at the car. Chief Beltz returned the fire and the two machines speeded south toward Riverside. Molkentine was hurried to the Berwyn hospital where he is in a critical condition.

The ambush of the chief is believed to be an aftermath of the recent bitter village election in which President Robert B. Noha was victorious and which was marked by sluggings and violence, Chester Boody, a Noha aid, being one of the victims of the sluggers.

200,000 MILES LINDY'S RECORD AS AIR TOURIST

Washington, D. C., April 28.—[U.P.]—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh has flown about 200,000 miles in his career as pilot, according to a report filed with the aeronautics branch of the commerce department. Upon renewal of his transport license this week he reported his hours in the air at 2,520, number of flights at 7,800 and number of passengers carried also 7,800.

Col. Lindbergh's air mileage, excluding his recent flight to New York and Quebec, is equivalent to eight trips around the world. He originally obtained a transport license on April 23, 1927.

10,000 SHOUT N. Y.'S WELCOME TO AIR HEROES

May Fly the Bremen Back to Ireland.

New York, April 28.—[Special.]—Three men, the first to fly westward over the Atlantic, landed in New York today from a train. They were dazed and tired men when they stumbled into the Ritz-Carlton tonight, vowing they had rather face combat in the air—and they know what that is—than meet such an overwhelming welcome as this city gave them.

Baron Gunther von Huenefeld, Capt. Herman Koehl, and Maj. James Fitzmaurice, the crew of the Bremen, had reached their destination after seventeen weary days.

They had been met at the Pennsylvania station by a crowd of 10,000, which almost bowled over tight police lines, been dazzled by flashlights and cheered to the echo and then taken for a wild ride up 5th avenue to their hotel.

Tonight they were shepherded by Mayor Walker in his most hospitable mood, with the aid of other city officials and friends and relatives, but not even the mayor's guardianship could keep throngs from besieging the room to shake hands with the first men to fly the Atlantic from east to west.

Crowds Fill Station.

The flyers came into the Pennsylvania station at 6:10 o'clock from Washington, where they had been to lay flags and flowers on the grave of Floyd Bennett.

The mayor's committee of welcome, headed by Mayor Walker and Grover Whalen, was there with a cavalcade of 15 automobiles. On the platform were other well known men, famous flyers, high officers, members of German and Irish societies. Among the aviators were Commander Richard E. Byrd and Clarence Chamberlin.

Stairs, railings, newsstands, even the lofty steel girders that support the dome of the station were dotted with homage paying thousands. The 300 police inside the station had a difficult time keeping them back. When the train drew in the flyers hurried out and were warmly greeted by Mayor Walker. As they walked toward their automobile, flashlights boomed, filling the place with the fumes of powder.

Baron Sticks to Monocle.

The baron was smiling as usual with his monocle in his eye. Short Capt. Koehl bounced along beside him. Then came Fitzmaurice, smiling an Irish smile and much the object of attention by the crowd, though it was hard to tell who got the warmest welcome.

As soon as they reached their cars the procession started, tearing up 7th avenue over through 34th street to 5th avenue and then up to the Ritz-Carlton. There they were hurried into a suite on the ninth floor, while policemen barred the way to all but a favored few who numbered about fifty, quite enough to jam the rooms.

Give First Interview.

A few minutes later the flyers gave their first formal interviews. They all three made it very emphatic that they are going to make another ocean flight. Whether it will be back to Europe or whether they will return to their homes by steamer and repeat their westbound flight they have not yet decided.

They acknowledged that they did not have any sextant with which to take observations of the sun or stars. The next time they will have both sextant and wireless, they said.

Maj. Fitzmaurice made it clear that the flight they have just accomplished was no mere spectacular stunt, attempted in a haphazard, hit or miss fashion. He said the flight was thoroughly planned in advance and all questions of chance were eliminated.

"We will be able to talk of our next flight," he said, "when we have had time to discuss things at length, giving every point the proper consideration."

Nungesser Recalled.

In reply to a question, Maj. Fitzmaurice declared he though it very possible that Nungesser and Coli, believed lost in their attempt to span the Atlantic in a westerly flight last year, might have landed on this side.

"We make no claim to being the first to cross," he said, "because they might have made it."

"We never doubted that we would land safely," Fitzmaurice told Mayor Walker. "If we had we wouldn't have started."

Regarding commercial transportation by air across the Atlantic, Fitzmaurice said he believed "organization is what is needed to make commercial ocean flying a reality." Capt. Koehl said that their compass worked well, but that off the coast of Labrador there was some magnetic disturbance, and this, he believed, was one of the reasons they were thrown so far north of their course.

"Flying over the ocean is not finished," he told newspaper men. "It is possible that we may fly back, but many things have to be settled first. We realize that we will need more instruments to fly back and land at Baldonnel field."

To Bring Plane to U. S.

Regarding the fate of the Bremen, still on Greenly island, Capt. Koehl said:

"We hope to get it in about 14 days and fly to Mitchel field. In the meantime a mechanic will be sent up to look it over."

Neither motor nor ship, he said, needs overhauling. "The motor is in perfect condition, but needs tuning up," he explained.

There were no international complications en route, both the captain and the major explained when they were asked how they managed to get along in view of the fact that they spoke different languages.

"Why, Capt. Koehl speaks perfect English," Maj. Fitzmaurice laughed, while the German flyer shrugged his shoulders deprecatingly.

A microphone was installed in their rooms and the three flyers made brief talk over the radio. All commented on the enthusiastic welcome accorded them yesterday and Baron von Huenefeld expressed the sorrow felt by his companions and himself over the death of Floyd Bennett.

Koehl Phones Mother.

A trans-Atlantic telephone conversation between Capt. Koehl and his mother in Germany was inadvertently included in the program when Koehl stood too close to the microphone while conversing.

New York City's welcoming program starts tomorrow and continues until Friday, excepting Wednesday, when the flyers will be the guests of the German ambassador at Washington and will be presented to President Coolidge.

The flyers will attend church tomorrow morning and will be the guests of Mayor Walker at the Lambs' gambol at the Metropolitan opera house in the evening. Monday night they will be the guests of the mayor at a theater party at the Winter Garden.

The ceremonies Monday start at 8:30 a. m., when the municipal steamer Riverside leaves the Battery and goes to quarantine to meet the steamship Dresden, on which Mrs. Koehl, Mrs. Fitzmaurice, and Patricia Fitzmaurice will arrive. The flyers' families will be taken to the Battery.

PAY BENNETT HOMAGE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 28.—[Special.]—Huenefeld, Koehl, and Fitzmaurice, the German-Irish crew of the Bremen, left for New York by train shortly after noon today.

The three trans-Atlantic heroes paid silent tribute this morning at the flag strewn grave of Floyd Bennett, another hero of the air, who died of pneumonia while attempting to rescue them from the icebound island where they had found safety after their perilous westward flight across the Atlantic.

Voted Flying Cross.

The flyers will return to Washington Wednesday to receive the official welcome of the American government and the congratulations of President Coolidge and other high officials.

Although they did not know it when the train departed, the house and senate had voted to award the distinguished flying cross to the three heroes.

The President will award the medals Wednesday.

The exercises at Arlington were solemn. Only the soft monotone of the radio announcer and the patter of raindrops could be heard as the flyers faced the east, heads bared, at Bennett's grave.

Capt. Koehl was the first to step forward. Reverently, he placed his floral tribute, inscribed, "In fond memory of a great flyer whose soul has flown to the Last Flying Field."

Baron Pays Tribute.

The baron Von Huenefeld then stepped forward and draped the flag of the German republic—black, white, and red—over the drenched turf. A moment later Maj. Fitzmaurice laid the green, white, and orange flag of the Irish Free State beside the German emblem. Both flags were brought across the ocean in the Bremen. Miss Junkers followed with a wreath.

FOUND DEAD OF GAS IN HOME.

Gaetano Caligendo, 60, of 569 Taylor street, who had been despondent over illness, was found asphyxiated by gas in his home yesterday.

BOYS DISCOVER 100 MUMMIES IN CAVE IN MEXICO

Bodies Indicate All Were Put to Death.

CHIHUAHUA, Mexico, April 28.—(AP)—The mummified bodies of more than a hundred men, women and children discovered in a mountain cave near San Juan Nepomuceno bore silent witness to their living incarceration.

The men who braved the foul air of the cavern declared even the bodies of the women and children showed their hands had been bound together with strings about their thumbs. The sharp contraction of the muscles of the face of one body which was removed to this city seemed to show death had come only after intense suffering.

Victims of Barbarity.

The discovery that some at least of those who died had been bound, quashed a theory that the band had been wiped out in some natural tragedy, such as the blocking of the cave entrance by an earthquake. Instead arose the speculation as to who in the troubled history of Mexico had inflicted this barbarous death.

Two young goatherds who were hunting for wild honey stumbled on the mummies. Some were ranged along the walls, the majority were squatting on the floor, while others were in more distorted postures.

The youths, frightened, hurriedly notified the authorities, who organized an exploring party. They found beside the bodies objects resembling knives and tomahawks as well as large bundles believed to have contained clothing.

May Date Back to Conquest.

One body, perfectly preserved, although two teeth dropped out as it was being brought here, was removed to the village and turned over to Deputy Juan Chavez.

National officials have ordered it sent to Mexico City for study in an effort to learn the time in which these people lived and the manner of their deaths. Some believe they were placed in their living tomb as early as the Spanish conquest.

U. S. FLEET SLIPS BY 'ENEMY' SHIPS, MAKES HONOLULU

HONOLULU, April 28.—(AP)—Nearly one hundred ships of the United States battle fleet maneuvered at sea for ten days and, so far as is known, where never sighted by the "enemy" force that was sent out to locate them. This was the assertion made here today by Admiral Louis R. Desteiguer, commander in chief of the battle fleet, which terminated the first phase of its war game between the mainland and Hawaii.

The submarines that accompanied the battle fleet to Hawaii functioned well, Admiral Desteiguer said.

"We had a fine trip of ten days, and the submarines were really the outstanding feature of it. They were able to keep up with the fleet after being cast adrift. The S-24 made the entire voyage under its own power as did the V-1, V-2, and V-3."

Senate Approves Medal in Honor of Lindy's Flight

Washington, D. C., April 28.—[U. P.]—The senate today passed unanimously a house bill providing that a medal be designed to commemorate Col. Lindbergh's trans-Atlantic flight. The senate also passed a bill for a gold medal for Lincoln Ellsworth.

AMERICAN FILMS WITHDRAW FROM FRANCE TODAY

PARIS, April 28.—(AP)—American producers will cease showing their films for sale in France on Monday, ending, for the time being, the American film business in this country, unless the government modifies its decree restricting importations.

The first consequence of the announcement is serious agitation among 8,000 French employés of American motion picture concerns who fear that they will be out of work soon.

The three principal theaters in Paris which run American films almost exclusively are expected to close.

Will H. Hays, representing the American producers, will interview Minister of Public Instruction Eduard Herriot on Monday or Tuesday.

Polish Flyers Forced Down on Triall Flight

LE BOURGET FIELD, PARIS, April 28.—[U. P.]—Maj. Louis Idzikowski and Maj. Casmir Kubala, prospective trans-Atlantic flyers, were forced to land near Abbeville while on a trial flight today, a radio dispatch said.

The aviators are undecided whether to fly direct to New York or via the Azores.

GERMAN-IRISH AIRMEN TO FLY OWN PLANE HERE

May 12 Set as Probable Date for Visit.

Maj. Fitzmaurice, Capt. Koehl, and Baron von Huenefeld, the trans-Atlantic aviators, will fly their own plane, the Bremen, to Chicago, probably on May 12, a week from Saturday, according to the latest word received here regarding the flyers' plans.

Congressman Fred A. Britten wired the new report yesterday afternoon to George Getz, chairman of the mayor's citizens committee, which is handling arrangements for the local reception.

Message from Britten.

His telegram read as follows:

"German Irish overseas flyers last night determined to fly back to Greenly island with repair parts for the Bremen and then fly the Bremen to New York with the positive understanding that they will then fly to Chicago. Return date to New York being indefinite, the German ambassador thinks flyers will not reach Chicago until latter part of second week in May."

In an earlier telegram, Congressman Britten stated that Chicago will be the only inland city to which the flyers will pay a visit, indicating that they expect to return to the east immediately after the trip here. Previously, it had been thought that they would make a tour of the entire country.

Aldermen Go East.

The official welcoming committee, headed by Ald. A. J. Horan [29th], left for Washington at noon yesterday, expecting to meet the flyers at the capitol. The committee will probably try to catch them in New York or missing them there will likely leave one or two members to deliver the city's invitation upon their return. Members of th committee making the trip are Alds. Horan, William Feigenbutz [45th, George Maypole [28th], Dorsey Crowe [43d], John J. Hoellen [47th] and A. E. Loesher [44th].

Plans of the citizens' committee for the reception are already virtually completed.

Plan to Exhibit Plane.

After circling Grant park, the Bremen is expected to land at the Municipal airport, 63d street and Cicero avenue, where it will be put on public exhibition. The flyers will be brought to the loop where they will head a parade ending at Soldiers' Field. There the city's Irish and German organizations will stage an entertainment of drills, singing, and speechmaking. A banquet at the Stevens hotel in the evening will conclude the ceremonies.

Bennett's Mother Taken Ill on Trip to Her Home

Albany, N. Y., April 28.—(AP)—Mrs. Henrietta Bennett, mother of Floyd Bennett, who gave his life in attempting to fly to the assistance of the Bremen's crew at Greenly island, was removed from a train here today because of illness and taken to her home at Lake George by auto. The aviator's aged mother was described as prostrated by worry over the death of her son. The party was returning from the funeral when Mrs. Bennett was taken ill.

Fitzmaurice, Atlantic Flyer, Tells of His Amazement at Vast Spaces of America

BY MAJ. J. C. FITZMAURICE.

[Copyright: 1928: In the United States, Canada, South America, and Cuba: By the New York Times. Copyright: In Great Britain and Ireland: By the Irish Times.]

New York, April 28.—This reception today has been so much beyond anything which we expected that somehow I feel that nothing we have done is worthy of it. Flyers look upon their work much as other people do, and even after a flight like our it is difficult to realize why people make such a fuss over us. But that we are gratified and pleased is putting it mildly.

This whole trip has been such a matter of contrasts that it is hard to take it all in. We have been in so many different places and seen so many different things. Just think of leaving Erin's green island and landing on the bleak, snowy coast of Canadian Labrador—on a tiny island buried in the ice; and then of flying south out of all that ice and snow to the brown hillsides of America and the towering buildings of New York! It has been an amazing experience.

America's Vastness Awes Him.

Ireland is a small country and a beautiful country, famous for its scenery. It is closely organized and thickly settled, and its little farms and cottages dot its green landscape and line its curving and flower bordered roads. There are the hedges and the red fuchsias which make the roads so beautiful. I can understand why so many people go to see Ireland now after the snow and ice and brown fields we have flown over, for Ireland is always green.

Your country is so large, and the farms are so scattered and there are great tracts of land to a house. I think that struck me as soon as we got away from the snow, that and the long, straight roads. It is not artistic as my country is, although it is large and somewhat overpowering as one sees it from the air. I thought I knew something of the geography of America, but I never realized that it was so big, so raw, and new. It is efficient, but you will understand me when I say it is not yet artistic as is our old country.

Finds Us Very Efficient.

And it is efficient, very efficient. But to set off this efficiency there is a wholehearted enthusiasm here which I doubt could be equaled in any other country in the world. Certainly our welcome could not have been surpassed in any other country.

The trip down from Canada was extremely interesting to me, as can be guessed from what I have said, and after seeing the countryside I looked forward to a view of your great city. I had heard so much about the skyscrapers and wanted to see them from the air for the first time. We were disappointed when we arrived over Manhattan because of the pea soup fog, which almost hid everything, but Bernt Balchen, who knew the city, managed to bring us down close enough so that we could see something.

It was a wonderful sight. These huge buildings towering up in the air seemed to express all the aspiration of your people. There is nothing like them in the world. To look down on them is astonishing; to look up at them must be more so. We have not been able to do that yet because we have not yet been in the city, except in a closed car. They have a very curious formation from the air, but it occurred to me that it would not do to build them too high, and I remembered the Tower of Babel and the confusion it led to.

That flight over the city which Balchen gave us makes me think gratefully of him. I cannot speak too highly of him. He has been everything that a good pilot should be—generous, thoughtful, and untiring in his efforts to do what he could for us. He is a splendid fellow, and I am glad that I have been able to meet him.

Crowds "Rather Rough."

After our landing at Curtiss field yesterday we were surprised by the way in which the crowd gathered at the Pennsylvania station. It was rather rough going for a time. I remember particularly one big policeman, named O'Grady, who said he had a coat of arms in Ireland that went back to the dim ages and that he was damned proud of being Irish. I feel safe more or less in New York, for I believe we own the police force and there isn't much danger of being run in while here.

There is one thing which I would like to impress on people, and that is that our visit Friday was merely for Bennett. Otherwise, we would not have come in when we did, for we realized that it was somewhat upsetting to have us land that way. We wanted to do what we could to show our deep feeling for the man who had tried so hard to help us.

Pays Tribute to Bennett.

I can't express our feelings toward him, nor how we feel as the result of his death. I am sure Bennett would wish that we did not say much about it. He was not a talker; he was a doer, one of the finest men.

Now that we are here, we almost feel that we are being welcomed to an extent greater than we deserve. We set out to do a job, and we did it; but while people are being kind to us let them not forget the other brave men who led the way and pause for a moment to do honor to the dead—Nungesser and Coli, Minchin and Hamilton, and Hinchliffe. I knew them all except Nungesser and Coli, and they were brave men. Let us remember them also.

GET RICH QUICK LURE OF FLYING SCHOOLS BARED

More than 3,000 young men, attracted by the lure of possible riches to be gained from commercial flying, are studying at seventeen aviation schools in the Chicago district. An investigation by THE TRIBUNE, completed yesterday, revealed that the schools, with a few exceptions, promise students they will be given high paying positions upon completion of a course. These promises are not fulfilled in 99 per cent of the cases, it was found. A reporter, posing as an aviator, visited every one of these schools. His experiences will be detailed in a series of articles.

BY WILLARD EDWARDS.

"Get into the Air for Fun, Fame, and Fortune! Would YOU like to be in Lindbergh's shoes?"

J. E. Janus, eloquent manager of the Commercial Aviation company, shook a forefinger at the young man who had just inquired, somewhat timidly, if he could "learn to be an aviator." The young man had confessed that he was from this country, had a little money saved up, didn't know anything about flying, but had heard there was money in it.

The one-room office on the fourth floor at 542 South Dearborn street in which Mr. Janus sat was somewhat dingy.

"The First Step to Riches."

"You have taken the first step towards a career in the livest industry in the country," he said. "Yes, sir, it's a tremendously interesting line of business carrying with it the richest rewards. In fact, you will find it more like fun and sport than work and still you have every chance to make a fortune."

"Our course," Mr. Janus declared, "is exactly the same as the government gives you. It only takes from three to nine months. You get ten hours of flying which is necessary for you to get a license. When you finish, we help find you a job.

"We send your school record to 564 airplane manufacturers and we have an average of 84 responses. All you have to do is pick your job."

The Opportunities Listed.

Mr. Janus plucked from his pocket with the air of a magician a yellow card and tossed it upon the desk before the applicant. The card was headed: "Opportuities," and it read:

"Aerial Commercial Service — No limit in salary.

"Aerial Surveying and Mapping—00 to $400 a month.

"Forest Ranger—$250 a month.

"Aerial Taxi Service—No limit.

"Instructor—$45 to $150 per week.

"Aeronautical Contractor—$100 to 00 a week.

"Airplane Mechanic—$45 to $65 a week.

"Airplane Builder—$75 to $200 a week.

$100 Down; Rest Per Week.

"Now, you're from the country," continued Mr. Janus. "We take an especial interest in boys like you. We'll help to find you a nice boarding place and we'll find you a job. We have a welfare department which does nothing but help students with their employment problems."

He paused a moment, meaningly, and the applicant sensed that he was expected to broach the delicate subject of fees.

"I've got about $100," said the young man. "I don't know what your course costs, but I thought I could put something down and work while I was learning to fly."

"We have a special arrangement for young men like you," Mr. Janus continued. "The course costs $375, but you can pay $100 down and a few dollars a week."

Weak Eyes? Get Lenses.

"I'm afraid my eyes are poor," continued the applicant hesitantly. "Would that have any effect on my getting a license?"

"You can have lenses ground for your goggles to correct that," Mr. Janus assured him. "Now, here's a contract. You must get into this right now because my special offer expires at midnight."

The applicant was a TRIBUNE investigator and his assignment did not include the signing of contracts, so he tore himself away, with much difficulty, assuring Janus that he would be back shortly.

Having some acquaintance with government regulations, the investigator knew what a genuine applicant might not be expected to know: that Mr. Janus had allowed his eloquence to get the better of his love for verity.

What Air Rules Require.

Air commerce regulations provide that fifty hours of solo flying are necessary before a limited commercial or industrial pilot's license may be obtained. A strict physical test must be passed. No flying school in the Chicago district gives more than 10 or hours of solo flying in a course.

The primary flying training which the government gives to its flying cadets consists of approximately 75 hours in the air, during which time the student receives instruction on all maneuvers necessary to pilot airplanes. No school offers a course similar to the government course, as Janus had claimed. A later article will explain how applications may be made for the government course and what examinations must be passed.

Case Is Typical Here.

The Commercial Aviation company is typical of some of the schools in this district. Others are more circumspect in adding to their lists of students, but all are guilty of leading the student to believe that he will be fitted for paying positions in aviation when he finishes a course costing from $300 to $500.

Janus told the applicant his school had a flying field "in the 8000 block on Ogden avenue." The 8000 block is in Lyons. There are a number of vacant buildings there, but no flying field could be found.

"Millions in Flying!" advertise the schools and the gullible youth is dazzled by the prospect of becoming a full fledged flyer within a few months and making huge profits as a commercial pilot. He seeks further information and high pressure salesmen overwhelm him. He is signed up for a contract extending over several months.

Flying Students Ambitious.

It is an energetic, serious minded, ambitious, youthful army which forms the student body of the flying schools. Only one rich man's son, who thought to learn flying for amusement's sake, was found by the investigator in his visits. The great majority of the students are under 25 years of age, work for their living, and look to aviation as a business in which the opportunities for advancement are limitless.

It is a bitter disappointment for most of them when they realize, after several months of schooling, that money making in aviation is restricted mostly to those possessing transport pilots' licenses. Such a license requires 200 hours of solo flying, in addition to other severe tests. In many cases the student never gets off the ground. He learns to have a fair knowledge of airplane mechanics and that is all.

Since the minimum cost of flying a modern airplane is $30 an hour, including depreciation, getting the required number of hours' flying is an impossibility for most of the students. They may join in buying a plane, but that also requires capital.

Difficult to Get into Air.

The average student at the flying schools works at some occupation during the day and hopes, by studying at night and flying on Saturday afternoons and Sundays, to complete his course. He spends much of his time laboring over broken down motors, repairing broken wings, and doing welding on metal fuselages. He listens carefully to lectures on aerodynamics, navigation, and cloud flying, and studies astronomy charts so that he may fly by the stars at night.

Sometimes there are forty or fifty students awaiting their turns on Saturday afternoons and Sundays at the landing fields for twenty minute instruction spins in the one or two planes which the school may own. Field attendants tell stories of fist fights between claimants to the early flying lessons.

None of the schools requires that the applicant take a physical test before he pays for his course. Some students finish the entire course and then find they are barred by some physical disability from ever obtaining a government license.

Seek Students Outside City.

It was found that a special drive had been made to get students from outside Chicago. Jobs were promised those who would deposit a down payment. The unemployment situation meant nothing to some of the schools. A so-called "free employment service" was held out as a lure to young men to come to the city to study flying.

The schools usually have headquarters adjacent to the loop with small shops in connection. Some of them teach flying at the municipal airport, 63d street and Cicero avenue, or the county flying field, Irving Park boulevard and Thatcher road. Others have private fields.

SENN HIGH AGAIN WINS FIRST PLACE IN STATE BAND MUSIC CONTEST

Champaign, Ill., April 28.—(AP)—Chicago's high school bandsmen were acclaimed at the fifth annual state contest today when its two representatives, Senn High school and De La Salle institute, were awarded first and second places.

Senn captured first place when it repeated its title winning performance of 1927 and won the right to represent Illinois in the national high school band contest at Joliet, Ill., next month.

East Aurora placed third and Quincy fourth. Twelve bands competed in the class A division.

The victory of the 106 piece Senn band was loudly applauded in the great Memorial stadium. Dressed in their trim uniforms, the victorious bandsmen presented a striking appearance on the gridiron. But it was their marvelous orchestration and harmony that gave them the title.

Joliet grade school, with its 75 piece band, placed first in class C. This it accomplished by defeating East Aurora by one-tenth of a point in the grading.

Harvard public schools won the class B championship with their 33 musicians, while the Community school band of Lanark took second.

U. OF C. FACULTY TAKES REINS IN "MAROON" FEUD

Settles Dispute Over 3 Publications.

A three year dispute between the staffs of three University of Chicago publications and the undergraduate council over the control of student publications was settled yesterday when the faculty board of student organizations voted to place the publications under the supervision of a joint committee representing the student factions and the faculty.

Substantial financial incomes are involved in the management of the publications. Yesterday's settlement gives the faculty the balance of power in the control of the enterprises.

Plan Combines Proposals.

While the plan adopted is a combination of the proposals of both groups the announcement of the settlement was accepted with lukewarm enthusiasm, according to sentiment expressed by both groups, because the publications will lose part of their former power and the student council fails to gain its proposal of complete supervision.

The new publications committee is to be composed of four faculty members, the director of student publications, the auditor of student accounts, three members of the undergraduate council and a representative from the staff of each publication.

Mason Heads Student Board.

President Max Mason of the university is chairman of the board of student organizations which arbitrated the matter when the two groups last Wednesday reached a deadlock and appealed to the faculty for settlement.

Al Widdfield, editor of the Daily Maroon; Andrew Johnson, business manager of the Phoenix, the campus humor magazine, and George Reed, editor of Cap and Gown, university year book, yesterday asserted that they would cooperate with the new committee in an endeavor to bring about a peaceful solution of the old feud.

The committee will formulate a program defining its powers and report to the faculty board next Saturday, Dr. Frederic C. Woodward, vice president of the university, announced.

PARIS DEFEATED; PLAN STYLES TO PLEASE WOMEN

PARIS, April 28.—(AP)—Paris dressmakers have at last thrown up their hands and decided to give women what they want. Current shows of midsummer fashions definitely prove women are satisfied with styles as they were, and want them left alone in the essentials.

Some of the most important houses which for generations have managed to do women's thinking for them as far as dress is concerned have capitulated. Silhouettes are noticeably straighter and skirts a little shorter. The spring shows a few months ago stressed higher waistlines and flares and longer skirts. Flares are changed for fullness centered in front of otherwise straight skirts.

One important designer shows skirts that are a little shorter than short skirts ever have been before. Some of the models are lifted well above the knee caps in front and come only an inch or so below the knee curve in the back.

Ordered Off Right of Way, Killed in Ensuing Fight

Joseph Hewes, 30, of 1224 West Adams street, was shot and killed in Glenview yesterday by Peter Mincheff, a section superintendent for the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific railroad. Mincheff stated that he had ordered Hewes and another man from the railroad right of way and had been beaten. He went to his home in Glenview, obtained his pistol and went back. When the pair again attacked him on being ordered off he fired, he said. Hewes' companion fled.

SOPHIE TUCKER IN GREEK DRAMA? YEP, IT'S A FACT

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, April 28.—Sophie Tucker in a Greek play!

London theatrical wags chuckled when they learned it today, but it is true, and the musical comedy star admitted it.

Sophie will play the part of Xantippe in Maurice Bearing's "Xantippe and Socrates," which will be produced May 6 at the Adelphi theater.

WORST AND LAST SPRING MOVING JAM IS STARTED

Day and Night Work for Week Piles Up.

Chicago's spring moving period, annually a hectic era of about a week's duration, began in earnest yesterday as moving concerns reported a jam of orders sufficient to keep every possible conveyance working day and night until May 3 or 4. Household goods will be moved during daylight and office furniture after dark.

According to a combination of estimates given by renting agents, transfer companies and the public utilities, the period will witness the removal of approximately 110,000 families from old homes to new. They agree that the present season is the largest ever experienced and hope it will be the last of such size.

New System Starts.

This hope is pinned to the inauguration among property owners of the "year round renting system" by the Chicago Homes Economic council, an organization financed by forty industries to eliminate peak renting and moving periods. Large numbers of new leases are being made out for 13, 14 and 15 months in conformance with the council's plan, it was asserted.

W. H. Collin of the Empire Warehouses, Inc., said records of his own and other companies show that all are being swamped with calls for service. The heaviest moving, he said, is along the lake front and extending back for about two miles. Lowered rents and the urge to live in apartment hotels and furnished rooms contribute to the hegira, he asserted. He finds that storage orders have increased 10 per cent.

$20 to $25 for Moving.

As for the cost of moving, Mr. Collin declared the average amount per family will range from $20 to $25 without a piano. Removal of an upright piano adds an average of $8 to this price, and a grand piano, $13, he said.

AUTO ACCIDENT CLAIMS SECOND LIFE; TOLL IS 292

A collision last Tuesday between an automobile and a milk truck resulted yesterday in the second death among the five occupants of the car. The victim was Joseph Wales, 21 years old, 4428 Lowe avenue, who died of pneumonia which developed after he had suffered a fractured jaw in the accident. Miss Eleanor Tulley, 24, of 7549 Essex avenue, was killed in the crash.

Wales' death and two others during the day increased the Cook county motor toll to 292 since Jan. 1.

John Reid, 13 years old, 4550 Kasson avenue, died of injuries received on Jan. 11 when he was struck by an automobile after being jolted from a truck in front of 4537 Elston avenue. The driver of the car is Elmer Henderson, 45, 3846 North Lawndale avenue.

Lein Dow Fun, 68 years old, 2251 Wentworth avenue, died of injuries suffered on Friday, when he was run down in front of his home by an automobile driven by John Siedlecki, 17, of 5024 South Paulina street.

ROCKEFELLER JR. IS GRANDFATHER; IT'S DAUGHTER

New York, April 28.—[Special.]—John D. Rockefeller Jr. became a grandfather shortly after midnight and John D. Sr. added another to his list of great-grandchildren when a daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. David Milton at their home in West 54th street. Mrs. Milton was Miss Abby Rockefeller, daughter of John D. Rockefeller Jr.

Mrs. Milton was introduced to society Nov. 22, 1922, when she made her début at the home of her father. She was married to David Milton, a young attorney, in May, 1925. As the daughter of one of the world's most wealthy men, the marriage attracted much attention in social circles, but in keeping with the Rockefeller habit of avoiding display it was a quiet wedding instead of a big church ceremony.

In 1924 Miss Rockefeller obtained much publicity when she was arrested for speeding. It happened to be her second offense, but she was discharged.

BENCH AND BAR PLAN CRIMINAL COURT INQUIRIES

Loesch Presses Klarkowski, Eller, Kerner Fight.

Two inquiries into the action of the Chicago crime commission in demanding the retirement from the Criminal court of Judges Otto Kerner, Emanuel Eller, and Stanley Klarkowski are scheduled for this week.

The executive committees of the Circuit and Superior court judges that made the assignments to the Criminal court will discuss the subject Tuesday. The board of managers of the Chicago Bar association will hold a meeting on the same day. Carl R. Latham, president of the association, said yesterday he was confident the association would make an investigation.

Judge Kerner Asks Inquiry.

Judge Kerner has taken the lead in asking for these inquiries, stating that he seeks vindication before his fellow lawyers and judges. Judge Eller has not returned from his vacation, and Judge Klarkowski is keeping silence.

Frank J. Loesch, president of the Crime commission, said he was ready to back up his charge that the judges named had been too ready to give misdemeanor sentences in cases where a felony was charged.

"What we need in this community is a more forceful enforcement of the law and the only way to get it is to see that felons are punished as such and not for misdemeanors," he said.

Basis of Controversy.

Judge Kerner said the Crime commission was endeavoring to retry the cases heard in his court, which he had decided in good conscience.

Among the cases in his court given out by the commission yesterday were these:

Case No. 45,641—Winford Baccoat—Burglary. On Jan. 11, 1928, the felony was waived, jury waived, and a plea of not guilty entered to petty larceny. Defendant was found guilty and sentenced to four months in the House of Correction and fined $1.00 and costs. Baccoat was charged with having burglarized the apartment of Oscar A. E. Stamps, 4141 Indiana avenue, on Oct. 27, 1927, during the night.

Seized With Loaded Gun.

Case No. 45,724—Robert Lloyd, burglary. On Jan. 23, 1928, the felony and jury were waived and a plea of not guilty entered to petty larceny. Defendant was found not guilty. Lloyd was arrested on Oct. 18, 1927, in front of 2726 La Salle street with a loaded revolver in his possession. The revolver was one that had been taken in the burglary of the home of Richard Stuckey, 2813 Dearborn street. Lloyd was later tried by a jury in case No. 46,687, in which case a verdict of guilty was returned. He was sentenced to the penitentiary for a term of from one year to life.

Case No. 46,834—John Meyers and Nicholas Kezuipax — robbery. On March 29, 1928, the felony was waived as to each defendant and pleas of not guilty entered to petty larceny and finding of not guilty by the court. Defendants were charged with having robbed at the point of a revolver Henry Niggermann, 1052 West 63d street. Both defendants were identified by Niggermann. Defendants admitted stealing the car they used in the holdup.

List from Another Court.

In the list given from Judge Stanley Klarkowski's court appear two crimes against children.

Case No. 46,526—Emanuel Stearns, indecent liberties with child. Felony waived Feb. 20, 1928, and plea of guilty entered to contributing to delinquency of child. Sentenced on plea to one year in the house of correction and fined $1 and costs. Defendant had long previous record for larceny. On Dec. 6, 1927, defendant took indecent liberties with Bernice Miller, 8 years old, 4918 Magnolia avenue.

Case No. 46,723—Paul Johnson (colored), crime against children. Felony waived April 2, 1928, and plea of guilty entered as to contributing to delinquency of child. Finding guilty and defendant sentenced to one day in county jail. Defendant said to have assaulted Gwendolyn Andrews (colored), 3 years old, at 4310 South State street.

Ten specific cases are presented from Judge Emanuel Eller's court. Two of these follow:

Case No. 44364—Martin Salzman, robbery. Feb. 14, 1928. Released on probation for one year upon a finding of guilty to petty larceny after waiver of felony on Jan. 31. The defendant on May 21, 1927, robbed Catherine Urbanski, 1537 West Chicago avenue, of $2,400, property of her employer, the Leader Stores, while enroute to Alliance National bank.

Case No. 45340—Joseph Joyce, robbery. On Feb. 1, 1928, felony was waived after pleading guilty to petty larceny and defendant was sentenced to six months in house of correction. On Sept. 22, 1927, the defendant and an accomplice, at point of a gun, held up Henry Sentowski, 4917 North Marmora avenue, while delivering packages for Carson, Pirie Scott & Co. Defendant drove off with truck. Joyce had been in trouble before.

A written protest of the criticism against Judge Kerner was made yesterday by 43 jurors who have served in his court since April 16. All the jurors signed the protest, which declared that Judge Kerner had been sincere and just in the performance of his duties.

Mr. Loesch, who has stirred up all this trouble, is 76, and was admitted to the Illinois bar in 1876.

When he took over the job of heading the crime commission on Jan 12 last he issued a statement that in 1927 the Criminal court disposed of 4,326 cases, while in the same year felony charges were waived in 1,772 cases and pleas of guilty to misdemeanors entered and accepted instead.

The killing of Policeman Arthur F. Esau Friday night by drug store robbers was cited last night by Mr. Loesch as further sign that because of permitting the waiver of charges of gun toting in robbery cases, etc.:

"Chicago has become the refuge of gunmen from the entire country."

14 YEAR OLD GIRL IS SPELLING ACE OF COOK COUNTY

Outlasts Her 79 Rivals Through 60 Words.

Marie Wilson, 14 years old, of Northbrook, Ill., yesterday won the spelling championship of rural Cook county. The finals of the contest, differing only in the method from the once popular spelling bees, were held in the office of Edward J. Tobin, county superintendent of schools.

Eighty school children, all girls but nine, were given a written test of fifty common words in the preliminary. This eliminated all but five girls—Marie Wilson; Grace Barthing, 13, of Glen View; Adele Beyer, 12, of Orchard Place; Mildred Langbehr, 13, of Chicago Heights, and Lillian Garst, 15, of La Grange.

How Many Can You Spell?

If you don't think their accomplishment was something, try to spell these fifty words, which eliminated 75 of the contestants:

A test of ten more words gave Marie Wilson the championship, with three of the others tied for second. These words were:

Another examination gave Grace Barthing the red ribbon and Adele Beyer third place.

"I didn't know what some of the words meant," the champion confessed with a blush, "but I had seen them before and remembered what they looked like."

20 Negroes Have Served in House; Two in Senate

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 28.—[Special.]—Selection of a Negro to succeed the late Representative Martin B. Madden of Chicago would by no means set a precedent.

Twenty Negroes have served the house. Two Negroes have occupied seats in the senate. The last Negro member retired from the house 27 years ago. The first entered congress in 1869.

The two Negro senators were Hiram R. Revels of Mississippi, who served in 1870 and 1871, and B. K. Bruce of the same state, who was in the senate from 1875 to 1881.

Of the twenty Negroes in the house four were from North Carolina, eight from South Carolina, three from Alabama, and one each from Virginia, Mississippi, Georgia, Florida, and Louisiana.

North Carolina Members.

Those from North Carolina were John A. Hyman, who served in the forty-fourth congress; James E. O'Hara, forty-eighth and forty-ninth congresses; Henry P. Cheatham, fifty-first and fifty-second congresses, and George H. White, fifty-fifth and fifty-sixth congresses.

White was the last Negro member of the house. O'Hara had the distinction of once defeating Furnifeld M. Simmons, present United States senator.

South Carolina Negro members were Joseph H. Rainey, who served for ten years, from the forty-first to the forty-fifth congresses; Alonzo J. Ransier, forty-third congress; Robert B. Elliott, forty-second and forty-third congresses; Richard H. Cain, forty-third and forty-fourth congresses; Robert Smalls, forty-fourth, forty-fifth, forty-seventh, forty-eighth, and forty-ninth congresses; Robert C. De Large, forty-second congress; Thomas E. Miller, forty-first congress, and George W. Murray, fifty-third and fifty-fourth congresses.

Three from Alabama.

Alabama members were Benjamin S. Turner, forty-second congress; James T. Rapier, forty-third congress; and Jere Haralson, forty-fourth congress.

The other Negro members were Jefferson S. Long of Georgia, one of the earliest members, serving in the forty-first congress; Joseph T. Walls of Florida, forty-second, forty-third, and forty-fourth congresses; Charles E. Nash of Louisiana, forty-fourth congress; John R. Lynch of Mississippi, forty-third, forty-fourth, and forty-seventh congresses; and John M. Langston of Virginia, fifty-first congress.

R. R. M'CORMICK BUYS PROPERTY ON GOLD COAST

Purchase of the northwest corner of Lake Shore drive and Chestnut street by Col. Robert R. McCormick from Mrs. William Salisbury, formerly of Hyde Park and now of Paris, was announced yesterday by the firm of Clark & Trainer, realty operators. The property, a vacant lot, 75x300 feet, across the street from the new Lake Shore Athletic club, rounds out the buyer's previous holdings in the block running from Lake Shore drive to De Witt, facing south on Chestnut street.

Captures Fleeing Pay Roll Bandit; Recovers $1,000

Traffic and noon day crowd at Washington and Franklin streets were thrown into confusion yesterday when the police captured one of two bandits who held up Max Best, official of the Simpson Bevans Electrotyping company, 322 Washington street, and robbed him of a $1,000 pay roll. At the Central station the captured bandit gave his name as Francis Kane, and concealed in his coat the police found the $1,000. Best had been confronted in a hallway of the building by the two robbers who held revolvers to his side.

We are looking for a good mechanical Production man —who has set type—knows the way it is done—and whose knowledge of type faces and sense of design enable him to turn out more than a commonplace job.

—who has bought paper—understands the different kinds—and is able to use judgment in specifying it for distinguished yet economical results.

—who can apply a thorough knowledge of engraving methods to get all the snap and life possible into illustrations for advertisements, booklets and other printed matter.

In short, we want a man who has actually spent some time in the various departments of the printing and allied industries—and who has sufficient technical knowledge to tell the printer, the engraver, and the electrotyper, when necessary, what to do to get the best results.

—he knows how to meet people and make them his friends—no doubt he's college trained. Broad-minded of course, but he can focus his attention on the little details, too. He's eager for action and he wants to get ahead in a BIG way—and he will.

If you are the man, or know of him, we offer a very good job with a friendly group of people. The business is well established and growing fast; the location, a night's ride from Chicago.

Please tell us the things about yourself you would want to know if you were trying to select such a man.

FASCIST-VATICAN CONTROVERSY IN NEW ERUPTION

Allege Pope Plans Ban on Politics.

BY DAVID DARRAH.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

[Copyright: 1928: By The Chicago Tribune.]

ROME, April 28.—The fight between Fascism and the Catholic church, which Premier Mussolini ordered suspended three weeks ago in special orders to the press, broke out again today.

Fascist leaders today charged that the Vatican is renewing its policy, adopted from 1873 to 1906, prohibiting Catholics to participate in the political activities of the Italian state.

Such a policy, if it has been adopted, would be a severe blow to fascism by presenting a direct question of loyalty to the church or loyalty to fascism. Anticipation in Fascist circles of the pope's renewal of the abstention policy of Catholics is believed now to explain Premier Mussolini's sudden order to stop press polemics over the suppression of Catholic boys' societies.

Lift Ban in 1906.

The abstention policy was adopted first by Pope Pius IX in 1870 as a form of protest against the Italian occupation of Rome, which determined the fall of the temporal power of the pope. Until 1906, when Pope Pius X lifted the nonexpedit ban, no Catholic was allowed to vote or participate in the state's politics.

Reports of the pope's proposed action, although denied by the Vatican, have created a stir in Fascist circles. They declare the poptiff's recent speech rebuking and repudiating the Catholic center party on the occasion of the convention in Rome was more than a mere rebuke.

According to the Fascist paper Il Brennero, the pope's speech leaves no room for doubt that the pontiff is preparing to resume the direction of political activities of Catholics, the same as his predecessors did twenty years ago.

"Resume Pontifical Direction."

"The pope's recent allocution indicates a continuation of his plans to resume the pontifical direction regarding the political activities of Italian Catholics," it says. "This plan has already been made plain through other manifestations by the present pope, who, with his encyclia and speeches, has given to understand that it is his clear and firm determination to organize a movement of Italian Catholics on exclusively a religious basis, forbidding their public political activities under any form whatever.

"In other words, the pope is resuming the principles of the 'nonexpedit,' suspension of which, in the pope's opinion and in Cardinal Gasparri's opinion, has not given the results hoped for. By reorganizing the 'Action Cattolica'—Catholic propaganda association—on a new basis, the pope is trying to inaugurate new activity by Italian Catholics and withdraw them from the field of temporal politics entirely."

The results of such action by the pontiff are awaited with apprehension, particularly by members of the Catholic center party, most of whom are adherents of fascism.

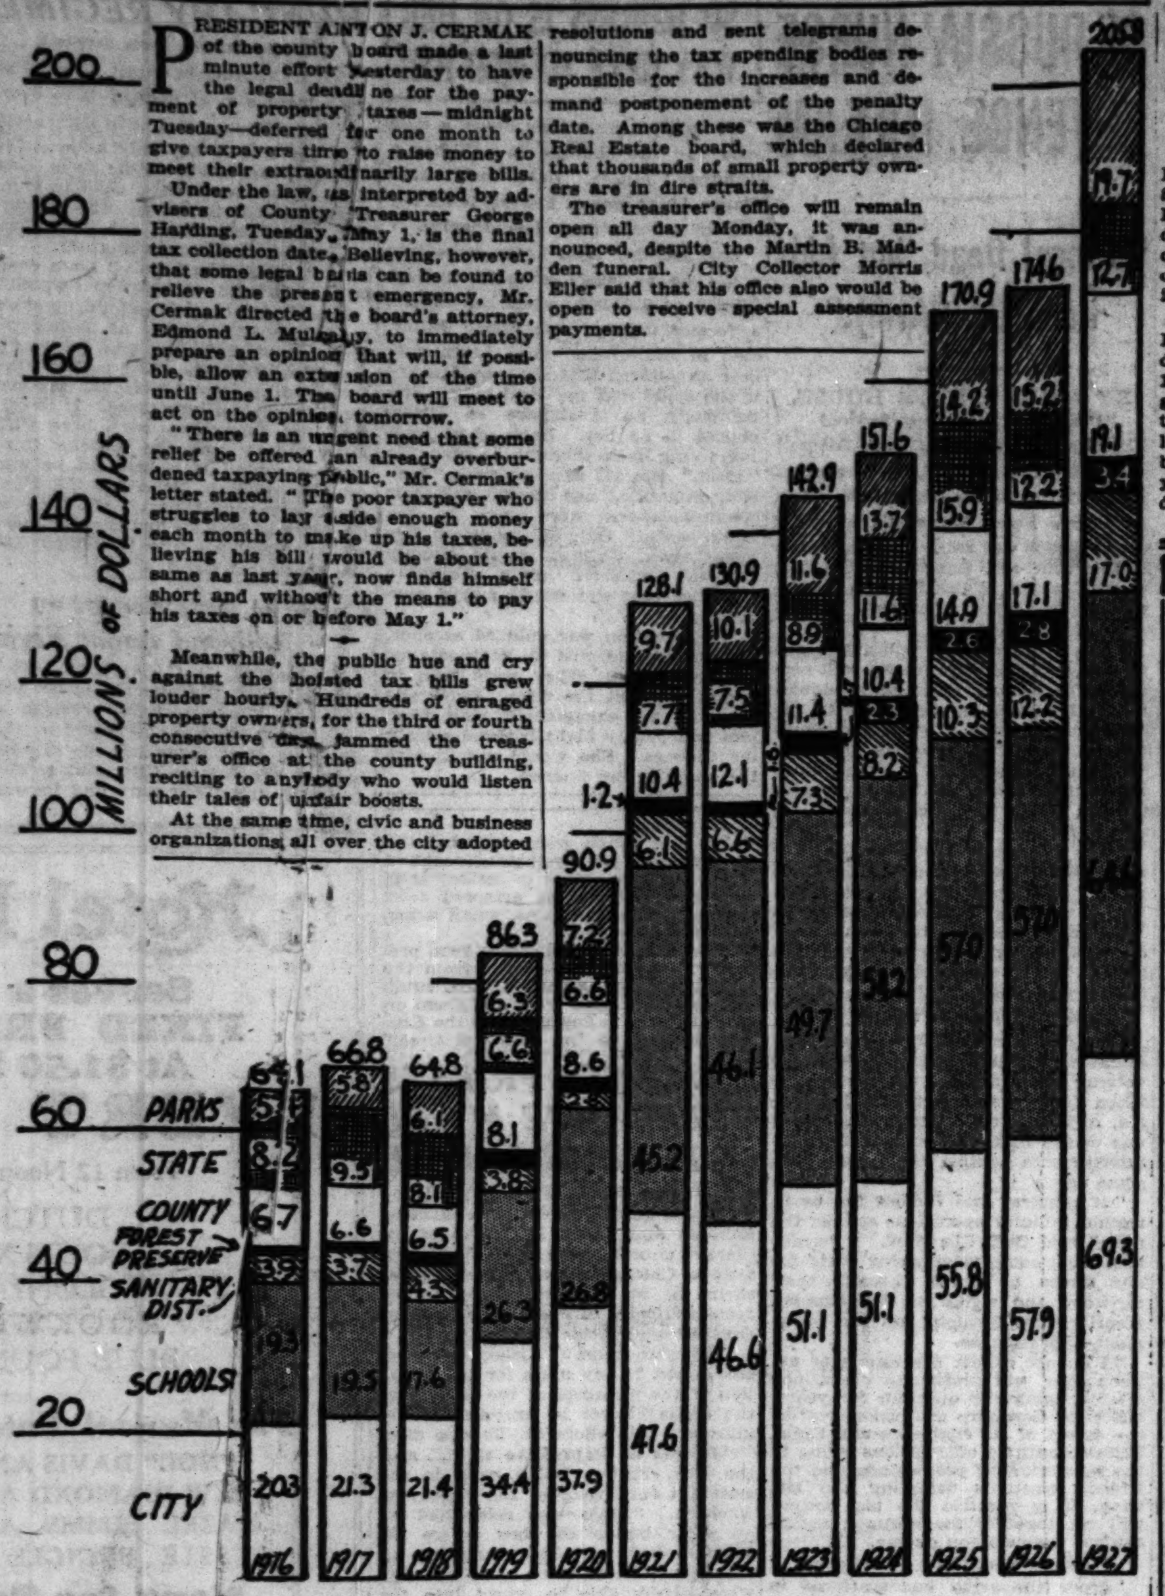
WHY YOUR TAXES KEEP SOARING



PRESIDENT ANTON J. CERMAK of the county board made a last minute effort yesterday to have the legal deadline for the payment of property taxes—midnight Tuesday—deferred for one month to give taxpayers time to raise money to meet their extraordinarily large bills.

Under the law, as interpreted by advisers of County Treasurer George Harding, Tuesday, May 1, is the final tax collection date. Believing, however, that some legal basis can be found to relieve the present emergency, Mr. Cermak directed the board's attorney, Edmond L. Mulcahy, to immediately prepare an opinion that will, if possible, allow an extension of the time until June 1. The board will meet to act on the opinion tomorrow.

"There is an urgent need that some relief be offered an already overburdened taxpaying public," Mr. Cermak's letter stated. "The poor taxpayer who struggles to lay aside enough money each month to make up his taxes, believing his bill would be about the same as last year, now finds himself short and without the means to pay his taxes on or before May 1."

Meanwhile, the public hue and cry against the hoisted tax bills grew louder hourly. Hundreds of enraged property owners, for the third or fourth consecutive day, jammed the treasurer's office at the county building, reciting to anybody who would listen their tales of unfair boosts.

At the same time, civic and business organizations all over the city adopted resolutions and sent telegrams denouncing the tax spending bodies responsible for the increases and demand postponement of the penalty date. Among these was the Chicago Real Estate board, which declared that thousands of small property owners are in dire straits.

The treasurer's office will remain open all day Monday, it was announced, despite the Martin B. Madden funeral. City Collector Morris Eller said that his office also would be open to receive special assessment payments.

Graph Explanation

Why are the tax bills this year so high? The accompanying graph, showing how the levies of Chicago's governmental agencies have mounted in millions of dollars in recent years, answers the question. The graph was prepared by John Richert, head of the city council finance committee's staff.

From $64,100,000 in 1916, the total amount of money levied and spent has increased to $205,800,000 in 1927, a boost of 221 per cent. In other words, the cost of local government has more than tripled.

Leading the tax spending procession, the graph shows, is the sanitary district, with an increase during the twelve year period of 335 per cent. Next is the parks, with an increase of 264 per cent, with the other percentages as follows: City, 241; schools, 234; county, 185, and state, 54.

DIVORCE IS KEPT SECRET 5 YEARS, WOMAN CHARGES

Tells Court 'Husband' Remained with Her.

For five years Mrs. Laura Mix, 655 Barry avenue, lived with Wellington S. Mix, believing he was her husband. But during all this time he carried a divorce decree obtained secretly so he could declare his freedom when the occasion was convenient, she alleges in a bill filed in the Circuit court.

Her bill, prepared by Attorney John E. Devereux, seeks to set aside the decree obtained by Mr. Mix on Dec. 14, 1922, on the charge that it was granted on a fraudulent showing. If the decree is set aside the ruling will legitimatize the relations of the couple between 1922 and November of last year, when she first learned of the divorce, it is pointed out.

The pleading sets up that in 1920, Mrs. Mix filed a suit for separate maintenance and her husband responded with a cross bill. A few months later there was a reconciliation and the couple agreed not to prosecute their litigation, according to the wife. However, in 1922, he went into court without her knowledge, she avers, and obtained a decree on the grounds of desertion.

Last November, Mrs. Mix received a telpehone call, according to her attorney, that aroused suspicions of her husband's conduct. The caller inquired for Mrs. Mix, but not for the Mrs. Mix who brought yesterday's suit, she related. Mix was confronted with this information and pulled a decree of divorce from his trunk, declaring he was a free man.

In a second pecular marital tangle, Chief Justice Joseph Sabath of the Superior court yesterday annulled the marriage of Richard C. Manley, a salesman, to Isabella B. Dunlap, a designer, residing at 3727 Addison boulevard. She described their relations as a companionate marriage.

Miss Dunlap testified that on Nov. 19 Manley took her to Waukegan, Ill., for a ceremony that he said was to protect him from any breach of their troth. In response to questions by Judge Sabath she told of their going before a clerk in the county building and obtaining a license and then going to the home of a minister.

"Didn't you understand that the minister was reading a wedding ceremony?" the court asked.

"He talked so fast that I didn't understand what he was saying," she replied.

Continuing, the young woman, 21 years old, said that Manley took her to the home of her parents that night and that they never lived together. A church wedding, planned for a few months later, was never held.

Seized at Stevens Hotel on Bogus Check Charge

Irving Unger, 45 years old, who said he is a dentist from Cleveland, O., was taken into custody last night at the Stevens hotel, where he was accused of attempting to pass a fraudulent check. Police said Unger had obtained about $1,000 from Chicago hotels on bad checks and also was wanted in New York and Cleveland.

KELLOGG CALLS SIX-POWER PACT WORLD WAR BAR

Rejects All of France's Reservations.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 28.—[Special.]—Adoption and observation by the six principal powers of the American proposals for the conclusion of an anti-war treaty would constitute a practical guarantee against a second world war, Secretary of State Kellogg asserted tonight in an address before the American Society of International Law.

Speaking at the society's annual dinner and in the presence of a distinguished audience, which included Paul Claudel, the French ambassador, Secretary Kellogg outlined the benefits he believed would flow from the consummation of a treaty renouncing war. But he rejected the French reservations to the proposed anti-war pact and declared them absolutely unnecessary.

Universal in Scope.

Mr. Kellogg's pronouncement concerning the French reservations marked his first official comment on the statement of M. Briand that France considers that several changes would have to be made in the American peace proposal before it could be made acceptable to that country. M. Briand contends that the proposed treaty must be universal in scope, must provide for legitimate self-defense and must not interfere with French obligations under the league or other commitments.

Taking up the French reservations, Mr. Kellogg pointed out that virtually every one of France's six reservations either was unnecessary, impractical or immaterial. In most cases, he said, the reservations did not constitute an effective bar to French acceptance of the American proposal, as French rights would not be endangered. The French suggestion that all powers must ratify the agreement before it becomes effective was termed impractical.

Secretary Kellogg denied the major French contention that her obligations under the league constitute a bar to her acceptance of an unconditional anti-war treaty such as proposed by this country.

No Obligation for War.

"There is in my opinion," Mr. Kellogg said, "no necessary inconsistency between the covenant of the league and the idea of an unqualified renunciation of war. The covenant, it is true, can be construed as authorizing war in certain circumstances, but it is an authorization and not a positive requirement."

Mr. Kellogg referred to what he termed the six major considerations which the French government had emphasized in its correspondence and its draft treaty.

"The French emphasize," Mr. Kellogg said, "that the treaty must not (1) impair the right of legitimate self-defense; (2) violate the covenant of the league of nations; (3) violate the treaties of Locarno; (4) violate certain unspecified treaties guaranteeing neutrality; (5) bind the parties in respect of a state breaking the treaty; (6) come into effect until accepted by all or substantially all of the powers of the world."

Touching on the question of self defense, Secretary Kellogg asserted there is nothing in the American draft of an anti-war treaty which restricts or impairs in any way the right of self defense.

Free to Repel Invasion.

"That right is inherent in every sovereign state," Mr. Kellogg said. "Every nation is free at all times and regardless of treaty provisions to defend its territory from attack or invasion and it alone is competent to decide whether circumstances require recourse to war in self defense."

The French contention that the treaty should be universal in scope was referred to as impractical by Mr. Kellogg.

In flatly rejecting this reservation Mr. Kellogg argued that it is clearly "preferable not to postpone the coming into force of a treaty until all powers have agreed to it." He argued that a single state then could obstruct agreement and render abortive the efforts of the other powers.

Service to Humanity.

"It is highly improbable, moreover, that a form of treaty acceptable to the British, French, German, Italian and Japanese governments as well as to the United States would not be equally acceptable to most if not all of the other powers," Mr. Kellogg said.

"Even were this not the case, however, the coming into force among the above named six powers of an effective anti-war treaty and their observance thereof would be a practical guaranty against a second world war. This in itself would be a tremendous service to humanity and the United States is not willing to jeopardize the practical success of the proposal which it has made by conditioning the coming into force of the treaty upon prior universal or almost universal acceptance."

In order to care for the French reservations regarding her obligations under the Locarno pacts and her treaties of neutrality, Mr. Kellogg suggested that all powers with which she has such agreements should become parties to the new anti-war treaty.

Secretary Kellogg said he could see no reason why France would not be able to persuade the powers with which she has neutrality treaties to enter the pacts for the renunciation of war.

Mr. Kellogg said that violation of the treaty through resort to war by one party automatically would release the other parties and no specific reservation on that point was necessary.

In closing the American secretary praised M. Briand for his endeavors to further world peace.

Claudel Praises Coolidge.

M. Claudel, the French ambassador, praised President Coolidge and Secretary Kellogg for their leadership in the movement against war, and characterized them as men "with a straightforward mind and an honest will."

Ambassador Claudel welcomed the idea of France and the United States, so long traditional friends, joining hands against war, and referred to the goal as "the bond which is to tie all the nations of the world."

CO-ED'S CLOTHES OUGHT NOT TO COST OVER $390 YEAR, DEAN DECLARES

Urbana, Ill., April 28.—[Special.]—It should not cost a co-ed attending the University of Illinois more than $390 a year for clothing, according to a survey by Miss Maria Leonard, dean of women.

The cost of clothing varies with one's taste and pocketbook, Miss Leonard declared. Therefore, few girls will spend more than the sum mentioned, while a far larger percentage will spend less.

The expense can be lessened if a girl watches sales and takes advantage of them and if a girl is handy with her needle, she pointed out.

Included in Miss Leonard's estimate of $390 a year for a complete outfit are items of $75 for shoes, $36 for twenty pairs of hose, and $37 for hats.

'BEGGAR KNIGHTS OF RUSSIA' NURSE REVENGE DREAM

Wrangel Dead, but Aids Keep Up "Army."

BY ANNE SOMERS HOUSE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

[Copyright: 1928: By The Chicago Tribune.]

BRUSSELS, April 28.—War against Russia is inevitable within five years, so Baron Peter Wrangel's army of 50,000 troops will be maintained, ready to intervene, said Gen. Chatzilov, chief of staff of the White Russian revolution leader. Gen. Wrangle's funeral was held here today.

"The Wrangel army will not be disbanded, but the organization will continue functioning and the headquarters will remain in contact, with the small detachments of ex-soldiers working on farms, in factories and elsewhere throughout the Balkans, until it is time to renew the assault against the red terror in Moscow," said Gen. Chatzilov.

"The Beggar Knights, as the Russian refugee soldiers are called, will remain intact and Gen. Archangelsky, one of the chief lieutenants of Baron Wrangel, henceforth will be in charge of maintaining laison with all the groups in Macedonia, Bulgaria, Jugo-Slavia, and Roumania."

Expects Roumania to Ask Aid.

Gen. Wrangel's staff believes Roumania soon will call for help from the veteran army against the bolshieviks when the reds seek to reseize Bessarabia, and they think either Poland or one of the Baltic states may need reinforcements against the communists some day.

"It requires two factors for us to resume military operations against the reds," said Gen. Chatzilov. "Permission from some neighboring state for our forces to march through their territory and strike at the Russian frontier, and financial aid for equipment and supplies.

"I do not expect the league of nations ever will undertake operations after dodging the question for years, but with Germany disillusioned after the arrest of its engineers and Great Britain breaking off relations owing to the revolutionary propoganda and the French elections defeating the left wing, it is possible the big powers will get together for common action against the common enemy.

Workers Contribute to Officers.

"Since the army has scattered in the Balkans, the men have contributed one per cent of their wages for the maintenance of Baron Wrangel and his staff, and the baron's officers will work steadily, perpetuating the relations with the troops, evolving plans for military operations against the reds from various points between the Baltic and Black seas, and drawing up estimates for equipment required when the time comes to strike—artillery, tanks, airplanes, armored cars, uniforms, machine guns, small arms, food and rations.

"The details already have been prepared to mobolize the army from the scattered farms in the Balkans, equip and arm them and transport them on special trains to any point on the Russian frontier in the speediest time."

HE CALLS HER 'CHUMP,' SO HEIRESS IS ON HER WAY HERE TO WED HIM

To marry a man from home, a man who had the courage to call her a "chump" and a "darn fool," Miss Emma Lintz, young heiress, is on her way to Chicago from Los Angeles.

Last October Miss Lintz came into a fortune, variously estimated at from $25,000 to $100,000, when her father, a former Chicago real estate dealer, died in California. Miss Lintz publicly announced that she would marry if she could find the ideal mate. Immediately an avalanche of letters poured in on her. Each of at least 158 young men thought he was the "ideal." But 157 of them were "foolishly romantic," she decided, and their communications were sent to the waste basket. Only one, and from her home town, Chicago, wrote frankly that he considered her a chump to advertise that she would marry anybody.

Her attention was enlisted at once, Miss Lintz said, and an acquaintance was struck up. They were both in Los Angeles at the time. Later she accepted an engagement ring from him and Friday night boarded a train for Chicago. She would not divulge the name of her financé.

CHICAGO PRIESTS CELEBRATE MASS IN FRENCH SHRINE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, April 28.—Fathers Clement Sullivan and Albert H. Dolan of St. Clara's church, 64th and Woodlawn avenue, Chicago, which is the national shrine of St. Therese of the Infant Jesus, returned to Paris with Cardinal Dubois tonight from Lisieux.

They were taken to Lisieux as a special honor, to say mass for the intention of the members of the Society of the Little Flower in America, in the infirmary cell where St. Therese died.

"It was an impressive sight," said the Rev. Father Dolan, who is the assistant supervisor of the society in America. "Mass was celebrated on an altar beside the bed where St. Therese died, with nuns kneeling on the floor. There were so many they were hardly able to crowd into the little room. On the bed was written in letters of gold the last words of her whom we call the world's most popular saint: 'I will spend my heaven doing good on earth.' We were the first Americans privileged to enter the nunnery at Lisieux."

BELA KUN ADMITS REDS AIM TO END HUNGARY REGIME

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

VIENNA, Austria, April 28.—"Moscow's main aim at present is to overthrow the Horthy régime in Hungary."

So far this is the only answer the Vienna police could obtain from Bela Kun, former communist chief in Hungary and exile to Russia, who was arrested here yesterday. All other questions he answered nonchalantly.

"You know who I am. I am a communist—that is explanation enough."

Bela Kun, who operated a drug store in the seventh district as a disguise for communist propaganda, possessed five false passports. The police found in the "drug store" incriminating material in several languages. It is certain that Bela Kun came here with strict orders from the Moscow third internationale. It is believed he was sent here mainly to revive the Hungarian communist party, which since the death of Landler and the sentences of Rakowsyszanto and Weiberger has been somewhat inactive.

COOLIDGE WILL MOURN TODAY AT MADDEN BIER

Burial Tomorrow from Hinsdale Home.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 28.—[Special]—Arrangements for funeral services for Representative Martin B. Madden in the hall of the house of representatives tomorrow were completed today, and the house again adjourned as a mark of respect for its departed member.

Vice President Dawes and Representative Byrns [Dem., Tenn.], ranking minority member of the appropriations committee, of which Mr. Madden was chairman, will speak at the services. The Rev. James Shera Montgomery, chaplain of the house, will take part. The male quartet of the Metropolitan Methodist Episcopal church will sing "Nearer My God to Thee" and "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere."

President Coolidge, justices of the diplomatic corps, ranking officials of the supreme court, members of the diplomacy and navy, and members of the senate and house will attend.

Services at Noon.

The body of Mr. Madden will be taken from his residence to the capitol during the morning, and the services will take place at noon. The funeral party and the body will occupy a private car on the Pennsylvania train leaving Washington at 3:10 p. m. At Chicago the car will be switched to another train and taken to Hinsdale. There services will be held at the Madden country home at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon.

The house before adjourning adopted a resolution offered by Representative Tilson [Rep., Conn.], majority leader, providing for the funeral services, authorizing the appointment of a committee of arrangements, and extending an invitation to the President and other high officials to attend.

Speaker Longworth named as the funeral committee the members of the Illinois delegation, the members of the appropriations committee, Representative Newton [Rep., Minn.], and Representative Griest [Rep., Ill.].

Deneen to Accompany Body.

Under the terms of the resolution the body will be taken to Chicago in charge of the sergeant at arms of the house. About a dozen members of the Illinois congressional delegation, including Senator Deneen, will accompany the body to Chicago.

The Rev. Mr. Montgomery, in his prayer at the opening of today's session of the house, dealt with the death of Mr. Madden.

BODY HERE TOMORROW

The interment of the late Congressman Martin B. Madden at Hinsdale tomorrow will furnish an imposing spectacle.

Led by Vice President Dawes, and including the complete membership of the Illinois delegation in congress and of the house appropriations committee, of which the deceased was chairman, a Washington contingent numbering sixty or more will escort the body from the capital on a train that will reach Chicago at 9 o'clock in the morning.

Then the remains will be taken to the congressman's summer home, Castle Eden, near Hinsdale. After the services there, which will be attended by a host of Chicagoans, including the city council, the interment will be in Cass cemetery, a short distance away.

Rivalry among Negro leaders in the First district, represented for nearly a quarter of a century by Mr. Madden, threatens to place Mayor Thompson in an embarrassing position. He must choose among several loyal supporters just who shall take the dead congressman's place on the November ballot.

Oscar De Priest, former alderman and now committeeman from the Third ward, said yesterday that he is a candidate for the honor of being the first Negro to sit in the federal legislature in 20 years or more.

"I expect to have sufficient support so that I shall be named," he added.

Until this statement, Bishop Archibald J. Carey of the African Methodist Episcopal church, one of Mayor Thompson's appointees on the city civil service commission, had been considered a likely choice.

But De Priest said that Bishop Carey would be with him and that he had his assurances to that effect. No statement on the subject could be obtained from Carey.

Other candidacies were being urged upon Mayor Thompson, among them State Senator Adelbert H. Roberts and Ald. Louis B. Anderson.

Legal Ruling Tuesday.

The question whether the ward committeemen constituting the congressional committee of the First district, all controlled by Mayor Thompson, will fill the vacant nomination is still being agitated, but the election lawyers continue to hold that they have that right under the primary law.

The question will be passed upon formally by the election board Tuesday.

William L. Dawson, unsuccessful Negro contender against Mr. Madden in the primary, has filed a claim that he is entitled to the nomination now, and the board must rule on his claim.

U. S. SHIP ON WAY WITH PLANES TO AID SANDINO HUNT

BY GERALD MARTIN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

[Copyright: 1928: By The Chicago Tribune.]

CRISTOBAL, Panama Canal Zone, April 28.—Rear Admiral David Sellers, aboard the U. S. S. Galveston, sailed at 3:20 this afternoon for Bluefields, Nicaragua, taking supplies for the naval air base it is planned to located at Bluefields.

On arriving tomorrow, Rear Admiral Sellers is organizing land headquarters in conjunction with 200 marines arriving aboard the U. S. S. Cleveland and a squadron of marine planes from Managua, intending to drive Gen. Augusto Sandino from the east and recover the American mines, concluding the activities of the rebels, which at present are cut off from the middle west.

Plans "Nut Cracker."

Rear Admiral Sellers plans to cut off the bandits from the north, using nut cracker tactics to surround and capture Gen Sandino, as well as other insurgents under another leader, believed to be Gen. Giron, reported to be hurrying eastward.

Drastic action is necessary immediately, according to Americans arriving here from Bluefields, who intimate that the bulk of the natives in the east are Sandino sympathizers, though they do not announce their feelings.

The cruiser Denver is at Puerto Cabezas, meaning that tomorrow the temporary flagship Galveston, as well as the Cleveland and Denver, will be there.

New Army in Field.

MANAGUA, Nicaragua, April 28.—[U. P.]—Marine officials today believed that a new rebel army, under control of Gen. Jiron, had taken the field.

Reports here said Gen. Jiron had dynamited the La Luz mine in the Pis Pis district of northern Nicaragua and was holding the American mining engineer, George B. Marshall, for ransom.

Gen. Augustino Sandino, who has been in the lead of rebel activities, was reported ill of a fever and in hiding.

The new army was said to be composed of Hondurians, Costa Ricans, and other Latin-American rebels.

Marines Near Clash.

PUERTO CABEZAS, Nicaragua, April 28.—[U.P.]—An engagement between marines and the rebel army that recently raided the rich mines in northern Nicaragua was expected shortly, reports here said today.

Marine detachments are arriving regularly and several hundred troops are expected aboard the U. S. S. Cleveland Sunday.

Planes Rushed South.

Washington, D. C., April 28.—[U. P.]—Five additional marine planes are being rushed to Puerto Cabezas, Nicaragua, by the navy for use against Sandino's forces on the east coast, it was learned today.

Two amphibean planes, equipped with machine guns, left Hampton Roads this week aboard the supply ship Nitro, and two more amphibeans will be shipped from the same port within a few days. A tri-motored monoplane is to be flown down from here within the next ten days.

McCoy Visit "Personal."

Washington, D. C., April 28.—(AP)—State department officials said today the return to the United States of Brig. Gen. Frank R. McCoy, President Coolidge's representative in Nicaragua, had no significance whatever.

Gen. McCoy, they explained, has about completed the preliminary work of preparing for the Managua elections, and is coming home on personal business. He will return to Nicaragua later.

HOOVER'S BOOM GROWS AS G. O. P. CONFAB NEARS

Victory on First Ballot Is Possible.

returns augmented by the operation of various protective laws. It is to be the last stand of the farmers against the fate of the peasants of Europe who have come to their present state through centuries of oppression by the privileged classes.

The corn belt states that supported the McNary-Haugen bill will be represented on the resolutions committee by advocates of that measure. Frank Murphy, one of the chief lobbyists for the corn belt farm relief plan, already has been selected by the Minnesota delegation as the Minnesota member of the resolutions committee. Other men who have been active in the corn belt lobby or in the senate or house in behalf of the McNary-Haugen bill will represent other states. The major issue before the resolution committee will be farm relief and the scenes at the hearings and deliberations of the committee will be reminiscent of the days of a generation ago, when free silver and the plight of the farmer were fostering party schism.

Hoover Controls Southern Votes.

Theoretically the corn belt ought to be able to put its farm relief plank through the resolutions committee and through the convention. It put the McNary-Haugen bill through the last congress and is about to put it through this one. Representation in the convention is based on representation in congress—approximately double the number of senators and representatives. Therefore a measure commanding the support of congress theoretically would command the support of the convention.

Practically, however, it does not follow that a measure passed by congress will receive the approval of the convention or that a farm relief plan indorsed by the senate will be advocated by the resolutions committee. The reason for this anomaly is found in the rotten boroughs of the south in the Republican national convention. Although southern support had enabled passage of the McNary-Haugen bill by two congresses the corn belt farm relief plank will lack the support of the south to the extent that the paper Republican delegations from Dixie are controlled by Hoover or other Coolidge administration influences. These southern boroughs will be the big obstacle the corn belt will encounter in its project to force through its farm relief plank.

May Carry Fight to Floor.

If beaten in the resolutions committee, the corn belt intends to carry the fight for its plank to the floor of the convention. In that event the debate will be historic. The cry of distress of the farmers compelled to buy in a protected domestic market and to sell in the world market will be raised in the party conclave. The opportunity for another cross of gold and crown of thorns speech will be thrown wide open.

When it comes to the nomination of a candidate for President, the corn belt plans to assail Hoover as the foe of the corn belt farm relief proposals, whose nomination will spell political revolt in the middle west. It will aim to convince the party leaders that Hoover cannot hope to carry the middle west and that the Republican party will sacrifice its chances of victory over the Democrats with Al Smith as their nominee if it should insist on naming the secretary of commerce.

Predict Corn Belt Rejection.

The corn belt leaders consider it no less reasonable that the party leaders of 1928 will reject Hoover even with the nomination almost within his grasp than that the party leaders of 1860 rejected Seward though he came into the convention with twice as many votes as Lincoln.

In 1860 three days of consideration of the man best qualified to carry the election because best qualified to carry the border states resulted in the rejection of Seward and acceptance of Lincoln. A similar consideration of the requisites for victory in 1928, according to the corn belt leaders, will dictate the rejection of Hoover and acceptance of Lowden or Dawes as the candidate best qualified to carry the "border" states of this day.

"Today the states we must carry to assure Republican victory are the states of the agricultural border," said one of the managers of the corn belt farm relief movement. "They are Minnesota, the two Dakotas, Nebraska, and Missouri, not to mention Illinois and Indiana. Al Smith will carry most, if not all of these border states of today unless a candidate acceptable to these states shall be nominated. Hoover may be close to the nomination, but I am confident that the party will reject him, nevertheless, just as it rejected Seward in 1860 and for the same reasons."

Lowden Claims 230, Hoover 359

Chicago headquarters of Frank O. Lowden yesterday issued a tabulation of its claims in the Republican national convention, giving Lowden a lead of 26 votes over Herbert Hoover, the totals being 230 to 204.

The data, a brief statement said, was the result of a compilation from "the most trustworthy and unbiased information" available concerning the situations in the thirty-one states and three territories covered."

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 28.—[Special.]—Republican delegates thus far selected include 359 whose first choice for the presidential nomination is Secretary of Commerce Hoover, according to a statement tonight by Former Representative James W. Good of the Washington Hoover committee.

"This shows a gain during the past week of 75," said Mr. Good. "Of the delegates so far instructed or pledged for other candidates, 103 are assured as second choice to Mr. Hoover.

"About 150 delegates already selected have not publicly indicated their leanings. They comprise: Pennsylvania, 79; New York, 40; Connecticut, 17, and others from sundry states.

"In 17 states the delegates have not been yet chosen. They are: Alabama, 15; Arizona, 9; Arkansas, 11; California, 29; Florida, 10; Indiana, 33; Maryland, 19; Montana, 11; New Jersey, 31; Oregon, 13; Tennessee, 19; Texas, 26; Utah, 11; Vermont, 11; Washington, 17; West Virginia, 19; Wyoming, 9. Total, 293.

"Of these states, in California, Maryland, Oregon, and New Jersey, Mr. Hoover has entered the primaries and the lists have been closed without contesting entries. Many others of these states have assured support to Mr. Hoover."

Arizona's Nine Delegates Are Counted for Lowden

Tucson, Ariz., April 28.—[Special.]—Although uninstructed, Arizona's nine delegates can be counted in the ranks of Frank O. Lowden, as all nine selected here this afternoon at the state Republican convention were favorable to his nomination. H. S. Corbett of Tucson was elected national committeeman and Mrs. Freda Marks of Phoenix national committee woman. Mr. Lowden is considered an Arizona man, as he has been a winter resident here several years and owns property in the state. He was nominated for the vice presidency in the 1924 convention by Arizona delegates.

MRS. P. D. ARMOUR FORTUNE SHOWN IN DEBTS PLEDGE

Most of Property Is Held as J. O. Armour Security

Most of the fortune left by the late Mrs. Philip D. Armour is pledged as security for debts, said to total eighteen million dollars, left by her son, the late J. Ogden Armour, according to an inventory of her estate filed yesterday before Leon Edelman, assistant to Probate Judge Henry Horner.

The largest item in the personal property shown in the estate is 19,617 shares of preferred stock of the North American Provision company, with a par value of $100 a share. This stock, the inventory sets up, is held with other securities by the Continental National Bank and Trust company as trustee "in pledge as collateral security for the payment of certain indebtedness and obligations of J. Ogden Armour, stated to amount to more than eighteen million dollars."

The only other large item of personal property in the inventory is $329,857 in rights and credits in Armour & Co., also pledged as security for the son's obligations, debts that followed his loss of a fortune estimated at between 150 and 200 million dollars in the post war depression of the packing industry.

The estate of Mrs. Armour, who died on July 25 at the age of 85, also includes a few items of real estate on which no estimate of value is given in the inventory. They include land on the northwest corner of Broadway and Lawrence avenue, under a 99 year lease to the Sheridan Trust and Safe Deposit company. A three story residence at 2115 Prairie avenue also is listed.

Estate Put at $800,000.

The entire estate was estimated at $800,000 when the letters of administration were filed with Mrs. Armour's will. The bulk of the fortune was bequeathed in trust to her granddaughter, Mrs. Lolita Armour Mitchell, wife of John J. Mitchell Jr., and daughter of J. Ogden Armour. Mrs. J. Ogden Armour and Mrs. Mitchell are now engaged in a plan to clear up the debts left by Mr. Armour on his death Aug. 16.

ASKS SENATE TO LOOK INTO THREAT TO BOOST SENATOR COUZENS' TAX

Washington, D. C., April 28.—(AP)—An investigation of charges that the bureau of internal revenue had attempted to intimidate Senator Couzens [Rep., Mich.] by threatening him with a huge additional tax assessment was proposed today in a resolution introduced by Senator La Follette [Rep., Wis.].

The charges were made in the senate by Couzens, himself, who has persistently opposed the tax policy of the administration. In a speech on April 12, Senator Couzens said he was threatened with an additional assessment at a time when he was chairman of a committee investigating the affairs of the bureau.

The La Follette resolution declared there was "evidence of collusion between high bureau officials and so-called tax experts in an endeavor to extort a huge fee" from the Michigan senator. This evidence, it was added, was made known to Commissioner David H. Blair, but the latter took no action.

PUSHES TRIAL 18 MONTHS; LOSES IT AND CAR, TOO

Publisher Gets a Lesson in Court Procedure.

BY JAMES DOHERTY.

Religious training taught Andrew T. Murphy of Winnetka that it is more blessed to give than to receive. And early in life, he said yesterday, he learned to respect the law of the land.

Zero in prosecution didn't dishearten him. But when Edward Fahey of 1427 Church street, Evanston, drove away in legal possession of the automobile Murphy claims he purchased for $3,200 Murphy thought the limit had been reached.

Mr. Murphy wasn't familiar with criminal procedure in Cook county up to two years ago. He is the publisher of the Black Diamond, a magazine devoted to the coal industry. Crime, to him, was just something for the newspapers to print. It might be bad advertising for Chicago—as has been alleged—but then it could hardly hurt the coal business and the Black Diamond couldn't be blamed if the newspapers filled their columns with tales of killings, bombings, theft, and what not, he thought.

But Fahey crossed his path and his civic consciousness was aroused. After he had turned the other cheek he gave the chronology of his experience as follows:

His automobile was stolen.

Fahey was caught in it.

Fahey was indicted.

Fahey got continuance after continuance for 18 months.

Advised Repeatedly to Quit.

Murphy was advised 18 times in 18 months by assistant state's attorneys to drop prosecution.

Murphy obtained help to get Fahey's case tried.

Murphy was told he would get a bomb under his doorstep if he didn't quit.

Murphy was told by an assistant state's attorney he would lose his automobile if he lost the case.

The case finally came to trial.

Murphy wasn't allowed to prove ownership of the car Fahey had driven.

Fahey was found not guilty by a jury.

Fahey took the car away from Murphy on a writ of replevin.

Criminal court indictment No. 40,694 backed up part of Mr. Murphy's story. Police Captain Brautigan of Wilmette backed up the rest of it.

"Yes," said Capt. Brautigan, "I was present and heard an attorney say to Mr. Murphy, 'If we can't get you to quit any other way we'll put a pineapple under your doorstep some night.'

"There was no doubt about the automobile," Capt. Brautigan continued. "The numbers on the axle, generator, and body of the car Fahey had were on record in the office of the dealer from whom Murphy bought the car. It had been repainted and the engine numbers filed off and Fahey had a phoney license plate for it, but still the identification was positive.

"But we weren't allowed to introduce that evidence in court."

Comments on Crime.

"The shady criminal lawyer is the one who makes the present crime situation possible," said Mr. Murphy yesterday from the depths of his experience. "He should be brought into the picture. If he were eliminated there would be no direct contact between the crooks and the judges and the state's attorney's office.

"For nearly two years this case was continued—twenty-one times in all—in an attempt to tire me out. Finally, through the good offices of Judge Feinberg I was able to get this case set for immediate trial before Judge Otto Kerner.

"Never in a single instance in all this time did the assistant state's attorney object to the continuances. The state's attorney's office did not make any attempt to prepare the case, notwithstanding my persistent pleading.

"The morning of the trial State's Attorney Gelman endeavored to get me to drop the case. When I refused he stated: 'If we don't get a conviction they may take the car from you.'

"That is exactly what happened.

Another Long Fight.

"The defense lawyer, Frank McDonnell, got a writ of replevin on which the car was taken from me. He valued the car at $500 and therefore had to put up a $1,000 bond to protect the sheriff and me. But it is next to impossible to get a hearing on the replevin within a year and a half or two years and by that time, if the car is returned to me, it will be worthless."

"What defense did Attorney McDonnell offer?" Mr. Murphy was asked.

"He told the jury Fahey had bought the car from a man he didn't know. Of course, from what evidence the jury was let hear, I can't blame the jury. But I didn't think the judge should have let Attorney O'Donnell say to the jury:

"'This man, Murphy, by his money and his influence purchased the indictment of this innocent boy.'"

CANADA AND THE SEAWAY.

Occasionally it does not seem that Canadians who want to build the seaway are making much headway against the opposition of Canadians who do not want to build it. West of the electric power regions the international line ceases to exist so far as the project is concerned. The people on both sides of the boundary have the same interests to be served, but hydro-electric power has a commanding position in dominion politics.

It is shown in the Canadian official protests that no seaway plan can be considered which confirms the right of Chicago to use Lake Michigan water either for sanitary or commercial purposes. Mr. Kellogg in his correspondence with the Canadian government has clearly developed the fact that it is not navigation which causes the Canadian objection, but that it is power development.

It is conceded by Canada that for navigation purposes the lake level problem could be solved by compensating works, but the fear is that the remedy might diminish the water available for power. The power development part of Canada is fairly obsessed by its one idea. It develops more power now than it can use. Its laws forbid the export of power. It fears that even the construction of the seaway would produce power more rapidly than markets could be found for it, but it is basing a domestic and an international policy on the visions and the avarice of men of one idea.

Canada will not reach its full development and full greatness on that one track. For another thing, French Canada is powerful politically and it is intensely parochial. It is indifferent to western Canada. It is instinctively and traditionally opposed to American development in the lake and valley regions. It may not be fanciful to attribute this opposition to the fact that the American midwest and valley country once was the hope of empire for French Canada. The French were in the region before the English. They were not keen for the New England hills or even the New York valleys, but the Ohio, the Mississippi, and the lakes represented their future in a favorable climate and on a rich soil. That future was lost to the English and by the English to the Americans. French Canada remains on the banks of the St. Lawrence and its tributary rivers, surviving in a lovely country but isolated by language and in custom and habit even from English Canada.

The power obsession and the French isolation seemingly hold control against the welfare of western Canada, against the best prospects of all Canada, and against the fair proposals of the United States.

BAKSHEESH.

Pullman car porters want their wages doubled and offer as an offset the abolition of tips. A wage advance may very well be justifiable, but not on the theory of the offset, for the offset is a delusion. If experience of past experiments means anything the porter would have his increase of pay and it would not be long before he would be getting his tips, too. The Fascist régime has been trying an experiment of this kind and American tourists in Italy will share our pessimism as to the porters' proposal. By law in Italy a charge of ten per cent is added to the hotel bill, but the servitors expect gratuities as in the past. There may be some decrease in the amount distributed and, of course, there are hard-boiled travelers who take the law at its face value, but in the main the net result is to add ten per cent to the hotel's charge without relieving the traveler of the tip nuisance.

The explanation is not difficult. A tip is what it is called abroad, a gratuity. When a charge is enforced by law it ceases to be a gratuity and becomes merely a part of the contract of service, a part of necessary compensation. The situation therefore remains what it was. There is the served and the servitor, a personal relation which in Europe involves recognized distinctions of class as ancient as European society, distinctions between lord and vassal, master and slave, freeman and menial. Of course, this heredity of tipping is not acknowledged or perhaps recognized by the recipients, even in the orient, but immemorial custom has passed it down from the days when the nobleman threw largesse to the ignoble, a conscious act of generosity from the superior being to the inferior. There is a real distinction between begging and tip taking because the latter is based, especially in America, on a theory of special service, but in many countries no distinction is apparent. In Egypt, for example, baksheesh is a term which covers everything from substantial sums exacted by custom for service of any kind or as commissions, to the coppers thrown the beggars by the roadside.

In the United States the custom could not long survive any effective exposure of its history and real significance. It exists with us as an anomaly inconsistent with the spirit of American democracy and there is a persistent tendency to get away from it, although it has grown with city life and lavish spending. Attacks upon it as an unjust exaction do not weaken it because the question of compensation for service is a vague one and it is easy to answer such attacks by showing that a tip is voluntary and no business of the reformer. Laws and regulations are helpless against it because its very nature is beyond law and regulation, a grace, a gratuity. The only thing that can destroy it is the unwillingness of the recipient to receive, and this can only appear where there is recognition that the custom implies social distinction which no American is willing publicly to accept. In the case of the Pullman porters the proposal for immediate abolition is rather ahead of the situation, but it is in line with the inevitable tendency of American life. The only event likely to postpone indefinitely the disappearance of tipping is a law to forbid it.

MEMORANDUM ON THE TEACHING OF MODERN LANGUAGES.

For more than a generation now the inclusion of Greek and Latin in the high school curriculum has been attacked as a vicious waste of the pupils' time. In large measure the attack has been successful. There are not many secondary schools in which Greek and Latin, or even one of them, is now required for graduation, and in many schools there is no instruction whatever in the classics.

It is astonishing that relatively little attention has been paid, all this time, to the instruction in modern languages. The indictment is much the same: the time of the pupils is shamefully wasted. After years of subjection to Greek and Latin, only a pitiful minority of the pupils could read the simplest phrases, it was said, and with truth. It is no less true that after years of subjection to French, Spanish, or German in our high schools only a pitiful minority of the pupils can find their way about in those languages. In the face of that record, it is ridiculous to argue that the teaching of the modern languages is justified by the fact that the modern languages are useful, whereas the ancient ones are much less so. If at the end of two or three years of instruction in French nine-tenths of the pupils subjected to it in our high schools are unable to read, speak, or write the language with assurance, what merit is there in saying that French is a useful language and therefore should be taught?

America's new position in the world, it is a truism to point out, is certain to place an increasing value upon a knowledge of foreign tongues. It is perhaps less of a truism to point out that with our present methods of instruction we are not equipping our boys and girls with the tools which we insist in the same breath they will need. Progress has been made in the technique of teaching foreign languages, but the results of the improved technique are far from satisfactory. Perhaps a few more pupils emerge with some knowledge of the language studied, but still the number is small.

The fault lies in the quality rather than the method of instruction. We do not know the figures, and we put them forth tentatively, subject to correction, but it is our impression that not one in five instructors in modern languages in the public high schools of Chicago can converse fluently in the language they are teaching. For some reason, pedagogues and parents are not appalled at that situation. They would not permit any one to teach arithmetic who had to work out the multiplication tables on his fingers, but they do not object if French is taught by some one who could not order a meal in a French restaurant without the help of the sign language.

The reply may be made that no one is allowed to teach French who has not received academic training in the language. That carries the controversy into the colleges. There the instruction is generally somewhat better, but it does not invariably or even frequently bring fluency, much less mastery. The children in high school are being taught Spanish by men and women who, in college, heard learned lectures, commonly enough in English, on "Contemporary Influences Upon the Prose of Cervantes." Let them take that to a bullfight and see what they can get on it.

What we need is Frenchmen to teach French, Spaniards to teach Spanish, Germans to teach German, and Italians to teach Italian. Admittedly, the problem of finding such instructors, qualified in other respects, as well, is a difficult one. The number in this country who can be drawn upon is small. The place to find them is where they grow.

We suggest that a system of exchange between our high schools and those of foreign countries be tried. We might start with the French. As an experiment, we might arrange with the French minister of education to send us fifty teachers for a year, and in return we would send him fifty Chicago school teachers to teach French children English. The teachers should leap to the opportunity.

Editorial of the Day

CHICAGO AND LONDON IN THE RING.

[Minneapolis Tribune.]

The war between "Big Bill" and the king of England has widened. It is now a war between Chicago and London. The London press paid its respects to Chicago in its descriptions of the recent primary elections. And when the Chicago press heard what the London press was saying, it turned round and began paying its respects to London.

Here, for example, is the way in which the London Evening News pictured a Chicago election to its English readers:

"Let the Bulldog British voter know that the pathway to the polls is beset with sandbags and gaspipes wielded by the sturdy minions of the rival party; let him realize that before he deposits his ballot he stands a good chance of being thrown bodily from the polling booth, beaten up, kidnaped, perforated with a rat-tailed file, or mowed down with a machine gun."

To which THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, although anti-Thompsonite, replies angrily:

"In everything in which a city is supposed to find its justification old Ma London is the conspicuous failure of the white race. . . . A city, London! The real lapse of civilization. It has ruined an entire breed of men. It has debased a stock. It has starved and maltreated great classes of humanity until wife-beating has become a manly accomplishment."

All right, Chicago and London. Fight it out between yourselves. Whether one would prefer being bombed in Chicago to being starved in London represents a matter of individual taste, and we have no desire to pass a judicial opinion as to the superior attractions of either. Meanwhile the press war being carried on by the two cities is highly entertaining, and we hope that the rumor that an armistice may shortly be declared is unfounded.

TERCENTENARY JOHN BUNYAN, AUTHOR 'PILGRIM'S PROGRESS'

BY THE REV. U. M. McGUIRE, D. D.
[Assistant Editor of the Baptist, Chicago.]

The three hundredth anniversary of the birth of John Bunyan, who wrote while in jail the world's greatest allegory, is being celebrated internationally by Christians of all denominations and also by many others who look upon "Pilgrim's Progress" as a literary masterpiece much as they look on "Robinson Crusoe," by Daniel Defoe.

Bunyan was born in 1628, but neither the day nor month is known, because he came of very humble parentage. Westminster abbey has honored his eminent service by a memorial window. The Baptist World Alliance will unveil a window in McMaster university, Toronto, Canada, on June 25 and a statue of him will be erected in Washington, D. C. New editions of his books and new biographies are being published and sermons concerning his life and work will be preached in thousands of pulpits.

Bunyan may well be called "the inspired tinker." Whenever an original genius such as he was breaks the human routine, he creates a new world. New molds of thought are cast. New types of experience are set up. New emotional tides are released. New social relationships are formed. New ways of living and of getting a living develop. Both humanity and its world acquire a new significance and value. The planet comes to be inhabited by a different sort of people. Earth is never again quite what it was before his advent. These changes may not be at once observable upon the surface of things. The people of his own day may not be aware that anything beyond the ordinary is happening. But time will reveal his work. Later generations will see and wonder.

A tinker in jail, whose worst fault is that he insists incontinently upon talking in unorthodox terms, is not a character to arrest interest in this busy world. Particularly, who, in this marvelous twentieth century, cares for an English tinker in Bedford jail a hundred years before the American revolution? But that tinker, as it happens, was a participant in the English revolution, a partisan of the commonwealth, a soldier in Cromwell's army, who had caught the vision and the stern spirit of liberty for the soul and for the citizen.

Perhaps unknown to himself, and certainly unknown to the authorities who consigned him repeatedly to prison, he carried into that jail one of the rarest souls that ever dwelt in human form—a soul that had been kindled to its best by the touch of a thrilling religious experience. In the seclusion of the prison the creative spirit brooded upon the waters of his imagination, and God said, "Let there be light, and there was light." Out of that light sprang much that was beautiful and good, but chiefly "Pilgrim's Progress."

Bunyan is listed as a Baptist. But who cares how he is listed? Vice, vanity, and virtue; sin, salvation, and piety; genius, mediocrity, and common sense; all know no sect and belong to none. No more does he. Abraham, Isaiah, St. Paul, St. Francis, Luther, Count Zinzendorf, John Wesley, Buddha, Kagawa, Sadhu Sundar Singh, Gandhi, and all of their kind through the ages could have understood him. He was of their spiritual stock. In drawing his own portrait he drew a composite of them all. The road that "Christian" pursued is marked by the footprints of all who ever took life with deep religious and moral seriousness. It is the king's universal highway to life's perfect goal. The story is an epic of the everlasting two ways of life dramatized and set to music. And with little regard to name or sign, Protestants and Catholics alike read it as a saga of universal religious experience.

"Pilgrim's Progress" is at once a primer and a classic. I have read it to children at the age when they revel in the hero tales of the Old Testament, and have looked with awe into their wide and wondering eyes as they followed the adventures of "Christian" and the career of "Greatheart." I have sat in a class of cynical and self-sufficient college students, listening for half an hour to the simple reading of the story, and have seen every man in the class charmed by the beauty of the narrative and subdued by its moral and religious appeal. I have seen many an old saint—if saintly longings make one a saint—while waiting for the eternal call, poring over this story of the triumphal entry of the pilgrims into the Holy City to the peal of its welcoming bells, and murmuring with the Dreamer, "which, when I had seen, I wished myself among them."

Consider what the world owes to its jail birds. Joseph rose from prison to the office of prime minister. Moses was the son of a slave woman and spent forty years as a fugitive from justice—such justice as it was. Joshua, his lieutenant, was an escaped slave. Jeremiah spent a good portion of his time in police custody and part of the time near dying in a muddy cistern. Paul went from a Roman prison to the headsman's block. Æsop was a slave. Gandhi spent two years in a British prison. Russia is ruled by men familiar with jails and exile. But for Bedford jail it is probable that Bunyan's genius never would have found expression in immortal allegory, or even have felt the stimulus that awakened in it such a creative ecstasy as to impel that expression. It is interesting to reflect that more than half a century later, John Howard, as a member of Bunyan's old Bedford church and sheriff in charge of the old Bedford jail, received the first impetus to his unique career as the international pioneer of prison reform. The story of human progress, liberty and enlightenment has been largely written by manacled hands.

The handicaps of fortune are not necessarily misfortunes. A poorly educated tinker in jail was next door to a situation for despair. His lack of education was against him; his economic condition was against him; his occupation was against him; his social standing was against him; his religious opinions were against him; church and state were united against him. Prison bars inclosed him. What could he do? Even the support of his family depended in part upon what he could eke out by making lace with his own hands in jail. But when you have called him a poorly educated tinker in jail, you have not said all. What misfortune does for a person depends upon the kind of a person he is. John Bunyan took into jail with him integrity, good conscience, fidelity, good will, trust in God, an imperishable hope, the companionship of the eternal, the resolute pursuit of the best life, the spirit of a student, and he gave a message to men which is too good to die. Hence, the very handicaps that seemed to reduce him to the last degree of futility turned into a gold mine.

That there was in him a spark of genius which imprisonment kindled into a flame was one of the accidents of human life. But any sufferer, without such genius, may carry into the furnace of adversity values which its fires can only refine. The world is full of examples from Jesus backward and forward through the ages, showing that misfortunes are convertible into endowments, and that they are the normal discipline of the best in human life. It is upon this principle that St. Paul, speaking out of the crucible of his own experience, said, "We know that all things work together for good to them that love God."

No. 5.

BY MRS. M. S. B. D. SHINDLER, 1842.

I'm a pilgrim, and I'm a stranger;
I can tarry, I can tarry but a night!
Do not detain me, for I am going
To where the streamlets are ever flowing.

Of that city, to which I journey,
My Redeemer, my Redeemer is the light;
There is no sorrow, nor any sighing,
Nor any tears there, nor any dying:

There the sunbeams are ever shining,
O, my longing heart, my longing heart is there;
Here in this country, so dark and dreary,
I long have wandered forlorn and weary:

CHORUS:
I'm a pilgrim, and I'm a stranger;
I can tarry, I can tarry but a night.

"THE NEGLECTED AGE."

YOUNG people, and particularly young women, are having more consumption than they should have, in the opinion of Miss Jessamine Whitney, statistician. In the last decade the fatal consumption rate at all ages has declined 34 per cent. In young children it has declined more than fifty per cent. In age group [illegible] it has declined only 18 per cent. Women are not faring as well as men in this age group, and women 19 to 24 are not getting on so well as are women 15 to 19.

Miss Whitney asks: "What is the cause?" and answers: "Nobody knows. Various causes are adduced by many writers. The fact that women are working away from home as never before is given as one cause. Among other causes assigned are: too much social life outside of school during high school days, jazz parties, late hours, the scanty clothing of present day young women, the dieting fad, and a different and more virulent type of disease in young women."

To this list another has been added. Dr. Heinbeck says that some degree of resistance to consumption is developed during childhood. As the years pass the resistance is lost. At somewhere about age 20 it reaches a low point. His opinion is based partly on his experience with children in Norway and partly on his observations of young women as nurses in an Oslo tuberculosis hospital. Based on that experience he has been vaccinating the apprentice nurses against consumption as they start work in the hospital.

Miss Whitney calls the high school and college age "the neglected age." Most university students now have pretty good health protection during the school days. However, few high school students do have health protection given by the school. The same is true, as a rule, of normal school pupils.

MANY CAUSES POSSIBLE.

A. M. W. writes: My doctor says my heart is sound. Why, then, does it beat irregularly, or, in other words, intermittently? Would like to know what would stop this condition.

REPLY.

Irregular heart action may result from excessive use of tobacco or, perhaps, from excessive use of coffee.

It seems natural and without cause in some people.

There is some evidence that it does no harm or may even be a good sign in certain people.

If your doctor says you are all right, why not dismiss the matter from your mind?

TRAINING INSTEAD OF MEDICINE.

J. A. B. writes: My son, five years old, has had no appetite at all for about four and a half years, in fact, since he was put on solid foods. He will drink all the milk, cocoa and liquid foods offered, but will sit and dawdle over solids. He is nervous but sleeps very well. At times, when his appetite improves, he is very good natured, but when he doesn't eat he is really mean and cross, being wholly unaware of this himself.

Our village has no kindergarten and so he has all day to play out of doors, which he does.

Condensed, my trouble is: He never desires a particular food, or any, for that matter. We have a youngster, two, who is beginning to notice and I am fearful of his learning from his brother. Baby has always been very hungry. The five year old boy vomits very easily. Could it be worms?

REPLY.

My guess is that your problem is mental and social rather than medical. In other words, your child needs training rather than medicine.

I suggest you get Clark's "Character Training of Children," or some other book of that sort, study it, and apply it.

DIET DEPENDS ON CASE.

C. M. W. writes: Would you please give me a diet for gall bladder trouble, especially those foods which I should avoid?

REPLY.

"Gall bladder trouble" is quite indefinite. If any diet would fit your case it would be one that is very low in fats and greases. Very little yellow of eggs, bacon, fat meat, gravy, butter, salad dressing, olive oil and fried food. Let your evening meal be very light, say a little bread and fruit, or salad with vinegar, or lemon juice, but no oil.

Or, better still, go to bed supperless.

PHEW!

Chicago, April 15.—[Friend of the People.]—I should like to know what to do about the rubbish which is being dumped in the rear of the railroad tracks on Clifton avenue between Waveland and Grace. It is awful to look at and not so good to smell. M. O. B.

Dumping complained of is on the railroad right of way, which at this point is enclosed. Notices have been served to stop further dumping. THOMAS H. BYRNE.

NAMES HIS OWN TERMS.

Chicago, April 20.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—A piece of property was sold for street improvement taxes—assessments amounting to $4.50 and $4.20, respectively, in the year 1925.

In March of this year I received a statement in the amount of $225, representing the amount I was obliged to pay to again secure possession of this property.

How much legal interest was the buyer of this property for taxes allowed to assess in order for the owner to again secure possession? J. J. T.

If a tax deed has issued, then the holder is in a position to name his own terms excepting that if you consider the terms too high you can employ an attorney to set aside the deed. Ordinarily the tax deed holder names a figure which would be very close to the cost of setting the deed aside by court proceedings.

MURFREESBORO.—There are reports that the rebels are making a general movement towards Murfreesboro. Some believe that during the last 48 hours their entire line has been advanced, and the headquarters of both Bragg and Johnston are at Shelbyville. Gen. Price has taken command at Tullahoma, relieving Bragg.

ST. JOHN'S, N. F.—The steamer Anglo Saxon, from Liverpool the 16th, with 360 passengers and a crew of 84, was wrecked four miles east of Cape Race during a dense fog.

CHICAGO.—J. E. Brown of Chicago and Miss Mary E. Luther of Providence, R. I., were married in the latter city on April 23 by the Rev. C. H. Fay. C. G. Myers of Chicago and Miss Mary Jane White of Cleveland, O., were married on April 28 at the home of the bride's parents.

CHICAGO.—Workmen are tearing down the old rookeries on the west side of Clark street, between Kinzie and North Water streets, preparatory to the erection of a mammoth brick block by Charles Uhlich. It will be three stories high, with a deep basement.

CINCINNATI, O.—Lexington and Frankfort, Ky., newspapers of late have contained advertisements for the sale of runaway slaves who have come within the Union lines, and who, under President Lincoln's proclamation, are free.

ST. VINCENT, Cape Verde Islands.—The Spanish fleet sailed in a southwardly direction at 8:30 o'clock this morning. The destination is unknown. Orders are to be given at sea. This flotilla is the one which started from Spain for the United States several weeks ago. It is the most formidable fleet that Spain has ever organized.

HONGKONG.—It is expected that the Spanish and American fleets will have a battle today. The Spaniards will await the Americans several hours' sail from Manila.

CHICAGO.—Orders of the war department calling for the mobilization at Tampa, Fla., of several regiments and batteries from Chickamauga, New Orleans, and Mobile, are in accordance with the plan to send a force of 5,000 or more men from that place to Matanzas. It has been announced that this movement would take place in a week or ten days. Dispatches to THE TRIBUNE indicate that the movement may be made much sooner.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—There is some talk of adding to the initial expedition to Cuba the regiment of Rough Riders commanded by Assistant Surgeon Wood of the army and Theodore Roosevelt.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill.—Camp Tanner has assumed the appearance of an established army post, and in all that army of 10,000 citizen soldiers none fared better, appeared more soldierly, or attracted more attention than did the gallant 1st brigade, Chicago's brave sons, 4,141 men strong.

BERLIN.—The British have made a retirement on the Flanders front before Ypres, it was officially announced. The statement says the Germans advanced their line to a point southwest of Langemarck [four and one-half miles northeast of Ypres] to Verlorenhoek [two miles to the northeast of the city], Hooge [two miles to the east], and Zillebeke [two miles to the southeast].

NEW ORLEANS.—William Edenborn, president of the Louisiana Railway and Navigation company, a naturalized citizen of German birth, and formerly an associate of John W. Edenborn is 70 years old and many times a millionaire.

FROM THE D. A. R.

Chicago, April 17.—I have just finished reading Norman Hapgood's "Professional Patriots," in which he says aplenty about patriotic societies, including the American Legion and the Daughters of the American Revolution. This lengthy "black list" of organizations and individuals, published a year ago, caused scarcely a ripple of excitement or "back talk."

It is not surprising, in looking over the list of indorsers whose names appear in the preface of this book, to find a number of those who are said to be on the much talked of D. A. R. "black list," among them the gentleman from Emporia, Kas. Why all this resentment because, a whole year later, the worm seems to have turned? As a matter of fact, there has never, to my knowledge, been an official "black list" of speakers in the D. A. R. The Massachusetts Daughters may have chosen to call the pacifists, the socialists, and the communists by name because they have believed that their influence has not been for the best interests of the country. Surely they have a perfect right to this opinion, just as Mr. Hapgood has a right to his. The Illinois society has not cared to make martyrs of these individuals to this extent. To say that we have "blacklisted" them is ridiculous, especially as the majority of our members belong to the very organizations listed.

As Illinois chairman of national defense for the D. A. R., I wish to state that I have never used a black list, nor have I ever had one given me to use. It seems to me that this controversy is a definite attempt on the part of the radical element to discredit certain patriotic societies whose influence they fear. The pity of it is that these efforts are abetted by supposedly good citizens, who believe that every country is right but their own, who are so blind that they cannot see that the defense of this country means more for the peace of the whole world than all of the so-called "peace" and "friendship" societies to which they so generously contribute, but whose motives they have not investigated. MRS. VINTON E. SISSON.
State Chairman, National Defense Committee, Illinois Daughters of the American Revolution.

DEPRIVED OF VOTING RIGHTS.

Chicago, April 15.—I have noticed two letters written to the Voice of the People by citizens who were deprived of their voting rights. I do not believe that these two letters come anywhere near showing to what extent the "scratching scheme" was carried out.

I was also deprived of my right to vote. I am a resident of the 22d precinct of the 50th ward, where at least twenty-five names were illegally scratched. My demands to vote by affidavit were refused because the election judges had never heard of that before.

An examination showed that two of the election clerks had canvassed the precinct after registration day and were responsible for the wholesale scratching. These two clerks signed a statement that I had moved from the precinct and that they had left a suspect notice in my mail box, and had mailed a suspect notice to me. None of their statements are true. I had registered in March and two days later they claimed that I had moved. One young lady of this same precinct who lives with her mother had her name scratched because it did not appear on the mail box separately. J. J. RAUSCH.

AMERICAN SLUMS VS. BRITISH.

Dixon, Ill., April 17.—After having put up such a splendid fight against Len Small and his political machine, which went down to defeat last week, it seemed to me you stepped down when you wrote "This Is London." Because, as F. F. Burdett in this morning's paper has said, London is not so bad as the picture you painted.

I have traveled all over the world, and know slums in Chicago, New York, London, Edinburgh, Paris, Melbourne, etc., but nowhere have I seen such squalor and dirt as in the lower east side of New York City and on the south and near west sides of Chicago. Like your correspondent, I was in London not long ago and went through some of the poorer districts, but they were clean and wholesome compared with the slums of Chicago. The worst slums in England are said to be in Bristol, but we can beat those by a long way.

As for unemployment and distress, I doubt—and this from observation in both countries—if there is half as much of it in Britain as in America. JOHN SMARDON.

ANOTHER READER LOST.

Chicago, April 17.—I am in the habit of passing by the editorials in THE TRIBUNE as being merely an irritation and a waste of time—the editorial, however, in Saturday's issue entitled "So This Is London," aroused my curiosity, and, knowing something of London, I was tempted to read it.

To say that I was utterly disgusted is putting it very mildly. Why a paper such as THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE should stoop to print these invariably scurrilous articles is entirely beyond my comprehension. Does any sane man expect that a city with London's population of seven million contains no paupers? Does he expect that the entire population are riding in Rolls Royce machines? Does he expect that all the women are chaste? The whole tone of the article was so utterly malicious, vindictive, and so ignorant as to make it almost beneath notice.

I think I know the tenor and temper of a good many English newspapers, but I know of none that would have made the uncalled for attack upon Chicago that this has made upon London. And the reason? Can your editor deny that there is lawlessness in Chicago? That crime is rampant? Does he know that during five months there have been 61 bombings alone, with several fatalities and no convictions? Then why scoff at the law and order of London—why not envy?

The whole article is pitifully humorous, pitifully weak, and a reflection upon the management of any reputable paper. Why I, personally, continue to buy these rotten, filthy, slimy editorials, seemingly written by one of Thompson's henchmen, is beginning to puzzle me. But I know I have read the last of them that I intend to read. H. F. B.

TEN PERISH AS SNOW AND ICY GALES GRIP EAST

All South Freezes; Fruit Crops in Peril.

New York, April 28.—[Special.]—Spring turned back into winter today, and all along the Atlantic coast from New York to the gulf, rain, violent gales, and in some instances snow, left in their wake death and destruction.

Three persons are believed to have been drowned in New York bay. They were missing today after a giant wave had swept over the Staten island ferry boat Bronx last night. Two persons were rescued.

In Atlantic City three men were drowned when a steamer broke adrift from a tug.

Two pilots of trans-Atlantic liners sailing shortly after midnight Friday were carried to Europe when strong gales and heavy seas prevented them being put off when the vessels cleared Ambrose channel.

Schooner Reported Lost.

A schooner was reported lost off Delaware breakwater and other sailing craft were reported crippled along the coast. Temperature here was expected to drop into the thirties late tonight. Heavy snows swept along from the Blue Ridge mountains, pushing from Maryland far into North Carolina and Kentucky. Frost was predicted as far south as Florida.

There were floods in Arkansas, Georgia and Florida; railroads were inundated and fruit crops were threatened.

Snow in Pennsylvania.

Harrisburg, Pa., April 28.—(AP)—The worst April snowstorm in many years fell in Pennsylvania today.

Many cities in the state virtually were isolated all day due to the collapse of telephone and telegraph communication. The Pennsylvania railroad had to resort for the first time to radio to operate some of its trains.

A foot of snow was common throughout the state with five foot drifts reported from some sections.

All South Shivers.

Atlanta, Ga., April 28.—(AP)—After spreading destruction by rain, flood, and storm in the lowlands, the elements turned their fury today to the southern highlands, where record low temperatures and heavy snow falls followed in the wake of high winds.

The Cumberland and Shenandoah valleys in Maryland and Virginia were drifted with snow. Asheville, N. C., with the mercury at 29, wore a snow blanket and was the coldest city in the south.

Four deaths in Florida from yesterday's storms had brought the total deaths to ten in three states since the floods and storms began early in the week. Many persons have been injured.

Illinois Fruit Damaged.

Carbondale, Ill., April 28.—[Special.]—Considerable damage was done to the prospective apple crop in the southern Illinois fruit belt last night by frost. According to C. J. Thomas, county farm adviser, the peach crop, however, had matured to a point where it was sturdy enough to withstand the frost.

RED RADIO CHIEF REVEALS CHAOS IN BROADCASTING

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

RIGA, Latvia, April 28.—Early in May the first soviet congress for the discussion of improvement of the movies and radio will open in Moscow. Cases of inefficiency, graft, and waste in the making of films have been occupying columns in the Moscow press for weeks.

M. Sakharov, a radio specialist, reveals in the paper, Economic Life, the chaos existing in the bolshevik radio industry. According to M. Sakharov, the confusion in the broadcasting question in the United States, and the uncontrolled development of radio there, instead of proving a warning to Russia, is ignored, and the broadcasting situation in Russia is far worse.

"We cannot claim to have a many-millioned radio audience, because the government is spending more time building broadcasting stations than widening the net of receiving sets," writes M. Sakharov. "European Russia today has fifty-seven broadcasting stations and Siberia ten, while in the entire country of Siberia there are only 200,000 receivers, mostly primitive detector sets with earphones. Registered sets in Russian cities total 280,500. There are 21,000 in the villages, while thousands of Russian villages and hamlets never have seen or heard a radio set."

Corns

Lift Off—No Pain!

Hard corns, soft corns, corns between the toes and callouses lift right off! You'll laugh—it is so easy and doesn't hurt a bit!

Just drop "Freezone" on any tender, touchy corn. Instantly it stops aching; then shortly you just lift that old bothersome corn right off with your fingers. It works like a charm, every time. Seems magic.

A tiny bottle of "Freezone" costs only a few cents at any drug store. Try it!

WOMEN VOTERS CALL FOR STRICT DRY LAW REGIME

Retain Neutrality in Party Politics.

BY KATE WEBBER.

The National League of Women Voters closed its eighth annual convention yesterday, retaining its nonpartisan course. The program adopted both for study and legislative support was, the delegates declared, strictly within the original purpose of the league, to get out the vote and to educate women in government.

There was no great attempt at political influence, such as shown at the first convention in 1920, nor was there the anticipated effort to influence delegates in favor of any of those seeking presidential nominations from the major political parties.

A slap was taken at the national administration, in the view of some delegates, in the wording of the resolution on prohibition.

Calls Enforcement Inadequate.

"There has been no adequate enforcement of the eighteenth amendment," the preamble said, the resolution itself reaffirming the league's stand for strict and effective enforcement.

Other action taken at the final session included the approval of the "lame duck" amendment, which proposes a constitutional amendment which would shorten the period between the election and commencement of the terms of President, Vice President, and the members of congress.

A telegram was received from the Woman's Equal Opportunity league's headquarters in New York protesting the convention's attitude toward the eight hour day law for women. The league opposes labor laws for women alone and registered surprise that a "social and civic welfare organization should interfere with the rights of self-supporting women."

Directs Illinois District.

Mrs. Charles Curtis was elected director of the Fourth region, comprising Illinois and surrounding states, succeeding Mrs. William G. Hibbard of Winnetka. Mrs. Curtis was formerly Miss Lucile Atcherson of Columbus, O., the first woman diplomat in the United States consular service.

The other officers were held over, with the exception of the secretary, Mrs. Arthur Ringland of Washington, D. C., Mrs. Henry J. Steffens of Detroit being elected.

Invitations for the 1930 convention were extended from Los Angeles, Philadelphia and El Paso. The El Paso bid was accompanied by a letter from the mayor of Juarez, Mexico, who wired in Spanish that "there is no law in Mexico which will be opposed to your joy."

Predict Air Mail Service to Every State by End of 1928

Washington, D. C., April 28.—(AP)—Direct air mail service soon will be available over 35 states, and there is a possibility that every state in the Union will be served directly before the end of 1928. The department of commerce today noted that air mail routes now operating touch 26 states, while five more will have service next Tuesday, when the New York-Atlanta-New Orleans routes open.

CONFEREES ON FLOOD BILL HOLD THEIR FIRST MEET; GET NOWHERE

Washington, D. C., April 28.—[Special.]—Senate and house conferees on the flood control bill held their first meeting today, but failed to agree on any of the major points of controversy. They will resume their meetings on Wednesday after the return of Representative Reid [Rep., Ill.] from the Madden funeral.

The house conferees were appointed today to meet with the senate conferees named yesterday. The house conferees, besides Representative Reid, are Representative Curry [Rep., Cal.], Fitzgerald [Rep., O.], Wilson [Dem., La.], and Driver [Dem., Ark.].

Senator Jones [Rep., Wash.], author of the $325,000,000 flood measure, was chosen to head the conference group.

Indications were that the conferees would insist upon inclusion in the final bill of the house provision requiring the federal government to acquire flowage rights on floodway and spillway land. This was the feature found most objectionable to President Coolidge, who favored a provision under which the government would buy no rights in advance, but would pay for damages done by the diversion of water into the floodways.

FUNERAL RITES TOMORROW FOR MRS. PURMORT

Funeral services for Mrs. Lillian M. Purmort, widow of Henry Clay Purmort, Chicago lumber merchant, will be held tomorrow at 2 p. m. in Oakwoods cemetery chapel. Mrs. Purmort died on Friday at Lakeside hospital. She was 79 years old.

She and her husband were early settlers in Chicago. Her home at 3430 Prairie avenue was one of the first residences erected in that neighborhood and she had lived there for more than sixty years. She was a member of the Daughters of the American Revolution, the Daughters of 1812, and the Huguenot society, and was a former historian of the Illinois Society of Mayflower Descendants.

Mrs. Purmort is survived by two nephews, Donald and Ernest Blish, and a sister, Mrs. Clarence Miller of Washington, D. C.

Miss Kate Meade, Social Service Worker, Is Dead

Miss Kate Meade, former director of the Cook county bureau of social service, died yesterday of heart disease in St. Francis hospital, Evanston, after an illness of two years. She was 56 years old. After many years as a teacher in the Chicago public schools, Miss Meade became a lecturer in the sociology department of Loyola university. In 1918 she was appointed head of the social service bureau. She was the author of numerous articles and a text book on Irish history. One sister, Mrs. William J. McCarthy of Wilmette, survives her. The funeral will be held tomorrow at 10 a. m. in St. Francis Xavier church, Wilmette. Burial will be in Calvary cemetery.

BLAST SPREADS AMMONIA FUMES.

Ammonia fumes that spread when a small explosion broke pipes in the refrigerating system of the General Market House company butcher shop at 235 East 43d street, Friday, brought out south side fire apparatus and caused damages of about $3,000 to the shop and surrounding stores.

4,000,000 People Prefer "Hursen" Funerals

"Hursen's" is an extraordinary institution. It has grown to be the greatest of its kind in America. It had an extraordinary beginning. It was born of a revolutionary idea. It has grown great because this idea has fitted in perfectly with public demand for something better in methods, manners and equipment at funerals.

Today, as on every day since the small beginning, a "Hursen" funeral is at once recognized, because of that indefinable something which spells elegance, superior thought, superior service, superior quality, superior attention, superior environment, superior equipment. You see and feel this superiority whenever you witness or attend a "Hursen" funeral.

This is why "Hursen" funerals are preferred by the 4,000,000 people in Chicago's vast territory. Hursen funeral equipment is made up of specially built passenger automobiles and limousine-hearses, unequaled in all America! Yet, it does not cost any more for the use of these than for the ordinary and less desirable kind.

Hursen, in raising the standard of quality at funerals, at the same time revolutionized funeral cost. This is why "Hursen" funerals cost but a fraction of the charges usually made elsewhere. So, call Hursen, of course!

IT was only last Fall that the A. C. radio tube was perfected. The public long had awaited this important development, which marked the beginning of real A. C. (Alternating Current) operation—direct from the electric light socket!

The Fall radio season was already under way when the A. C. tube came out. Like other radio manufacturers, we found that further time was required to get into full production with the Stewart-Warner A. C. Radio. As a result, the season was far along before we began making deliveries.

Only in one way are these prices made possible. And that is by selling direct to you from the factory. You can buy at the factory or at any of the other conveniently located distributing points we have established for this sale (see below).

Remember, we could not offer these unheard-of prices except on a factory-to-consumer basis. And if we were to conduct this sale through outside agencies or surplus stock houses, we would be obliged to add their profits to these lists and charge considerably more for each set.

But you must act quickly. These prices are less than the cost of manufacture! Our surplus stock must be reduced—at once. Our loss is your gain.

Free Demonstration

At the Stewart-Warner factory, or at any of the distributing points listed below, you can see the full line of Stewart-Warner models and hear them demonstrated.

We invite you to come, whether or not you buy. Stewart-Warner Radios are recognized as the finest accomplishment in the science of radio production—noted for their beautiful cabinet work, superb reception (both distant and local), simple operation, and remarkable selectivity.

Genuine A.C. Radio

—Not just "electrified" or so-called "socket power"

Do you want a radio that operates entirely from your electric light socket? If you do, you want an "A. C." radio.

"A. C." means "Alternating Current." Alternating current is the type of electrical current your electric light company supplies to your home.

When looking at any radio, ask the dealer this question: "DOES IT EMPLOY A. C. TUBES?" Only a radio employing the new A. C. tubes is a genuine A. C. radio.

The old type of tube, made for battery operation, takes only direct current, and will not operate with alternating current.

Do not be misled by the terms "electrified," or "all-electric," or "light socket power." An "electrified" radio is NOT an A. C. radio. An "all-electric" radio is not an A. C. radio unless it is an "A. C. ALL-ELECTRIC," employing A. C. tubes. Likewise, a "light-socket-power" radio is not an A. C. radio unless it employs A. C. tubes.

And remember: A. C. tubes can be used only in a radio specially designed for A. C. operation. The Stewart-Warner A. C. Radios offered in this sale are the latest development in radios designed for A. C. operation. They come to you completely equipped, including A. C. tubes.

NEW UNITARIAN SHRINE WILL BE READY FOR FAIR

Church to Merge Beauties of Art, Worship.

The creed or confession of faith read at a Chicago Unitarian church's service in which those believing in any god or in no god do worshipfully join:

We believe in the goodness of life, realizable in this present world, available to all the children of men who seek the masteries of the spirit in every condition.

We believe in man, and the worth of all persons.

We believe in toil, the toil of hand and brain, in the duty of all to bring forth the fruits of useful living, and in the right of each to the just rewards of his industry.

We believe in society, in the ordered life of church and state, of school and home, of the arts and sciences, and we rejoice in this present hour of communion with one another, and with the common hopes of all men.

(From the "Ordinary of Worship, No. 3" of the First Unitarian church in Woodlawn avenue.)

BY JAMES O'DONNELL BENNETT

THE REV. VON OGDEN VOGT.
(Moffett Photo.)

A new Unitarian shrine church for the middle west will be finished by world's fair time and it will be a gem.

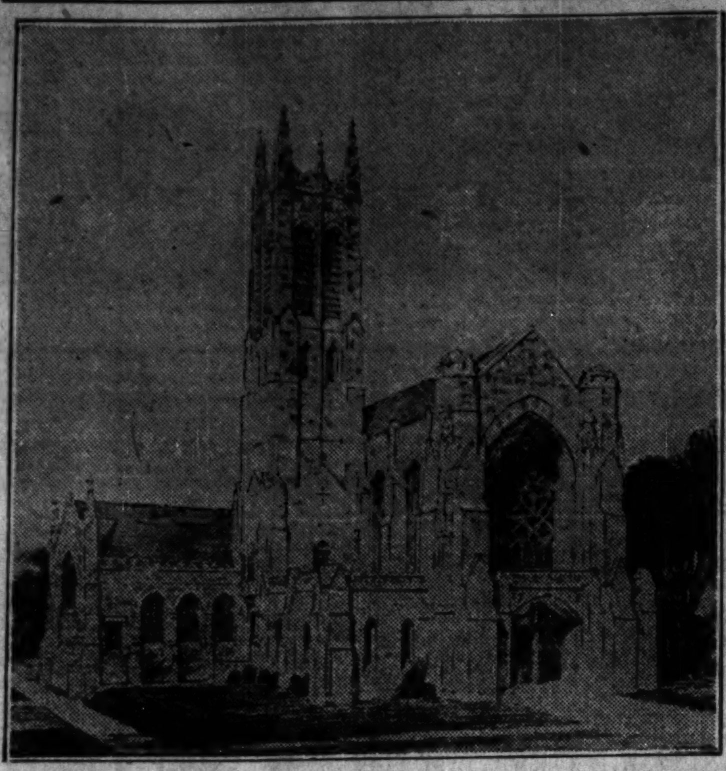
It will cost more than half a million dollars and will be of cathedral-like stateliness.

Construction starts in June and will require two or three years; decoration of the side aisles with devotional frescoes bearing on modern agriculture, manufactures, commerce, and the arts will consume two more years.

The leading projectors are the Rev. Von Ogden Vogt, minister of the First Unitarian church, and these members of that body:

Congressman Morton D. Hull, Frederick Ingalls, Arthur Tobin, Max Cowen, Charles Stoddard, Roland Haynes, new vice president of the University of Chicago; Samuel B. King, Donald De Frees, Dr. Beveridge Moore, O. J. Laylander and Dr. W. C. Woodward.

NEW TEMPLE OF UNITARIANS



Architect Denison B. Hull's sketch of Unitarian shrine church, ground for which will be broken in June at 57th street and Woodlawn avenue. The building will cost more than $500,000.

The architect is Denison Bingham Hull, son of Congressman Hull.

Since its organization 92 years ago the First Unitarian church of Chicago always has been ultra liberal in spirit, but its new edifice—in the late decorated Gothic style—at 57th street and Woodlawn avenue, will be ultra-ecclesiastical in aspect. The result of this combination of new thought and ancient forms is one of the most novel and impressive church projects in the history of Chicago.

Follow New Church Trend.

Architecturally the new structure will compose with the vast Gothic group now rising on the University of Chicago's campus across the way. It will be expressive of the cultus of beauty of architecture and ritual which, during the last decade, has been the most significant movement among Protestant churches that a generation ago were bleakly and intensely nonritualistic.

Unitarianism's new shrine church will present these extraordinary features:

It will be that almost extinct type of urban structure—a city church wherein burial is permitted. This is made possible by the revival of cremation and the use of urns for the ashes of the dead. Beneath the nave will be a crypt fitted as a columbarium for the reception of cinerary urns. A fee of from one hundred to two hundred dollars will be charged for the installation of an urn in perpetuity. "Rest forever where once you prayed," is Pastor Vogt's slogan.

Daily Vesper Services.

Although by all its early traditions, Unitarianism is nonritualistic, this church will be the scene of daily vespers and, on Sundays, of elaborate antiphonal music exchanged by the principal choir in the nave and the chapel choir in the south transept. And at the western end of the nave will rise an altar surmounted by a cross.

Taking a leaf out of the book of Roman Catholic custom, the First Unitarian society will keep its church open for prayer and meditation all day of every day.

Despite its decision for an enriched service and a more abundant use of the arts in Protestant worship, the First Unitarian in its new home will offer more and more frequently what it now offers occasionally in its present chapel. That offering is what some whimsically call "Father Vogt's Service for Pagans."

It is a service of worship in which the most intolerant agnostics, even the most bravura atheists, can—and do—join reverently and without self-stultification. It proceeds with elaborate musical interludes, from Prayer of Confession and Litany to Benediction. It is instinct with devotion but the word God does not once appear in it. Yet this strange service is read from an altar surmounted by a cross and illuminated with candles. As a poetic document and a liturgical curiosity the leaflet containing it is well worth your sending for.

The new edifice will be the expression of—and partly the result of—a book. That book is Mr. Vogt's "Art and Religion," which the Yale University Press published in 1921 and which immediately stirred the imagination and coördinated the ideas of Lutheran, Methodist, Baptist, and Congregational leaders who looked toward a revival of interest in the arts in connection with Protestant worship. This volume was followed last year by the publication of Mr. Vogt's "Modern Worship," which contains his Lowell institute lectures on liturgical themes. No more significant honor, it may be added, can come to an American scholar than to be invited to give Lowell institute lectures.

Beauty Realized in Stone.

The new shrine church will be a realization in stone and fresco of the cultus of beauty in worship which Pastor Vogt has been preaching for ten years. Its nave will be 104 feet long, 26 feet wide and 54 feet high. It will be covered by the only stone vaulted roof in Chicago, except the roof of Seminary church in Rush street. The nave will contain no steel—pure stone masonry with no brick showing. The vault shafts will have a leap of forty feet upward to the spring of the vault ribs sustaining the roof.

The society's present parish house is to be torn down to make room for the west end of the nave. Its Hull memorial chapel, a noble little structure in the late decorated Gothic style verging to the perpendicular Gothic will be retained and will become the south transept of the nave. The effect of its golden lights crossing the deep shadows of the nave will, the projectors believe, be entrancing.

Defining the wholly practical aspect of the columbarium beneath the nave, Pastor Vogt said:

"What I maintain about this town is that we need to promote cremation and urn burial because in a few years we are going to have five million people here. Hence urban graveyards will go. In a century and a half there will be very few heirs left to contest in the courts their removal. Hence, urn burial gives the only assurance of permanent burial, and the most decent, dignified and holy place for urn burial is the crypt of a historic church. Our new church will have the great advantage of rising in a now stabilized area. Hence its permanency and its historic continuity are reasonably assured."

GERMANY'S HASTE TO SANCTION PEACE PLAN STIRS FRANCE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, April 28.—The German haste in endorsing Secretary of State Kellogg's draft pact outlawing war has brought suspicion on itself and complicates the situation, a Quai d'Orsay spokesman declared today.

"Of all the nations involved," he said, "the reich is the least interested in preserving intact the complicated fabric of peace treaties converging at Geneva. The degree with which a nation welcomes the American plan, and which ignores its treaty obligations, renders itself a suspect in the eyes of others."

Foreign Minister Briand is instructing Ambassador Claudel at Washington again to point out to Mr. Kellogg that his plan, although it mentioned existing agreements, is only acceptable if it is not aimed to weaken them.

WOMEN TO OPEN BOOTHS IN LOOP FOR FAIR FUNDS

Chicago club women tomorrow will open booths in eight loop department stores to solicit memberships in the enrollment campaign of the world's fair, according to plans announced yesterday by Mrs. Chauncey McCormick, chairman of women's enrollment committee. Approximately 25,000 Chicago club women have enrolled for the support of the fair.

Fourteen booths set up in each department store will be conducted by members of a committee of club women who will work in two hour shifts. Pledge cards will be signed at the booths and enrollment certificates will be mailed to the contributors from the headquarters of the fair.

The stores to be equipped with booths are Marshall Field's, Mandel Brothers, Carson Pirie Scott, the Fair, Boston store, Davis company, Leiter's, and Stevens Brothers.

Mrs. H. E. Miller, Wife of Manufacturer, Is Dead

Mrs. H. E. Miller, wife of the president of the Chicago Wheel and Manufacturing company, died yesterday at Illinois Central hospital following an operation. She was 62 years old and a native of Chicago. Her husband, one son and one daughter survive. Funeral services will be held from the residence at 6758 Jeffery avenue to the Church of the Redeemer, 65th street and Kenwood avenue, at 2 p. m. Tuesday.

HARTMAN'S ARE SHOWING MANY NEW AIDS FOR THE BUSY HOUSEWIFE

Helps for Housecleaners and Novel Household Aids Attract Notice.

It's the housewife's time of year about now. All the store looks interesting enough, but you have only to visit the household department to sense an atmosphere of importance and excitement most unusual in this strictly utilitarian sphere.

Kitchen Cabinets have an increased self respect about this season, when they can be so much more confident they're going to be bought. And it's no wonder. It's hard to realize how a single one stays unbought, when you see the surprisingly convenient arrangement of jars and storage spaces they have, and when they come in the lovely colors obtainable this year.

Close by, too, are the Refrigerators, all lined up, awaiting inspection. Inspection began during those few warm days last month, and now, with the sun getting a little hotter each day, more and more shoppers are preparing for the still hotter days to come.

Besides essential needs, there are scores of intriguing little "extras," to attract attention. There's a cunning square kitchen stool, in choice of colors, that has simply to stand on its head to become, most surprisingly, a stepladder. Housecleaners are taking to it, as they naturally should, when its year-round usefulness is so apparent.

Visit the household department. You'll find the things you need there, and you'll have a grand time choosing them from the vast assortments on hand, as well as looking at the things you don't need—yet.

EVENING HOURS ARE MAINTAINED for families that shop together. The Loop Store, Harvey and Roseland Stores remain open Monday night and all other Chicago Stores open Tuesday night.

FIFTY-FIVE ROOMS

You'll find it a great help in selecting new home furnishings to visit a few of the 55 model rooms in Hartman's Loop Store. There you will find smart, new designs, attractively grouped, making it much easier to select those pieces that will please you most in your own home.

HUGE PURCHASES RESPONSIBLE FOR HARTMAN VALUES

There is no mystery about the unusual values shown at Hartman's in every department of the business. The answer is the tremendous buying power through centralization of the buying for 19 stores, every one of which does a business equal in volume to an average good sized furniture store.

In addition to the stores which dot every part of the Metropolitan Chicago territory, headed by the 12 story Loop store, recognized as the showplace for furniture men all over America, there are large stores in Milwaukee, Minneapolis, St. Joseph, Mo., Denver and Omaha.

All purchases for every one of these stores are handled by one buying organization with central offices in Chicago and branches in Grand Rapids, New York, London, Dublin, Paris and Constantinople.

Manufacturers realize that Hartman resources total more than $21,000,000 and that the not unusual order for several trainloads of furniture will be paid for immediately. It is but natural that concessions are made to Hartman buyers which give them a most decided advantage in all markets of the world.

DON'T FORGET TO VISIT THE BARGAIN ATTIC!

If you haven't visited the Bargain Attic, don't forget to do so the next time you're in the Loop. All sorts of remarkable values find their way there. Odds and ends, floor samples, many only one of a kind, and all greatly underpriced for quick clearance—sure to include from time to time just the things you've been looking for. Turnover is very rapid. Things there yesterday are gone today. Visit it once, and you will realize it's a place to come every time you're in the Loop. The bargains are exceptional.

COOLIDGE VETO FOR BILL AIMED TO CUT HIS POWER

Insists War Chiefs Must Control Rifle Matches.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 28.—[Special.]—Encroachment upon the powers of the executive branch of the government is given as the chief basis for a veto transmitted today by President Coolidge to the house.

The bill involved amends the section of the national defense act which specifies members of a national board for the promotion of rifle practice, and directs the holding of an annual competition, to be known as the national matches.

The board under the amended provision would have consisted of five officials of the government and 51 persons to be appointed by officers and agencies which are not a part of the federal government.

Calls It Unconstitutional.

"I have been advised by the attorney general," the President stated, "that this bill is unconstitutional because it takes away from the executive branch of the government and vests in persons not in any branch of the federal service the power and duty to make appointments to and removals from posts in the federal service.

"The bill provides that the competition and school shall be held under such regulations as may be prescribed by the national board for the promotion of rifle practice, which regulations shall be subject to the approval of the secretary of war. The effect of this provision is to take away from the proper government officials the authority to make rules for the national matches and the small arms firing school.

Duty of War Chief, He Says.

"The secretary of war should continue to make the rules and regulations for these activities as he has done in the past, and this important function should not be delegated. The secretary of war now has the advice of the national board for the promotion of rifle practice which is limited to 21 members and which functions at small expense in an entirely satisfactory manner. Through this board he is enabled to keep abreast of the needs of the citizen for this training."

The President states that a meeting of the board would cost $7,500 plus $500 a day after the first day. There has been appropriated in recent years, the President points out, exclusive of $500,000 annually for the national matches, over $3,500,000 for small arms ammunition for training annually the regular army, the citizens' military training camps, the reserve officers' training corps, and about 1,600 rifle clubs.

"The creation of a board charged with the duties prescribed in this bill is a wide departure from the present law and is in violation of sound principles of operation," the President continues.

Outsiders Spend the Money.

"The bill authorizes the appropriation of an undetermined and indefinite amount annually as a part of the sum appropriated for national defense while at the same time it places the expenditures of the appropriation under a group not a part of either war or navy departments. I cannot approve the principle of authorizing an appropriation for national defense unless the sums appropriated are to be expended under the immediate direction and supervision of those charged with the defense plans of the nation.

"To summarize, I consider the proposed legislation undesirable because it is unconstitutional in part; because it charges the war department with the expense of certain activities over which the war department will have little control, and takes from the war department control it now exercises over certain matters affecting the national defense; and because it authorizes an appropriation of an indefinite sum.

OBERTA BEFORE COURT AS POLLS TERRORIST; DISMISSAL REFUSED

John ("Dingbat") Oberta, pal of Joe Saltis, gangster, strolled into County Judge Edmund K. Jarecki's court yesterday to defend his election as Republican committee for the 13th ward. Immaculately attired in a tailored blue suit and with a 5th avenue slant to the brim of his silver gray hat, he entered the county building with a companion, visited the offices of a few minor officials and then joined his lawyer in court.

Oberta, nominated for state senator as well as elected ward committeeman, is charged with terrorizing his ward with gangs of gunmen on the day of the primary, intimidating poll officials into altering tally sheets and driving friends of the opposition from the balloting places. The charges are made in a petition brought by Attorney Seymour Cohen in behalf of Felix F. Kucharski, 4811 South Honore street, who opposed Oberta for Republican committeeman.

Oberta's attorney entered a motion to dismiss the election contest. Judge Jarecki overruled the motion and continued the hearing to May 12.

WITCH DOCTORS OF AFRICA HAVE STRANGE RITES

Ordeals of Pain Beyond Comprehension.

BY W. J. MAKIN.

CAPE TOWN, South Africa, April 28.—Africa, the home of the witch doctor and sinister Ju-jus, still believes in trial by ordeal. In small native villages in the heart of the bush the religious fanatics perform their strange rites often and, it is hard to comprehend how they can make their bodies do the things they do.

It is rather unusual, however, to discover an ordeal taking place in one of the big cities. One occurred recently in Durban, where a large Indian population resides. Several whites, including two doctors and myself, were invited to witness a Hindu fire walking ceremony at the Umbilo temple. Several Soutris, or sacred Hindus, their bodies skewered with pins and steel instruments, were to walk across a floor of red embers.

Huge Bed of Fire.

When we arrived on the scene, six tons of firewood were blazing in a huge bonfire. The flames lit up the crowds of dark faces waiting to see this extraordinary ordeal. In time the logs were reduced to glowing charcoal, and these embers were spread out evenly in a bed 24x16 feet. This fire pit was roped off from the huge crowd surrounding.

The glowing carpet was no sooner prepared than the sound of tom-toms beaten frenziedly and reed pipes wailing were heard in the distance. Then the Soutris appeared, all naked to the waist and displaying their bodies skewered with steel pins, and with weights dangling from the pins. One gray haired woman of 60 years had her tongue skewered. These human pincushions walked straight towards the bed of live coals and without a qualm faced the drift of hot ashes stirred by the breeze. One of the Soutris was walking on nails fixed to the soles of wooden sandals.

Doctors Find No Burns.

After the fire walking the two medical men, Dr. Goldberg and Dr. Witkins, were allowed to examine the feet of the Soutris. They found them to be entirely free from burns or blisters. Dr. Goldberg told me that he could offer no physiological explanation for the healthy condition of these Hindus, for the moment they were relieved of the pins and skewers they were normal men and women. They smilingly showed their feet to the Europeans to prove that they were unharmed.

The steel pins when withdrawn drew no blood and the wounds were barely discernible. The woman who walked through the fire has done so year by year for the last ten years. She appeared to faint when the ordeal was over, but one of the Hindu priests insisted that she was merely throwing off the inner volition.

BEG PARDON

Rep. Henry R. Rathbone writes to THE TRIBUNE that an article printed on April 8 leaves the impression that Mrs. Rathbone was among those who were fleeced out of money by a confidence man who promised social prominence for cash. Mrs. Rathbone was not a victim of the sharper.

Twenty-five Medals Given from Carnegie Hero Fund

Pittsburgh, Pa., April 28.—(AP)—Twenty-five bronze medals were awarded and money grants aggregating $21,000 were made yesterday by the Carnegie hero fund commission, in recognizing twenty-five heroic deeds. One of those recognized was a school girl, Irene Frances Herlihy, 13, of Charlestown, Mass., who saved two children from drowning at Boston.

CHARGE BRITISH DIPLOMACY AIMS TO CRUSH RUSSIA

Birkenhead Mixes Golf and Politics.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

[Copyright: 1928: By The Chicago Tribune.]

BERLIN, April 28. — Despite the English attempts to describe Lord Birkenhead's recent visit to Berlin as purely private and for golfing, full details of what are purported to have been his political activities, including negotiations with Germany on one hand and with Poland on the other, were learned today.

On the second day of his stay the British cabinet member received M. Rodzienko, supposed Polish business man but really Marshal Pilsudski's confidential agent, with whom, it is stated, he discussed the possibilities of making concessions to Lithuania sufficient to prepare the way for a Lithuanian-Polish bloc against Russia, and also Polish plans for stirring up anti-soviet feeling in the Ukraine.

Lord Birkenhead believed from reports of the British foreign office that Ukraine can be made an active center for anti-sovist agitation and become a rallying point for the various opposition groups. Lord Birkenhead cast doubts on the wisdom of Poland's flirtation with Italy, which is calculated to alarm Germany and rouse the French ire.

Reveals Hatred for Reds.

Lord Birkenhead in conversing with Herr Stresemann did not mention Russia, but this was declared to have been the chief topic of his talks with Herr von Kuehlmann, who is a former German foreign minister. Talking to him with remarkable frankness, Lord Birkenhead did not seek to hide his passionate hatred for the bolshevist régime, which he would like to see exterminated, but stressed that this desirable end was impossible so long as Germany is on friendly terms with Moscow.

He expressed keen disappointment over recent signs of coöperation by German and American capital for Russian industrial development, which, if successful, would put the soviet régime on its feet.

Without making a formal proposal, Lord Birkenhead, it is declared, indicated the readiness of the British government to support a radical amendment of the Dawes plan, greatly reducing Germany's annual reparations payments and fixing a total sum well within Germany's capacity, provided Germany lets Moscow fall and joins a European economic and political blockade of Russia under the leadership of England and France.

Fears U. S. Recognition.

He pressed strongly for an early decision, as it appeared likely to him that the next American congress would recognize Russia, which would make a concerted anti-Russian effort impossible.

Herr von Kuehlmann, who is not authorized to give Germany's official standpoint, not holding any office, promised that the matter would be laid before Dr. Stresemann.

So far there is no indication that Germany proposes to listen to Downing street's plea.

TWO DIE; FIVE HURT WHEN OIL TANKER BLOWS UP

San Francisco, Cal., April 28.—(AP)—Two workmen were killed and five were seriously injured when the tanker Richfield, owned by the Richfield Oil company, blew up on the ways of the Union Iron works today.

The blast occurred in the forward part of the tanker and was said to have been caused when mechanics descended into an empty tank and ignited gasoline vapor there. The entire district was rocked.

The dead are Frank Vega and another workman, unidentified. Thirty-five men were aboard the vessel, but most of them escaped with minor injuries.

JOHN PAUL JONES IS ARRESTED.

John Paul Jones, 37 years old, was arrested yesterday at the Berkshire hotel, 15 East Ohio street, on a charge of operating a confidence game. The complainant is Henry Buss, of Quincy, who alleges that Jones persuaded him to surrender stocks valued at $1,700 and failed to return a similar amount in other negotiable issues.

RACKET CHARGED IN WAGE DEALS; INQUIRY BEGUN

Jobholders Claim Names Faked on Assignments.

Something new in the way of racketeering, if numerous complaints to the Better Business bureau have any foundation in fact, is the alleged victimizing of jobholders upon representations that they have signed wage assignments to guarantee debts of friends or relatives to various concerns selling on credit.

An investigation was started yesterday by the bureau to determine the truth of the complaints and extent of the alleged practice. Without exception the complainants deny that they ever signed away their wages. Because of more than a score of complaints from his countrymen, Juan de Gongora, of the Mexican consulate, is coöperating in the investigation. He cited the allegations of Felix Juarez as a typical case.

Wages Are Held Up.

The wages of Juarez, Mr. Gongora learned, were held up by his employers, Armour and company, on March 19 at the request of the Liberal Credit Clothing company, 400 South State street. Juarez was alleged by the concern to have signed a wage assignment to pay the $23.95 balance on an account owed by one Vincente Trejo. He has signed an affidavit stating that he knew Trejo but slightly, that he never guaranteed his account, and that he did not sign any wage assignment in Trejo's favor.

Last year Juarez purchased clothing from the Liberal Credit company, but paid his bill promptly in full as was shown by a release. He recalled, however, that at the time of purchase he was asked to sign a blank paper which Gongora believes was converted to a wage assignment to pay Trejo's bill. This was denied by the concern.

Hazy on Signature.

In company with Gordon E. Smith an investigator for the bureau, Mr. Gongora visited the clothing company and conferred with G. O. Wallin, an official. "I don't remember how we got Juarez's signature and I don't care as long as we have it," the two men said they were told by Wallin.

Mrs. Hazel Williams of 1632 North Tallman avenue, complained that upon visiting the Manufacturers' chain store at 3323 Lincoln avenue, she was asked to sign her name when she requested that a salesman come to her home to inspect an old radio which she wished to turn in on a new one. No one came to the home and later, she said, her husband bought a new radio, which he demanded that the store take back when it failed to work properly.

Name Used on Assignment.

Instead of adjusting the matter, Mrs. Williams asserted, her signature was produced as a wage assignment and was used by the store to garnishee her wages at Colgate and company. According to the Better Business bureau, the peculiar thing about the wage assignment is that Mrs. Williams' signature was obtained last December, nearly two months before she found employment. They wonder how the store could have obtained a wage assignment when the woman was not working.

MANY NOTABLES AT NUPTIALS OF JANET PHILLIPS

Father Settles Million on Bride as Gift.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 28.—[Special.]—A very distinguished company attended the wedding today of Miss Janet Phillips, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas W. Phillips of Pennsylvania, and Leander McCormick Goodhart, commercial secretary of the British embassy and son of the late Frederick McCormick-Goodhart of London, and Mrs. Henrietta McCormick-Goodhart.

The ceremony was performed at 4 o'clock in Bethlehem chapel of the Washington cathedral of Sts. Paul and Peter by Bishop James Freeman, of the District of Columbia, assisted by Canon Fletcher of the cathedral.

While no announcement was made, it is understood that Mr. Phillips settled a million dollars on his daughter as a bridal gift.

Lilies Beautify Chapel.

The little chapel which holds scarcely two hundred people, was very beautiful with its simple decorations of Easter lilies in tall vases with touches of green and broad white satin ribbons marking the seats for the families of the bride and bridegroom.

Miss Phillips had for her maid of honor her sister, Miss Katherine Phillips, and for her bridesmaids another very young sister, Miss Margaret Phillips, and little Miss Patsy McCormick-Goodhart, niece of the bridegroom. Frederick Hamilton McCormick-Goodhart was his brother's best man.

The ushers included Henry Getty Chilton, counselor of the British embassy; J. Theodore Marriner of the state department; several members of the embassy staff; Hon. John Francis Amherst Cecil of Biltmore, N. C., who married Miss Cornelia Vanderbilt, and Coleman Jennings of this city.

Bride's Gown Stately.

The maid of honor headed the bridal procession and was very lovely in a gown of yellow and orchid tinted chiffon. She carried an armful of yellow roses and purple lilacs. The little girls wore gowns of pale green chiffon over yellow chiffon, with flappy hats of the same material. They carried bouquets of blue delphinium and yellow snapdragons.

The bride was very lovely and looked, as she is, very young, having attained only this week her nineteenth year. She was in a sweeping, stately gown of heavy white satin made in one piece from neck to end of the long, rounded train and but slightly fitted in at the low waist line. It was untrimmed save for a yoke of exquisite rose point lace. The sleeves were long and closely fitted, with rose point finish at the wrist and over the hands.

A veil of tulle was arranged simply over the head and fell over the edge of the train. Over this was an heirloom veil of finest and almost priceless Bruges, arranged with a coronet of rose point and orange blossoms. The lace veil was narrow at the top and broadened over the shoulders and it fell to the end of the long train like an exquisite web.

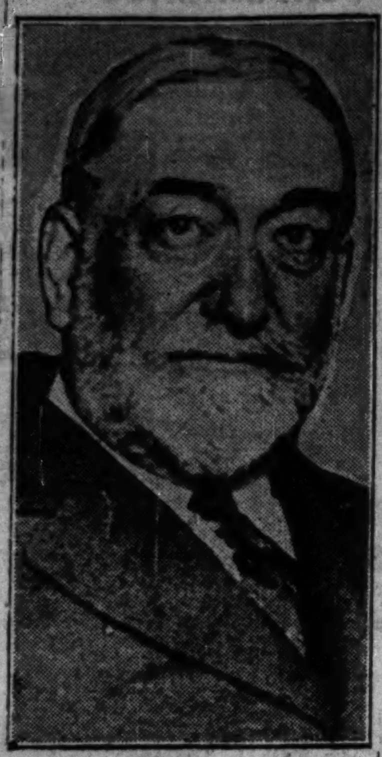
Kellogg and Howard Attend.

The bride carried white orchids touched with palest green, and her ornaments were a graceful crescent of diamonds about three inches long, gift of the bridegroom, and a necklace of superb diamonds, the gift of the bridegroom's mother.

A large reception followed at the home of the bride's parents, and Mr. McCormick-Goodhart and his bride left on an early train for New York, whence they will sail for England.

Among the guests were the British ambassador and Lady Isabella Howard and the secretary of state and Mrs. Kellogg.

Quits World Court



JOHN BASSETT MOORE.

[Copyright: Kadel & Herbert Photo.]

GENEVA, Switzerland, April 28.—(AP)—After seven years of service as a judge on the permanent court of international justice, John Bassett Moore, noted American authority on international law, has resigned.

The resignation, forwarded to the secretariat of the league of nations, explains that Mr. Moore will devote his time to completing a seventy-five volume treatise on international law on which he has spent forty-two years of labor.

The current opinion is that an American judge should be selected to succeed Mr. Moore and among those mentioned are Charles Evans Hughes, Chief Justice Taft, Elihu Root, John W. Davis, and George W. Wickersham.

C. W. Nash Proposes Gift of $400,000 to Y. M. C. A.

Charles W. Nash, president of the Nash Motor company, announced yesterday at Kenosha that he would contribute $400,000 to the construction of a new Y. M. C. A. building there if the city of Kenosha would raise an equal amount. Plans are now being made by Kenosha to raise its $400,000 share during the week of May 22-29.

ILLINOIS COAL STRIKE IS OVER, UNION DECLARES

Fishwick Says Virtually All Mines Are Open.

Springfield, Ill., April 28.—[U. P.]—The coal strike is ended in so far as Illinois is concerned, Harry Fishwick, president of the Illinois miners, declared today.

Virtually every coal mine in this state has signed a separate agreement to operate under the Jacksonville wage agreement, and most of them are at work, Fishwick said. Of the 57,000 miners employed in Illinois in normal times, 40,000 are now at work, he said. With one exception, every large coal company in Illinois has agreed to resume operations.

The New Orient mine, the world's largest colliery, will resume production of coal at West Frankfort Wednesday. The mine employs 1,200 men and holds the world's hoisting record of 15,000 tons in an eight hour shift. New Orient mine will resume production on a reduced tonnage basis under the terms of the Jacksonville wage agreement. The mine is owned by the Chicago, Wilmington and Franklin Coal company.

Prepare to Reopen.

All other large operators—including the Peabody company, the Indiana and Illinois Coal corporation and the Bell & Zoller Mining company—are reopening. Three of the Peabody mines in the Springfield district are operating, and preparations are under way to open a fourth colliery, mine No. 10 of the Indiana and Illinois Coal corporation, at Nokomis and employing 1,000 men is at work.

Mines in the Belleville, Danville, Decatur, and La Salle districts are nearing normalcy, Fishwick said, and all will be running in full blast within the next week.

Rebellion Quelled.

With two-thirds of Illinois' miners working, the agitation of the leaders of the "save the union" movement has been stilled, Fishwick said.

Since the closing of the mines March 31, at the expiration of the temporary truce between the miners and the operators, "save the union" cohorts have picketed some of the working mines.

The situation grew serious here last week when several hundred miners, incensed because they were called "scabs" and other names not so printable, grabbed clubs and chased a band of 75 pickets from the properties of the old West mine.

SOVIET WORKERS JEER SUGGESTION OF GIFT FOR AMIR

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

RIGA, Latvia, April 28.—Meetings called in factories to discuss preparations for the welcome of Amir Amanullah Khan of Afghanistan, on his tour of inspection in the Moscow and Leningrad industrial districts, developed unexpected opposition, according to the Moscow press, which blames the Trotzky element for this attempt to discredit the government.

Workers who introduced resolutions proposing to ignore the emperor of Afghanistan were laid off for an indefinite period, and the amir's bodyguard of cheka [state political police] men is to be enlarged during his visit to the factories.

The workers at the red Putilov works of Leningrad, one of the bolsheviks' principal show places, howled down the suggestion of the chairman of the factory soviet, who proposed that they contribute part of their wages to present the amir with one of the 2,000 tractors the works will produce this year.

NILES MAN DROPS DEAD.

Benton Harbor, Mich., April 28.—[Special.]—Lafayette Frye, 70, for 50 years a resident of Niles, dropped dead there today.

GRACE EPISCOPAL CORNERSTONE TO BE LAID TODAY

When the cornerstone of the new $150,000 Grace Episcopal church is laid this afternoon south of St. Luke's hospital on Indiana avenue, water from the River Jordan and stones from the Garden of Gethsemene will be used in the ceremony. Both were brought from the Holy Land recently by Frank Hibbard, vestryman of the parish.

Bishop Charles P. Anderson will lay the stone in the presence of the clergy of the Chicago diocese and many members of the parish, which was at one time the most fashionable in the city. This will be the fourth edifice of Grace parish, the first church being consecrated at Dearborn and Madison streets in 1852.

Since the burning of the church on South Wabash avenue in 1915, Grace parish has been connected with St. Luke's hospital, the rector, the Rev. Robert Holmes, being the chaplain. The Hibbard gallery, built in memory of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Gold Hibbard, will be arranged so that patients in wheel chairs may attend services.

On the parish vestry are David Evans, Gardiner Lathrop, Dr. Edward P. Norcross, G. Louis Martin, L. R. Curtis, Frank Hibbard and C. H. Schweppe. The late Edward L. Ryerson was also on the vestry.

POLICE HUNT MISSING YOUTH.

The Chicago police were asked Friday to search for Willard Waskom, 24 years old, of Rose Hill, Ky., who has been missing since April 18. Waskom was a school teacher at Seymour, Ind.

GOLDEN JUBILEE IS CELEBRATED BY SISTERHOOD

A three day celebration honoring the golden jubilee of the American branch of the Sisterhood of Poor Clares and the thirty-fifth anniversary of the establishment of their convent in Chicago, opened yesterday at the monastery, 53d and Laflin streets. Pontifical high mass at the chapel, closed to the public throughout the year, was celebrated at which Cardinal Mundelein assisted the Rt. Rev. E. F. Hoban, bishop-elect of Rockford. Services were held also in the afternoon and evening.

Today the Rt. Rev. Msgr. F. A. Purcell, rector of Quigley preparatory seminary, will celebrate solemn high mass at 10 a. m. The Rev. James J. Mertz, S. J., of Loyola university, will speak at 3:30 this afternoon, and an evening service will be held at 7:30. Tomorrow's services will be held at the same hours.

The Chicago Academy of Sciences will give the last of its series of lectures on medical topics this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock at the Museum building, Clark and Center streets. Dr. Archibald L. Hoyne, superintendent of the Contagious Disease hospital, will lecture on "The Prevention of Contagious Diseases."

DR. JAMES STONE, VETERAN PASTOR, IS AUTHOR AT 76

Pictures Faith's Influence on Medieval Spain.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

Youth must watch its step. Here we have the Rev. James S. Stone of Evanston, rector emeritus of St. James church, the mother Episcopal church of Chicago, celebrating his 76th birthday two days ago with the publication in England of a book on "The Cult of Santiago," which at once takes rank as an authoritative work on the Spanish background of the cult of St. James.

Dr. Stone refuses to retire from the world. Sitting in his quiet home at 623 Clinton place, Evanston, his mind ranges from the tawny plains of Castile, the shadowy cathedrals, the gorgeous pilgrimages and crusades of the middle ages, to the Chicago of today and tomorrow.

For this city, where he preached for 28 years, he reaches in imagination from the days when the first St. James church was built on the edge of the howling wilderness, through years of trial and error, but always growth, into a vital future. Chicago has not begun to exhaust itself. It is mercurial but still has a great vision.

History with Philosophy.

His book is more than a scholarly treatise on church history and the myths and legends that center in the patron saint of Spain. It is a picture of the middles ages, the life and mentality of the people, the humble ones and the great kings, and it contains much of Dr. Stone's philosophy on life in general.

A churchman, a theological student at the time the Darwinian hypothesis was stirring the world of thought, he became an evolutionist and has kept pace ever since with the world of science and all liberal thought. He finds it difficult to believe that in this age, with all its books and knowledge, that people still insist on Jonah having been swallowed by a real fish, and a similar literal attitude toward the Bible.

Pictures a Story's Influence.

He does not know whether James, the son of Zebedee, ever went to Spain as a missionary. The whole elaborate story may be a myth. But he does not consider this important. What seized him and kept him 18 months writing at this book, was the effect of such a belief, the consequences upon the people, how it worked out in great pictures, beautiful buildings, how it comforted and healed, how it led to the wars on the Moors and deeds of great heroism. His attitude on this and on many other things seems near to the pragmatic philosophy of William James. He explains it in his book as follows:

"Faulty and suspicious though the tradition may chance to be, people have lived and wrought upon it. According to it, they have shaped careers, built up theories, decided doubts and conducted individual and national life. And still more. The outcome may have been beneficial and desirable. No one now believes in the Egyptian Anubis or the Greek Nemesis, but no one can doubt that the people who did believe in them, and therefore feared them, were helped by their faith to lead a more careful life.

Believes in Power of Faith.

"Possibly much of what I have said may seem pragmatism. I do not intend it to be taken as such. But this I think. A mother who has been robbed of her child by death goes with her broken, grief-driven heart to seek for consolation, in one age or land to the shrine of a goddess in Philae, in another to the brink of the Ganges, in another to the image under the rock in the wilderness, in another to the cross by a Bohemian roadside, in another to the altar of saint in cathedral crypt, in yet another to the relic of St. James the Great, and in still another to the bedside where her loved one died or the grave where the loved one is buried; and no matter whether she seeks for Isis, or Gautama, or Nanna, or Christ, or Genevieve, or Santiago, or the spirit of the dead, she rises from her knees comforted, encouraged, hopeful, with a new vision of life.

"The father who laid his first born in the arms of Moloch had the same faith as he who beholds his best beloved boy dying in burning fever. I do not say that the object of faith matters nothing, but it does seem that faith has in itself, apart from its object, a vital and sustaining power."

"Religion Never Dies."

To Dr. Stone, God is everywhere in life, too big to be found or located, but he has never left the people without a sign and a comfort in any age. God is not the exclusive property of Christians.

"The form religion assumes," he says, "may, indeed, be almost endless in variety, but religion itself—that primal consciousness and assurance of God, and of human need for him and responsibility to him—remains ever a component and inseparable part of man's nature. It may be obscured and its strength weakened, but it never dies."

Movie Actress Visits Chicago

TWO FINED FOR ASSAULT.

Stanley Wayne, 61 years old, 2136 Carolina street, and Chester Paplaczyk, 38 years old, 2076 North Leavitt street, were each fined $100 and costs Friday on a charge of assaulting Joseph Revena, 2334 North Leavitt street.

Talks of Filmland

Lillian Gish, smart in a costume of beige and plaid and smiling the famous Gish smile, perched on a baggage truck in the La Salle street station yesterday and briefly reviewed the cinema situation. According to her conclusions, the movies are moving in the right direction and that direction seems to be the one she is now taking. She is on her way to Germany, there to work with Max Reinhardt on a new film of modern German life. The route to artistic movies in the opinion of Miss Gish, has Europe at one end and America at the other.

"Mr. Reinhardt is author and will direct the film I am to act in," she said. "We already owe a great deal to the ideas of the Germans in movie art. The movies can't help but be benefited by European competition and we hope we can help them with our ideas. With our combined efforts we can make something finer."

AMERICANS AID GREEK VICTIMS OF EARTHQUAKES

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ATHENS, April 28.—The director of the earthquakes section of the meteorological bureau of Athens returned today from Corinth. He said he had discovered the center of the recent earthquake disaster was located at the bottom of the sea a short distance from the coast line at Corinth. He stated that when a new town of Corinth is built on the old site all the houses will be quakeproof.

Satisfaction is expressed that relief ships are leaving New York for the earthquake area with generous aid for the sufferers.

The Rev. Charles S. McFarland, general secretary of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ, who arrived here yesterday, has cabled an appeal for $50,000 to erect a new American cathedral in Corinth to replace the historic St. Paul's church, which was destroyed. The Ulen company of New York, at present engaged in laying down a water system in Athens, has sent a gang of workmen to erect huts in Corinth.

Rome Feels Tremor.

ROME, April 28.—(AP)—A very slight earthquake was registered at the Rome observatory at 3:40 o'clock this afternoon. The tremor was felt slightly stronger throughout the former volcanic basin in the province of Lazios (Roman Latium), notably at Roccadipapa.

Quake Touches Egypt.

CAIRO, Egypt, April 28.—(AP)—A slight earth shock was felt here at 3:18 p. m. yesterday.

Dead in Bulgaria Total 103.

SOFIA, Bulgaria, April 28.—(AP)—Latest figures on the death and losses in the recent series of violent earthquakes which have been shaking southern Bulgaria place the dead at 103 and the injured at 672. About 275,000 persons were made shelterless and 13,800 houses completely destroyed with 18,300 rendered uninhabitable.

Slight Tremors in Mexico.

MEXICO CITY, April 28.—(AP)—Dispatches from Pinotea in the State of Oaxaca, reports slight earth tremors continue daily through that section.

Peru Again Shaken.

LIMA, Peru, April 28.—(AP)—All of southern Peru was shaken by a strong earthquake lasting more than ten seconds tonight. The population of this city rushed into the streets in great alarm. The wide range of the shock was shown by telegraphic reports which poured in.

Black Rain Blamed on Volcano.

JASSY, Roumania, April 28.—(AP)—Explanation of the weird phenomenon which brought terror to many parts of the Balkans when day changed to night and black rain fell, was believed to have been found today when it was learned that a volcano at Ocnitza in the department of Bukovina had renewed activity after half a century. The towns of Hotin, Cernauti, Vascauti, and Soroca, all in northeast Roumania, near the Polish and Russian borders, reported today the same phenomenon which had caused panics in other towns during the last few days. For four hours this afternoon the sky was darkened so street lights were needed while the black rain covered everything with an ashy substance. The populace was terrorized, fearing the end of the world was upon them.

CHARGE BOULDER DAM BILL HITS STATE RIGHTS

Foes Also to Attack Act as Socialistic.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 28.—[Special.]—Opponents of the gigantic Boulder canyon dam project are prepared to attack it from a wide variety of angles when debate in the senate is resumed next week.

The points on which the opposition will center its fire include the following:

That the project establishes a new socialistic principle in putting the government into the power business on the plea that by so doing it will make a government undertaking self-supporting.

Get Into Power Business.

That besides putting the government into the power business the bill projects it into the banking business by loaning its credit to municipalities of southern California which are promoting the scheme.

That instead of getting its money back, as claimed by advocates of the measure, the government is facing a certain loss in the 125 million dollar project.

That the bill proposes to expend a huge sum in an engineering experiment in the face of warnings from outstanding engineers that its details have not been properly investigated.

That it represents a serious invasion of state sovereignty in turning the Colorado river over to the federal bureaucracy.

That while it is proposed by irrigation to make available for cultivation 100,000 additional acres of California land, the actual fact is that there is more land under irrigation in that state now than will be absorbed within twenty years and the investment in further projects would be an economic crime.

No Navigation to Improve.

That while it is claimed to be a project for the improvement of navigation, there is no navigation on the Colorado to improve.

That passage of the bill would invite international relations with Mexico.

The Boulder dam bill was before the senate for more than two hours today. Senator Pittman [Dem., Nev.] occupied the greater part of the time in advocacy of a committee amendment under which it is provided that of excess earnings of the power plant above amount necessary for amortization purposes 18¾ per cent shall go to Nevada and the same amount to Arizona. With this amendment incorporated Senator Pittman is expected to support the bill. Senator Oddie [Rep., Nev.] also urged approval of this amendment.

Senator Ashurst [Dem., Ariz.], who is leading the fight against the bill, became involved in a colloquy with Senator Johnson [Rep., Cal.], chief sponsor. Their controversy related to proposals by Senator Ashurst for the appropriation of sufficient money to provide flood protection for the Imperial valley.

Johnson Is Quizzed.

Senator Johnson, answering a query from Senator Ashurst as to whether or not he had voted in committee against an amendment to provide flood protection for the Imperial valley, insisted upon replying in a roundabout way which did not suit the Arizona senator.

The latter accused the California senator of dodging the issue and Senator Johnson retaliated by charging Senator Ashurst with bad faith. Senator Ashurst took exception to this charge and the verbal exchange became so heated that Senator Pittman finally intervened by refusing longer to yield to either Senator Johnson or Senator Ashurst.

Chief Justice Taft Is Now Grandfather for 11th Time

Cincinnati, O., April 28.—[U. P.]—William Howard Taft, chief justice of the United States Supreme court, was a grandfather today for the eleventh time. The new grandchild, a daughter, was born last night to Mrs. Eleanor Chase Taft, wife of Charles P. Taft II., the chief justice's son.

Meet First Time

Another pair of twins, each having the same given name, has been discovered by Dr. Horatio H. Newman, professor of zoology at the University of Chicago, whose department has been studying twins who have been reared apart. The twins, who are 23 years old and the fourth set to be used in the experiment, were taken to Dr. Newman's laboratory yesterday for physical measurements.

Neither knew of the others' existence until a month ago when Paul Harold Cavitt, who is studying in a Grand Rapids, Mich., college, discovered an old record of a Chicago orphanage indicating that he was a twin. Upon investigation he found his brother Paul Harold O'Kane at Shabbona, Ill., where he is assistant postmaster. They were separated when they were two months old. The similarity in their names is a coincidence they told Dr. Newman.

MAGIC IN WORD WATER EXPLAINS BOULDER DAM

Western Consciousness of It Developed.

BY HARPER LEECH.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ARTICLE X.

Los Angeles, Cal., April 28.—[Special.]—The wide psychological gap between the easterner and westerner, which becomes evident in the discussion of such problems as that of Boulder dam, arises from one thing. Keep your ears open as you travel about this country and note how many times you hear the word "water"—the desert dweller or the man living on a reclaimed desert or in a semi-arid country is ever water conscious. Local proverbs and wise cracks show this.

Irrigation creates a social consciousness of its own. Sociologists have discovered striking similarities in the village institutions and folkways of the valley of the Italian Po and the Chinese rivers. The water consciousness of the westerner recalls Prof. E. A. Ross' observation that three-fifths of the casual conversation of Chinese coolies is about food—simply because they never get enough of it.

Develop Water Consciousness.

The water consciousness of the American west is all the more keen because of the historical background of the country. It was peopled by gold seekers and the vision of sudden wealth never dies in such a country. It was peopled by Americans—the world's foremost real estate speculators—the father of his country having been the foremost realtor of his day.

Consequently there is no use talking to the people of the southwest about the folly of putting more land into cultivation. What boots it that California even now has thousands of tons of grapes which rot upon the vines, even in the era of Volstead, or that lemons are such lemons that they remain unpicked on thousands of trees? All that is nothing to the fact that land which can be homesteaded or bought for as low as $1 per acre may mount to $1,000 or more per acre if it can be brought within the magic influence of an irrigation ditch.

Source of Wealth Changes.

The midwestern farmer for two or three generations grew crops almost at cost, but got rich out of the rise of land values. The west knows that it has prospered individually and collectively as land values have risen. They are careful out here to tell you that their crops do not compete with the crops of the granger states, but that is nonsense. The change in the American diet evidenced by the long strings of refrigerator cars moving from the west coast to the east has adversely affected the market for the more normal grass derived rations.

That leaf of lettuce which is now inserted in nearly every American ham sandwich is the trophy attesting the victory of irrigation over the older agriculture of the rainfall belts—of the subtropic garden over northern glebe.

Wealth in Irrigation.

No mere comparison of the amount of irrigated acreage with that of nonirrigated lands under cultivation tells the story, because the irrigated acres under a desert sun produce not only more per acre but two or three crops for one produced under rainfall.

So the political power of the west for two generations has been exerted upon the federal government to secure money for irrigation projects.

After hundreds of thousands of acres were put under water by private capital, the more difficult and expensive projects were undertaken by the government.

When these projects failed to pay their way the farmers served were in many cases relieved of portions of their burden, even as America has been reducing the debts of the allied governments.

On twenty-eight of the government projects which the reclamation bureau engineers, who, by the way, have done the basic estimating of Boulder dam at a cost of $400,000 already, estimated would cost $93,436,641, the net construction cost to June 30 was $141,787,005.74. However, to do them justice, some of the estimates were made prior to the wartime increase of prices and wages, and as a result of more careful methods from 1924 to 1926 similar estimates of $9,122,000 resulted in a cost of only $7,992,013.25.

The original estimated acreage on the twenty-eight projects was 3,056,427 acres, but in 1923 the bureau was prepared to supply water to only 1,692,700 acres, and only 1,202,130 acres were actually irrigated in that year. Up to June 30, 1923, water users had paid only $15,592,842.48, leaving the United States treasury out of pocket $126,194,163.26. Delinquent water payments then totaled $5,688,487.76.

Of the money paid out by the government, repayment was more or less secured by contracts for water rights aggregating about $101,000,000, while repayment of $39,000,000 was unsecured.

POLL 100,000 IN DELAWARE ON BOOZE QUESTION

Seek to Ascertain Sentiment of State.

Wilmington, Del., April 28.—[Special.]—More than 100,000 men and women of this state today were given the opportunity of registering their sentiment on the prohibition amendment in six of its phases.

Under the direction of Pierre S. du Pont, member of the executive committee of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, a mail referendum has been launched among the residents of Delaware who voted at the last general election.

Accompanying the questionnaire is an explanation of the motive for undertaking the survey. The fact that, after eight years of enforcement, drinking continues throughout the country on a widespread scale indicates that the outcome of the prohibition amendment does not meet the expectations of its sponsors. There is need, therefore, of determining the opinion of the public on the question at this so far unsatisfactory stage of the dry era. Since it is likely that both political parties will sidestep the issue, the association explains that it has taken this informal way of obtaining an expression of opinion on a state-wide scale.

What the Questions Are.

The six questions included in the referendum are:

1. Do you believe that much harm results from abuse of drink under the prohibition laws that are in force in this country?

2. Do you believe that alcoholic liquors such as beer, wine, whisky, and gin may now be bought illegally but freely by those who wish to buy?

3. Do you believe that the general disregard of prohibition laws is leading to other lawlessness?

4. Do you think that change in existing prohibition laws is needed?

5. If the sale of light wine and beer were permitted, do you believe that the call for whisky and gin would materially decrease?

6. If you favor a change in our laws but do not want the old time saloon back, would you vote for a change that permitted the sale of spirits, wine and beer through properly conducted and government supervised places of sale.

Results to Be Tabulated.

The results of the survey, the accompanying statement says, will be tabulated regardless of the outcome. In order that it may be a test of actual opinion, it is requested that ministers refrain from conducting prohibition propaganda during the course of the referendum. The association sponsoring the referendum also agrees not to engage in any activity that will influence the results of the test.

SEIZED PAWNING RINGS.

Isaiah Conn, colored, 25, was arrested yesterday while attempting to pawn two diamond rings valued at $1,300 in a store at [illegible] South State street. Rings like them were [illegible] from his home town, Montreal.

SCAFFOLD IN LOOP FALLS; ONE WORKER KILLED, TWO INJURED

One man was killed and two others critically injured yesterday when a scaffold on which they were at work repairing the ninth floor of the Church building, 30 South Wabash avenue, gave way and dropped to the roof of an adjoining six story structure. The man hurt fatally was Elmer Westerland, 35, of 5449 Leland avenue. The other workmen were Ellis Pointer, 5515 West Lake street, and Phillip Auger, 3002 Flournoy street. Boards from the scaolding pierced the roof of the neighboring building and frightened office workers.

WOMEN TO SHOW ADDED INTERESTS AT THEIR FAIR

The Women's World's fair, which will be opened by Louis L. Emmerson and Judge Floyd Thompson at the Coliseum on May 19, will have some new interests represented in the exhibits. There will be booths for aviation, mining, moving pictures, and blacksmithing.

The committee in charge of aviation is planning to bring fresh flowers to the Coliseum every day from California by air. They are also planning to provide visitors with a means of seeing Chicago by airplane.

The mining exhibit, the first to be brought to the fair, is from the Viola Blue Turquoise mine, owned and operated by Miss Viola Marie Smith near Santa Fe, N. M. The mine is said to be one of the oldest and deepest in the world.

Moving pictures will be in charge of Mrs. Robert Dunlap and Miss Florence Ridgeway, who own a film laboratory. Blacksmithing will be represented by Miss Florence E. Schell, who has a forge on West Grand avenue.

CHICAGO WOMAN DIVORCES BRITISH ARMY OFFICER

The former Mrs. W. Ernest Walker, who was married to Lieut. Arthur John Unwin, a British army officer, in December, 1926, has obtained a divorce in Reno, and has reassumed the name of Mrs. Walker, it was learned yesterday. Last fall Mrs. Walker, then Mrs. Unwin, said that her husband had departed for England and that they had separated definitely.

Mrs. Walker is of an old Chicago family, the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Edward Kendall Rogers. The late Mr. Walker was a brother of the late Dr. Samuel J. Walker. Mrs. Walker met Lieut. Unwin through her sister, Mrs. William Goudy of London, and they were married at Greenwich, Conn. Her daughter, Miss Edith Walker, a debutante of several years ago, went to Reno, it is understood, for the accomplishment of the divorce, and returned by airplane.

CANADA PROTEST ON DRY GUNPLAY GIVEN TO MELLON

Text of Note Made Public; Acts Serious, It Warns.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 28.—[Special.]—Secretary Kellogg today referred the Canadian protest against the careless shooting propensities of dry agents to Secretary Mellon with a request that the matter be looked into. An early reply to the Canadian government's aide memoire of yesterday is expected to go forward.

Publication today by the state department of the Canadian note discloses that Canada considers that the promiscuous shooting by the United States government's rum chasing forces along the Canadian border at Detroit has caused a serious situation.

Three Forays Cited.

"I have the honor," Vincent Massey, the Canadian minister at Washington states, "to bring to your attention a serious situation which is reported as existing on the international boundary along the Detroit river.

"It has recently been stated in the Canadian house of commons by the member of parliament who represents that region, that on three occasions within the last month stray bullets, fired by preventive officers of the government of the United States, have lodged in Canadian territory.

Dry Bullet Imperils Child.

"In one instance a bullet passed through a house in the town of Sandwich within three feet of a four year old child, the bullet was found and was shown to be from a high powered rifle such as is carried by preventive officers.

"On another occasion, on Saturday, April 21, at 7:15 p. m., while a local resident was driving on the road along the river front from Walkerville to Windsor, a bullet penetrated the windshield of his automobile and nearly blinded him with broken glass.

"I am instructed to request that you will be good enough to have an inquiry made with a view to furnishing an explanation of these events and prevent similar incidents."

JOSEPH MURRAY, LEGISLATOR, DIES IN CHICAGO HOME

Joseph F. Murray, state representative from the 27th district, died of pneumonia yesterday morning at his home, 4144 Washington boulevard. He was 50 years old. He was elected to the house of representatives in November, 1926. Before that he had been an employé of the bureau of streets for fifteen years.

Funeral services are to be held on Tuesday at 8:30 a. m. from the residence to St. Mel's church. Burial will be in Mount Carmel cemetery. Mr. Murray is survived by his widow, Mrs. Minnie Murray, and a sister, Mrs. E. Nary of New York.

COAL TEAMSTERS' HEAD IS SHOT AS GUNMEN TRAP HIM

An attempt to assassinate James Lynch, 62 years old, veteran business agent of the Coal Teamsters' union, was made by four gunmen yesterday near his home at Brown's Lake, Wis. He escaped with wounds in the legs and arms.

According to the story told by Lynch to the authorities at Antioch, Ill., the four men summoned him from his home on the pretext that they wished to look at a cottage for rent. They opened fire on him as he approached them and he fled, taking refuge in a clump of trees. Mrs. Lynch witnessed the attack. Two men, who gave their names as William Martin and Thomas Elliott, of Chicago, were arrested as suspects in Antioch.

Lynch has been connected with union affairs in Chicago for more than twenty years. He was arrested ten years ago in connection with the shooting of Marcus Looney, another organizer, but there was no prosecution. He moved to Brown's Lake several years ago, but came daily to his office at Halsted and Harrison streets to transact business. No motive for the attack on him was learned by the investigators.

WOMEN'S CLUB BUILDING TO BE STARTED IN MAY

Ground will be broken in about three weeks at 11th street and Michigan avenue for the $750,000 home of the Chicago Women's club. On that day the club will have special gala festivities, which now are under consideration by a recently appointed committee headed by Mrs. Leopold Metzenberg, with Mrs. John S. Gilchrist and Mrs. George W. Noble assisting.

At the annual meeting of the club yesterday women who have been waiting for the date to be set ever since the plan to build the new clubhouse was decided on last January were disappointed. All that the building committee could assure them was that the day would be some time after the fifteenth of next month and as near that date as possible.

M. E. CONFERENCE TO FIX STATUS OF CHURCH BISHOPS

Precedent Sought in Trial of Suspended Delegate.

BY THE REV. W. B. NORTON.

The status of the bishops in the Methodist Episcopal church promises to hold the center of interest at the general conference of the denomination which begins Tuesday morning in the Municipal auditorium at Kansas City, Mo. The 37 bishops, while dominant in the areas they represent during the four years' interim between the general conferences, have neither voice nor vote at the business sessions of the conference. They have seats of honor on the platform and are the presiding officers at all the sessions, but are not allowed to speak on the merits of any question unless requested by the delegates.

Among the questions that will affect the bishops are the following:

1. What will be done with Bishop Anton Bast of Copenhagen, Denmark, who comes to the conference under suspension for "imprudent conduct with a woman," and may or may not be subjected to trial?

Question of Tenure.

2. Will the new bishops to be elected be chosen for a limited term of eight years or for a life tenure as now prevails?

Affecting the bishops also will be the choice of the chairman of the committee on Episcopacy. Dr. David G. Downey of New York City, chairman of the committee four years ago and a dominant figure in the general conference, will not attend the conference because of ill health. The chairman has much to say as to the number of bishops to be elected and as to the efficiency of those in office.

Five bishops will be retired by reason of their having reached the age limit, which is determined by the conference nearest their 73d birthday. They are: Bishop J. F. Berry, Philadelphia; Bishop Luther B. Wilson, New York; Bishop Frank W. Warne, Bangalore, India; Bishop W. F. Oldham, Buenos Aires, Sounth America; Bishop W. P. Thirkield, Chattanooga.

Stone to Represent Church.

The accusers of Bishop Bast are ministers of the area over which he resided in Europe until his suspension last August. Dr. Dorr F. Diefendorf, pastor of Calvary church, East Orange, N. J., who went to The Hague to defend Bishop Bast in the original investigation, will defend him at the general conference, if his case comes to trial. The Rev. Fred D. Stone, pastor of the Irving Park Methodist Episcopal of Chicago, has been selected to represent the church. He is not the prosecutor of Bishop Bast but acts as a friend at court to see that the rights of the church are protected.

"It probably will take ten days for a decision to be reached as to whether Bishop Bast will be tried or whether some other adjustment can be made," said the Rev. Mr. Stone. "As Bishop Bast will present the first instance in the history of the denomination of a bishop being brought to trial, if such be the case, we are without precedent, and a decision cannot be reached until after considerable discussion."

Imprudence Charge Upheld.

In March, 1926, Dr. Bast was convicted in court of the fraudulent conversion of about $50,000 of charity funds he had collected in the United States through his church and missionary paper, "The Lighthouse." He was sentenced to three months in prison.

Last August at The Hague a committee composed of twenty ministers from the Northwest German, the Switzerland, the Italy, and the Norway conferences, under the presidency of Bishop Thomas Nicholson of Detroit, investigated this case against Dr. Bast, and also investigated the cause for criticism against him in his association with a married woman. The ministers unanimously exonerated Dr. Bast of blame in the fraud case, but by a vote of 15 to 5 sustained the charges against him of imprudent and unministerial conduct with the woman.

Candidates for Chairman.

Among those spoken of for the important position of chairman of committee on Episcopacy are: Dr. John Thompson, Chicago; Dr. O. W. Fifer, Indianapolis; Dr. Ray Allen, Hornell, N. Y., and Dr. J. H. Race, senior head of the Methodist Book Concern, New York City.

Ministers who are being definitely promoted by their friends for election to the Episcopacy are: Dr. Diefendorf, N. J.; Dr. Loren M. Edwards, Trinity church, Denver, Colo.; Dr. F. W. Court, St. John's, Davenport, Ia.; Dr. C. N. Pace, First church, Duluth, Minn.; Dr. W. J. Wade, executive secretary world service commission, Chicago. Dr. M. S. Rice, Metropolitan church, Detroit, who declined election four years ago, has made no announcement concerning his intention thus far.

Two from India.

India has two nationals who may be considered candidates: Dr. J. R. Chitambar, president of the Lucknow Christian college, and Dr. James Devadasan, president of the Theological seminary, Bareilly. Dr. E. Stanley Jones, Sitapur, India, author of "The Christ of the Indian Road," who refused election four years ago, is again being seriously considered by his friends.

Other questions regarded as of special importance which will come before the conference will be: the acceptance of the new pension plan for ministers, patterned after the plans adopted by the Episcopal and Presbyterian churches; the placing of the support of theological schools directly on the church as the support of secondary schools and colleges is now; the equalization of ministers' salaries so as to make a minimum salary of $2,000 and a house, and the admission of laymen into the annual conference.

10,000 NEGROES COMING

When the twenty-eighth quadrennial conference of the African Methodist Episcopal church convenes here May 7-25, it will bring to Chicago delegates from Africa, South America, Canada, and the United States. Close to 10,000 Negroes are expected from the eighteen Episcopal districts. Headquarters will be at the Eighth Regiment armory, 35th street and Giles avenue. Bishop A. L. Gaines of Chicago will be official host to the general conference.

MRS. VANDERBILT DRIVEN ABROAD BY NICHOLLS SUIT

Nicholls, for an annulment of his marriage to Mrs. Barbara Rutherford Hatch Nicholls on the ground that she is insane, Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt sailed at 1 o'clock this morning on the French liner Ile de France, it was learned at noon today.

With her on her secret voyage are Sir Paul Dukes and Lady Dukes, formerly Margaret Rutherford, another daughter of Mrs. Vanderbilt. Their names did not appear on the passenger list.

BOLIVIANS SAY LABOR THRIVES ON COCA LEAF

Geneva Drug Parley Is Surprised.

BY ROBERT ROSA.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

[Copyright: 1928: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LA PAZ, Bolivia, April 28.—The statement of the Bolivian delegate, Manuel Cuellar, at the Geneva conference for the limitation on the use of alkaloids, that the Bolivian government finds it impossible to restrict the production of cocoa leaves without injuring the needs of the Bolivian laborer, has caused much surprise throughout the world. It was said that chewing cocoa, rather than affecting the health of laborers, enables them to do more intense work.

Various prominent local physicians and industrialists employing large numbers of Indians are unanimous in the opinion that in the United States and Europe only the effects of the active principle in the cocoa, namely cocaine, are known. Chewing cocoa leaves is said to have an entirely different effect from that of cocaine. This practice has been prevalent in the highland regions of South America since pre-Incaic times. The Indians chew the leaves to avoid fatigue and restore their nervous equilibrium.

Besides, the alkaloid leaves contain certain elements which never have been studied. They act as powerful stimulants and preservers of physical and intellectual energy, according to the opinion prevalent here.

On the other hand, chewing leaves is said to avert soroche, or mountain sickness, and to preserve the teeth. The highland Indians have perfect teeth. It is claimed to be an effective tonic and that chewing the leaf shows no ill after effects. This is proved, it is added, by the fact that although the Bolivian Indian perhaps is the worst fed in the world, he attains an unusually long life and is comparatively free from constitutional disease.

Why these 7 common ills yield to the Saline Treatment with Sal Hepatica

IN the treatment of a long and varied category of human troubles, the physicians of Europe find helpful allies in the saline springs such as Wiesbaden, Vichy and Carlsbad.

To these "cure-stations" they send their rich and suffering patients—and these sufferers, in drinking the saline waters, find a remarkable relief from rheumatism—from skin troubles, indigestion, and from the many other maladies which have their origin in faulty elimination, acidity and intestinal poisons.

Common colds quickly yield to the saline treatment. Complexions become clear and fresh. Rheumatic muscular stiffness and pains vanish—acidity is neutralized, constipation is gone—and the whole body is benefited when the system is made free from the poisons of waste, free from congestion—free from acidity. Repose and water drinking—water containing natural salines—these are the two things at the spas which bring such marvelous relief.

Sal Hepatica is the practical equivalent of the European Spas

Like the great saline treatments of Europe, Sal Hepatica helps in many different troubles—because it gets at the cause of most of our everyday ills. It cleans the intestines promptly—it overcomes constipation by stimulating the natural secretions in the intestines.

Sal Hepatica neutralizes acidity and it clears the blood stream of poisons by helping restore the normal functions of the liver and kidneys—thus bringing relief to rheumatic sufferers, to victims of colds, headaches, Auto-Intoxication, indigestion, skin blemishes and other troubles traceable to the poisons of waste.

You can take this saline treatment with Sal Hepatica at home, without distraction from your personal duties, without the vast expense of travel which a trip to a European Spa demands.

Check (✓) in this list the ailment from which you frequently suffer—then read below how Sal Hepatica helps to relieve it by correcting the cause.

Check your ailment here (✓)	The 7 Most Prevalent Ailments
	1 · Constipation	The bane of our existence. 9 out of 10 people suffer from it. Whenever you wake up in the morning with a thick, coated tongue—or with any of the other symptoms of constipation, clear away the stoppage at once by taking 2 teaspoonfuls of Sal Hepatica in a large glass of water.
	2 · Headaches	Few people can say they never have a headache! To relieve congestion which causes so many headaches, take 1 teaspoonful of Sal Hepatica in a large glass of hot water, and repeat in 15 minutes if not relieved.
	3 · Auto-Intoxication	That "tired feeling"—an enervating condition of self-poisoning, set up by food wastes retained too long within the intestines. To correct this trouble take 1 teaspoonful of Sal Hepatica in a glass of water before breakfast. Do this daily until elimination becomes regular.
	4 · Bad Complexion	A blemished skin is often due to impure blood. To keep the blood stream healthy, keep internally clean by taking a teaspoonful of Sal Hepatica in a glass of water on arising—for a week, or as long as necessary to clear the complexion.
	5 · Rheumatism	As an eliminant in rheumatism, take 1 or 2 teaspoonfuls of Sal Hepatica in a glass of water half to one hour before each meal and at night just before retiring. Sal Hepatica helps relieve the pains of rheumatism by keeping the system free of toxins and acidity.
	6 · Indigestion	For indigestion take a teaspoonful of Sal Hepatica in a glass of hot water and repeat in 15 minutes if not relieved. If you are subject to frequent attacks of indigestion take 1 teaspoonful of Sal Hepatica in a glass of water regularly in the morning on arising.
	7 · Colds	This ailment causes Americans to lose on the average 23.3 days a year. The first step in clearing a cold is to relieve congestion with 2 to 4 teaspoonfuls of Sal Hepatica in a glass of water. Continue the use of Sal Hepatica in a glass of water each morning on arising until every sign of your cold has gone.

Ask your physician about Sal Hepatica. He will commend its balanced combination. He will explain fully the usefulness of this saline treatment.

Go to your druggist and get a bottle of Sal Hepatica today. Sold in 3 sizes—30c, 60c, $1.20. Buy the large size for economy—contains 5 times the quantity of the small size.

Send the coupon for free booklet that gives full and further details of Sal Hepatica's benefits in relieving the ills described in the chart above.

SPRING BECKONS CITY'S MILLIONS OUT OF DOORS

Increased Facilities for Recreation.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

There is a terrace and a bench under the big dome of the Garfield park conservatory where one may dream adequately of that spring that has just arrived and the summer that is soon to come, and all the ways to play and recreate that Chicago offers to its millions in the season of the out of doors.

The peace of nature broods in this place and the healing touch of growing things is to be found there. From the terrace the vista is into a deep green forest, bordered by a mossy meadow, overhung with fern trees where birds flit and cry. It is a spacious outlook into a new world. One can almost hear the rustle and the whisper of upthrusting life, as the filtered sun touches this rich soil. As a musical undertone comes the sound of a brook falling over stones and emptying into a quiet pond where strange lilies bloom and little fish nibble at the edge of pond leaves.

Outside the winds are nipping, the flowers are cowering and only the hardiest blooms and green things point the way to the day when all the earth in parks and forests of the Chicago playground will become like the sheltered life under the dome. Great plans are being made for this season. Chicago is learning to go out of doors more and more each year.

Taking a wide survey of present recreation facilities, and the outlook for the future, with the Chicago Regional Planning association, it is found that Cook county has 35,920 acres in parks, playgrounds, and bathing beaches, while Chicago proper has 4,384 acres. On a county basis this gives 11.78 acres of open space for each 1,000 inhabitants. In the city it is only 1.62 acres. The aim of the association is to have ten acres for each 1,000 of population as a proper recreation theory, giving seven of these acres for adult activities and three for children.

Plan to Add 20,000 Acres.

Taking in other districts in what is known as the Chicago region, the survey shows 45,000 acres of park and forest, 28,000 acres of golf links, and 4,100 acres of cemeteries. The map of the district shows the blue bell of Lake Michigan, which is to be used to a greater degree in the future for recreation, and the green belt of natural forest west of the city, one of the last stands in the state. It is planned to take in this forest as a new outer belt of recreation, adding something like 20,000 acres to the scheme.

That this is not over ambitious is shown by the fact that the city of Paris has set aside 213,460 acres of park and forest for public use, within a 30 mile radius, and has in addition 21,400 acres of private lands that may be used by the public. Berlin also has a big acreage for the public. On American cities, New York has 8,319 acres; Los Angeles, 4,361; Minneapolis, 5,100; Philadelphia, 7,811 acres.

15,000,000 Visit Woodland.

The Cook county forest preserves, a total of 31,000 acres of woodland, come first in the list of Chicago's advantages. This was once the hunting ground of the Indians and contains many acres of unspoiled wilderness marked by the signs of the old trails and portages. Last year 15,000,000 persons visited the various woods. There are five golf courses, 95 picnic groves, tourist camps with shelter houses, log cabins for Boy Scouts and other organizations, baseball diamonds, tennis courts, and bridle paths for horseback riders. It is planned for the future to set aside certain areas for sports, but keeping the major portion of the forests as a preserve for birds, animals and flowers.

Work on the new zoölogical garden at Riverside is well under way. The chief feature of this place will be the barless encloseures for animals. The bears, wolves, tigers, lions, hyenas, etc. will be seen among the rocks, trees and shrubs that furnish a natural habitat.

A number of persons attracted during the year, the south parks come next to the forest preserves. Last year it is estimated that 13,000,000 persons used the park privileges. The contact of the playground directors is with 200,000 children. There are many young athletes registered in the parks of the south side system, with 100 different competitive events to engage in.

In this system of sports in which the various small parks are arrayed against each other for supremacy each year the idea of merely beating some one else at a game has been displaced by the plan of scoring each boy according to individual performance. In baseball, for instance, it is not merely one team against another, but the ability of each boy to score in pitching through a hole in a frame, speed in running bases, distance throwing, etc. A certain number of points, say 700, makes a boy an aristocrat of sports in his district. Inter-city contests are using this method of scoring now.

In the sports book of the south parks the season opens contests and competition in outdoor track work, playground ball, swimming, tennis, horseshoes, jackstones, dollshow, tug of war, rodeo, O'Leary, outdoor volley

ANSWERING THE CALL OF SPRING

The annual outdoor ride and hunt of the Chicago Equestrian association was under way when this picture was taken at Lincoln park yesterday. Following the afternoon's trip over the bridle paths the annual hunt dinner followed at the Furniture Mart last night.

Out at Jackson park hundreds of golfers were on the links and Sylvia Davidson, 2236 East 70th street, pictured above, was the first to tee off as the season officially got under way.

Hagen Loses to Compston by 18 and 17

WALTER HAGEN.

LONDON, April 28.—With a broad smile on his face and a hand shake for the victor, Walter Hagen admitted defeat today in his 72 hole match at Moor Park against Archie Compston by 18 and 17. Never before had Hagen been beaten by such a wide margin, but he didn't seem to worry.

Hagen was 14 down at the end of the first 36 holes yesterday and had hoped to reduce his rival's great lead today, but again he found his opponent playing superb golf with a run of luck that was insuperable. Compston followed his 67 and 66 of yesterday with a 70 for the first 18 holes this morning —13 under fours for the 54 holes. Hagen took four more strokes than Compston this morning and each of them cost him a hole, so that he went to lunch scoring 18 down. Again he had no excuse to make.

"Better Golfer Won," Hagen.

"What can I say?" he said. "I was beaten by a man who played better golf. That's all there is to it. I certainly got into better touch with my clubs today, except the putter, which refused to function as it should. Compston played splendid golf and if he keeps his present form he will go a long way in the open championship."

Hagen lost the first hole this morning at the third where he missed a yard putt, but sank a ten yard putt at the sixth to halve the hole. Compston retaliated at the seventh with a three yard putt which made him 16 up. The next hole to go against the American was the ninth, where he took three putts. Compston was out in 34 and was 17 up at the turn.

Compston Is Stymied.

The short tenth was halved in three, Hagen's putter again refusing to sink the ball two feet from the pin. He was lucky at the eleventh in getting the hole back by virtue of a stymie. Compston made a brave effort to sink the ball with a niblick, but failed. The cards:

Dempsey, Kearns Net $512,074 for Two Year Period

New York, April 28.—[Special.]—The debits and credits for 1923 and 1924 in the most lucrative partnership boxing ever has known—Jack Dempsey and Jack Kearns—were revealed this week in the black and red of that team's federal income tax reports.

The profits were not so great as fable has made them out to be. During 1923, with its Tom Gibbons match and the $1,000,000 Luis Firpo fight, the Dempsey-Kearns corporation reckoned its net earnings at $499,648. For 1924, with no fights and little income except from vaudeville showings, the corporation's net was $12,426. The net for the two years was $512,074.

The reports showed this money to be divided equally. Thus, what Dempsey got for the most strenuous and most profitable year he spent under Kearns' management—1923—was $249,824.18. For the final year of their partnership—1924—each got $6,213.

Early in 1925 the comradeship and trust between Dempsey and Kearns, which started in 1917, when the boxer was a "ham and egg" fighter and the manager an unlucky wrestling promoter, turned to bitterness. They definitely split and divided their properties in July, 1925.

In 1923 the fistic team lost $28,232 in loans and investments which went wrong. The Great Western Coal Sales company was incorporated in Salt Lake City early in 1923 and the Dempsey-Kearns corporation put $17,232 into it. The project was abandoned and reckoned a total loss. A loan of $16,000 to H. Morgan Pollock company was lost when that company failed in 1923. The corporation advanced $5,000 to Floyd Fitzsimmons, promoter, to build an arena in Michigan, but "the governor prohibited boxing and the advance became a total loss." This did not include a $2,310 loss sustained in the operation of their Los Angeles properties.

In 1923 they got from the Gibbons fight $246,000; Firpo fight, $475,000; Pathe Pictures, $7,047; King Features syndicate, $3,600; gate receipts of the training camp at Saratoga Springs for the Firpo fight, $6,218, and motion pictures of the Firpo fight, $10,086. This totals $747,952.

Aurora Race Meeting Will Open Tuesday

BY FRENCH LANE.

Shortly after 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon the familiar bugle call of "Boots and Saddles" will be heard on the Aurora Jockey club's turf grounds. And then will begin the thoroughbred racing season in Illinois which will run without interruption except for the regular Sunday layoff until next Nov. 1.

There will be no added ceremonies at this opening, as there is in baseball, and there may not be many notables present except from Chicago and from northern Illinois. But the sport will get a rousing welcome from some 10,000 race hungry fans whose turf dish for 6 months has consisted of printed reports coming from other centers.

The season of more than 150 days in the Chicago district at four tracks stands out as one of unusual promise. It is the first time a season ever has opened here, with the sport and the betting that goes with it thoroughly legalized.

Prominent Men Interested.

More men of money and affairs have become interested in it under these conditions. These men along with owners, trainers, and followers of the game in general are unanimous in the opinion that this will be the greatest racing year since the sport first came to Chicago. As a result, a large number of new recruits among Chicago sportsmen are coming into the game with a few horses of their own. Many of them will go on to own larger stables and consequently thoroughbred blood stock is going to be more in demand here than ever.

While the spring meeting of the Aurora Jockey club of 29 days is not as pretentious in richly endowed stakes and purses as the seasons which will follow at Arlington Park, Lincoln Fields, and Hawthorne, it nevertheless has brought a thousand horses into this section and many of them are of better class than ever raced over the Aurora track before. With the capable

TED LYONS.

St. Louis, Mo., April 28.—Tommy Thomas, though he suffered one of the worst poundings of his career, technically got credit for his fourth win of the season here this afternoon. Tommy was out of the ball game when a whooping eighth inning rally good for five runs got under way. And then with good fortune smiling on the Baltimore lad in such surprising fashion his roomie and co-star, Ted Lyons, rushed in with a Damon and Pythias act that prevented the startled Browns from getting more than one ball out of the infield in the last two innings. The final score was Sox 9, Browns 6.

Thomas Gets Bad Start.

Tommy rarely in his whole 28 years of living has been treated so rudely as he was by the Browns today, particularly in the first inning, when they knocked him over with two triples, a double, and two singles, good for four runs, while but one put out was being accomplished.

In the eighth the Sox got a break and the Browns became demoralized after the assembled umpires had ruled that McNeely trapped the ball in handling Cissell's opening drive of the inning. Every one on the St. Louis staff argued that Mac caught it and that Cissell was out. Then the rally proceeded as follows:

The Cissell blow for a single. Brannon booted McCurdy's grounder and runners were on second and third. Charley Barnabe, for the second successive day, delivered as a pinch hitter when he went in to bat for Thomas. Cissell scored on Barnabe's single and McCurdy took second. Clancy forced McCurdy at third. Moore singled, Barnabe scoring and Metzler also hit, Clancy scoring. Barrett tapped to Kress, who was playing on the grass, and Moore was out at home. Falk then doubled, scoring Metzler and Barrett. Kamm ended it by fouling to O'Rourke, and the score was 8 to 6.

Four Pitchers for Browns.

During the rally, Crowder retired, Nevers tried it for four batsmen, and Coffman took a whirl. Beck pitched the ninth inning.

Then, just by way of rubbing it in, Cissell opened the ninth with a single and McCurdy drove him in with a double. Harry was thrown out at third, trying to stretch his hit.

The Sox got a run in the first inning on Moore's double and Barrett's single, which followed a walk to Metzler. But the session ended when Cissell struck out with the bases full.

McNeely cracked the first ball pitched in the first inning for a triple to right center and scored on O'Rourke's single. Manush singled and O'Rourke went to third. Schulte then rolled to Clancy who threw to Kamm who in turn threw to McCurdy, getting O'Rourke at home. Kress got the first of his triples, driving in Manush and Schulte. The Tulsa rookie registered when Blue doubled. Brannon flied to center and Falk chased to the wall to pluck Schang's drive, thus ending an amazing 21 minute episode. The score was 4 to 1.

Both clubs scored in the third, the Sox on a two base error by Schulte and a single and the Browns on Kress' second triple combined with Blue's sacrifice fly.

Things went along apace from the Sox fourth until the Browns' seventh, which Manush opened with his third single. He was sacrificed to second and took third when McCurdy threw to centerfield trying to catch him napping. Kress sent him home with his third hit, a single.

Illini Race Off with Honors at Drake Relays

Two World Records

FRESNO, Cal., April 28.—[Special.]—Two track and field marks, if allowed, will go down as world records, were set at the Raisin day relay carnival today. John Kuck, formerly of Kansas State Teachers' college, now wearing colors of Los Angeles A. C., bettered Ralph Rose's record in the shot put. Kuck arched the lead ball 51 feet ½ inch. Rose's old world mark, made in 1909, was 51 feet.

Lee Barnes, captain of the University of Southern California team, pole vaulted 14 feet 1¾ inches, to better the mark of Carr of Yale by ¾ inch.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Des Moines, Ia., April 28.—Winning three major races and finishing second in two others, Illinois carried off the honors in the nineteenth annual Drake relays today before 14,000, the largest gathering that ever has witnessed this athletic classic.

The Orange and Blue won the distance medley here yesterday. Today the Illini won the university two mile and four mile relays. They finished second in the quarter mile and half mile sprint relays. In none of the events, however, did Illinois smash records, but its time in the medley will stand as a Drake mark, as it was the first time this event has been on the program.

Indiana Gives Battle.

Illinois was challenged in the four mile by a gritty Indiana quartet. The Hoosiers held the lead until Stine of Illinois took the baton on the third relay. Fields, the last Indiana runner, gave Abbott, the anchor runner for Illinois, a battle. Fields raced into the lead on the third lap, but Abbott passed him on the backstretch of the last round and won by four yards.

It was the final event, the one mile university relay, that furnished the thrill of the meet. Northwestern, which defeated Iowa at the Kansas relays a week ago, was out to repeat the achievement. Stevenson, the first Iowa runner, turned over a two yard lead to Stamats, his teammate. Baird increased the margin to five yards on the third relay. Northwestern was eight yards back. Walter took the baton for Northwestern and Cuhel for Iowa.

The Purple athlete moved into second place on the backstretch and challenged Cuehl. He drew up as they rounded the final turn, but the Iowa captain had too much in reserve and sped over the line three yards ahead of the Northwestern flyer. Iowa's time for the distance was 3:22 2-10.

Iowa Wins Two Relays.

Iowa was second in the honor list of university relays. The Hawkeyes won the 440 yard event with the same team that won the mile.

Northwestern captured the 880 yard relay. The Purple team, which had Walter as anchor runner and Hermansen on the team, won its section easily. This race, like several others, was decided in heats and time comparisons determined the place winners.

Weather conditions were not favorable for record breaking performances. A strong wind blew from the south which handicapped the sprinters and hurdlers. Despite this handicap, one mark went by the boards.

Walter White of the Kansas State Teachers' college of Pittsburgh put the shot 48 feet 9 inches. This shattered the old record of 48 feet 5½ inches made by John Kuck of Kansas State Teachers' college of Emporia in 1926.

Elder Outspeeds Hester.

In the individual events, Jack Elder of Notre Dame further demonstrated his claims to a place on the American Olympic team by winning the 100 yard dash by six inches from Hester of Michigan in 10 seconds. He bucked a strong wind all the way.

Harold Trumble of Nebraska, developed by Henry Schulte, who will be a member of the coaching staff of the American Olympic team, won the 120 yard high hurdles in :15 1-5, another creditable performance considering the wind.

Martin of William and Jewell won the running hop, step and jump with an effort of 47 feet 4¾ inches and Shelby of Oklahoma took the running high jump with a leap of 6 feet 1 inch. Welden of Graceland college of Iowa won the javelin with a hurl of 198 feet, two feet further than Bartlett of Albion. The pole vault resulted in a four cornered tie among Barnes of Illinois, Glaser of Marquette, Hess of Minnesota, and Droegemueller of Northwestern. All cleared 12 feet 10 inches. Ketz of Michigan tossed the hammer 155.2 feet to win the event. Dart of Northwestern and Ojkeli of Ohio State tied for second place with marks of 152 feet 9 inches.

Before the first event, Marjorie Earl of Simpson college was crowned queen of the relay carnival and Minnie Hanson of Nevada, princess. This morning a parade was held through the down state district and nearly fifty bands, floats and marching delegations from all parts of Iowa took part.

INDIVIDUAL EVENTS.

HAMMER THROW—Won by Ketz, Michigan, 155 feet 2 inches; Ojkeli, Ohio State, and Dart, Northwestern, tied for second, 152 feet 9 inches; Marquis, Iowa, fourth, 145 feet 3 inches; Lapp, Iowa, fifth, 145 feet 3 inches.

DISCUS THROW—Won by Mitchell, Iowa, 141 feet 9 inches; Howell, Oklahoma, second, 140 feet 4¾ inches; Lyon, Illinois, third, 139 feet; Laemmle, Minnesota, fourth, 137 feet 9 inches.

RUNNING BROAD JUMP—Won by Andrews, Nebraska, 23 feet 3¾ inches; Spangler, Kansas, second, 23 feet 2 inches; Rice, College of Ozarks, third, 22 feet, 10½ inches; Catlin, Minnesota, 22 feet 5½ inches.

McCarthy's Cubs continue to stand pat on a platform of few hits and fewer runs. They endeavored to carry out their ideas again yesterday and accomplished the job in such impressive fashion that at the conclusion of nine rounds they were formally presented by the St. Louis Cardinals with a 5 to 1 defeat that marked the third in as many starts. It was the second straight win for the St. Louis club over the Bruins.

The idea of few hits and fewer runs fitted perfectly into the plans of Flint Rhem, making his first start of the season, and he breezed over the route on an allowance of six hits, three of which occurred in the fifth to give the Cubs their solitary tally.

On the other hand the Cardinals were far less considerate for the ambitions of Percy Lee Jones and after five chapters he went away with the game hopelessly gone and with some 20,000 spectators hopelessly dejected.

Rhem Stops Cub "Sluggers."

The secret of Rhem's success was in the manner he took care of the men who are supposed to carry the load in the Cubs' attack. Cuyler made four ventures against the tall right hander and came back with nothing more than two strikeouts and an assortment of raspberries from the irritated populace. Wilson did a bit better by fanning only once, and Stephenson was a total loss for the third successive day by getting nothing else than a plunk in the pants by a pitched ball.

Rhem conducted himself so well that for four innings, with the assistance of a diving shoestring catch by Douthit of a liner by Grimm, he was able to keep the Cubs from breaking out with a hit. Then in the fifth Butler, Pinch Hitter Kelly, and English assaulted him for successive singles that let a run go home, but by that time the Cards were well out in front and thereafter the McCarthy gang made no serious gestures in the direction of the man whose flinging was playing havoc with rapidly fading batting averages.

Cards Score in First.

Jones ceased to be a good pitcher as soon as he had retired the first two batters in the opening inning. Then Frisch started to unravel a skein of trouble by punching a single into center. Bottomley lined one of the same things to right, giving Frisch ample time to lope to third, and Hafey shoved a safety between third and short, letting the one time Giant go home. Jones followed this jolt by walking O'Farrell to jam the bases, but recovered his balance in time to nail the next batter on a hopper to Butler.

A couple of hits added another run to Jones' cup of woe in round two. Thevenow led off by sending both Wilson and Stephenson on a wild chase for a ball to left center. Neither was able to reach the flying pellet in time to accomplish anything, so it plunked into the ground for a triple. Rhem was eliminated on three strikes, but with the infield drawn in Douthit sneaked a soft boiled hit past English and Thevenow tallied. There would have been some more damage if High's scorching line drive hadn't gone directly into Butler's hands for a double play.

Jones Yields Two Runs.

During the third and fourth Jones hurled as though he still was hopeful of seeing his mates get going and retrieve the two runs against his record, but he couldn't carry the burden through the fifth and the Cards eliminated him as well as his ambitions by scoring twice more and making the decision a certainty. Douthit started this rumpus with a single and Frisch sent him home with a triple into right center. A long fly off Bottomley's bat let Frisch nick the plate. Jones completed the round without further trouble and then quit work under the pressure of a pinch hitter.

Pat Malone took up the job to start the sixth and for three innings was equal to the job of keeping the hostiles away from the plate. They hopped him for a run in the ninth, however, but not through any fault of his own. Douthit set the session going with a single, his fourth of the afternoon, and High performed the customary sacrifice. Frisch was tossed out easily and Bottomley should have been handled in the same way but Maguire let an ordinary roller escape his hands and Douthit ran home on the error.

BLAKE TODAY

THE series with the Cardinals will come to a close this afternoon, and Sheriff Blake will make an attempt to end the losing streak of the McCarthy outfit. Sherdel is due to start in place of Alex for the Cards.

The Cubs will leave tonight for a three game series at Pittsburgh, after which they'll return to Wrigley field to entertain the eastern members of the Heydler circuit.

Kelly's pinch hit in the fifth came after Butler had singled. The former's drive sailed into left center and looked good enough for two bases, but Kelly made the trip via right field and was thrown out at second. Had he played safe, the Cubs would have had runners on first and third, with one out.

Grimm clouted the ball clear to the left field wall for two bases to open the seventh, and McCarthy immediately summoned Heathcote to bat for Gonzales. The pinch batter merely flied out and the next two men did even less.

Maguire doubled to right with one out in the eighth, and this brought up Cuyler, but the ex-Pirate couldn't get a piece of the ball, so fanned, and Wilson ended the round with a fly to left.

HOPPE TROUNCES LAYTON, 600-531, IN CUE MATCH

Willie Hoppe, once the "boy wonder" of billiards, and who still clings to the second half of that title despite advancing years, last night won his 600 point exhibition three cushion match from Johnny Layton, recently crowned champion of the angle game. The final score of the six day marathon match at Mussey's Madison street room was 600 to 531, and Willie made his victory doubly secure by taking the final block, 50 to 25, in 38 innings.

The victory gave Hoppe a measure of solace for his defeat at the hands of Layton in the finals of the three cushion tournament, a setback which kept the stocky New Yorker from the only billiards crown he never has held.

Hoppe's smooth play and his tight defensive tactics gained him eight of the twelve blocks, and he completed his total of 600 points in 620 innings. Willie scored his high run of the match in the first inning of the final block last night when he clicked off 11 before missing.

Hoppe and Layton will play exhibition matches this week at Toledo, Cleveland, Buffalo, and Syracuse. They will open another 600 point match in New York on May 7.

PADDOCK SPRINTS TO WORLD MARK AT PENN RELAYS

Track Wall Falls as Charley Burns Path.

Philadelphia, Pa., April 28.—[Special.]—Charley Paddock's flying feet carried him out from under several tons of brick and mortar to a new world's record on the concluding day of the thirty-fourth annual Penn relay carnival here today. A section of the grand stand brick wall surrounding the Franklin field track collapsed as hundreds of people rushed to the rail to see Paddock and his competitors go past in the widely advertised 175 yard race.

Brick, stone and people were spilled on to the track almost catching Paddock as he rushed by far in the lead of his three rivals. Paddock swerved and jumped sidewise as the cataract of stone and people fell out at him and avoided injury. He continued right on and finished in 17 2-5 seconds, to lower by two-fifths of a second the mark he set in Utah some time ago. About 25,000 persons witnessed the carnival.

Rain Weakened Foundation.

Almost a hundred people and a sixty foot section of the brick wall were spilled on to the running track but no one was hurt.

The continual rains of the last two days and nights, which rendered Franklin field a quagmire, were held to be responsible for the accident. Water soaking through the brickwork weakened the foundations.

The accident and Paddock's race overshadowed the Olympic decathlon tryout and the relay championship, which featured the final day of the meeting. Tony Plansky of Georgetown won the decathlon with 7,142.273 points and is considered sure of a place on the United States Olympic team. Kenneth Doherty of the City college of Detroit, who was second, with 7,041.338 points, is also considered placed.

Plansky Scores Two Firsts.

Plansky added two more first places in today's five decathlon events to the fine showing he made on the first day. He won the discus and the javelin throw today.

The one mile college relay championship went to Yale, although it finished second to Chicago. Running a great anchor leg for the western team, Gist dropped his baton five yards from the finish line. He finished in front of Launcelot P. Ross, anchor man of Yale, but the team was disqualified on account of dropping the stick. Syracuse was second, and Penn third. The time was 3:29.

DEMPSEY'S FIRST WIFE TO FIGHT 1919 DIVORCE

New York, April 28.—[U. P.]—A woman claiming to be Maxine Gates Dempsey, first wife of Jack Dempsey, announced today that she had retained counsel to bring action to set aside the divorce granted to the former heavyweight champion in 1919 in Salt Lake City.

The claim that an interlocutory decree was granted to Dempsey only three days after papers in the divorce action had been served on her in Wells, Nev., on Feb. 1, 1919, will be the basis for her action, she said.

She denied that she had perished in a fire in a Juarez, Mexico, dance hall, as published recently in a series of articles on the life of the fighter. She added she never had been in Juarez.

Speaking of Sports

BY DON MAXWELL.

William Pickens, chief of reconnaissance for Charley Pyle's stone bruised caravan, arrived in Chicago yesterday to prepare the way for its entry here next Friday or Saturday.

Mr. Pickens expects to meet the public's insistent demand for details on the arrival of the history making pilgrimage sometime today or tomorrow. Even now he is negotiating for a hall big enough to hold runners and the thousands who will want to look them over after paying the surprisingly low admission price of 50 cents per adult.

Several rumors have floated in from time to time since the dramatic departure of Mr. Pyle and his picturesque army from Los Angeles, These have hinted that Messrs. Pyle and his associate, Red Grange, were not prospering financially on the foot race.

Mr. Pickens was happy yesterday to prove these rumors baseless.

"I am delighted," he beamed, "to be at liberty to announce that Mr. Pyle and Mr. Grange are doing so well that they occupy twin beds opposite to one another that they may each keep an eye on the carpet under which the profits are hidden.

"Chambers of commerce in the towns privileged to house our champions for a night have been permitted to pay $1,000 each for the honor; numerous smart merchandisers have contributed large sums toward the expenses of the race in return for the use of their products by the runners; and the revenue from by products afterward, I may predict, will be enormous.

"And after this epochal race has been completed Messrs. Pyle and Grange plan to hold a six day continuous run in Madison Square Garden. Undoubtedly the Garden will be taxed to capacity.

"Afterward Mr. Pyle and Mr. Grange may be induced to restage the six day race in other cities."

Mr. Pickens is peculiarly fitted to comment upon bicycle racing, inasmuch as in his youth he garnered no little fame as a rider.

"One of my feats," he explains, disclaiming any attempt at making a pun on the present race, "was to ride a bicycle in competition with trotting horses. The sulky used had a shield on the side to keep the turf from flying into my eyes, and incidentally to serve as a windbreak. I had unusual success in these races, riding closely behind the sulky for three quarters of a mile, and then sprinting to beat the horse by a length at the finish.

"Finally my fame spread throughout the south until promoters came from a county fair in Alabama asking me to ride against a running horse. I was a bit loath to enter this sort of competition, realizing that the horse couldn't wear a windshield. But the promotors put up $50, and being an amateur I couldn't turn it down.

"Came the day of the race. There was vast excitement in the little town. Wagers were made on the horse and wagers on me. I understand since that Abe Attell had a cousin in the town, and he conducted some of the negotiations.

"Well, the race was run, and much to my surprise and my backers' glee, I beat the horse. Naturally I felt a pride in my performance. Scores of bicycle riders had beaten trotting horses, but as far as I could find out no one had ever even raced against a running horse. And for years I boasted of my accomplishment.

"Ten years afterwards I was standing one afternoon at the Savoy bar in London. A young man with gold teeth in his mouth and an Elk's tooth on his watch chain, rushed over.

"Well, well, well, if it isn't Mr. Pickens, the great bicycle rider," he greeted me. "I couldn't place him, but I responded, 'Howdy, sportsman,' which is my customary greeting when I fail to make a stranger.

"'Well, well, well,' he continued, 'don't you remember me? I'm the jockey who rode the running horse against you down in Alabama. And, Mr. Pickens,' he said, leaning forward and extending his hands, 'believe me but my arms still ache with pulling that horse.'"

Reverting against his will to the subject of transcontinental foot race, Mr. Pickens said:

"Some folks don't appreciate the magnitude and scope of this unprecedented competition. Two hundred and forty runners began the gruelling grind, but stone bruises, desert hardships, and physical collapses have taken their pitiless toll until Chicagoans will see only 70.

"The first recorded feat of great pedal effort is found in biblical records. An unnamed messenger ran from the scene of battle to David at Jerusalem with the news that Saul had been slain. Later an Athenian youth carried the message from the Marathon to his home city telling the citizenry that the Greeks had won.

"But with all available records and all hearsay of marvelous foot racing feats duly considered, none compares with the magnitude of the race now being staged across the United States. The winner of the $25,000 grand prize and those who finish close up will have established for themselves a niche in history comparable to that now occupied by the unnamed Hebrew and Athenian."

Mr. Pickens wiped his forehead. "And what about Pyle," we asked. "How is he standing the rigors of the long march?"

"Ah, he's great. Incomparable," Mr. Pickens answered. "What courage! What fortitude! Such an inspiration to his men! Day after day he rides back and forth over the line of march, lolling back in a heavily cushioned seat, sipping fragrant liqueurs, ever smiling and shouting words of encouragement to his footsore champions.

"What a leader!"

GETS JUDGMENTS FOR $41,556 ON PYLE, GRANGE

Champaign, Ill., April 8.—(AP)—Red Grange, former University of Illinois football star, and C. C. Pyle, sports promoter, were hit today in judgments secured by George R. McComb, receiver for the defunct Illinois Trust and Savings bank of Champaign, for $41,556. The judgments were secured in the Circuit court. The bank, which went into the hands of receivers last December, held notes against Grange and Pyle to that amount, McComb said. Each is alleged to be indebted to about half the total sum.

ball, soccer, touch football, sailboats, sandcraft, and bicycles.

There will be a power boat contest at Ogden and Palmer parks. The boys make racing steam yachts which make 30 miles an hour. They are 18 inches long, with engines about the size of match boxes. They go so fast that when they head in to shore they have to be caught in nets.

Plan Sailboat Regatta.

A sailboat regatta for the 3 foot class will be held during the summer. In this way the boys learn the technique of wind and sailing, preparing for the day that is not far off when the new harbors and inlets made by the islands of the park system along the lake front will encourage much greater use of the lake.

Soldiers' Field will be used during the summer for a roller skating marathon, something new in cross country steeple chase roller skate contest.

For the adults the three golf links on the south side parks will be opened as soon as the ground permits. Last summer they lined up at 10 o'clock on Saturday night at the Jackson park course to get tickets for Sunday morning play. This is one of the heaviest used courses in the world.

Swimming on one of the islands opposite Field museum will be available this summer. The commissioners think that the loop workers want a blue water swimming hole and are getting ready for it.

New Lawn Bowling Green.

A new lawn bowling green near the old German building has been opened. The game of La Boche, Italian lawn bowls, has proven popular especially at Armour park.

Wrestling, model airplane building, marble and kite contests will add to the joy of south side youth this spring. Soon the flight of balloons will be started by the boys. They will be sent up at night this year, in the hope they will travel far in twelve hours and carry messages of the boys into other states. One of the boys has invented an automatic parachute drop from a model plane. A paste has been made of old newspapers which is serving this year in the making of masks of Indians, totems, gargoyles, lanterns, etc., for use during festivals and parades.

In Lincoln park golfing will begin about May 15. Thirty tennis courts are being prepared. The three bathing beaches will be opened as soon as the water is warm enough. The park lifeguards will patrol about one and a half miles of beach. Boating will open soon.

New North Side Center.

The Lincoln park area is developing northward, from Belmont to Lawrence into a great new recreation center. Work on the first unit is now going forward. This district will include a new golf course of 18 holes, a stadium and athletic field, 10 new tennis courts, a bird sanctuary, a boat speedway, bridle paths and rock gardens. A new bathing beach is being formed nearly a mile east of Sheridan road, on the edge of the reclaimed land.

The City of Chicago has 32 municipal playgrounds, but these are not enough. A plan for the opening of ten new ones is now before the finance committee. The congested districts need more lungs, more safe playing spaces for the children. The season opens with the boys' marble tournament and runs into the playground ball tournament, ball players' contest, athletic meets and field days. Athletic efficiency tests are held for girls and young women, and the second week of April is the date for the O'Leary contest for girls. A horseshoe tournament for boys, volley ball for boys and girls, round out April.

Barnard Turns Down Protest of Sox on Tigers

The protest of the Chicago American league club of the game played at Detroit April 25 was disallowed by President E. S. Barnard yesterday.

Manager Ray Schalk of the White Sox protested the game after Umpire Van Graflan had called out Batter Mann for interfering with Catcher Hargrave's attempt to throw out Cissell at second.

President Barnard ruled that only the umpire's judgment was at issue and no question on rules was raised.

WESTERN TRACK COACHES VOTE TO WAR ON A. A. U.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Des Moines, Ia., April 28.—The Western Track Coaches association have openly declared war on the A. A. U. and will petition the International Amateur Athletic federation to repudiate its recognition of the A. A. U. as the controlling body of amateur athletics in this country.

This action was taken at an open meeting of the track coaches association held here last night. It was a stormy session in which the A. A. U. came in for a lashing by every coach who is a member of the association, which includes the middle west, south and Pacific coast.

It was the general opinion that as long as college and university coaches develop the athletes they should be taken into consideration when an American Olympic team is organized. The coaches feel they are better qualified to handle their own athletes in the world's games than the physical directors of athletic clubs or hangers-on in the A. A. U.

It was also pointed out in the meeting that the athletic clubs do not develop athletes. Several instances were cited of athletic clubs offering inducements to college athletes who are about to complete their careers.

Harry Gill, track and field coach at Illinois who was ignored when the coaching staff of the Olympic team was made up, upbraided the A. A. U. and its dominating methods. He asserted he could remember when athletic clubs developed athletes. Now these clubs go out, he said, and bid for the finished product who has been brought into the limelight by diligent work on the part of the university coach.

Gill asserted it was high time the university and college coaches assert their rights. He said the universities and colleges should be responsible for the conduct of their athletes in the Olympic games and that the A. A. U. should not have the power to dictate the makeup of the American team and its coaching staff.

Coaches of the Western association claim it will be a war to the finish. A delegate will be sent to the Olympic games in Holland this summer for the express purpose to attend the meeting of the International Amateur Athletic federation and to ask this body to recognize the colleges and universities of this country and not the A. A. U. as the controlling body of track and field athletics in the United States.

All universities and colleges in the country will be asked to sign the petition. A number of athletic clubs, including the Olympic club of San Francisco, Los Angeles A. C., Chicago A. A. and others, will also be asked to join the colleges in the fight to end the reign of the A. A. U.

Henry Schulte of Nebraska was elected president of the association to succeed George Bresnahan of Iowa. Members of the executive committee are Harry Gill of Illinois, Clyde Littlefield of Texas, and Walter Christie of California. Schulte is a member of the coaching staff of this year's American Olympic team.

HOW JOCK HUTCHISON DRIVES A GOLF BALL A FEW HUNDRED YARDS

1 The stance for a drive, which is also the stance for every long shot, easy and relaxed, the head dropped slightly toward the ball, with his weight evenly balanced.

2 Starting the backswing. The left knee is breaking in toward the ball and the left heel lifting. The wrists begin to break simultaneously with the start of the swing.

4 At the moment of impact the left arm and club are practically in a straight line, with the weight of the shoulders behind the ball. The left leg is straight but not locked while the right leg is following in toward the ball with the stroke.

5 After the ball has been hit the hands have carried on up, while the body turn, which begins after the ball has gone, swings Jock around, so his body is almost facing the line of flight. Yet his head has just begun to turn.

6 Finish of the swing with the body turned squarely toward the line of flight. No conscious effort but the force of a free relaxed swing has carried the club behind his head and his body forward.

CITY SEMI-PRO LEAGUE TO OPEN SEASON TODAY

Games Today

Famous Chicagos at Mills stadium.
Chicago Firemen at Hammond.
Gibson's Belle Plaines at Logan Square.
Niesen's Litsingers at Duffy Floral park.
Aurora at American Giants' park.

Parades of business men and boosters, bands, official ceremonies and a pennant raising will mark the opening the Chicago City Baseball league tomorrow in five parks of the circuit. Games are billed to start at 3 o'clock and the flag race will continue until Sept. 16.

Special preparations have been made by the various managers of the league to make the opening the most elaborate ever staged in semi-pro circles in Chicago. The flag raising will be at Mills stadium, Lake street and Kilpatrick avenue, where the Famous Chicagos will oppose Bill Harley's crew.

Four Mills Hurlers Ready.

The Mills have four pitchers, Paddock, Hoffman, Gray and Overlock, ready to work. Clemens or Goldwaite will catch, and Buster Caton, the famous short legged former Pirate, will play shortstop. Rollie Maples, former pitcher of the St. Louis Browns, and Dick Staendart are announced as the starting battery for the Famous Chicagos.

Gibson's Belle Plaines will help John Callahan's athletes pry off the lid at Logan Square, where a delegation of the northwest side business men will attend in a body. Eddie Miller and Ernie Dennis seem to have the call as the Squares' battery. Paddy Driscoll and Chuck Palmer, two outstanding hitters, will play in the outfield.

Litsingers vs. Duffys.

Billi Niesen's nine, known this year as the Litsingers, will battle John Duffy's Florals at their new park, 61st street and Racine avenue. Niesen this season has Buster Winkler on the slab and Daugherity, formerly of the University of Illinois, back of the plate. Buddy Allen, second baseman, is another star of the Litsingers.

Hammond is planning a gala day with the Fireos as their guests and Lefty Sullivan will make his bow there in the combination rôle of manager and pitcher for the home club. Roger Kilby also is with the Hammond nine.

Aurora will invade American Giants park, 29th and Wentworth avenue, for the initial league brush and will bring in Ollin Voight and Dorsey as pitcher and catcher. Foster and Brown are slated as the battery for the Giants.

Step Right This Way, Fans; Capt. Kamm and His White Sox Will Show Mr. Moriarty That Hand Is Quicker Than the Eye

BY EDWARD BURNS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

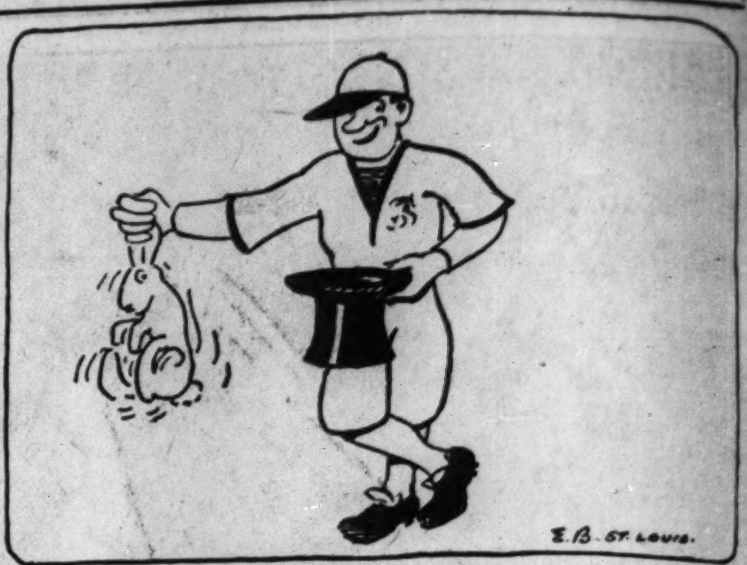
St. Louis, Mo., April 28.—George Moriarty, erstwhile American league third baseman, more recently erstwhile American league umpire and now manager of the Detroit Tigers, on Monday will lead his outfit into Comiskey park for the first time this season.

This ranks as amusement news, not so much from a baseball viewpoint, but principally because a three day program of legerdemain, black art magic and general hocus pocus has been planned for the edification of the fans during Mr. Moriarty's stay in town.

While the Sox were in Detroit last week, George, who in the winter time is our good neighbor from Woodstock, Ill., was discovered in the first row of a performance given by Thurston, a magician. Jackie Tavener, of the regular players, and several of the astute bench warmers, such as Jack Warner and Bob Fothergill, were in the theater also.

Capt. Bill Kamm of the White Sox noticed that every time Thurston took a duck from under a Chinese laprobe all the Tigers, led by their manager, gasped in amazement.

This gave Kamm an idea and he called a meeting of our nine, saying "Moriarty and his gang are chumps for sleight of hand tricks. Why not work the ancient hidden ball trick at the park this afternoon, in case any one gets to third?"



Up until the fifth inning of the game that afternoon, the Tigers had made but one run and were hungry for more. Consequently when Tavener led off the fifth with a triple, neighbor George, in the third base coaching box, turned to the bench—jumping with glee the while. Fothergill, Warner, and the rest joined in the cheering. Then Manager Moriarty went over and whispered to Tavener, who was standing on third.

While the whispering was going on, Capt. Kamm began to fear Moriarty, et al., weren't such chumps after all; but he wigwagged Sergt. Connally to take his pitching position just the same. And then, with Moriarty and the whole bench of magic fans looking on, Tavener took a lead off third and Kamm, without the aid of even so much as a black silk handkerchief, produced the ball and tagged out Jackie.

The Tiger manager, after the game, said he hadn't seen the trick in 24 years, and urged Kamm to show him how he palmed the ball and to reveal other magic tricks which Kamm knows how to perform. But Bill told him he'd have to wait until the Tigers reach Chicago. Bill is loyal to Chicago and wants the home fans to see his tricks.

It is planned to work the hidden ball stunt several times while the Tigers are on the south side, but this will form only a part of the program if certain of the Sox carry out their intentions. Here are some of the features that have been billed:

1—Taking guinea pigs out of Moriarty's cap.

2—Conjuring a pony cart from under Bob Fothergill's sweater.

3—Changing Umpire Van Grafian's shirt from orange to all the other colors of the rainbow.

4—Taking pigeons out of Umpire McGowan's hair.

5—Removing a duck from Harry Heilmann's hip pocket.

6—Shaking knives and forks out of Pinky Hargrave's sleeve.

Fans who witness the foregoing and other scheduled tricks should bear in mind that Capt. Kamm and his associates make no claims of the supernatural. All the exhibitions simply will be demonstrations of the fact that the hand is quicker than the eye.

There will be no increase in prices during the Moriarty engagement at Comiskey park.

OLFERS SWING TO ACTION ON ICAGO COURSES

tterfield Opens Year with Blind Bogey.

BY HARLAND ROHM.

ne summer came to Chicago yes- ay morning there isn't a golf e in the district which hasn't action. To attempt to name the at which golfers chased the little ball yesterday would result ly in listing the clubs from Oak- to Lincolnshire and from Edge- to Crystal lake.

xcept for Butterfield, the competi- consisted of the kind which is ar- ed on the first tee amid many out- ts such as "You played in Florida winter and I haven't swung a club September. You ought to give three strokes on each nine." But field, however, began its season with blind bogey and a dinner, as an in- duction to further contests in which t will play a smaller part every urday until footballs fly.

Two hundred members and guests mped over Butterfield's rolling hills , judging from the scores, Hagen a corner on all the butterfingered tting. John T. Reedy cracked open season with an 85, Ray Simpson s two strokes behind him and Will iggins had an 89. Neither did John mp's 91 or Frank Lavin's 97 lack ll for the first round of the season.

The first prize for members went to n Walsh, with 107—30—77—Red ange's number being the chosen gie"—while James C. Daley trailed with 95—20—75. R. Ross of Glen k took home the visitors' first prize h for being lucky in the draw and oting 105—15—90. C. E. Carson of a Del Mar likewise was rewarded similar abilities. His score was —29—78.

COMPSTON SETS "RECORD"

Had Archie Compston, the Manches- r "giant," been playing in an open urnament there is small doubt the rutal golf with which he swamped Walter Hagen, 18 and 17, would have t an all time record. The lowest ore ever recorded in the British open ampionship is 281 by Bobby Jones t St. Andrews last year, and the west ever made in the American en is 286 by Chick Evans at Mini- kahda in 1916.

While medal play "records" mean ittle because of the variation in ourses, the times any golfer has "broken 280" for 72 holes of golf an be counted on the fingers. The nstances that come to mind are Hagen's 278 in the Western open at Oakwood in 1921, his 279 in the Western open at Highland in 1926, J. Douglas Edgar's 278 in winning the Canadian open in 1919, and Johnny Farrell's 279 in the Shawnee open last year.

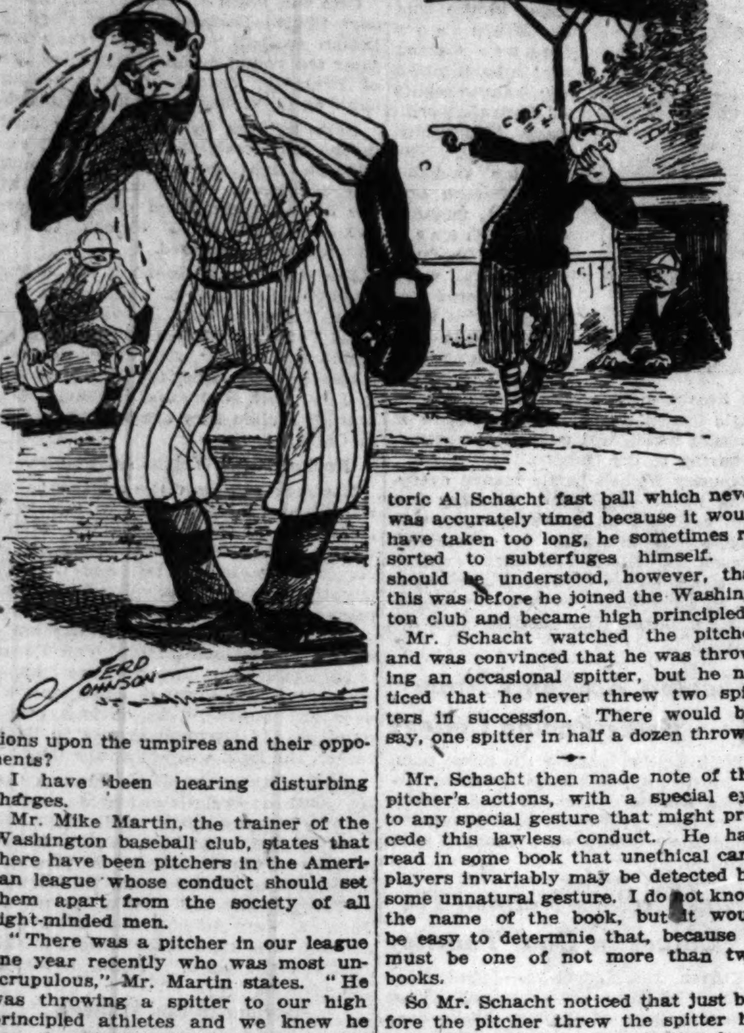
Compston's 66 and 67 in the first two rounds, or eleven under even 4s for the thirty-six holes, was a magnificent burst of golf, but it is doubtful if in the history of golf two such rounds have been followed by two more so brilliant, the first 70 and the next 62 for sixteen holes. Had he played the last two holes in par, his total for the 72 holes would have been 273, a "record" unapproached. As it was, he played seventy holes of golf in fifteen shots less than even 4s. Compston's golf in this match deserves to rank on a par with that scintillant series of 67s and 68s Bobby Jones played at Minikahda in the amateur championship last summer.

Compston, by the way, is 35 years old, a year younger than "the Haig," and was second in the British open in 1925. He was a member of the Ryder cup team last year, and at present is the British professional champion.

NOBODY'S BUSINESS

By Westbrook Pegler

NEW YORK, April 28.—Can it be that the respect for law has so far dwindled that there are pitchers in the major leagues today who wilfully evade the spirit or the letter of the rules, practicing deceptions upon the umpires and their opponents?



I have been hearing disturbing charges.

Mr. Mike Martin, the trainer of the Washington baseball club, states that there have been pitchers in the American league whose conduct should set them apart from the society of all right-minded men.

"There was a pitcher in our league one year recently who was most unscrupulous," Mr. Martin states. "He was throwing a spitter to our high principled athletes and we knew he was throwing a spitter, but we could not understand how he was doing it because he never would put the ball near his mouth and he wouldn't even put his fingers to the lips. It was quite baffling to our boys, as we are strictly law abiding, both in practice and principle, and naturally we had no background of criminal information to aid us in our study of the mystery.

"All we know was that this pitcher was throwing us a spitter contrary to law. We asked the umpires to inspect the ball and they would give it the most thorough physical examination and put it right back into the game. Somebody suggested that it was a dry-spitter, but our athletes are highly intelligent and they knew at once that there could be no such thing."

Finally, Mr. Martin stated, Mr. Al Schacht, the low comedy coach, felt that the mystery really constituted a challenge to him. He felt this way because when he was a pitcher in the International league, throwing the historic Al Schacht fast ball which never was accurately timed because it would have taken too long, he sometimes resorted to subterfuges himself. It should be understood, however, that this was before he joined the Washington club and became high principled.

Mr. Schacht watched the pitcher and was convinced that he was throwing an occasional spitter, but he noticed that he never threw two spitters in succession. There would be, say, one spitter in half a dozen throws.

Mr. Schacht then made note of the pitcher's actions, with a special eye to any special gesture that might precede this lawless conduct. He had read in some book that unethical card players invariably may be detected by some unnatural gesture. I do not know the name of the book, but it woud be easy to determnie that, because it must be one of not more than two books.

So Mr. Schacht noticed that just before the pitcher threw the spitter he invariably wiped the perspiration from his forehead with the fingers of his pitching hand.

"He would dab the moisture on the baseball and then throw the spitter right quick," Mr. Martin said.

"Well," I asked Mr. Martin, "did your club then expose this law breaker in order to preserve the sanctity of the rules?"

"No," Mr. Martin said, "We did not do that. I will tell you how it was about that. It was along toward the end of the season and we had a deal on to get this fellow for our club, so we said nothing about it. He can't do us any harm now, as he is pitching for us, although, of course, we do not permit him to throw any spitters, which would be contrary to the spirit of law observance and promote disrespect for all law. However, I will state that this is a free country and that there is nothing to prevent a man from wiping the honorable moisture of toil from his forehead when he gets into a tight place in a contest."

6 MEET RECORDS FALL AS URBANA WINS PREP GAMES

Bloomington, Ill., April 28.—[Special.]—Urbana High won the fourth annual Illinois Wesleyan track and field interscholastic here today with a total of 29 1-3 points. Lostant finished second with 18. Six meet records were smashed and a world's interscholastic mark threatened. Linder of Lostant was high point man. He captured first in the shot put and the javelin. His heave of 48 feet 6 inches broke the former Wesleyan mark of 45 feet 4½ inches made by his brother, R. Linder of Lostant, in 1926.

Lennington of Chenoa set a new mark in the pole vault with a lead of 12 feet, shattering the old mark of 11 feet 4 inches. George McHese of Havana cleared the bar at the world record interscholastic height, but it fell off too soon to rule the jump successful. However, he smashed the Wesleyan record of 6 feet ½ inch by clearing the bar at 6 feet ¾ inch in a subsequent endeavor.

Bruggman of Hinsdale clipped almost a full second from the 120 yard high hurdles, clearing the barriers in :16 4-10. Hafner of Proviso High set a new meet record in the 100 yard dash at :10 3-10. 5 of the reasons why BUICK will serve you Better and save you More!

Not only does today's Buick excel in smart, low, dashing lines—in vivid new color harmonies—in luxurious upholsteries and appointments—but it sweeps far ahead of its field in those vital engineering factors which mean greater comfort—greater performance—greater economy—and greater value

In Most Cars—the springs have to serve a double function—they have to be rigid enough to drive the car, and, at the same time, have to cushion the load.	In Buick—the springs have only one function—to cushion the load—and naturally are designed to provide much finer riding qualities.
In Most Cars—water, mud and dust can work their way into moving parts causing excessive wear, engine stalling and other troubles.	In Buick—the Sealed Chassis and Triple-Sealed Engine absolutely prevent these troubles. All vital parts are enclosed in dirt-proof, dust-proof, water-tight housings.
In Most Cars—vibration is merely dampened by means of additional bearings or other inadequate devices.	In Buick—the scientifically designed Valve-in-Head Engine, counter-balanced crankshaft and finely balanced units throughout result in performance vibrationless beyond belief.
In Most Cars—quality is often sacrificed for price, or prices advanced to permit fine quality.	In Buick—tremendous demand makes possible both high quality and moderate price—and therefore unrivaled value.
In Most Cars—the dealer's delivered price, including the delivery or handling charge, to the buyer—is not rigidly fixed by the factory behind the car.	In Buick—the lowest possible delivered price, including the delivery or handling charge is definitely established by the Buick factory. Thus Buick quality is provided to Buick owners everywhere at lowest cost.

DISTRACTION IS VICTOR AS DERBY ELIGIBLES RACE

Wins by 10 Lengths in Jamaica Handicap.

New York, April 28.—[Special.]—Distraction, the Wheatley stable's leading Kentucky Derby candidate, making his first start of the year, scored in a romp in winning the Wood Memorial handicap, mile and 70 yards gallop, at Jamaica this afternoon. The field was made up almost exclusively of Derby candidates, and Gifford A. Cochran's Genie was second and Dr. Wilson third. The race was run over a muddy track in 1:46.

Harry Payne Whitney's Victorian ran out at the head of the stretch and carried Nassak with him. Both jockeys pulled up their mounts. Workman, who rode Victorian, and L. Fator, who had the leg up on Nassak, were called in to the stewards' stand and asked to explain.

The start was good and Workman rushed Victorian to the front followed by Nassak and Distraction. Victorian drew away from Nassak in the run down the back stretch, but around the turn Fator sent Nassak up to the leader.

They were both going well when Victorian ran out. Fator made an effort to ease Nassak, but he was not able to get away from Victorian. Their winning chances were ruined by the incident.

Distraction then rushed into a long lead and won by 10 lengths. Genie took the place by 10 lengths from Dr. Wilson.

Victorian had been backed confidently, and appeared a certain winner when he took for the outside fence.

Derby Field Shapes Up as One of Best in Many Years

Louisville, Ky., April 28.—Seldom in the history of the Kentucky Derby have as many leading candidates reached this period of preparation without some having gone amiss in their training. With the running of the $50,000 event at Churchill Downs on Saturday, May 19, just three weeks away, practically all of the best of last year's juveniles have proven in training or actual racing that they are ready for the grand test.

The eastern contingent especially seems to be keyed up for the struggle. The seasoning obtained in competition by Petee Wrack, Brooms, Nassak, Knapsack, Strolling Player, Toro, and others of the first rank leaves no doubt as to their being ready when they face the barrier at Churchill Downs.

Probably the greatest gain in esteem by any Derby candidate has been the increase in prestige obtained by Strolling Player since the opening of spring racing. Admiral Cary Grayson's $61,000 imported colt was a rank outsider in the view of the critics, notwithstanding his meritorious performances in England last year. But he has demonstrated on the Maryland tracks that he will be in the hunt when the Derby field starts its journey.

Horsemen who wintered here are watching with interest the racing in the east of Oh Say, Mrs. Graham Fair Vanderbilt's leading Derby candidate. Oh Say was given his early training here and when Alex Gordon took him east a few weeks ago he looked like he could hold his own in any kind of company. If he goes on in this form he is looked upon as a most promising Derby contender.

Reigh Count continues to hold the boards in this vicinity. If he has any shortcomings he has failed to display them thus far, and Trainer Bert Michell believes that the Hertz colt is the Derby winner. Reigh Count has been given a most careful preparation by an astute conditioner and he is ready to run fast and far.

Reigh Count's workmate also has come in for much favorable comment. This is Otto Lehmann's Reigh Olga, by Reigh Count's sire, Sunreigh. Reigh Olga is out of Olga Virginia, which, like Marguerite, the dam of Petee Wrack, is a Celt mare. Reigh Olga has gone right along with Reigh Count in his training and has served as the favorite's pacemaker.

The racing at Lexington has gained consideration for a number of the western Derby hopes. One of the best developments of the meeting there is A. A. Kaiser's Bonivan. This son of Boniface-Lady Ivan is a superior mudder and in the event the track is deep on May 19 he will show plenty of foot. He is already well seasoned and the mile and a quarter will be just to his fancy.

How Derby Colts Ran Yesterday

AT JAMAICA.

Distraction—Won Wood Memorial handicap at mile and 70 yards by 10 lengths from field made up almost entirely of Derby candidates. Track was muddy and time was 1:46. Carried 120 pounds.

Genie—Ran second to Distraction.

Doctor Wilson—Ran third in same race.

Victorian—Made pace in Wood Memorial until heading into stretch where he ran to the outside fence.

Nassak—Suffered interference by Victorian and lost all chance of finishing in money.

Leonard B.—Badly beaten in Wood Memorial.

War Flier—An also ran.

Tara's Hall—He also ran and looked outclassed.

The Tarter—Ran third in cheap field of three in six furlong handicap.

Westmount—Out of money in six furlong race on track that he likes.

Indian Scout—Badly outrun at six furlongs.

AT LEXINGTON.

Hiram—Ran second to Genial Host, an ordinary horse, in Ben Ali handicap at mile and one-sixteenth.

Bonivan—Badly beaten and finished with rear guard in same place.

Little Colonel—Ran far back to selling platers in 6 furlong race.

AT HAVRE DE GRACE.

Tuskegee—Ran second to Dignus, just a fair horse, in 5½ furlong dash.

DERBY CANDIDATES

Records, Breeding, and Possibilities.

BY FRENCH LANE.

DOCTOR WILSON

Owner, Canyon stable. Breeder, G. W. Coburn. Trainer, J. E. Madden.

This is the Tia Juana Derby winner. Has never shown a liking for a distance except in that one victory. He has probably been raced too much to reach the Derby in shape to hold his own with the stars of his division, for he has not enjoyed a letup in training since a year ago last January when he made his first start at Tia Juana.

This hard worker has faced the barrier 30 times. He won 8 races, all but two at Tia Juana. He started 13 times in New York last summer, and couldn't beat the good 2 year olds. He has been defeated in two races this spring.

His sire, Danger Rock, comes from that noted Rock Sand family. Many of them can run all day. Doctor Wilson's dam is Cubanita, which was by Hessian. The Derby winner, Flying Ebony, is from this family.

Doctor Wilson ran the mile and an eighth of the Tia Juana Derby in the mud in 1:56 4-5. It was a good, game performance.

AURORA TILTS LID ON RACING SEASON TUESDAY

official Martin Nathanson in charge, these horses no doubt will be brought together in such a way that interesting and exciting contests will result.

Order of the Meetings.

Last year the various associations in Illinois distributed more than $2,200,000 to the successful owners who raced their horses over the tracks in this state. This year the total amount distributed will reach $3,000,000, which will be more money than is given away in any other state, with the possible exception of New York. Several old stakes, such as the Belmont Futurity, Belmont handicap, and Suburban handicap run in New York, are worth considerable more money than any races offered here.

The order of the Chicago meetings was fixed by the Illinois Turf association some time ago. Following Aurora will come a June meeting at Arlington. The scene shifts to Lincoln Fields in July and to Hawthorne in August. Arlington Park and Lincoln Fields are two of the most beautiful and perfectly appointed race courses in the world and by the time their seasons are well under way Chicago certainly once more will be the center of the nation's turf affairs, a position it held some 25 years ago before the sport was outlawed here during a reform wave.

North Central Noses Out Mt. Morris in Eleventh, 6-5

Naperville, Ill., April 28.—[Special.]—North Central college kept its Little Nineteen baseball slate clean by defeating Mount Morris, 6 to 5, today. Capt. Zimmerman sent in the winning run when he singled with the bases loaded in the eleventh.

Delaney and Sharkey Clash in N. Y. Ring

New York, April 28.—[Special.]—Jack Sharkey and Jack Delaney will struggle Monday night in the ring at Madison Square Garden for rehabilitation as heavyweights of more than ordinary importance and appeal. The husky ex-sailor from Boston and the lithe, flashing eyed French-Canadian from Bridgeport, who surrendered his world's light heavyweight title for the bigger and better field which the heavyweight ranks offered, are to battle fifteen rounds as the feature of the card which will witness the return of boxing to the Garden.

JACK SHARKEY.

Monday night's battle means everything to its principals. Sharkey has been exploded as a heavyweight title prospect and wants to reëstablish himself. Delaney has been exposed not alone as an inferior heavyweight but as an ordinary light heavyweight, or as a boxer who justifies this appraisal.

Wheaton Academy Nine Beats Racine College

With Collins holding the home team to seven hits, Wheaton academy defeated Racine college, 10 to 8, yesterday at Racine. Racine made ten errors while the winners were charged with eight.

Crane College Netmen Tie Culver in Dual Tourney

Culver, Ind., April 28.—[Special.]—Culver Military academy and Crane Junior college of Chicago broke even in a dual tennis meet this afternoon.

ROEBUCK READY FOR RING BATTLE WITH VON PORAT

Otto von Porat of Norway and Theodore [Tiny] Roebuck, former Carlisle Indian football player, are ready for their ten round decision fight, feature of Promoter James Mullen's boxing show at the Coliseum tomorrow night.

Both fighters completed their drill in the ring yesterday. Each will engage in light gymnasium workouts this afternoon. They will appear at the boxing commission offices tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock to be weighed and examined.

Von Porat and Roebuck are eager to enter the class of challengers for Gene Tunney's title. With this in mind Promoter Mullen will attempt to match the winner with either Johnny Risko or Jack Sharkey for a battle in July. Both Risko and Sharkey have notified Mullen they are willing to box in Chicago.

Roebuck Has Weight Advantage.

Roebuck will have the advantage in weight and height. The Indian will scale close to 250 pounds. Von Porat will be under 200 pounds. Roebuck is six feet, six inches tall and Otto is slightly over six feet. Von Porat expects to offset these handicaps with his punching power. Unless Roebuck moves around continually, Von Porat is sure to connect at some time during the fight. Von Porat is liable to bowl over any opponent, as he is a great puncher. If Roebuck proves to be a target, the fight will not go the limit.

A short time ago Gene Tunney, the world's heavyweight champion, stated a university athlete will hold the heavyweight crown. Sully Montgomery of Center college, Wayne and Monte Munn of Nebraska, Ed Garvey of Notre Dame and Frank Hanney of Indiana were among the university athletes who aspired for honors in the heavyweight class. None, however, got very far.

Marriner to Box Williams.

Les Marriner, who played a line position on Bob Zuppke's Illinois football team last fall, is one university athlete with a pugilistic future. Les has won practically all of his fights by the K. O. route. In the majority of cases, his opponents were not setups. Tommorrow night he will meet Jackie Williams, a local heavyweight who helped prepare Gene Tunney for his championship fight with Jack Dempsey last September. Marriner and Williams will box eight rounds to a decision.

Big Jeff Carroll of Biloxi, Miss., who has engaged in forty fights and won twenty-eight by knockouts, will clash with Tony Stabeneau of Buffalo in one of the four round preliminaries. Carroll is a likely looking heavyweight who has made a favorable impression by his workouts in the gymnasium.

Tom Corbett, the Los Angeles heavyweight, and Tim O'Keefe of South Chicago will meet in another four rounder. The other fights will bring together Tuffy Griffiths of Sioux City, Ia., and Chief Jack Elkhart of Chicago, Mike Mandell of St. Paul and Art Malay of Chicago, and Larry Johnson and Dave Thornton, local heavyweights.

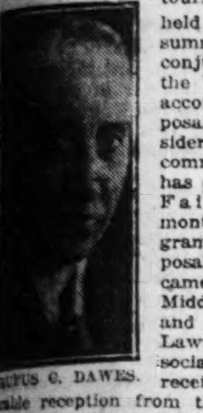
TENNIS RULERS FAVOR TOURNEY AT WORLD'S FAIR

Sports Committee Holds Meeting This Week.



RUFUS C. DAWES.

Leading tennis players of the world will compete in a great international tournament to be held here in the summer of 1933 in conjunction with the World's Fair, according to proposals under consideration by the committee which has charge of the Fair's twelve month sports program. The proposals, which came from the Middle Atlantic and Pacific Coast Lawn Tennis associations, have received such favorable reception from the committee to date that the matter has progressed to the point of choosing a site for the games.

The tennis bodies, in their letters to the committee, ask that time and space be allotted for a great net tournament, one that will attract the outstanding stars of the world. The committee, which is presided over by Col. R. R. McCormick, may extend the proposals to include the staging of all 1933 major tennis meets in Chicago, the climax to be an international championship round which would be expected to equal, if not surpass, the Davis Cup matches in importance. The committee, according to one of its members, feels the tournament it has in mind would attract the members of Davis Cup teams as well as offer a chance for lesser known players to compete for world honors.

Plan Courts in Soldiers' Field.

The only hitch that the committee found in the plan was the location of a site. It was felt that unless a stadium which would accommodate at least 30,000 persons could be found it would be useless to attempt staging a great tournament. Several sites were suggested and all but one were rejected. Soldiers' Field at first was believed too big for a tennis tournament, but this objection was removed by the suggestion that four courts be laid out in the curve of the south end of the stadium and seats be built across the field at the north end of the courts.

Col. McCormick's committee will take up this matter along with suggestions on other sports at its first formal meeting in the East room of the Hotel La Salle on Friday afternoon. Fair trustees who will attend the meeting include Rufus C. Dawes, Col. A. A. Sprague, Stuyvesant Peabody, Chauncey McCormick, Charles S. Glore, and others.

The meeting will consider generally the kind of sports it will handle as well as their scope.

Plan World-Wide Track Meet.

Among the first subjects to be taken up will be the proposal for a world-wide intercollegiate and interscholastic track and field meet. This proposal, it is understood, is sponsored by officials of the Western conference.

In order that the work of the committee can run smoothly, it is probable that an executive committee of nine or ten men, active in athletics, will be appointed to steer the program and handle the details in arranging events. It is felt that the committee in its entirety is too unwieldy to handle the details, and that it would function better if it were to act in a supervisory capacity.

An astonishing show of interest in the fair's sport program is disclosed by the fact that of the approximate 125 celebrities appointed as members of the committee, all but eight accepted.

PETROLLE HURT IN GROGAN BOUT; 2 FIGHTS OFF

Omaha, Neb., April 28.—(AP)—Billy Petrolle, the "Fargo Express," and one of the challengers for the lightweight championship, probably will have to cancel fights in Detroit, Cleveland, Watertown, S. D., and La Crosse, Wis., because of injuries suffered in his fight last night with Tommy Grogan.

Grogan won when Petrolle was unable to continue at the beginning of the eighth round because of an eye injury, inflicted in the fifth round. Although he had floored Grogan, an Omaha boxer, early in the fight, Petrolle found the injury too great a handicap.

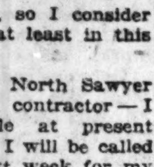
The Question.

How do you find time to attend baseball games on week days?

Where Asked.

Cubs park.

The Answers.



William Strubing, 2739 South Keeler avenue, street car conductor—I work on a late run in the evening. My afternoons are free, so I have breakfast and come over here for the game. I am a regular Cub fan. My wife often comes along with me, so I consider myself doubly lucky, at least in this respect.

C. V. Swisher, 2928 North Sawyer avenue, contractor—I am idle at present though I will be called out next week for my season's work. That will end baseball for me, except possibly on Sundays, or on days following rain. I often have wondered how it is that so many men can find time to attend games day after day.

Jack Blook, 1516 Avers avenue, student—I am through school at noon. I could come any week day afternoon but I usually take in the Sunday games. There doubtless are hundreds of other students who have no classes in the afternoon and are free to attend the games.

J. A. Leavy, 4004 West Madison street, insurance salesman—I am liable to incriminate myself if I give an answer, but I'll take a chance. I arrange my work so that I can make a given number of evening hours count as much or more than the same hours during the day. The result is that I am ahead in business and in baseball.

Joe Miller, 4256 Jackson boulevard, street car motorman—I don't go to work until 6 o'clock in the evening. I'm out here every afternoon there is a game; yes sir, I'm a regular customer. I find it great recreation watching the Cubs, and yelling for them, even though they do lose once in a while.

Angleworms Best Bait for Early Trout

BY BOB BECKER.

[PICTURES IN ROTOGRAVURE SECTION.]

Next week may be marked down on the calendar as "national trout week," for beginning next Tuesday, May 1, thousands of fishermen will center their attention and devote their play hours to the fun of catching brook, rainbow or brown trout. The season in middle western states opens the morning of May 1, which also is the day on which the lowly angleworm will be exalted and its praises sung on trout brook and river. It's almost impossible to keep this plain, garden variety of "fishing tackle" out of the picture on opening day.

Although many serious fly casters and trout anglers speak disparagingly of the bait fishermen and his skillful manipulation of a worm impaled on a hook, the fact remains that early season trout fishing in the middle west generally requires either spinner work or bait fishing, with the plebeian earthworm playing the "hero" rôle. In fact this situation, deplored by many indignant fishermen throughout the land, must have been responsible for the phrase "the early bird gets the worm," as we have a hunch that a trout fisherman first thought up such a pronouncement, bird being synonymous with trout fisherman in this phrase.

Although thousands of trout fishermen use live bait at the start of the season, there are other lures which can be utilized when the trout are feeding deep and on the lookout for food items other than flying insects. Small spinners, whose flashing blades twirl when worked against the current, often are effective and if the fisherman's conscience pricks him he can attach a fly behind the spinner.

These methods of underwater fishing for trout whereby spinners, live bait, or small wabbling lures are used, are typically early season stunts. Later in the month when the streams are down and warm weather brings the first hatches of flying insects the trout come to the surface to feed, then is when the artificial flies get the fish.

ARMY CHOOSES NOTRE DAME AS FINAL GRID FOE

New York, April 28.—[Special.]—Notre Dame will take Navy's place on the Army football schedule in 1929 and from then on until the service schools decide to make up. Arrangements already have been made for the Irish to meet the Cadets on the Saturday after Thanksgiving in New York in 1929. The contest, already one of the most attractive in the country, may grow into importance almost equal with that which the service clash had assumed.

This move by the Army does not betoken an early resumption of the Navy battles.

The Notre Dame-Army contest in the seasonal climax will have many interesting angles. It will be the last eastern game of the year and have the right of way with no opposition in the east. It may become an annual fixture for New York City—at one or the other of the big ball parks.

It will be a classic of the best in football between one of the great teams of the east and the Rockne squad which has become generally recognized as the symbol of the new and the effective in football in all gridiron hemispheres.

Whenever Army and Navy choose to get together again, Notre Dame will gladly step back to its former position on the Army schedule; but until the time the breach is healed the Army-Notre Dame battle as a climax date in the east is a happy solution of the gap on the Army schedule.

Navy has been equally fortunate in getting Princeton, which has a battle of its own on with Harvard, and it is probable that the middies and Tigers will continue to do battle on the Saturday before Thanksgiving until the Bengals and John Harvards patch up their quarrel.

SCOTS BEAT BRITISH.

GLASGOW, April 28.—(AP)—Scotland defeated England by 3 goals to 2 in the annual amateur soccer championship match between the two countries today.

WHO SAID IT? WHEN, WHERE; AND WHY?

IT WAS John L. Sullivan who said, "I can't make a speech, but I can lick any man in the house." How did these sayings originate?

1. We'll fight it out on this line if it takes all summer.

2. Mr. Chairman, where am I at?

3. A woman is only a woman, but a good cigar is a smoke.

Who said them first and when and where and why? TRIBUNE readers are invited to test their memories in the game of "Who Said It?" Send your answers to the Who Said It editor. Three more quotations will appear in this department next Sunday, along with the best answers to those given above.

Last Week's Answers

Here are some of the answers received to quotations printed last week:

Quotation—I can't make a speech, but I can lick any man in the house.

Answer—The remark with which John L. Sullivan prefaced his invitation to members of his audiences to come up and get knocked for a row. Of course he never hit them very hard and if they stayed four rounds in the ring rigged up on the stage they got a cash prize.—J. F. Malloy, Chicago.

Answer—After John L. Sullivan won the world's heavyweight championship from Paddy Ryan at Mississippi City in 1882, he toured the country in a show and one of the features was for him to challenge any one in the audience to come up and box a few rounds with him. John L. would walk out on the stage and make a little talk and then wind up with: "I can't make a speech, but I can lick any one in the house." And he always did, though he got some terrific socks from the lumberjacks and blacksmiths he met. Then if they stayed three rounds his manager would pay them $50.—Harry Carney, Gary, Ind.

Quotation—Don't count them; kill them.

Answer—A division commander of the A. E. F. was the author of that saying. Some excited 90-day wonder called the division P. C. and said the enemy was advancing by thousands. The general grabbed the phone and roared into the transmitter: "Don't count 'em. Kill 'em."—Frank Culhane, Oak Park, Ill.

Answer—The quotation is slightly incorrect, as I remember it. The scene was the Marne bridge at Chateau Thierry late in May, 1918. An observer reported to the commander of the 7th machine gun battalion, 3d division, that about 2,000 Germans were coming on the run. "I don't give a damn how many there are. We'll kill 'em all," said the C. O.—T. E. McGovern, Chicago.

Answer—In the Bois de Foret in October of 1918—which, by the way, was the bloodiest battle fought by Americans in the war, and they were not marines either, but regulars—the Germans came over on one of a number of little visits. They got pretty close, too, before the alarm was given and a major in the 39th infantry shouted: "Don't wait to count 'em, men. Kill 'em now."—G. Thompson, Peoria, Ill.

Answer—That was the order a Union colonel gave his men as Pickett's division made the last desperate Confederate charge at the battle of Gettysburg in the civil war.—S. K. Smith, St. Paul, Minn.

Quotation—Fools rush in where angels fear to tread.

Answer—Written by Alexander Pope, eighteenth century poet, in his "Essay on Criticism." A kindred quotation from Shakespeare's "King Richard III." is: "Wrens make prey where eagles dare not perch."—Mrs. James Swanson, Des Moines, Ia.

Answer—The quotation is from Pope's "Essay on Criticism," part 3, line 66.—Ruth Jenkins, Chicago.

The one great outstanding fact in automobiles today is that, while practically every car that runs is patterned after Chrysler—the Illustrious "72" continues to romp away from and around them all in every phase of performance that makes motoring a pleasure. MOTORS — TRAFFIC — HIGHWAYS

DRIVER OF TRUCK WINS POLITENESS AWARD OF $50

Gives Small Car a Break in Traffic Mixup.

Irving Friedman, a west side lad, and the driver of a laundry truck, was caught in an act of outstanding courtesy in traffic, by the Politeness Reporter. The quest of the latter had been to find and reward an act of unusual courtesy in motor traffic. In a half day's travel he discovered what he sought—and the distinction goes to a truck driver.

By the Politeness Reporter.

A courteous automobile driver was sought by the Politeness Reporter in last week's quest on the west side.

The photographer, who doubled as driver of our small and unpretentious car, in which the Magic Card and I were driving, was gloomily doubtful about finding one.

This "photog" has had many years of experience in all kinds of motor traffic. He has formed certain opinions concerning the likelihood of good manners among any class of motor drivers. He considers truck drivers as natural enemies, especially when considering the size of machine he drives.

Encounter Rough Truck.

We were driving under the Michigan avenue link bridge at the moment. The traffic was heavy. We attempted to cross to the right hand traffic lane. As we did so a blue truck blocked our path.

"Where do you think you're going?" yelled the truck driver, only he was a little more emphatic.

We came to a stop. It was necessary to extricate our car from the maze of traffic. An instant later the truck pulled alongside, and the driver, with whom we were now face to face, put in another question in a tone loud enough to be heard above the city's roar, "What ya tryin' to do?"

My photographer was not inclined to engage in controversy.

"That's what I mean by a truck not giving a little car a 'break,'" he explained as we drove on. "Of course he had the right of way and all, but if he'd just given me an instant I would have been through and on my way."

"Yes," I said, "but what if some one else had followed you and some one else after that? Then the truck driver maybe figured he'd never have gotten through."

We drove along Washington boulevard, pausing at intervals for the north and south parade of the trucks. Near Wells and Adams street, a speeding green truck, approaching us from the opposite direction, did swerve out of its path as it bore down toward us.

"How about that?" I asked.

"It may have been courtesy. It may have been caution."

Before we could turn around and locate it the green car had been swallowed up by the traffic.

Driver Is Astonished.

A few moments later, on North Keeler avenue, we caused a look of astonishment to come over the face of a driver when we attempted to cross his path. The fellow was evidently stunned by such insolence from a lowly rival for the highway. Of course, if the driver had known that $50 would be handed him for sacrificing a moment's progress, he would have no doubt been more considerate of a little car, and would have welcomed its attempt to take more than its share of the road. But he didn't know.

The old law of survival of the fittest was at work, and yet as we were driving north on Cicero avenue, an incident occurred which gave proof that someone believed in the slogan, "Have regard for the other fellow."

Ahead of us, bearing down from the north, was a street car. Alongside us was a car hauling laundry. In an instant, our car was in one of those pinches where either the street car would be obliged to stop, or the car at our right, would have to sense our situation and give way for us.

Offered Us an Escape.

The street car was not privileged to swerve from its rails. The car at our right was certainly in no way responsible for anything that might happen. It was going its way, in accordance with all rules. We were passing it, according to rule. But my companion had not gauged the speed of the oncoming street car. Putting on the brakes would not help matters. It was too late for that.

I must admit that I had forgotten the politeness quest in the anxiety of the situation. I had no thoughts concerning the feud said to exist between automobiles.

I do know that I was decidedly relieved when the driver of the laundry car suddenly swerved toward the curb and saved our little car from being bumped by the street car. His action provided us a pathway to safety.

"I wonder who that was," my companion asked as we drove on.

"He was the courteous automobile driver," I replied.

"I know he's the one," my friend agreed, eagerly enough. "But I wonder what his name is."

Magic Card Is Effective.

It wasn't difficult to identify the courteous driver, once he had glimpsed the Magic Card. He said his name was Irving Friedman, that he lived at 1448 South Spaulding avenue, and that there'd been so much sickness at his house lately that he hadn't been able as he drove along to think much about anything else. He gave me one of the advertising blotters for his firm —The New Palace Laundry company, 440 North Cicero avenue, and he said:

"I've been driving a truck for four years and, if I do say it myself, all that time I've tried to think about the other fellow as well as myself. I figured what I did for you was no more than what I'd want you to do for me."

WARNINGS ARE DANGER.

Many a roadside warning is a snare and increases danger by distracting the driver's attention.

Courteous, Even in This

Courtesy in traffic is considered difficult to find even among drivers of cars fitted with every modern handling device known. Irving Friedman, pilot of this truck, can thank his constant habit of politeness, rather than the machine, for the $50 award for acting pleasantly in a pinch. Good manners, crushed into a laundry truck, may rise again.

BRICK ROAD BID REPORTED CAST ASIDE BY STATE

Saving of $300,000 Seen in Rumored Action.

The day has been saved for concrete pavement in Douglas and Edgar counties, according to report at Springfield yesterday.

It was announced unofficially that the state highway department had thrown out all bids on sixteen miles of construction on route 121. This includes the solo bid on brick made by Alan J. Parish, while six brother contractors were bidding only on concrete work.

It was further announced that the brick bids for sections 124 and 126 in Knox county had been ashcanned and contracts let there for concrete pavement.

It seems that the threatened political trade of brick highways for votes has petered out.

Means Saving of $359,362.

The saving by using concrete instead of brick on the projects involved amounts to $359,362, on the basis of the bids received by the state several weeks ago. For this sum fourteen miles of concrete road can be built. The switch to brick in the Douglas and Edgar county deal was so effectively exposed that the state administration evidently was afraid to proceed.

The bid for brick pavement, which was the only one for that material submitted, was almost $300,000 higher than the lowest bidder for the same work of concrete. The head of the Parish company, who is president of the Highway Construction Contractors' association of the state, was also reputed to be a close friend of Gov. Len Small.

Although the bids were opened on Feb. 11, no contract has yet been awarded. Mr. Parish had been notified early in March from Springfield that the contract was "being awarded to him."

Protests Brick Contract.

About that time a storm of protest arose in both Edgar and Douglas counties against the awarding of the contract for brick work on the ground that the $20,000 a mile excess cost could be better used in giving the state more miles of concrete pavement.

Friends of the governor in the two counties declared at the time that the paving of route 121 with brick was a popular thing to do in that territory. The protest, however, seemed to be of such sincere quality that the state highway department was instructed to hold up the award of the contract until more definite information on reactions could be obtained.

When the votes were counted it was concluded that the brick deal lacked the elements of popularity in Douglas and Edgar counties.

Figured on Many Votes.

If rumors were to be relied upon, it was intended that the award of the contract and the additional $300,000 of compensation would develop great numbers of Small votes among the friends of the contractor and in the vicinity of the location of the work. The idea appeared later as erroneous.

Although the contract was not actually awarded, it was commonly accepted as a fact in the territory that the Parish company would receive it. If not before election, then immediately thereafter.

From latest developments it appears that the quid pro quo on the part of the vote deliverers was not forthcoming, and the announcement that the brick bid is rejected lends weight to the saying that the time to collect on political promises is before election.

The situation which roused the citizens of Douglas and Edgar counties was revealed after bids were opened for paving the sixteen miles of route 121. It was found that the Wabash Construction company was low bidder with a figure of $353,366 for concrete work. There were six other bidders.

Only one concern bid on brick work. That was Allan J. Parish of Paris, Ill. His company proposed a figure of $639,728. That was $286,362 higher than the Wabash figure. Officials of the highway department nevertheless notified the Wabash company that it would not be awarded the contract, but that Parish would. An outburst of objection followed, with the result that the award was not made.

NEWS AND VIEWS OF THE AUTO TRADE

Another remarkable mechanical record was set by Studebaker at Atlantic City last week when a stock car of the Dictator type traveled 5,000 miles in 4,800 consecutive minutes, under observation of the contest board of the American Automobile association. Two of the Dictators were engaged in the test and each came within the time stated. One covered 5,000 miles in 79 hours and 11 minutes, at a rate of 63.38 miles per hour. The other averaged 61.31 miles per hour, making the 5,000 miles in 81 hours and 32 minutes. The Studebaker officials state that no car selling below $1,400 has ever equaled the performance.

The mystery of the heralded De Soto six car, which has stirred Detroit's curiosity recently, has been dispelled by the announcement of Walter P. Chrysler, president of the Chrysler corporation, that the De Soto will be built in the Chrysler factory, but marketed by an independent organization. Rumors were prevalent a week ago that the De Soto was to be a Cadillac product. This rumor, of course, proved untrue. The new car will be handled by the De Soto Motors corporation. C. W. Matheson, former Dodge Brothers sales manager and assistant sales manager for General Motors, will head the corporation. Chrysler will continue to produce its present line.

The Inland Rubber company of Chicago announces that it has opened fourteen of a string of twenty-five service stations in Los Angeles. Fourteen branch stations are maintained in Chicago and nine others in the immediate Chicago area. The product is made in this city.

C. A. Triphagen, sales manager for Reo, states that, even with unfavorable weather in many parts of the country, his company is swamped with business that it cannot handle. "Our production is increasing steadily," he said, "and is now at the highest point in our history. The longer the sunny days hold off the better chance we will have to cash in on the unprecedented volume of business that is waiting for us."

Production and sales reached the highest peak in the company's history, Willys-Knight officials announced yesterday. During March 32,733 cars were sold, an increase of 17 per cent over the highest previous month. Price reduction on Whippet and Willys-Knight standard, and introduction of the Whippet six were factors, it was said, in the remarkable showing made.

J. Edward Mahoney, long identified with Gardner at St. Louis, recently has been appointed manager of the company branch at 2530 South Michigan avenue, Chicago.

LINCOLN HIGHWAY IN WESTERN PORTION IS CLOSED UNTIL MAY

The Lincoln highway between Salt Lake City and Cheyenne absolutely will not be safe for motor traffic until early in May, due to large masses of snow, the touring bureau of the Automobile Club of Southern California declares in an official bulletin.

Pavement Across State Intact Except 2 Miles

State highway No. 6, known as Roosevelt road in Cook county, offers uninterrupted hard surface between Chicago and Clinton, Ia., with the exception of a two mile detour east of Sterling. The detour is reported as in good shape for traffic.

2 MILLION CARS JUNKED DURING THE LAST YEAR

Automobiles in use throughout the world at the beginning of 1928 totaled 29,638,535, a gain of 2,111,297 cars compared with a year ago, according to the annual world motor census.

With total production of motor cars in 1927 estimated at 4,147,313 vehicles, the net gain for the year in cars in operation was slightly less than one-half of the output. This indicates that more than 2,000,000 automobiles reached the obsolescent stage in the last year.

Of the total number of automobiles registered, approximately 78 per cent, or 23,253,882 cars, are in the United States. The number in use in countries other than the United States, the census shows, totaled 6,384,653, compared with 5,467,328 in the preceding year.

The United States has one automobile to each 5.1 persons. New Zealand has one to each 10.7 persons, and Australia one to each 13.4 inhabitants.

Notable progress was made last year in Great Britain and the total now in use in that country is estimated at 1,219,477 automobiles, in addition to 660,928 motorcycles. France has a total of 960,000 automobiles in use; Canada 939,479 cars; Australia 464,225 cars and Germany 422,300 cars.

American made cars shipped and sold abroad last year, including automobiles assembled in branch plants located in some twenty overseas countries, amounted to 530,405 units. The values of exports of American automotive equipment in 1927, including shipments of cars, trucks and parts, tires, tractors, motorcycles and automobile engines, reached the huge total of $537,548,189, as against $456,425,702 in 1926.

Why Buy a New Car Backwards?

Many people who preferred an Auburn did not purchase one because some competitor allowed them more on their used cars.

But they always wish they had gotten an Auburn.

The next time they will. We know, because they are doing it.

A "liberal" trade-in allowance does not prove liberal unless the value is in the new car.

Auburn gives you 100% car for your money. Its price is based entirely upon built-in-value, and not with a margin for "horse trading."

You can not escape this fact: It is the WORTH of the NEW car that largely determines how much you should get for your used one.

Why buy a new car backwards?

First decide what new car gives the greatest VALUE, is the most ADVANCED, will run the BEST and wear the LONGEST, then talk trade.

That is the only way to get the most for your money—now and later!

MAN'S DEADLIEST ENEMY is the one he least suspects

MAN'S deadliest enemy is not fire, famine, flood or war. Nor is it cancer, heart disease, tuberculosis or any other of the diseases he fears most. Rather, it is the more serious form of "Social" Disease.

The reason it is such a menace is that no other disease is so hard to recognize. As it develops, it may be mistaken for rheumatism, arthritis, physical debility or a nervous breakdown. Or it may appear to be a form of eye, throat, skin, heart, lung or kidney trouble.

Thus there are countless thousands of men and women in Chicago who have this disease and are completely unaware of the fact. Many think they are suffering from minor ailments, when in reality they are the victims of one of the most destructive of all afflictions.

It would be a wise thing for every person now undergoing medical treatment to insist on being given a blood test. The same is true of those in good health, for the disease in question can be inherited, or otherwise unknowingly acquired, and may not disclose its true nature until too late to effect a cure.

It is imperative that this disease be detected at the earliest possible moment, for it is by far the greatest of killers. According to the American Social Hygiene Association, it contributes directly or indirectly to almost 300,000 deaths in this country every year.

Women and Children

A special department exclusively for women and children, with men and women physicians in attendance, is located at 72 E. Randolph St. Every facility is provided here for effective treatment, and the utmost privacy with the highest degree of comfort is assured.

And it causes more injury to mind and body than any other disease. It destroys flesh and bone. It attacks the heart, kidneys and other organs. It affects the brain and spinal cord, resulting frequently in blindness, insanity and paralysis. And, worst of all, it is the outstanding cause of still-born and defective infants.

Every reader, therefore, is urged to consult a reliable physician or come to the Public Health Institute at once! Organized for public service NOT FOR PROFIT, the Institute's examination and treatment fees are so very low as to be within the reach of all.

In this enlightened age of preventive medicine, people are coming to be examined for "Social" Diseases just as readily as they are examined for less serious afflictions. Consequently no person should hesitate to take an examination which may serve to prevent much needless suffering.

MOTORS — TRAFFIC — HIGHWAYS

STORMY PETREL IN TRAFFIC HELD PERIL TO SAFETY

Impolite Drivers Are Greatest Menace.

BY PUTNEY HAIGHT.

Statistics again show that good manners among motorists constitute an overwhelming element in driving safety.

This time the accident tables are from Wisconsin and reveal that carelessness, inconsiderate acts toward fellow drivers and plain rudeness, are material elements in increasing automobile mishaps and fatalities.

According to C. N. Maurer, state traffic engineer, 68 per cent of the 2,054 accidents tabulated were the result of lack of courtesy and consideration for other drivers. Sometimes the impolite motorists were the only victims of their own discourtesy; but quite as frequently innocent, well behaved and well mannered people suffered.

Impolite Acts Defined.

The specific acts of discourtesy to traffic included reckless cutting in and out of traffic, ramming cars from the rear, speeding across intersections, driving while intoxicated, driving on the wrong side of the road, parking on the highway, entering driveways without signaling, and attempting, at a high rate of speed, to pass cars which were entering driveways.

That the stormy petrels of the traffic did by far the most damage is clearly shown by the item concerning location of accidents.

Exactly 1,257 of the 2,054 accidents, fatal and otherwise, occurred on straightaway portions of the highways. Cutting in and out of traffic, racing to pass cars ahead, and other forms of disregard for rights of the rest of traffic, are the causes of accidents on the straight line roadways.

Meet at Intersections.

Curves and corners accounted for 422 accidents, which indicates a certain degree of carelessness and possibly disregard for others on the part of one of the contestants in each collision. The proportion of preventable collisions, however, is not shown by the figures.

Only 4 per cent of motor accidents were charged to drivers who were intoxicated. This proportion, however, stands under the head of ill manners. The act of seizing the wheel of an automobile and attempting to drive, when partially or wholly plastered, hardly comes within the meaning of polite conduct.

Another error of deportment in polite society is to fall asleep while in company. Forty-five instances of this infraction, asleep in an automobile, were recorded in Wisconsin accidents, but that number represented only 2 per cent of all mishaps.

In 165 cases, accidents were caused by drivers disregarding the fundamental rule of traffic which provides that cars proceed at the right side of the road. The parking of cars on the roads also had a part in this classification. The practice is the subject of frequent warning by sign in that state.

Recklessness Is Impolite.

Under the classification of reckless driving there are placed 37 per cent of all accidents. Excessive speed in heavy traffic, trick driving of one kind or another, cutting out and in, passing traffic in line and other annoying practices made up the classification.

Analysis of the Wisconsin report brings up the question of just what good manner in traffic may mean and how they may affect safety in motoring.

On the theory that manners, generally speaking, consist of the prevalent modes of life or conduct, with a significance of polite, well bred behavior, it might be well to go back and see why they exist at all. It appears that like other rules of association manners are based upon practical methods of getting along happily with one's fellow men and women. The cardinal idea is to go through life enjoying all the liberty of thought and action possible consistent with the rights and activities of others.

Motor Manners Are Forming.

Applied to ordinary associations, contacts and activities, these ideas have crystalized into recognized manners. Refinement of manners is described as politeness, courtesy, and the like. People who insist upon lurching through the rights and privileges of others, disregarding any sort of fairness, are known as ill mannered. When their obliquity becomes too obnoxious they are characterized as criminals.

In the great motorization movement a new field for custom, manners, behavior, or what you will, has been in the making for less than a decade. It took thousands and thousands of years to develop respect and popularity for social amenities. Some never took kindly to them.

Apparently the same elements in human nature are active in the newer problem. The ordinary courtesy of a well behaved person, it would be logical to believe, really ought to be reflected in his conduct when in a motor car. Apparently this does not work out just that way. An otherwise courteous person in a motor car seems inspired to discourtesy and ill manners. Some sorts of mentality refuse to recognize manners as applying to motor traffic.

Safety Is Involved.

In the specific case of motor traffic, not alone are the peace of mind and contentment of the motoring public involved in courtesy and polite manners, but public safety as well.

The dictionary defines manners as the "usual or ordinary practice; recognized method of procedure." Judging from current observation of motor traffic in Chicago, it might therefore be possible to define motor manners as "a general stampede, apparently dominated by an insane impulse to smash and disable as many of one's fellow motorists and their property, as conveniently is possible."

A parallel case, from the standpoint of public safety, might be found in supposing that locomotive engineers took to racing and overtaking one another, refusing to modify speed when observing another train or engine in trouble, disregarding signals and glowering and cursing at one another when within earshot.

VOICE OF THE TRAFFIC

THE PRECIOUS POLICE.

Chicago, April 27.—The police [God rest their feet—and seats] are picking on car owners who, because of garage shortage or disproportionate garage charges, feel compelled to leave their cars before their doors at night. Arriving at my new home near Lunt avenue, I went immediately to a garage two squares away [the nearest] for storage. They were filled. It was night and I insisted on overnight accommodation till I could look further. "Set it at the curb and we'll take care of it," an attendant said. In the morning I called at the garage and found the car on the street where I had left it, with a dollar charge tag on it. Next night, having failed to get a garage, I left the car in front of my door. A real comedy "chaw" copper was fumbling with it when I emerged from home at 6 a. m. "Yez can't leave this on the street," he said. "It's on," I replied. "Don't argue wid me, and have it off here tonight." "Where will I put it?" I asked. "If I take it to the garage, they leave it on the street and you don't bother them." "That's not my business," he declared in a tone of finality and walked away. At that moment a car with a 1927 license tag and no city vehicle marker pulled up and the driver hailed the policeman. They talked and gassed for several minutes. I wanted to ask that policeman why he didn't call down that motorist for not obeying the state and city laws. On second thought I decided to save the ten and costs that would probably have been my lot had I reopened the conversation. I finally found a garage nearly a mile from my house. IRA HUNTER.

SOME BLIND TO THIS.

Chicago, April 22.—Some drivers do not show courtesy even to the dead. License number [identity withheld] Saturday afternoon, driving south on Kedzie avenue, was so impatient that he cut in and out of traffic and at Montrose honked his way right through a funeral procession.

C. L. POWERS.

SOME TO THIS—

Forest Park, April 24.—A driver of a small coach, license number [withheld] drove through a number of people trying to board a southbound Crawford avenue car at Lake street at 2:31 p. m. on this date. He was blocked by the red light and had to wait, after all. At Washington boulevard he did the same thing. I think a record of this should be kept. In case of accident later, it would show a tendency toward reckless driving and disregard of safety in traffic. S. ODELL.

AND THIS—

Chicago, April 22.—Driver of car, license number [withheld for the present] is a hit and run driver. He damaged my car and drove away rapidly, refusing to pay any attention to my hail. ALFRED SMITH.

AND EVEN COMPETITION.

Chicago, April 23.—Who is the self-styled city official who drives a 1928 small sedan on South Park way and purports to be a speed officer, stopping motorists and accusing them of speeding? T. J. LANE.

MAKING THE STREETS UNSAFE FOR TRAFFIC.

Chicago, April 25.—For no sane or sound reason other than to accommodate the bus company, the "no left turn" sign has been removed at the intersection of Washington and Austin boulevards. Recently there was a serious accident resulting from a car making a left turn and crashing into a car driven by a person who seemingly did not know that the sign had been removed. This is one of the most dangerous corners in or around Chicago. It appears to me that investigation should be made by the authorities to find out whether or not the people's best interests are being considered in a case like that.

W. D. SAWLER.

ON BAD MANNERS.

Chicago, April 23.—The reason for the apparent bad manners illustrated in your Sunday's "manners" department is because probably this man [shown with another cutting in ahead of him] is going 25 miles an hour on a 35 mile per hour road, forcing any one who wishes to make legal use of the road to make extraordinary efforts to pass him. I am convinced that the slow, so-called conservative driver causes far more accidents than the fast driver. A. A. BRAND.

GOOD NIGHT!

Chicago, April 25.—If your good manners editor traveled as fast and made as much noise as the trucks carrying your newspapers, he wouldn't be crying about light cheaters, traffic weavers and discourteous driving.

A WOMAN DRIVER.

GOOD MANNERS FOR MOTORISTS

Motorists who refuse to keep their places in line when approaching cross traffic, regulated or otherwise, display extreme lack of consideration for and common courtesy to those who have proceeded in orderly fashion, although probably as impatient to get into motion as this specimen. It is a dangerous practice. Pictured here is an impatient driver who has pulled out of line and found himself facing a center post. When traffic resumes he must beg and cry himself back into line, an object of contempt in the eyes of those he attempted to cheat. Also he endangers himself and other cars by exposing himself to the prospect of being struck by counter traffic when it begins to come through. Had this person been guided by instincts of ordinary courtesy he would not find himself in such an idiotic predicament. The attempt could not be considered skillful driving, even though the driver had crowded a car or two ahead.

PLAIN FARMERS ENDED MONOPOLY IN CRUDE RUBBER

The dirt farmer of the South Sea island broke the so-called rubber monopoly, ended the restriction business and demonstrated for all time the impracticability of artificial price fixing of crude rubber, declared William O'Neil, president of General Tire of Akron.

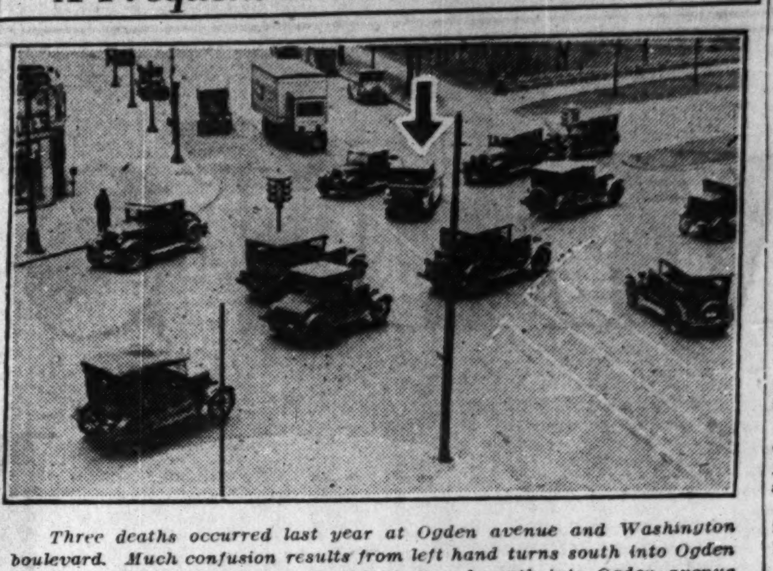
O'Neil referred to the recent British announcement that the Stevenson restriction act, introduced several years ago to fix a minimum price on rubber, would be suspended Nov. 1. The announcement caused the present slump in the crude rubber market.

The small farmers, O'Neil said, particularly those of the Dutch Colonial possessions, routed the "gentlemen farmers" of the large rubber plantations by going into the rubber business when prices began to climb through operation of the Stevenson act, thereby jumping the estimated annual maximum production of the Dutch provinces from 70,000 tons to more than 250,000 tons.

CITIZENS MADE HAPPIER.

Seventy-five million citizens are made happier, healthier, and better by automobiles.

A Frequent Rendezvous for Death



Three deaths occurred last year at Ogden avenue and Washington boulevard. Much confusion results from left hand turns south into Ogden avenue when west bound on Washington, and north into Ogden avenue when east bound on Washington. The center lights are set even with the curb line of Ogden. Left turns are made when the signal is green to east and west traffic.

BRITISH AUTO OWNERS TRAPPED INTO GAS TAX

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

[Copyright: 1928: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON.—The British motorists, a million of whom recently signed a petition to the government to impose a gasoline tax taking the place of the present tax of £1 [about $5] annually per rated horse power of the engines, now fear they have been hoist by their own petard.

The rumor is current that when Winston Churchill, chancellor of the exchequer, introduces the budget next Tuesday he will include the gasoline tax, but will not drop the horsepower tax.

This, if so, will make motoring too expensive for thousands who are now just able to afford it. The trade is in a flurry of excitement.

The price of petrol in London now is 25 cents an imperial gallon, and is 2 cents more outside London.

DIRT AFFECTS ENGINE.

The greater part of the carbon deposit in an engine is just plain dirt that makes the oil cake up and prevents it from burning off clean.

MOTORS — TRAFFIC — HIGHWAYS

COUNTY TESTS 3 DAY CONCRETE FOR TRAFFIC USE

Officials Aim to Overcome "Curing" Period.

If tests now being made verify the conclusion that concrete roads can be safely opened to traffic within three days of laying them, Cook county will probably be able to offer this season a revolutionary solution to the detour problem which now confronts the highway department in a virulent form.

Preliminary tests made of paving slab laid early last week indicated that heavy traffic would not injure it, after a three day period of "setting" and "curing."

Further proving and checking up will be carried out before the highway department officials adopt a definite policy on the subject.

Three Weeks to Cure.

At present the custom of roadbuilders is to let concrete paving rest for at least twenty-one days. This period, added to the time required for preliminary preparations on the grade, serves to tie up thoroughfares for long intervals, and compels the use of less desirable routes as detours by traffic.

Two methods of speeding paving work are being tried. One is by the use of a special quick drying cement and the other is by increasing the cement ingredient in the concrete mixture.

The importance of quick curing concrete is most clearly seen in the case of continuous pavement that is intersected frequently by cross streets. With contractors laying from 700 to 1,000 lineal feet of 20 foot slab a day, a great deal of time can be saved for traffic by the opening of sections in continuous blocks almost as fast as they are put down.

Meets the Detour Problem.

The principal gain is in the cutting down of time that detours must be used, and the cutting of the expense for repairs that invariably follows the use of an existing street for detour service. When used as a detour, a street is compelled to bear not only its normal traffic, but the usually much larger traffic that habitually was carried on the street under construction.

The almost invariable result of using a secondary street for detour service is that the latter sustains serious damage. Not only is the traffic burden vastly heavier, but the drivers are inclined to be more careless in handling their vehicles than when on a straight line of travel. The shorter the time that the detour is subjected to the heavy burden, the less, naturally, the extent of damage.

In Cook county this summer more than 150 miles of important arteries of travel are to be improved and temporary routes are being provided for each construction job.

Routes Open During Work.

There are some instances in which Maj. George A. Quinlan, county superintendent of highways, expects to keep traffic moving while construction work is going on. This has been found possible in the case of widening projects, where it has not been necessary to tear out the old pavement.

Six important 40 foot construction projects are now in actual work in the county. They are: Southwest highway, Waukegan road, Dempster street, Western avenue, 95th street, and Wilkie-Euclid avenue.

On 95th street traffic is permitted during operations, as the slab is being laid first on the south of the present pavement and then on the north.

Grading operations on Dempster street and Waukegan are not yet complete and traffic has not yet been shut off. When actual paving starts sections will be closed to traffic.

First Test on Western.

The first tests were carried on with the quick curing concrete at Western avenue below 135th street. Paving poured on Monday was tested on Thursday for pressure resistance and tensile qualities. Breaking applications indicated that the slabs would bear traffic without injury.

Other tests were made at the Euclid-Wilkie avenue paving work and at other jobs. By the first of May it is expected a policy of speedier use of paving than has been in force heretofore will be decided upon.

FACTOR IN FOOD.

The automobile insures delivery of fresh food, free from harm by broiling sun and poisonous flies.

SPRING DEMAND SPEEDS OUTPUT OF MOTOR CARS

Labor Increases to New Total of 249,988.

Detroit, Mich., April 28.—[Special.]—The production and sale of passenger cars continues on a high level, with the margin of fluctuation very small. The trend, however, continues slightly upward, caused, no doubt, by the spring trade and shipments by train and boat loads to dealers throughout the country.

Lake freighters built for the exclusive transportation of motor vehicles are now plying the lakes, the initial load for 1928 getting through to Chicago during the last week.

Spotty sales conditions which prevailed two and three weeks ago have practically disappeared, and the whole country now seems to be taking its quota. Capacity productions by a large majority of the plants is the result, and manufacturers are prepared to continue the present high output for at least another thirty days.

Labor Exceeds 1927.

Labor barometer for automobile plants in Detroit last week registered another increase and boosted the grand total of automobile and accessories builders to 249,988. This was an increase for the week of 2,547, and an increase for the corresponding week of 1927 of 25,340. Increases are also reported in the automobile plants in Pontiac, Lansing, Flint, Toledo, Cleveland, St. Louis, and in the Wisconsin plants.

During the last five years there has been an average decline of 25 per cent in the cost of automobiles in the low price field, and a corresponding increase in quality and equipment. The high priced cars show a 9 to 10 per cent decrease and the medium class nearly 30 per cent.

Average Low Price $648.

Twenty-five different makes of cars were listed in the compilation, which, of course, does not include all makes, but those chosen are leaders in their respective fields.

Five years ago the average price tag on the high class cars was $4,222. This has been reduced from year to year until it now is $3,840. In the medium group the figures for 1923 were $1,921, and this amount has been steadily decreased until now the average price is $1,372.

The low price field, because of greater demand, which of course necessitated a greater production, fell from $862 in 1923 to the present average of $648.

MOTOR GRABBING BY DRY SNOOPERS ENDED BY COURT

Washington, D. C., April 28.—The decision of the federal Supreme court holding that in a case involving the seizure of an automobile used to transport intoxicating liquors, the forfeiture must be under the prohibition act, is a sweeping victory in the campaign to protect the rights of innocent car owners.

Commenting upon the decision the national headquarters of the American Automobile association has issued a statement saying that it is a death-blow to the common practice of prohibition officers who seize cars used in the transportation of liquor, which does not grant innocent owners an opportunity to recover, on the ground that it was being used to evade payment of tax due the United States.

"The owner of a motor vehicle which has been used to transport liquor without his permission, will only have to prove that the use of the car for an illegal purpose was not authorized," the association declares.

"The decision is of far reaching importance to the individual car owner who has been innocent of wrongdoing and whose car was either stolen or used without his permission. It also protects the property rights of financing companies, who retain title to approximately three-fourths of the cars sold annually on deferred payments.

"The case in which this decision was rendered came to the Supreme court on appeal from the decision of the federal court in the state of Washington, where a financing company intervened in forfeiture proceedings and alleged that it had no knowledge that the car, purchased under conditional sale, was being used in violation of the law.

"Our postion has consistently been that innocent owners should not be forced to suffer the loss of their property through being victimized by some one in whom they had placed confidence by loaning an automobile. The decision of the Supreme court virtually brings to an end this long waged campaign to protect the rights of owners of motor vehicles."

WHY AUTOISTS RAVE AND POLICE GROW FAT FROM LAUGHTER

Here's the story: A policeman arrested a motorist for lacking a windshield wiper. When the driver of the car arrived at the police station with the officer, he telephoned for his lawyer. When that crafty individual came upon the scene, he made investigations and found that the car of the arresting officer had no windshield wiper. Further examination led to the discovery that nearly all the police machines were lacking in this respect. The motorist paid the customary fine for such offenses.

LOOKING FOR A MOUNTAIN SHE CAN CALL A HILL

REO FLYING CLOUD SEDAN

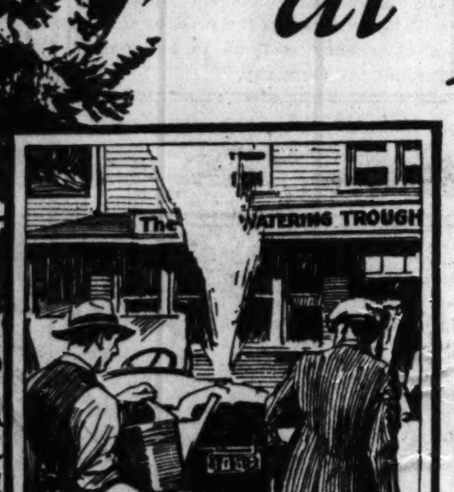
at 51 miles per hour!



"The Watering Trough" about half way up the main ascent at Uniontown. Here most cars are forced to stop for water. But the Flying Cloud made the entire climb, not only without stopping for water, but without the motor temperature ever going above 180 degrees—this despite the fact that the air temperature was between 70 and 80 degrees.

Six months ago, a Reo Flying Cloud Sedan swept over the Uniontown Hill at the breath-taking rate of 37 miles per hour.

That accomplishment may or may not have established a new record. We neither know nor care. Measured by 1927 standards, it was a convincing demonstration. For Uniontown, as the motoring world knows, is the ultimate in hill-climbing tests. It is long, it is tortuous, it is fairly steep, with its average rise of 10% and a maximum of 13%.

But this performance, dazzling as it was, seems to have been only a forerunner of an even greater record.

For on Thursday, April 5, in the presence of a host of eye-witnesses—including a number of trained, technical, neutral observers—a strictly stock, five-passenger four-door Reo Flying Cloud Sedan, carrying three adult male persons flashed past the Summit House (the highest point) at a speed of 51 miles per hour!

No words can add to the superlative character of this record-breaking achievement. To the best of our knowledge, it is by far, the fastest authenticated performance ever recorded on this greatest of all testing-grounds; and certainly it has never even been claimed, so far as we know, that any five-passenger Sedan regardless of size, weight or price had ever even approached this new mark.

Here are some interesting and illuminating sidelights of this record-breaking performance:

1. The mark of 51 miles an hour over the top was accomplished not once but at least ten times in succession without intermission.
2. The car was driven not by a professional stunt-driver, but by one of our own engineers, P. A. Collins.
3. A vicious right-angle left-hand turn, four-tenths of a mile from the summit, made it absolutely necessary to "cut out" the gas in approaching the turn, because a speed greater than 45 miles an hour around the turn would be fatal. And yet in that remaining 4-10 of a mile, climbing a grade between 10 and 13%, the Flying Cloud regularly accelerated to 51 miles per hour at the top.
4. The start, in each instance, was made from a point midway up the hill—a feature which particularly amazed the newspaper men and other observers.
5. Although the tests were conducted while the thermometer was registering between 70 and 80 degrees, the Flying Cloud motor—even at the top of the climb—never went above 180 degrees, indicating a remarkable cooling-capacity.

Well indeed has the Flying Cloud earned the right to the slogan—

For fuller particulars of the Uniontown tests, including the names of the newspaper and technical men who acted as observers; for full particulars of equally spectacular climbing and speed records established by the Flying Cloud on the most famous hills and boulevards of Pittsburgh; and for performance-records showing what four of the Flying Cloud's most popular competitors have done on Uniontown, write to Reo Motor Car Company or ask your Reo dealer.

REO MOTOR CAR COMPANY, Lansing, Mich.

The Uniontown Hill twists and turns incessantly throughout the entire ascent. Short bursts of speed are of no avail. It's only steady, tremendous power that breaks records at Uniontown.

Trio of Loop Skyscraping Towers Start Building Race

OLD LANDMARK OF CITY FADES INTO HISTORY

Building on La Salle to Be Razed.

BY PHILIP HAMPSON.

Chicagoans having a generation or so to their credit next week will again have impressed on them the somewhat fleeting passage of the years, for on Tuesday wreckers will start their major operation of tearing down the Chamber of Commerce building at the southeast corner of Washington and La Salle streets—a structure which only thirty-six years ago was shown to visitors as one of the marvels of the city. It is being razed to make way for a forty story structure to house the Foreman banks.

D. S. Bosley of the Bosley Wrecking company, which is doing the wrecking, says it will take just forty-five days to tear down this structure on which two years was spent in construction.

Returning for a moment to the days that have gone, we find that work first started on the Chamber of Commerce building immediately after the Chicago fire when an eight story structure, requiring a year in the building, was put up. For a number of years the board of trade occupied quarters in it, but the grain merchants soon found themselves in need of more space and so put up their present home in Jackson street which, too, is shortly to come down.

Add Five Stories.

The eight story Chamber of Commerce building, while catching the eye of the townspeople, did not prove a financial success, so when it fell into the hands of Hannah, Lay & Co. it was decided to add five stories to it. Comes along 1892 with the world's fair in the immediate offing and everybody in town full of pride about everything in Chicago. Not the least of this was directed to the structure before us which had just been converted into a thirteen story mammoth—a task that, too, took a year to accomplish.

All of which gives us a chance to get some words from an elaborate book describing the building, printed on the occasion of its completion, appear here:

"To meet the requirements on it that had been unforseen by the original builders, they (the new owners) decided to raise it to the enormous height of thirteen floors, a distance of over 200 feet from the sidewalk, which would be the highest building of this class at that time in the country. The work was a difficult and dangerous undertaking.

Pointing with Pride.

"We point with pride to the building itself, the structural architectural and ornamental iron work, its foundation, and wainscoting and marble mosaic."

Much of the marble on the interior of the structure is to be preserved as is some of the iron work which was the subject of considerable admiration when the building was opened. In this connection there is a bit of sentiment attaching to the newel, with its cluster of lights and its pair of dragons, that excited comment from visitors to the cigar counter.

Frank C. Healy, at present manager of the engineering department of the State Bank of Chicago, as a young apprentice of eighteen, working for Winslow Brothers, carved the model in plaster of Paris from which the newel was moulded. And now he is being given the post which should constitute a pretty bulky souvenir.

In Good Condition.

Mr. Bosley says that a cursory examination of the structure reveals that it is in very good condition and that it would be capable of years more of service had it not become obsolete as far as the whims of these speedy days are concerned.

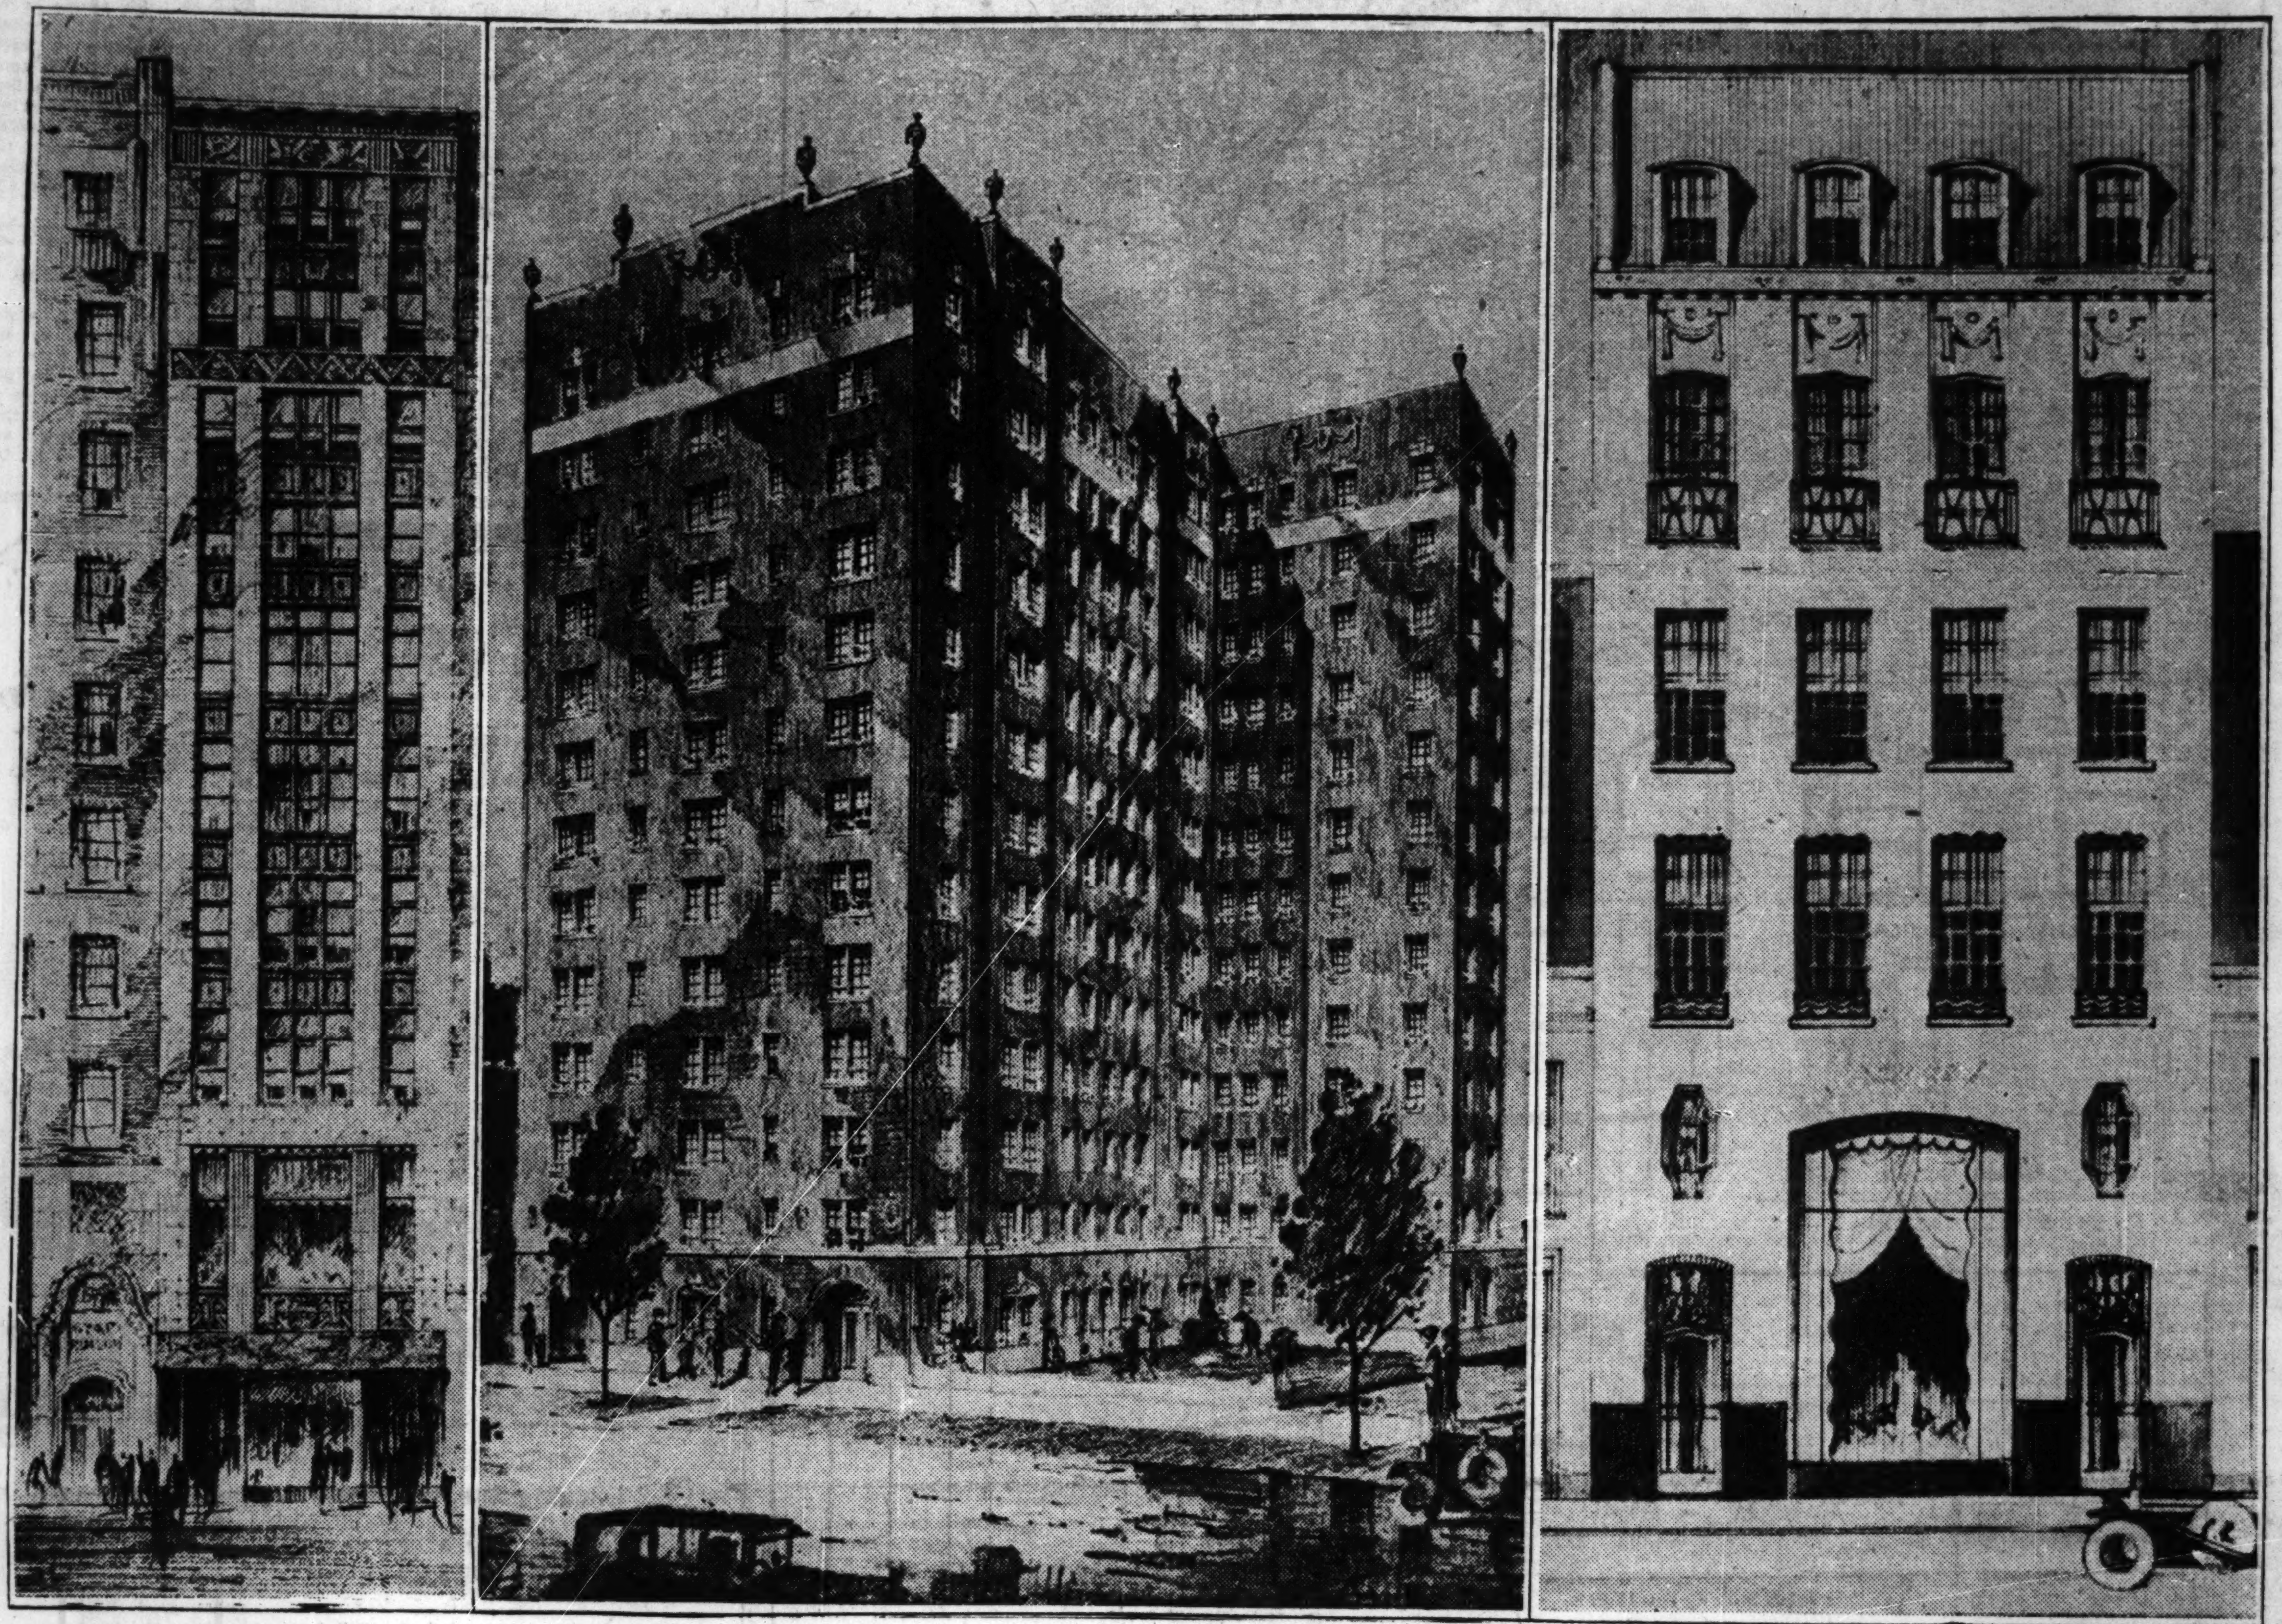
One feature of the structure to be recalled is its interior court or wall, with galleries at each floor on which the various offices opened. In years gone by this court was a favorite resort of the city's unhappy and so numerous were the suicides by people jumping from the galleries that steel nets were installed every three or four floors.

Another structure wrecked by Mr. Bosley's firm is the historic Briggs house on the site of which the Steuben club will stand. This task was finished yesterday, just ten days after the main wrecking operations started. Mr. Bosley here mentioned something of interest to the eyes of loopites. A system has been devised whereby streams of water are played on the rubbish being thrown down chutes which helps reduce the supply of dust sent forth to plague our eyes.

NOTABLE AUTO STATION FOR SOUTH PARK WAY

Chicago's forthcoming world's fair already is beginning to have some effect on the architecture of projects being erected on the south side near where it will be located. For instance, the Olson-Flory company is putting in an automobile service station at the corner of South Park way at 23d street which will have for its piece de resistance a structure with a dome designed to resemble one of our state capitols. The firm has just completed a two story tire store on a part of its 200x220 feet of property at this point, and the service station is to absorb the rest of the land. All these improvements will be of Indiana limestone. Incidentally the Olson-Flory company has just leased the steel structure on its roof to the B. F. Goodrich Tire company for a brilliant electric advertising sign. The investment for the entire project is placed at 00,000.

DOWNTOWN AND SOUTH SHORE STRUCTURES ANNOUNCED



In the trio of buildings shown above the structure on your left is to be erected at 226 South Wabash avenue by Nathan Grossman on property leased by Morris Pancoe. It will contain shops, lofts, and offices. Hall, Lawrence & Ratcliffe are architects. The design is by Ralph W. Hammett of that firm. Mr. Hammett also made the sketch shown.

The middle building of the trio is the Lake Shore Castle, told about in this section last Sunday, to be erected at the northwest corner of 78th street and Rainbow park, overlooking the lake. Robert S. De Golyer & Co. are architects. It's to be a 100 per cent coöperative project, containing forty-eight suites of four, five, and six rooms. Garard & Co. are financing it.

On your right is the six story building to be erected on the east side of upper Michigan avenue, just south of Ohio street, by Emil Wolbach, a brother of Murray Wolbach. Philip B. Maher is architect. The entire building is to be occupied by Jacques, a women's wear firm now at 612 South Michigan avenue. Work starts next Tuesday, with completion set for next December.

STEEL MEN TO RUSH WORK IN ODD SKY BATTLE

Loop Dwellers to Fill the Bleachers.

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

May 1st, the day that all good Chicagoans [and presumably a few bad ones] seem to think they must move themselves and their household goods into a different and supposedly more satistfactory location, also marks the annual start of several big loop building projects. This year an unusual situation has developed which promises a bit of sport for downtown inhabitants.

A trio of unusually imposing skyscraping towers, all of them many stories above the old time 260 foot limit, start a construction race next Tuesday which will keep a theoretical bleacher full of architects, builders and ordinary loop dwellers, on the edge of their imaginary seats during the next few months.

Two 40's and a 35.

The three entries in Chicago's great skyscraper race are the forty story Foreman National Bank building, at the southeast corner of Washington and La Salle streets, the thirty-five story Willoughby tower, at the southwest corner of Madison street and Michigan avenue, and the forty story Steuben club, on the site of the old Briggs house, at the northeast corner of Randolph and Wells streets.

Of course, the Foreman bank building and the Steuben club are each five stories taller than the Willoughby tower, and for that reason when the race begins to get close we may hear roars from the gentlemen who put their money on the Foreman or Steuben buildings. They may insist that the first one to get its steel frame up to the thirty-fifth floor wins the race.

"Going to Make a Good Race."

"It doesn't make any difference whether the building is thirty-five or forty stories," said the head of a big Chicago construction company, "the winner in the race should be the one that gets the highest bit of steel in place first and fastens the flag on it. There are so many points to take into consideration that it seems to me the only fair way is to call the winner the one that gets there first, regardless of height.

"Naturally I wouldn't say that was the way to decide if one were a twenty story building and the other forty, but these three towers are so near the same height that it's going to make a good race and one worth following."

Bank Building the Largest.

The Willoughby tower covers the smallest site of the three—only 80x109, while the Foreman National bank is the largest of the group, 113x181. The Steuben club will occupy a lot 80x180.

So, you can see that the five story difference between the Willoughby tower and the Foreman bank building, in favor of the former, is offset by the greater bulk and consequently more steel used in erection of the latter.

The Steuben club apparently has a good start on the other two, because the Briggs house is practically out of the way, and as you can read if you'll take a look across this page at Philip Hampson's story, it'll take several weeks to tear down the supersolidly built Chamber of Commerce building.

Now Back to Earth—Nearly.

Now, looking a bit closer to earth than forty story towers, we notice that a ten story building is to be erected at 226 South Wabash avenue. Of course, we're now through talking about skyscraper races and are giving a few facts about the meager supply of new building announcements this week.

Hall, Lawrence & Ratcliffe are the architects of No. 226, with the design by Ralph W. Hammett, of that firm. The structure is to be built by Nathan Grossman on property leased by Morris Pancoe. It will represent a total investment reported to be $325,000.

The front elevation will be of dull pink terra cotta, with spandrels of lead. The first and second floors will be occupied by shops. The store fronts will be of bronze and granite, with the second floor show windows trimmed with gold. The upper floors will be used for shops, lofts, or offices.

Hotel Sherman Builds Garage.

The other building announcement for the week, in the loop, is a four story 200 car garage which the Hotel Sherman company is to erect at 161-73 North La Salle street, just north of and adjoining the two story building it is erecting at the northeast corner of Randolph and La Salle. It's to be known as the Hotel Sherman garage and will be ready for cars about July 1st. Holabird & Root are the architects.

A ten foot corridor is to be extended through this building from the Hotel Sherman to La Salle street, so that the hotel will then have entrances on three loop thoroughfares, Clark, Randolph, and La Salle.

Partner in Watson & Boaler Buys Huron-St. Clair Corner

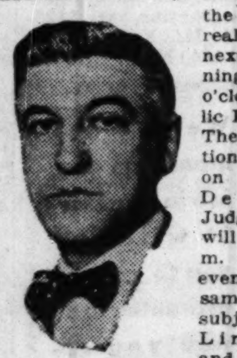
Just before starting for Europe, Charles J. Watson of Watson & Boaler, furniture and interior decorators, purchased the vacant southeast corner of St. Clair and Huron streets, 100x100, from Mrs. Rachel Erwin, for an undisclosed price. Sudler & Co., represented both parties, as brokers.

Mr. Watson's plans for the development of the property just acquired are indefinite. It is probable, according to his brokers, that he will erect a building to care for his firm's business.

Watson & Boaler at present occupy the first five floors of the Central Life Insurance company building, Michigan and Superior. Originally the firm was in the Garland building, Wabash and Washington. It moved to upper Michigan avenue four years ago.

The property just acquired at St. Clair and Huron is diagonally across from another piece owned by Mrs. Erwin, who is the widow of Charles R. Erwin, partner in the advertising firm of Erwin & Wasey, and Mr. Wasey. The property, the northwest corner, is under lease to the Allerton house for its announced annex, to be built shortly.

LORAN D. GAYTON TO BE SPEAKER AT REALTY CLASS



LORAN D. GAYTON.
[Paul Stone Raymor Photo.]

Loran D. Gayton, city engineer, will address the real property institute of the Cook County real estate board next Tuesday evening, May 1, at 8 o'clock on "Public Improvements, Their Inauguration and Bearing on Real Estate Developments." Judge M. M. Oshe will speak at 7 p. m. on the same evening before the same body on the subject "Building Line Conditions and Restrictions." The series of weekly sessions will continue throughout May and until June 19. All interested in realty law are invited.

FRANK R. MASON ORGANIZES NEW REALTY CONCERN

FRANK R. MASON.
[Morrison Photo.]

Frank R. Mason has left the Paramount Realty corporation and has formed his own firm which will be known as the Frank R. Mason company. Offices of the new organization are on the th floor of the d Dearborn bank building at the northeast corner of Wabash and Lake. The property office is at Ridge road and Simpson street. The first property to be opened by the company will be Hillcrest Manor, at the northwest corner of Ridge road and Simpson street, some six blocks from the Harmswood station of the Skokie valley line of the North Shore electric. The land is zoned for business on Ridge and Simpson while the balance is restricted to residences and apartments.

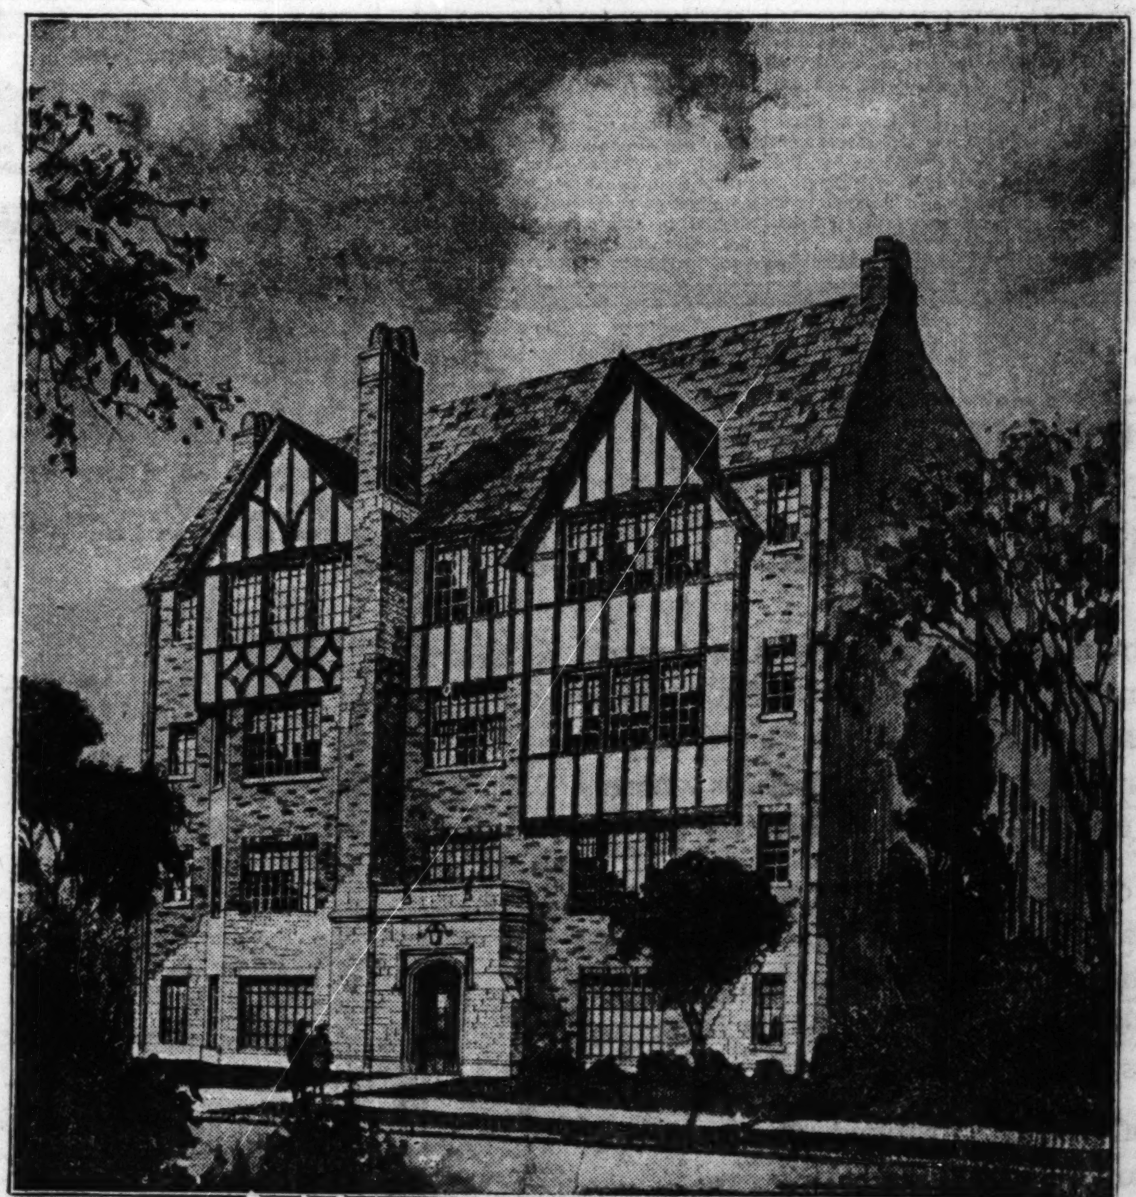
ERECT HANGAR AT AIRPORT FOR LINE TO CLEVELAND

Work is under way on what it is said will be the finest hangar at the Chicago municipal airport at 63d and Cicero, a structure capable of holding from twenty to thirty planes. The hangar is being erected for a new aviation company which will operate a passenger service between Chicago and Cleveland. P. G. Kemp is trustee for the company, the directors of which include George B. Foster, Frank A. Mitchell, and R. H. McElroy. Among the features will be a luxurious waiting room for passengers.

To Open Cigar Shops at 333 Michigan, 65 South Water

A. Waldman has just closed two ten year leases on tobacco emporiums. One is for an inside shop in the 333 North Michigan Avenue building and the other is for a stand in the structure at 65 East South Water street. Both buildings are newcomers in the district just north of the loop. Mr. Waldman formerly was located in the Capitol building.

FOR 1063-65 COLUMBIA AVENUE



Work is under way on the above structure, at 1063-65 Columbia avenue, which will contain forty apartments of one, two, and three rooms. All the apartments will be furnished. Dubin & Eisenberg are architects. It is stated the structure will represent an investment of $190,000, in which connection the Ritchie Bond and Mortgage company has underwritten a bond issue of $108,000. The structure is to be completed by Sept. 1. E. L. Bloomster made this rendering.

S. L. Rifas Sells 150 Car Garage at Clark-Farwell

S. L. Rifas, whose feelings as a real estate man we inadvertently damaged last week by calling him an attorney, has sold the 150 car garage building at the southwest corner of Clark and Farwell, lot 97x175 feet, to Josephine Pacelli for a reported $130,000, subject to $62,500. At the same time the North Shore Garage company, lessees, sold the garage business and lease to Josephine Pacelli. Maurice W. Bernstein & Co., and N. Drosdoff were brokers.

8 Story Flats for Bryn Mawr and Winthrop

Work will start next Tuesday on an eight story apartment building at the northeast corner of Bryn Mawr and Winthrop avenues, according to Max Malter, who has owned this property for the last six years. It is now occupied with an old six flat building.

Plans have been drawn by Koenigsberg & Weisfeld for a structure which will have eight stores on the first floor with 140 one room kitchenette apartments in the seven upper stories. The site fronts 150 feet on Bryn Mawr avenue and sixty-eight feet on Winthrop avenue.

Mr. Malter, who is a real estate dealer with an office at 1060 Balmoral avenue, lives at 5401 Winthrop avenue. He states the new building will cost $800,000 and that the State Bank of Chicago has underwritten a bond issue on the project. Completion is set for Jan. 1, 1929.

CHICAGO HOTEL MAN BUYS JULIEN DUBUQUE IN IOWA

Harold Hayes, owner of the Metropole hotel in Chicago, yesterday bought the nine story fireproof Julien Dubuque, in Dubuque, Ia, one of the best known hotels in the Hawkeye state. According to W. E. Schofield, Chicago hotel broker, who negotiated the deal, the price was approximately $750,000. Mr. Hayes bought the fee, building and furnishings. H. O. Stone & Co. have underwritten a $500,000 bond issue on the hotel.

The Julien Dubuque was sold by A. A. Cooper. It was erected thirteen years ago and has 250 rooms. It was built on the ruins of the original Julien, which burned down.

1928 EDITION OF BUILDING CODE IS NOW ON SALE

HOME BUILDERS' DEPARTMENT

GEORGIAN HOUSE WITH INTERIOR OF QUAINT DESIGN

Symmetry of Line Found Inside and Out.

(A Tribune Competition five room home, designed by George H. Erard, 1234 Ohio building, Toledo, O.)

BY LOUISE BARGELT.
[Home Builders Editor.]

LOUISE BARGELT.
[Hutchinson Photo.]

A Georgian house, characterized by quiet simplicity and a symmetry of exterior design. While the interior is not typically Georgian in that the homes built in England during the reign of the Georges usually had a central hall, balanced on either side by rooms of squarish outline, the interior has balance and symmetry of openings and the result is a home of moderate size, eminently fitted to present day living demands.

The house of the Georgian period resembled this house in its brick walls. Often the brick wall was laid in a Flemish bond, accentuated with a dark header.

Here the walls are of clinker arch brick, in full range of shades, with flush joints. Georgian exterior architecture and the Directoire style in France are alike in the fact that inspiration for both came from the classic models of Greece and Rome.

The roof is of slate in various soft shades. Georgian roofs were usually hipped. At the close of the period they were flatter than at the beginning. Here the rugged beauty of the slate is enhanched by copper flashings and copper and lead leader heads.

Opens on Formal Garden.

A hint of the garden wall characteristic of this period is shown. The sun porch at the rear opens on to a small formal garden.

The walls of the entrance hall and combination living room and dining room are covered with scenic papers of rural or historic or hunting scenes. For the bedrooms, paper of a classic design is suggested, striped perhaps, or in small diagonal pattern.

If preferred, the walls of the large living room may be paneled in pine and painted almost any delicate shade: ivory or a soft yellow or dove gray. The ceilings are preferably plain, tinted in light tones to harmonize with the walls.

If neither paper nor paneling is preferred, the walls may be of plain plaster with decorative cornice at the top.

The floors are of oak, wide or narrow boards, or in parquetry design. If one were carrying out the room in a striking color scene, the floor might be painted to tone in with the general effect.

Plenty of Book Shelves.

The fireplace is of marble with facings and hearth of marble. Brick may be substituted. There is abundant space for book shelves in the living room, recessed back from the mantel. Corner cupboards or flat cupboards, recessed, are fitting.

Here the staircase has a small hall of its own, a subordinate feature, with a balustrade of slender turned spindles and carved newels.

In passing, the generous size of the kitchen, with its many devices for electric appliances, its utensil closet, its large table under one window, and sink under window should be studied for deft placing arrangement.

The upper floor contains a large bath with shower compartment. The tub is recessed and tile is up from the floor about 28 inches, green or blue tile, while the painted walls above are waterproofed in soft green or blue shade. The floor is covered with a green or blue rubberized flooring. A border of black can be used around the edge to give it tone. Fixtures may be white or in harmonizing shades to match the tiling.

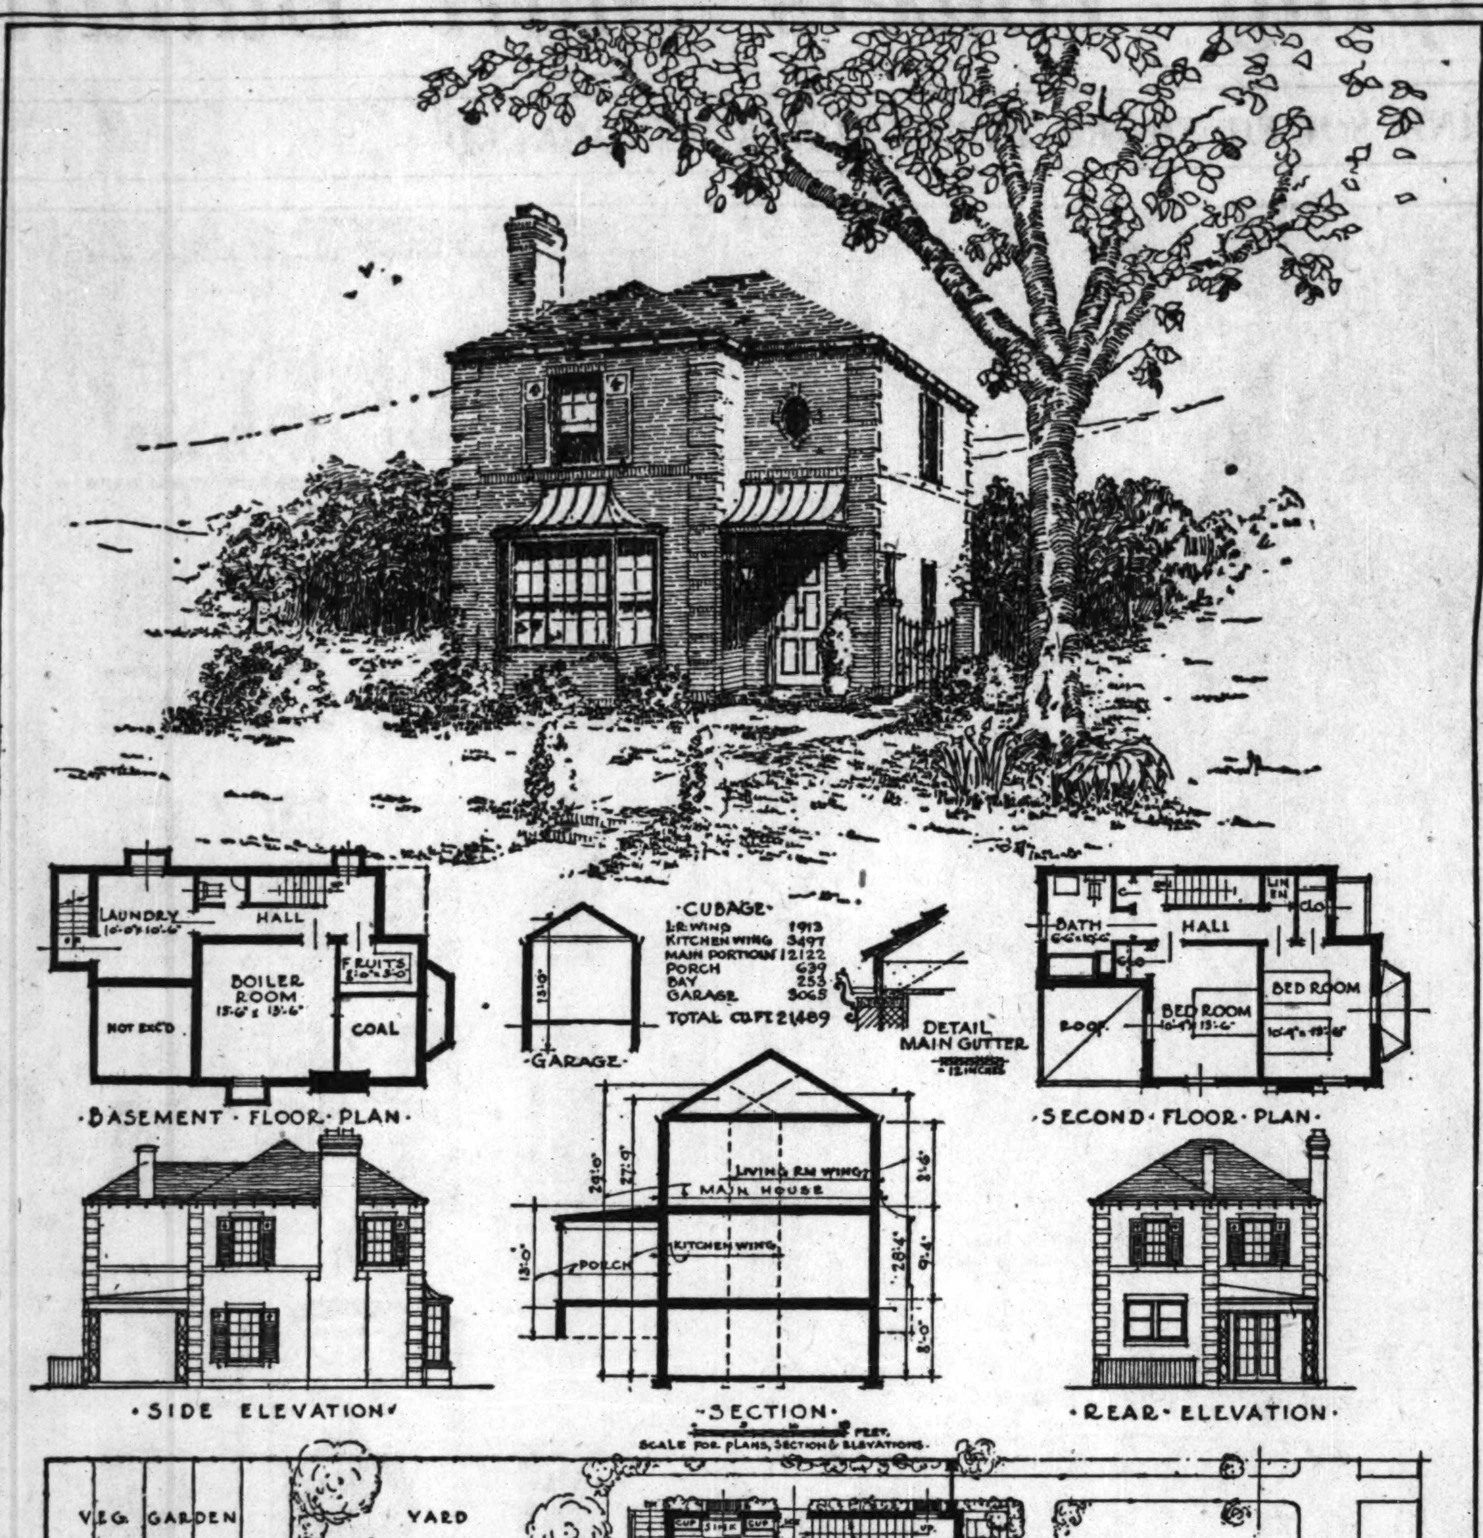
Both bedroms are large and offer ventilation from two sides. Their wall space is so arranged in relation to window and door openings, as to afford a maximum of necessary furnishings.

A home like this is one which would always be in excellent taste. Built of substantial materials, it would offer a lifetime of usefulness as well as a high resale value. Its features are well liked and have stood up under the test of generations of usage and approval.

In the basement provision is made for toilet and lavatory and fruit storage compartment, as well as for the other standard basement equipment.

Thorough insulation is specified, and hot water or vapor or warm air heat, fueled with gas, oil, or coal.

A HOME OF THE EIGHTEENTH CENTURY



Dining and living room is 22x13.6 feet, kitchen 10x10.6 feet, bedroom 10.9x13.6, bedroom 10.9x13.6, bathroom 6.6x10.6, laundry 10x10.6.

The eighteenth century Georgian home, developed in an age in England in various respects not dissimilar to our own, is peculiarly adapted to American present day homes. It is a style which can be successfully carried out in a moderately priced home. Here the exterior has walls of clinker arch brick and slate roof. The interior gives evidence of symmetry and balance, even though it does not imitate the floor plan of a typical Georgian house. A Tribune Competition five room home, designed by George H. Erard, 1234 Ohio building, Toledo, O.

PAINTING STUCCO HELPS KEEP IT FROM CRACKING

Pleasant Word for Vivid Coloring.

Do you admire color in stucco? The soft blues and pinks, the melting greens and pastel yellows; those alluring colors which dot the Riviera, splash the Mediterranean shores with loveliness, cuddle engagingly to the hillsides of Italy? Thinking of remodeling your home with an overcoat of stucco in cheerful hue, or building a new stucco home with a dash of vividness for variety's sake as well as for charm?

If so, you can take comfort in the fact that there are some practical sides to this stucco vogue for color. It isn't all merely an esthetic rage for brightness on the exterior as well as the interior of a home.

Applications of paint on stucco remove any possibility of the stucco becoming damp in rainy weather. Suitable paints fill in the pores, keeping out the soot and dirt of the varying seasons and making the stucco surfaces fairly smooth and resistive to dust attraction.

Again the hair line cracks which sometimes develop in stucco, not serious in themselves as they are merely surface cracks, can be prevented by moisture proof coatings of paint. Furthermore, it is claimed that stucco houses are made warmer and keep drier if they are painted on the surface.

Answers to Queries

A Clinker Brick House.

Dear Mrs. Bargelt: What about whitewashing a clinker brick house? Or would the natural color of the bricks look better? Also, is wall board satisfactory as a base for plastering? And is one coat of plastering enough?
R. D.

Answer: It is a matter of taste whether a clinker brick house is left its natural shade or whitewashed. Clinker brick is attractive in itself. Properly applied wall board on a good, substantial frame work makes a firm and satisfactory basis for plastering. Better put on two coats of plaster, one brown coat firm, and then the white or putty colored coat. Sometimes a single coat of plaster cracks. No use taking any chances.

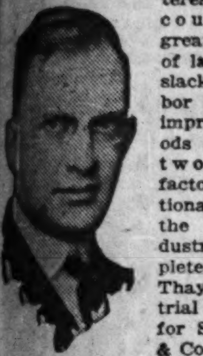
FINDS BUILDING WORKERS GAIN IN EFFICIENCY

Survey Shows Five Day Week Efforts Failing.

BY THOMAS WREN.



FRANK THAYER.
[Moffett Photo.]

Marked opposition to the proposed five day work week by the building interests of the country, and greater efficiency of labor due to a slackening of labor demand and improved methods are listed as two important factors in a national survey of the building industry just completed by Frank Thayer, an industrial statistician, for S. W. Straus & Co.

Building construction volume is recorded as being slightly below that of last year and report is made there is a noticeable lack of disputes between building trades unions and contracting interests.

Several important factors have developed during the return to normalcy of the nation's building industry, according to the Straus company survey. One of the most important of these, builders report, is that the law of competition has virtually forced building tradesmen to develop greater efficiency. Almost unanimously they agree that today building workers are more efficient than they have been since the national building boom started in 1922 and 1923.

Advance Is Slight.

Considering the tremendous number of building mechanics employed on construction in the United States, the demand for the five day week has made but slight inroads. Three trades stand out as pioneers for the short work week. These are the lathers, painters, and plasterers. A survey taken by a national association of building contractors shows the five day week as existing for the painters in 17 cities, the plasterers and lathers in 14 cities, the bricklayers in 7 cities, and the carpenters and plumbers in 4 cities.

Most of the trades in Chicago have contracts which do not expire until 1929 and it is seriously doubted that at the expiration of the contracts the trades will seek a 40 hour week, or one of five days.

Building workers in New York are well employed, especially on construction of office buildings, apartments, homes, and hotel buildings. Philadelphia's construction program is still reported in a slump along with that in Washington. At the present time Chicago has hit a slight slump in construction activities which is not very noticeable, but which may become more acute in the summer in so far as employment is concerned.

Conditions of Cities.

Building conditions in various cities are listed in the following summary:

St. Louis	Good	Rochester	Fair
Topeka	Fair	Detroit	Good
Kansas City	Fair	Grand Rapids	Fair
Wichita	Good	New Orleans	Fair
Des Moines	Poor	Houston	Good
St. Paul	Good	Beaumont	Fair
Minneapolis	Good	Jacksonville	Fair
Omaha	Good	Miami	Fair
Madison	Average	Denver	Fair

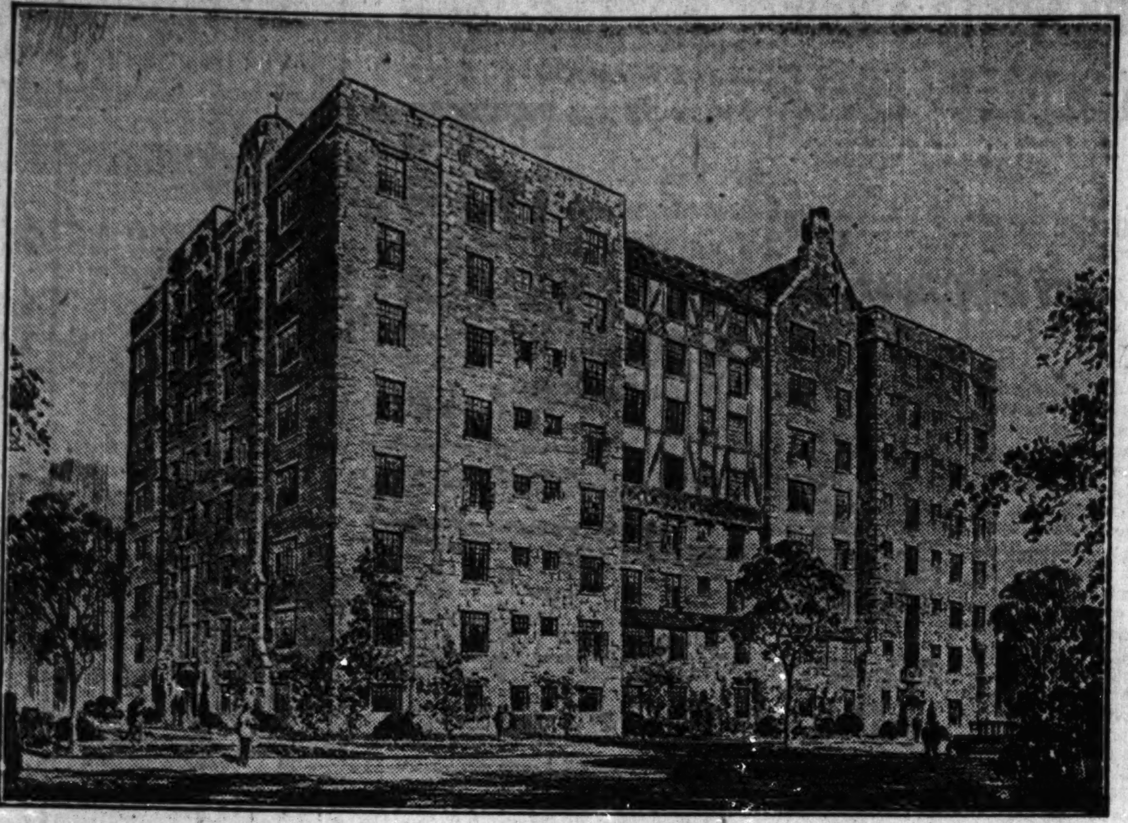
Along the Pacific coast builders seem optimistic that the building construction season of 1928 will be of sufficient volume to furnish employment for resident building tradesmen. These cities include Portland, Seattle, San Francisco, and Los Angeles.

Since the abolishment of the national board for jurisdictional awards last fall there have been but few jurisdictional disputes reported among the building trades. To date there has been no effort made on the part of the building trades department of the American Federation of Labor to call a meeting for the purpose of setting up a tribunal to replace the jurisdictional awards board, which was abolished by the last convention of the National Building Trades department.

QUARTER-IN-SLOT PHOTO STUDIO FOR BROADWAY

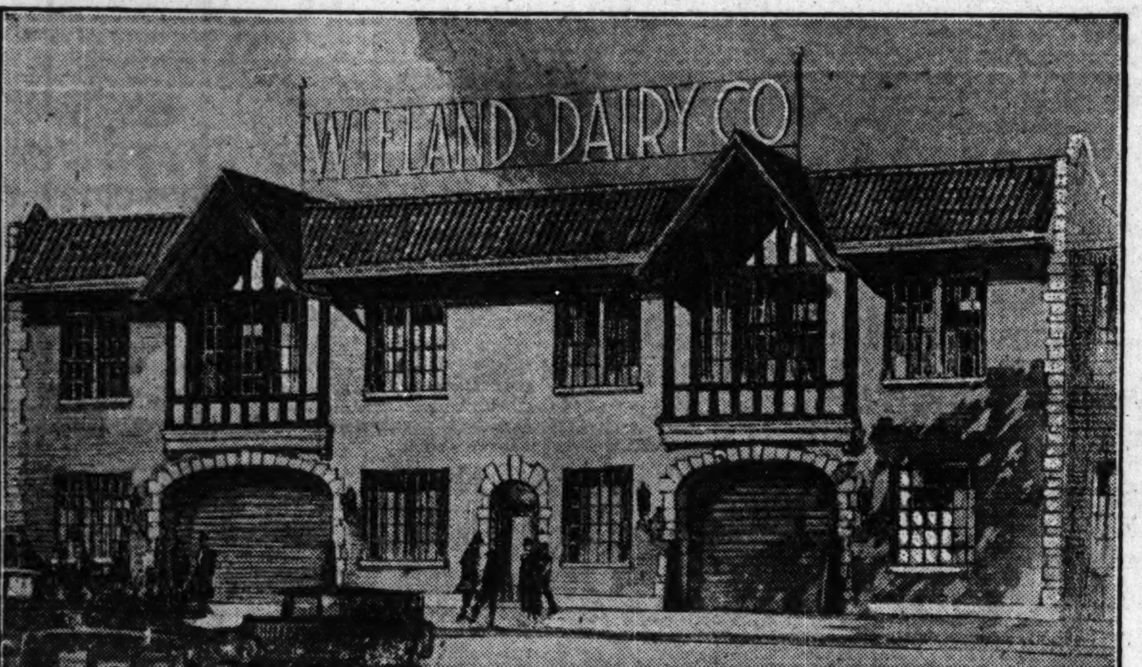
Uptown is to have a quarter-in-the-slot photograph institution of its own. The Middle West Photomaton company has leased from Tom and William Chamales space at 4806 Broadway, just north of Lawrence and adjoining the Uptown theater, at an undisclosed rental—but an amount said to constitute a record for the district. The establishment will occupy premises which were formerly used as the entrance and lobby of the Green Mill Gardens. Remodeling is now under way and the photo studio, as it's called, will be opened shortly. Earl J. F. Stein of the Bernhard Stein Realty company negotiated the lease.

NEW FLATS FOR UNIVERSITY SUBURB



This is the Raymond Park apartments, originally pictured in this section on Sept. 18, 1927. The above design, by Hall, Lawrence & Ratcliffe, is so different from the original that it is published again. The cost is placed at $1,250,000, financed by the Chicago Trust company. The site is at the northeast corner of Hinman and Grove, Evanston. The building will contain twenty-eight apartments of six, seven and eight rooms. It'll have a swimming pool, exercise room, handball court, garage facilities, etc. Hokansen & Jenks are renting agents. Herbert A. Durr is president and L. W. Johnson secretary and treasurer of the Hinman-Grove Building corporation.

A DAIRY BUILDING FOR OAK PARK



Teich & Sullivan designed the above structure which is being erected for the Wieland Dairy company at 1130-36 North boulevard, Oak Park. And because it's to be located in a suburb, where the population is trying to forget about their citified neighbor to the east, the owners are catering to their wishes by putting up a building which will resemble a bit of rural England. The front elevation is of tan face brick, with gables and half timber work, giving the English effect. William F. Kaiser drew this picture.

ERECT STEEL IN SKYSCRAPER IN SEVEN WEEKS

Break Records in New Loop Building.

R. H. Gage, secretary and engineer of the Gage Structural Steel company, which has its main office and works at 3123-41 South Hoyne avenue, writes THE TRIBUNE that a new record for speed has been established in the erection of the steel in the new "100 North La Salle street building," which originally was christened the Lawyers' building.

Mr. Gage states that it took only seven weeks, or thirty-six working days, as compared with ten weeks, a former record made on the apartment building at 5000 East End avenue. We'll let Mr. Gage tell the story by quoting his letter:

"A few weeks ago an article appeared in the real estate section of THE CHICAGO SUNDAY TRIBUNE with reference to the record speed with which the structural steel work for the 5000 East End avenue job, Chicago, was erected. It stated that the building was twenty-four to twenty-five stories high, and that from the time first deliveries of the steel work were made until the last piece was erected was ten weeks—a record.

"It occurred to us, therefore, that you and your readers would be interested to know that a new record was made on the erection of the structural steel work for the Lawyers building, now under course of construction at 100 North La Salle street.

"The first delivery of structural steel was made on Feb. 24, 1928, and final delivery on April 13, 1928, and the erection of same was completed shortly thereafter in the record time of seven weeks, or thirty-six working days. Three days were deducted for inclement weather, when the steel erectors could not work, and Saturdays were figured as half days, owing to the fact that the steel erectors quit at noon.

"According to the records of steel erection in this city this building was erected in less time than any building of equal tonnage and height in the city of Chicago. The building is a steel frame structure with 96 feet 6 inches frontage on North La Salle street, 91 feet 2 inches frontage on Washington street, approximately 290 feet high, with twenty-five stories and basement, requiring 1,958 tons of structural steel."

Mr. Gage states that the following are responsible for the construction of the building: owners, Lawyers' Building corporation; architects, Graven & Mayger; engineers, Lieberman & Hein; general contractor, the Lundoff-Bicknell company; structural steel contractor, Gage Structural Steel company; structural steel erector, Overland Construction company; structural steel sections rolled by the Inland Steel company.

LOOKING BACKWARD

To April 29, 1918; 10 Years Ago Today

Architects Fugard & Knapp have prepared plans for an eleven story apartment building at 229 Lake Shore drive which is expected to cost $750,000. It will contain eighteen apartments of ten rooms each and two of six rooms. It will be erected by the "229 Lake Shore Drive, Inc.," of which Henry H. Cooper is president and Theron K. Cooper is secretary. It has been intimidated that the federal government will raise no objections to its erection.

JOHN R. FUGARD.

Mrs. Grace H. Bodman, widow of Luther W. Bodman, sold to Mrs. Marion D. McCormick, wife of Chauncey McCormick, the Bodman residence at 1519 North State parkway, one of the handsomest homes in the district. The property is said to have been a gift to Mrs. McCormick by her father, Charles Deering. The house is a four story English basement brick and stone structure containing about sixteen rooms.

To April 29, 1908; 20 Years Ago Today

The residence at 66 Lake Shore drive, which was built by the late Prof. David Swing in 1890 and in which he made his home during the last few years of his life, was sold during the week by Mason B. Starring, president of the Northwestern Elevated railway, to Le Grand S. Burton for $50,000. The dwelling is 40 feet south of Goethe, is three stories high, and contains about 18 rooms. Mr. Starring, who was one of Prof. Swing's sons-in-law, purchased the property from the Swing heirs for about $35,000. It has been occupied for some time by the family of Peter Schuttler, wagon manufacturer.

MASON B. STARRING.

James M. Bard purchased from H. H. McCormick the four story brick building and leasehold interest at 3847-49 Cottage Grove avenue. A nominal consideration is given. Vacant Wilmette property valued at about $17,000 was given in exchange. Ernest H. Lyons was the broker.

To April 29, 1898; 30 Years Ago Today

Wilson & Marshall are preparing plans for the reconstruction of Hooley's theater. The theater will be made as nearly fireproof as possible by the change of arrangement. The improvements will cost between $60,000 and $70,000. The plans call for a new entrance and a new canopy over the street. The interior will be elaborately finished and decorated in the style of Louis XIV. A new proscenium arch is also contemplated.

HORATIO R. WILSON.

W. Carbys Zimmerman has completed plans for the residence which Louis F. Swift will build at Lake Forest. It will be two stories, basement, and attic high, and will front about 125 feet, with a depth of 60. It will be in the colonial style of architecture. The cost is estimated at $25,000. The interior will be divided into thirty rooms.

'13' DOESN'T MEAN ANYTHING TO S. C. DANFORTH

S. Chester Danforth, whose architectural renderings of Chicago buildings you often see in this section, is not superstitious. Thirteens mean nothing in his artistic life except that they're made up of the numerals one and three. Consequently when he found just what he wanted for new studio quarters on the 13th floor of the new Engineering building he promptly signed a lease.

S. CHESTER DANFORTH.
[Gibson Photo.]

He has moved to suite 1307, overlooking Wacker drive and the river, which has been designed in Tudor Gothic, with a cathedral window and with murals and a carved walnut ceiling. Mr. Danforth, who specializes in design as well as architectural rendering, has F. W. Siebert and Albert Ruggio as assistants.

BUYS PARCEL OF VACANT ACROSS FROM COLISEUM

H. A. Behrens, E. G. Timme and M. P. Cornelius have sold to an undisclosed purchaser, for whom the Bank of America took title as trustee, 75x175 feet of vacant at 1438-42 South Wabash avenue. This property is directly across the street from the Coliseum. There has been considerable speculation as to who eventually was to get it, following reports that control of the Coliseum was to pass into other hands. And the identity of the new owner remains a mystery, as does the price he paid for the property and his plans for it. A. Lepine was attorney for the sellers and Harry Silverstein acted for the buyer. Earl J. F. Stein of the Bernhard Stein Realty company was broker.

News of the Architects

William H. Pruyn Jr., who has been in the Peoples Gas building for the last fifteen years, has moved his architectural offices to more commodious quarters in the new Mather Tower on Wacker drive.

Conner & O'Connor will move their offices on May 1st from the 28th floor of Tribune Tower ten floors lower to suite 1829.

Carl Anis, affiliated with the architectural and construction business for sixteen years, announces that he has organized a company under his own name, at his present address, 30 North Dearborn, to render construction service, including architecture. It will specialize in building alterations, store fronts and equipment.

Model Residence to Be Open to Public All Summer

G. Earl Grindle announces that a residence at 4915 North Kilpatrick avenue will be open to the public from May 6 to Sept. 30. It's to be equipped with various labor saving devices and appliances operated by gas and electricity. The building is insulated.

Grocery Firm to Occupy Randolph and May Building

Construction will be completed shortly on the Market building at the southwest corner of Randolph and May streets, which will be occupied by the Arrow Wholesale Grocery company. The cost of the structure will be $100,000. Charles B. Zelnick is president of the grocery firm.

AUSTIN HIGH IS VICTOR IN HOME PLAN CONTEST

Young Architects Win 6 of 12 Prizes.

Austin High school swept the field in the "Plan Your Future Home" competition held among students of the architectural classes in the city's secondary schools by winning six of the twelve awards for first, second and third place and two of the twelve honorable mentions. Some 500 drawings, winners of individual school competitions, were hung in the central school administration offices at 460 South State street for final judging.

The drawings had no identification marks visible and the prize winners were selected by members of the educational committee, Chicago chapter, American Institute of Architects. The judges based their choice on originality of design, good building construction, quality of drawing technique and good lettering.

Philip Burness directs the Austin High school architectural classes.

The competition was in progress for ten weeks and embraced four divisions. Class A for a two story building group. Class B, bungalow. Class C, building details. Class D, architectural orders. Here are the winners:

To Encourage Students.

Albert G. Bauersfeld, director of technical work in high schools, in discussing the competition, said:

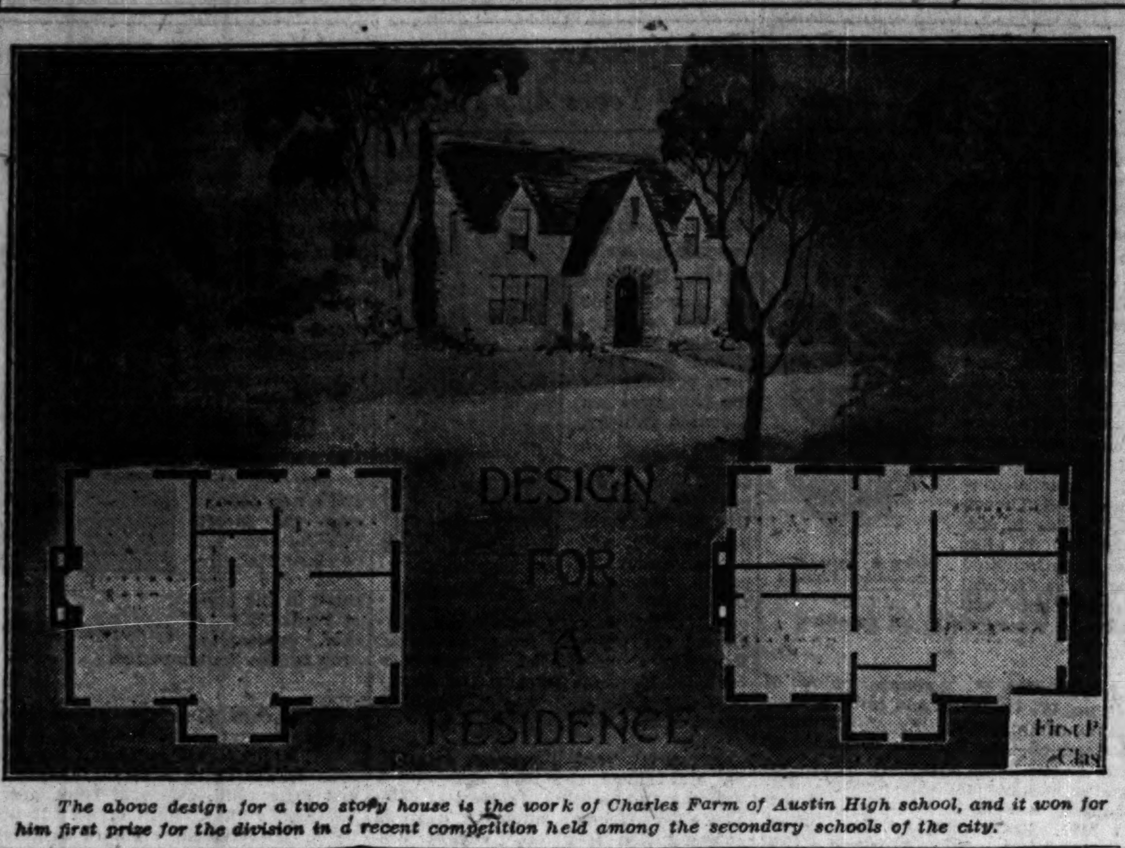
"We placed these project problems before the pupils taking architectural drawing as a sort of challenge to bring out the best qualities of originality and good workmanship in each boy. Instead of the daily task of grinding out the sequential architectural plates, each pupil was encouraged to design a house that would satisfy the needs of his own family. Visions of castles in Spain were postponed for the more practical job of planning a modest house in the environs of Chicago.

"This project required that the boy do his own thinking and see the job through from the beginning to the end without the aid of his teacher to show him the way step by step. These embryo architects had to draw on their past experiences and training, they consulted references, they submitted preliminary sketches, and they talked things over at school and at home."

William J. Bogan, assistant superintendent of schools, had an enthusiastic word for the results of the competition.

The various designs now are hanging in the corridors of the fourth and seventh floors of the board of education building and are open to the public.

WORK OF HIGH SCHOOL STUDENT



The above design for a two story house is the work of Charles Farm of Austin High school, and it won for him first prize for the division in a recent competition held among the secondary schools of the city.

OLD LOG CABIN NEAR HERE RAZED FOR SUBDIVISION

Another souvenir of Chicago's pioneer days passes into a subdivision with the recent purchase by Krenn & Dato, Inc., from the heirs of Peter Kirscht of thirty-six acres at the southwest corner of Church street and Laramie avenue, Niles Center, for an undisclosed consideration.

PETER KIRSCHT.

Kirscht was one of the original settlers in the district, for he bought the property in 1864 from Sam Robinson for $30 an acre. Robinson got it by patent from the United States government.

Motorists driving west on Church street, have long been familiar with the little frame house on the property, but few of them knew that behind the clapboard facing was an old log cabin of the type which Abraham Lincoln helped to build. Square hand hewn oak timbers constituted the cabin and the marks made by Kirscht's axe were still visible when wreckers began tearing down the old structure the other day.

The property was made available for purchase only recently after the estate had been settled in the probate court. Krenn & Dato will subdivide it immediately and put it on the market under the name of Suffield terrace. Joseph P. Immel handled the legal details for the sellers in the sale of the land.

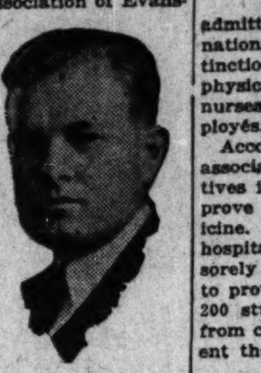
Edgar N. Greenebaum to Be Speaker at Realty Class

Edgar N. Greenebaum will address the Chicago real estate board's class in real estate education at the Central Y. M. C. A. next Tuesday evening on "How Real Estate Transactions are Financed."

PLAN HOSPITAL FOR NORTH SHORE COLORED PEOPLE

To Be Erected on Foster and Gray Corner.

Plans are being pushed by the Community Hospital Association of Evanston for the erection shortly of an institution to care for the sick among the colored population of the north shore and at the same time to provide a medical school where colored doctors and nurses may be trained. Evanston now has about 10,000 colored people in its population.



CLYDE D. FOSTER.
[E. L. Ray Photo.]

The hospital is to put up on a 100x170 site at the northwest corner of Foster street and Gray avenue on property purchased some time ago by the association. No architect has yet been selected, but the plans are progressing favorably.

It is stated that there are not more than ten institutions in the whole country approved as fit places for the training of colored internes, and in view of this situation the formation of the Evanston Hospital association, composed of several of the leading citizens of the university suburb, will have special significance.

Will Serve All.

While the colored people of Evanston will be the principal beneficiaries of the institution, it is not proposed to distinguish between persons seeking admittance because of race, religion or nationality. Nor will there be any distinction drawn as to officers, attending physicians or surgeons, internes, nurses or other attendants or employés.

According to the American Hospital association, there are two main motives in the present movement to improve conditions in this field of medicine. The first is to provide proper hospital facilities for a class of people sorely in need of them. The second is to provide interneships for the 150 to 200 students that graduate annually from colored medical schools. At present there are only forty available.

Here Are Officers.

Officers of the organizations are: Clyde D. Foster, president, who is vice president of the real estate firm of Quinlan & Tyson; Dr. W. L. Noble and Adam P. Perry, vice presidents; Peter N. Jans, secretary; Horace S. Graves, assistant secretary, and Mrs. N. C. Knight.

There are fifteen members on the board of directors, of whom eight are white and seven are colored. Those whose terms expire in 1929 are: Clyde D. Foster, W. L. Noble, Jane James, Charles S. Wallace, and William H. Dixon; in 1930, Peter N. Jans, John F. Hahn, Mrs. R. D. Hadley, D. W. Richardson, and Sam J. Cannon; in 1931, Mrs. Martha Twiggs, Mrs. R. P. Downs, Adam P. Perry, Mrs. N. C. Knight, and Russell Whitman.

Flexibility Efficiency Thickness!

–the three essentials of true insulation

REMEMBER these simple facts when you select insulation: The first requisite of TRUE insulation is still air—dense materials have the least insulating efficiency. Balsam-Wool is a flexible blanket, 92% still air. Unlike rigid materials, it tucks in to every crack and crevice—the second factor in TRUE insulation. And it is sold a full inch thick. Thin materials cannot provide adequate insulation. Read what Balsam-Wool will do for you.

TRUE insulation adds but a few dollars to your building cost

TRUE insulation is always added to walls and roofs after building them according to the established practice. It does not—and should not—weaken the structure. If sturdiness is sacrificed for insulation, you will pay a high price for it.

Balsam-Wool does not save lumber. But it nearly saves its first cost by reducing heating equipment and the number and size of radiators required. In many instances these original savings have cut the original cost of Balsam-Wool to practically nothing.

The sure way to cut 30% to 50% off your heating expense

A half inch of Balsam-Wool throughout a house will make it easier to heat. But a full inch will save from 30% to 50% annually on fuel. Compare these savings with the investment and it will be found that Balsam-Wool pays from 15% to 30% dividends on your investment in it. This is TRUE insulation and probably the soundest economic development in house construction in the past century.

TRUE insulation means true comfort

What is more to be desired than cozy winter comfort—comfort that can come only from a house that is uniform in temperature throughout—comfort that is never interrupted by cold floors and drafts? And on hot summer nights, what is more appreciated than sleeping quarters in which you can really sleep in comfort? These are the plus benefits of TRUE insulation—and cannot be measured in dollars and cents.

Balsam-Wool protects your investment

Look ahead when you build. Ask yourself this question: What will my house be worth in 5 years, 10 years, 20 years? TRUE insulation is here to stay. Today, the house that isn't insulated properly is out of date before it is built. It is far better to forego some less important item of equipment—that can be added later—than to mark your house forever as an uninsulated house.

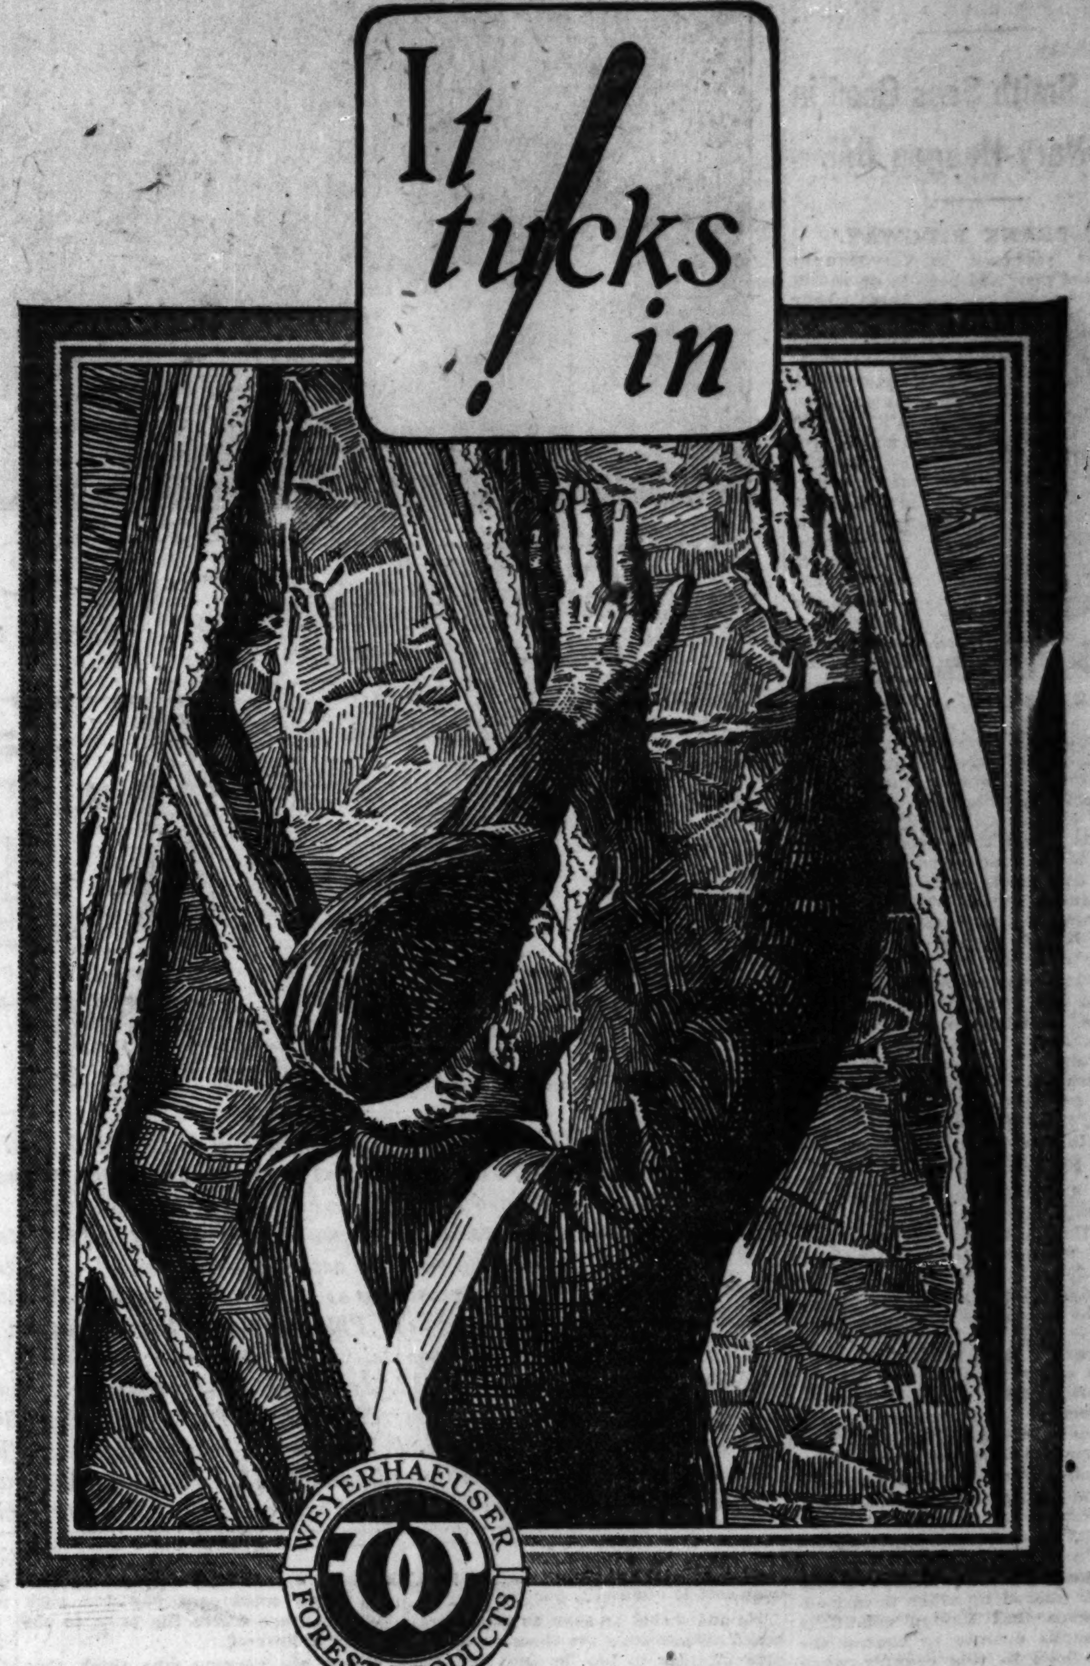
Guaranteed by Weyerhaeuser

Balsam-Wool is a Weyerhaeuser product. Every roll of it is backed by the Weyerhaeuser guarantee which, all dealers know, is full assurance of TRUE insulation and permanent satisfaction to users.

FREE ESTIMATE for owners of old houses

Balsam-Wool is the answer to the question of insulating the attics in old houses. Being flexible it is easily taken into old attics through the smallest opening. Simply tuck strips of this thick, flexible insulating blanket between the ceiling joists—if the attic is not floored. Or tuck them between each roof rafter if the attic is floored.

The greatest heat losses in any house occur through the attic and roof. A few dollars invested in Balsam-Wool should save you several tons of coal every winter. Any dealer listed below will gladly furnish you an estimate of the cost—and give you full instructions for applying Balsam-Wool.



Why these dealers selected Balsam-Wool as the right insulation for you

These experienced judges of insulation urge you to use Balsam-Wool because it is a flexible insulating blanket. Because it is added to walls and roofs without changing basic construction in the slightest. Because TRUE insulation can't be substituted for anything. Balsam-Wool is TRUE insulation because it is easily tucked into every crack and crevice—the only way to make a house heat-tight.

They recommend Balsam-Wool because it is the practical equivalent of sheep's wool in insulating efficiency. Tests show that as a non-conductor of heat, one inch of Balsam-Wool is equal to 180 layers of building paper, 25 inches of plaster, 39 inches of stucco, 25 inches of brick.

They urge its use—because it is the only blanket form of building insulation that is sold a full inch as well as a half inch thick. And because it is Windproof, Waterproof, Sanitary, Fire-resistant and Permanent.

ASK THESE DEALERS:

Through long experience these dealers know building materials and insulating materials. They are now prepared to furnish Balsam-Wool and helpful information relative to its cost and use. It will pay you to consult them.

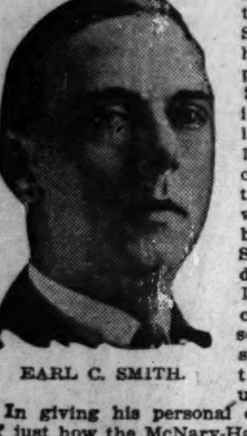
EXPERT SHOWS HOW FARM PLAN WOULD OPERATE

E. C. Smith Sees Good in McNary-Haugen Bill.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

If the proposed McNary-Haugen farm relief plan had been in operation last year farmers of the United States would have made a profit of $52,800,000 instead of losing $57,159,832, according to the figures worked out by Earl C. Smith, president of the Illinois Agricultural association and supporter of the measure.



EARL C. SMITH.

In giving his personal explanation of just how the McNary-Haugen farm relief plan would work in the handling of this country's hogs Mr. Smith uses the 1927 crop as an example. According to his figures there were 42,633,460 hogs sold on the federal inspected central live stock markets last year in the United States. They averaged approximately 200 pounds or a total of 8,726,692,000 pounds. Nine and a half per cent of this great herd of hogs was surplus above domestic consumption and was exported to foreign countries. The balance was consumed at home.

By quarters he finds that the hogs were marketed as follows: First quarter, 27¼ per cent; second quarter, 23¾ per cent; third quarter, 21¼ per cent; and fourth quarter, 27¾ per cent.

Figures Prove Loss.

From carefully kept records Mr. Smith estimates, conservatively, he thinks, that the cost of production of hogs marketed the first quarter was $11.20 a hundred pounds, while the average price paid the farmer was $11.71. In the second quarter the cost was $10.60 with the price received at an average of $9.73. The third quarter costs amounted to $10.85 and the selling price $9.58. The fourth quarter production costs were $10.25, and the return averaged $9.27.

It is upon this basis that Mr. Smith calculated that the farmers lost $57,159,832 on last year's hogs marketed.

As a farmer and a head of the Illinois State Farm Bureau organization, with offices at 608 South Dearborn street, Chicago, Mr. Smith, whose opinion is shared by other farm leaders, believes that foreign conditions and demands operate to control the price of hogs in this country when surpluses are produced. He feels certain that under honest and sympathetic administration the proposed McNary-Haugen plan offers the way to have this loss on hogs turned into a comfortable profit for the growers, and without seriously affecting the price of pork to the American consumer.

Surplus Needs Watching.

Mr. Smith's analysis shows that it is the price paid for the surplus of hogs produced and exported over and above the domestic need that must be watched. He also finds that a surplus of hogs is a common thing.

"We want the 9½ per cent surplus of hogs controlled so that it will not affect unfavorably the price of all the hogs produced in this country," he said. "We produce 60 per cent of the world's pork."

He explained that according to the relief plan there would be a federal farm board and one of its duties would be to know how much of a surplus of hogs there is coming from the farm. It would be the board's duty to arrive at a production cost figure, including the cost of breeding and feeding as well as transporting and central market charges—all the costs up to the processor's door.

Board Would Guarantee Returns.

In his example of the operation of the McNary-Haugen plan Mr. Smith assumes that this cost would be approximately $11 a hundred pounds [this is an arbitrary figure]. To help keep farmers from losing money the federal board would contract with processors for enough hogs to maintain a minimum level of prices based on the production cost. The board would guarantee a return to the processor, covering the $11 production cost, the processor's turnover cost and the cost of storing, explained Mr. Smith, who finds that according to a big packing house's records the turnover cost is about 1¾ per cent.

He added that as soon as the federal board recognizes that there is a surplus of hogs to handle and that the surplus must be held under contract with the processor it will order the invoking of an equalization fee on all hogs received at points of slaughter. This money will be used to cover the losses sustained in handling the surplus.

Mr. Smith said that if there had been an equalization fee of fifteen cents a hundred on all hogs received at the central markets last year it would have aggregated $13,090,038. This would have taken care of a loss of $1.55 a hundred on all of the surplus exported.

Domestic Price Would Be Controlled.

Going back to his original assumption that the world market price sets the domestic price, Mr. Smith said that if the relief plan had been operating last year the world market would have been the same, while the domestic price would have been $1.55 a hundred higher on all hogs sold for domestic consumption, which would have amounted to $110,000,000. There would have been a profit of $52,800,000 instead of a loss of $57,159,832.

He emphasized the fact that under the McNary-Haugen bill plan the government does not actually buy the product, but merely contracts for the withholding of a portion to keep a small surplus from unduly influencing the price of hogs sold for consumption in this country.

Mr. Smith also emphasized that the plan is for the stabilization of the market, which he thinks would benefit both the farmer and the ultimate consumer in the end. Price advances to the producer are more quickly reflected in the price consumers pay for pork than they are where the price to the farmer is lowered.

There are persons who think that the advance in price which might be brought about through the operation of the proposed McNary-Haugen plan would not in real practice result in the consumer fully paying the additional cost. But Mr. Smith said that even if the consumer had been asked to pay the advance in price of $110,000,000, shown in his example, the nonfarm producing population would have been out not more than $1.30 per capita last year.

Supporters of the measure do not expect to organize a coöperative to operate the McNary-Haugen measure, but intend to use the present available processing machinery.

Mr. Smith does not think the plan of advancing prices would unduly stimulate the production of hogs.

Hundreds in Garden Contest and There's Room for More

Hundreds have entered THE TRIBUNE's 1928 home flower garden contest and are waiting for summer to come. Tons of dirt will be turned and pound upon pound of seeds will be poured into the ground in the contest area. Fortunately the backward season has favored the tardy prospective gardeners who will have time to get an even start with all the other contestants.

With the handicap of a late season beginners may find it advisable to handle only a comparatively small plot. A big garden is not necessary in this competition.

Plot Need Be Only 10x20 Feet.

A plot of flowers only 10 by 20 feet, the equivalent of 200 square feet in any shape, stands an equal chance to win a share of the $6,000 offered for the best gardens within a radius of approximately forty miles of Tribune Tower.

There is room for more contestants. No one will be barred from this contest provided he meets the requirements outlined in the rules, no matter how many may enter before the closing date, May 21. Plenty of time is left for any grower in this territory to start a garden and have it ready for the judging in midsummer. Every plot entered will be visited by the judges regardless of its location.

All Entrants Are Confident.

Practically all the letters that accompany the gardeners' entry coupons indicate that every contestant is confident he will win. They have no fear of competition.

Ninety-nine cash prizes will be given in the three divisions — north, west, south. There will be thirty-three awards in each division. The prizes to be offered in each of the three districts are:

First prize	$ 500
Second prize	275
Third prize	200
Fourth prize	150
Fifth prize	100
Sixth prize	75
Seventh prize	50
Eighth to thirty-third prizes, inclusive, each $25	650
Total	$2,000

RULES.

1. The Tribune will pay $6,000 in cash for the ninety-nine best home flower gardens in the Chicago area.

2. The contest will be limited to gardens located on land on which the contesting gardener lives and in the territory within a radius of approximately forty miles from The Tribune Tower.

3. The garden may be any size, shape, style, or type if it contains an area of at least 200 square feet or the equivalent of a plot 20x10 feet devoted exclusively to flowers, shrubs, trees, and other ornamental plants, with accessory structures, if any, such as walks, trellises, etc. Vegetables may not be grown within this area.

4. The contest area is divided into three divisions. A list of thirty-three prizes will be awarded in each division. Each contestant should indicate on the entry coupon the division in which he lives—north, west or south.

5. Estate gardens, commercial gardens, and all other forms of gardening conducted or maintained by persons who earn their living in whole or in part by gardening or landscape architecture, are barred. The contest is open only to amateur home gardens designed and maintained by the entrants themselves, without paid assistance from any one other than unskilled labor.

6. Winners of the grand prize and the fourteen first division prizes in The Tribune's 1927 Flower Garden contest are not eligible for this competition.

7. Any person in the prescribed area who complies with the above requirements may compete for the cash prizes, except employes of The Tribune and their families.

8. All entries must be in The Tribune office bearing a postmark not later than Monday, May 21, 1928.

9. The exact judging dates, which will be announced later in The Tribune, will depend on the season.

10. Each garden will be judged upon the merits as a whole—not upon any particular plant or flower or other outstanding feature. Design, color harmony, balance, appropriateness of plants, originality, and neatness are all points to be taken into consideration by the judges.

11. The only requirement in entering the contest is to fill out the coupon properly and mail it direct to the Garden Contest Editor, Chicago Tribune, Chicago, Ill. Your garden then will be visited at the proper time by the judges. The coupon must show the contestant's name in full, address, and the division—north, south, or west—of the city and suburbs in which he lives. The publishers of The Tribune will not be responsible for loss, delay, or nondelivery of coupons.

Poultry Man Urges the Prompt Delivery of Eggs

Produce market men are becoming anxious over the effect the backward spring weather will later have on the poultry industry. Harrison F. Jones, executive of the National Poultry, Butter and Egg association, says that his reports indicate that farmers have been greatly delayed with their field work in many sections and that as a result it is feared that they will devote their entire time and attention to their general farming work and will have no time to give to poultry flocks and to the marketing of their eggs.

Mr. Jones warns farmers that if, by reason of conditions, the marketing of eggs is neglected, then the quality of the eggs will greatly deteriorate and will not command the price that would otherwise be paid.

In his warning Mr. Jones added that many of the eggs which will be produced during the balance of the month of April, during the entire month of May, and part of the month of June must, of necessity, be stored in cold storage warehouses because it is predicted they will come in such volume that surpluses, over immediate consumptive demand, will be created.

"If farmers delay marketing their eggs the eggs will become stale and will greatly shrink during this delay; further shrinkage will follow every day until they reach the consumer's table. Shrunken and stale eggs, according to the standards promulgated by the federal government, do not grade as number ones and because of this dealers who buy from farmers cannot pay top prices," he said.

"Quality and price always induce consumers to eat more eggs. Of these two elements quality has been the greater inducement. To promote egg satisfaction all along the line farmers are urged to market their eggs at least twice a week during the immediate present and, as the weather becomes warmer, at least three times a week," advises Mr. Jones.

NEW CHURCHILL BUDGET BOOSTS LONDON STOCKS

BY SIDNEY CAVE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

[Copyright: 1928: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, April 28.—Chancellor Winston Churchill's fourth budget created a good impression in London financial circles. The consensus regarded it as the best of the post-war budgets, calculated to give fresh impetus to the upward movements in industrials. There were record prices established during the increased burst of activity following his four hour speech on Wednesday.

The new budget was especially designed to increase confidence abroad, especially in America, where British gilt edged securities now increasingly are appealing to influential finance houses and investors.

Expect British Bond Advance.

London believes a considerably extended demand is probable, with a further steady appreciation in values of British government bonds, especially as the stage now is well set for fresh conversion operations. Already the budget's rating reforms are promising future benefits to railroads and the heavy industries, enabling them better to meet foreign competition, and have stimulated rail stocks and iron and steel shares.

Match shares will derive some benefit from the extra duty on mechanical lighters. The effect of the gasoline tax, because it was freely anticipated, has been discounted.

Altogether, as far as financial interests are concerned, the generally satisfactory budget is sending up Mr. Churchill's political stock many points.

Industrial Shares Boom.

Wild enthusiasm continues to reign in the industrial section of the stock markets, where the skyrocket movement still is a daily feature. Violent fluctuations notably occurred in those specialties in which American and continental operators recently have taken keen interest. The circulation of the mere rumor of an intention to "list" a particular share on American exchanges nowadays is an effective factor in engineering a bullish movement. Strong American demand was reflected this week in the remarkable rise in shares such as Columbia Graphophones, Mond Nickels, and British and American Celanese.

Undoubtedly American participation in many British leading industrials fanned the flame of speculation here. Prices continue to leap upward, accompanied by all sorts of rumors, and actual merit count for little among the gamblers. The boom is bringing in its train many doubtful promotions.

The gilt edged market presented an irregular appearance this week. The funding loan suffered some reaction from its exceptional strength of last week, British holders showing an increasing tendency to sell around 91 in order to buy 4 per cent Consolidateds, which still are quoted around 87¾.

Foreign Bonds Active.

Foreign government bonds were fairly active. French currency loans picked up on the progress of the elections, both the 6 per cents and 4 per cents gaining a half. European loans were well favored, especially the Austrian and Hamburg loans, but the Greek issues were adversely affected by news of the earthquakes.

Mexican loans show quiet strength here, interesting reports being current that a group of American bankers will furnish large loans to the Mexican government, a good portion of which will be utilized to consolidate the existing external debt. Good buying was noticeable in the Amsterdam account. Peruvian corporation issues were strong again on influential market tips.

Home rails showed greater activity than they have for some time past, aided by the budget proposals and the belief that the gasoline tax will have the effect of raising the cost of motor transportation sufficiently to divert traffic to the railroads.

Prices on iron, coal and steel shares lifted sharply all around, Guest Keens, German Longs, and Pawell Dufferins being the most prominent.

Paris Market Is Higher.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, April 28.—Favorable conditions on the Paris bourse were brought about Monday by the first ballot of the elections. These conditions prevailed during the week, despite indications in the last couple of days that the left parties are preparing to stage a comeback on the second vote tomorrow.

American Firms Arrange for Loans to Polish Towns

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WARSAW, April 28.—Representatives of the Bankers Trust company of New York and other American banks investigating business conditions in Poland have agreed to grant loans to Polish towns. For Lodz, a milling center, a loan of $5,000,000 will be floated in America. Cracow is promised $4,000,000; Lemberg, $5,000,000, and Upper Silesian Industry, $5,000,000. Col. Logan, representative of Dillon, Read & Co., arrived in Warsaw this morning to discuss an amalgamation of his firm's first Polish loan with the new railroad loan for which Poland is negotiating with America.

Meat Packers Less Active in March Than in February

Production at United States slaughtering establishments decreased in March from the preceding month, but increased over totals for a year ago, said a report of the Federal Reserve bank of Chicago yesterday. Employment showed recessions of 7.1 per cent in number of employes, 7.8 per cent in hours worked, and 6.1 per cent in value compared with February figures.

16 German Cotton Spinners Here; Visit Board of Trade

Sixteen German cotton spinners making a study of cotton growing, marketing and spinning, visited the Chicago Board of Trade yesterday morning. They spent about half an hour watching operations in cotton and grains. They were guests at a luncheon given at the Union League club by President Samuel P. Arnot and other officials of the board of trade.

Two Bankers Point to Signs of Prosperity

BY O. A. MATHER.

Moderate optimism over the business and financial outlook was expressed yesterday by two well known financiers, George M. Reynolds, chairman of the Continental National Bank and Trust company, and Otto H. Kahn of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., New York. Mr. Reynolds returned from a winter vacation in California and Mr. Kahn made a day's visit to Chicago.

"I find business in good condition and the general situation seems to be satisfactory," Mr. Reynolds said. "My officers say that reports coming to the bank indicate a good volume of business throughout the middle west, with profits quite substantial, although not satisfactory in all cases.

Finds California Complaining.

"In California business conditions are somewhat spotty. There is considerable complaint in San Francisco and Los Angeles. But southern California has benefited from the greatest tourist crop in its history and this has made up for lack of activity in other lines.

"As to the financial and security markets, the recent action of the federal reserve board and the banks in increasing rediscount rates and the firming up of money rates has fully borne out the contentions of the directors of the Chicago federal reserve bank when they declined to reduce the rediscount rate voluntarily last autumn. We contended lower rates would afford undue encouragement to speculation. Now the rate is back to the level we sought to retain."

U. S. Investor Nation—Kahn.

One important reason for activity in the securities markets is the fact that Americans have become a nation of investors, Mr. Kahn said. He regarded the advance in federal reserve rediscount rates as a wise cautionary signal but not a danger sign.

"Partly because of the Liberty loan drives and partly because of efficiency of security distribution there has been an enormous increase in the investing community," he said. "Some of this is speculative, but in spite of speculation a larger number of people than ever before are sharing the profits of great industrial enterprises. This is socially desirable. It gives the nation a common interest in its own means of production.

"No Reason for Alarm."

"Wide interest in the securities markets has not been a bad thing as far as it has effected a wider distribution of the fruits of industry. In the long run the market is likely to overrun the mark, but I see no reason to be an alarmist or to think that we are headed for a big smash.

"The underlying reasons for the demand for securities go much further than mere speculation. There is ample wealth here to sustain a great forward movement and the people have learned to invest. Wealth is not made to sustain a riot of speculation. We have not such a condition now, and with reasonable restraint will not have. It would be a grave misfortune to allow anything to happen to disturb the trend of wider security distribution."

CHICAGO BANK STOCKS SLIGHTLY LOWER AS INDUSTRIALS RISE

Slight recessions from the highest levels have occurred in many of the leading bank shares following the strongest bank stock market in years.

Illinois Merchants was wanted at 925, with offerings at 930, while last week it changed hands around 930. First National and Foreman National were 20 points easier, the former at 847 to 852, and the latter at 825 to 830; while Peoples Trust and Savings added another 20 points to its recent advance, being traded in between 680 and 685. Offerings at 840 for Union Trust failed to interest prospective buyers. Chicago Trust also was dull at 465 to 467. A good demand was noted in Continental National Bank and Trust, sales being recorded between 553 and 558.

Interest seems to have lagged in National Bank of the Republic, sales were reported between 525 and 535. Stock was offered at the latter figure with 530 the best bid. Union Bank of Chicago was pushed up 30 points to 490 bid, offered at 500. Central Trust Company of Illinois was 5 points higher at 455 to 460.

Enthusiasm was evidenced in Unit Corporation and Noblitt Sparks Industries, prior to their listing on the Chicago Exchange Thursday. Transactions were reported in Unit between 30½ and 33; while Noblitt advanced from low sales at 31¼ to 33. Chicago Daily News common was in demand and higher at 40¾ to 41½; the preferred was unchanged at 41 to 42. Interest was revived in American Furniture Mart common, stock being wanted at 4, but sellers did not appear interested. On a large volume of trade Bendix "B" rose from 63 to high sales at 83, up 20. One fifty-eight was again bid for Dolese & Shepard. There were a few reported trades in Elgin National Watch between 59½ and 60.

The Federal Electric issues continue in good demand—the common added another 4 points to its recent gain in selling at 32; while the preferred at 88 showed a 4 point improvement. Godchaux Sugar first preferred and Dayon Rubber units were outstanding features in the miscellaneous group, the former advanced 10 points to sales at 50, but relinquished a portion of its gain at 44 to 46, and the Units showed a 25 point advance at 120 bid, offered at 130.

New York, April 28.—[Special.]—In the second largest Saturday on record, prices in many sections of the stock exchange list were whirled forward in boisterous fashion. Trading was so heavy that the ticker fell as much as 56 minutes behind. The Standard Oil issues, especially the Standards of New York and New Jersey, were the day's real leaders, and were taken in impressive style, as were the New York transit stocks, and a few of the coppers.

Under the strength of these movements there was considerable amount of profit taking. General Motors, U. S. Steel, Radio corporation, the former market leaders, were under pressure, Motors and Steel shedding more than a point each, but Radio managed to close with a net gain of ½ point.

Rise in Oils a Surprise.

Although the oil shares have been strong and active for some days, the sharp runup of the group today excited much comment. Wall street did not know exactly what was behind the rise, beyond the fact that the oil industry has shown recently unmistakable signs of recovery.

The Standard of New York's remarkable gain of 4⅝ points was based to some extent on the expectation of a favorable annual report to be issued within a week or so. Atlantic Refining, Standard of New Jersey, Marland, Standard of Indiana, Creole, Standard of California, and Louisiana Oil showed gains in uncommonly active trading. The Standard group gave the best performance of some weeks.

Coppers and Tobacco Issues Rise.

Among the copper shares, Anaconda rose to a new high for the present movement and closed at 72½ up 1⅛ points. Greene Cananea Copper, after climbing to 122½, dropped back in late trading to close at 119, off three points on the day.

The independent motors were firm. Hupp had a net advance of ⅜ of a point, Hudson closed unchanged from yesterday, and Chrysler was off ¼ of a point at the close. Tobacco stocks rallied sharply. Tobacco Products rose several points, but closed with only a fractional net gain. American Tobacco, Liggett and Myers, and Lorillard experienced smart rallies.

U. S. INDUSTRIES ARE HIT BY RULE OF FRENCH COURT

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, April 28.—American business in France was given a jolt this week when the fourth chamber of the court of appeals set a dangerous precedent by holding the patents of an accounting and tabulating machine company of New York, which were registered in France, invalid, because the company manufactured no machines in this country.

The American concern brought suit against a French corporation controlled by powerful French and English financial interests, which apparently was manufacturing machines after the so-called "Powers" patents, of which the New York company is the holder.

The court of appeals upheld the decision of the lower court that the patents were invalid as long as the Americans let them lie idle in France, and awarded the French concern damages for the loss of business resulting from the American injunction.

Business Failures Fewer; Liabilities Also Decline

New York, April 28.—There is an improvement in the insolvency record this week, failures in the United States numbering 410. This is 64 below the number reported to R. G. Dun & Co. last week, is 8 less than the total two weeks ago, and is 68 under the 478 defaults of a year ago. Fewer insolvencies occurred this week than last week in each geographical section, while there are decreases in the east, the south, and on the Pacific coast in comparison with the returns for the same week of 1927. With the reduced number of failures, those involving more than $5,000 of liabilities in each instance fell to 230 this week, from 280 last week. The number of such defaults a year ago was 261.

German Dye Trust Reports Improvement in Industry

Buy Securities Through Known Reputable Houses Only.

The failure of Newbery & Co., an alleged bucket shop which was forced into bankruptcy last week, should serve as a warning to investors never to purchase securities through a house whose reputation is unknown to them.

This concern, which engaged in a stock and bond business at 111 West Jackson boulevard, Chicago, went under with liabilities that are expected to exceed $1,000,000, and with only a few thousand dollars of assets.

In its dealings with the public it had all the earmarks of the bucket shop.

It used long distance telephone calls and telegrams in its efforts to sell stocks by high pressure methods.

It was a member of no stock exchange and yet was urging prospective customers to buy listed stocks on margin.

During the last year or so we have received numerous letters inquiring about this concern.

We warned the writers against it—told them that its methods were those of the bucket shop and advised against having any dealings with any company that used such methods unsolicited.

The week before its bankruptcy its brokerage license was revoked by Secretary of State Louis L. Emmerson after hearings in which evidence was produced to sustain charges that the concern was guilty of illegal practices.

Newbery & Co. sought its customers largely in small towns and rural districts. Such houses usually prefer to operate at a distance. It might prove embarrassing to have their customers walk in on them.

It is probable that over a thousand creditors of the concern now face loss.

Investors who thought they had good profits available will probably find that they had no investment at all.

There are so many reputable brokerage and investment houses that it is never necessary to deal with those of doubtful or unknown reputation.

Those who want to purchase listed stocks on margin should always deal with firms that are members of the principal stock exchanges.

Such houses are presumably reputable or they could not qualify for membership in the exchanges.

They must deal ethically or their membership would be withdrawn.

They can conduct a profitable business through buying and selling listed securities for their customers' accounts. That is their business.

The bucket shop cannot and does not intend to make money this way. It has to buy and sell the securities through a house that is a member of the stock exchange and must pay the regular commission to that house.

The bucket shop keeps the money put up by the investor as margin and either does not buy the stock for him at all, or, if it does (to keep its records in order) it sells the same amount of the same stock at once on its own account, so that the customer is sold out the same day he buys and the stock which he thinks he is carrying is not being held for him at all.

Reputable brokerage houses will not resort to high pressure salesmanship over the telephone or telegraph wires to strangers.

We urge our readers to look with suspicion on any house that uses such methods and also, for their own protection, to confine their marginal purchases of securities to houses that are members of the principal stock exchanges.

CHICAGO STOCKS SOAR IN WEEK'S FINAL SESSION

Chicago stocks ended one of the largest weeks in the history of the exchange yesterday with a strong and active market.

Middle West Utilities led the trading with a 5 point jump to 152. North American Car, for years a dormant issue, joined the active group and sold up 3⅝ to 43. The movement was attributed to window dressing for a forthcoming issue of preferred stock. Neve Drug, listed a little over a month ago, also took wings and sold up 3½.

Profit Taking in Marvel.

Auburn Automobile gained 2 points and Bendix was also 2 points higher. Galesburg-Coulter Disc advanced a point, and fractional gains were registered by Meadows Manufacturing, Grigsby-Grunow, and Standard Dredging. With the "news out," Marvel Carburetor and Borg & Beck, which soared on the previous day in connection with the merger reports of the two companies with a Rockford concern, sold off. Borg & Beck was down 3 points and Marvel eased 2½.

The usual week-end profit taking made no inroads on Baxter Laundries A, which closed unchanged at 31½ on good buying attributed to plans for extraordinary enlargement of the company's activities in connection with the proposed acquisition of a large string of additional laundries.

Public Service Up 9.

On small sales Public Service par followed the strength of other Insull issues and sold up 9 points to 180, while the no par advanced 5 points to the same price. Eddy Paper was traded in moderately for the first time in several months and advanced 1¾. Gains of a point or so were established by Middle West Utilities 6 per cent preferred, Kuppenheimer, Central & Southwest Utilities, Mosser Leather, and Armour preferred.

For the week as a whole the strong side overshadowed the weak stocks beyond comparison. Although it was quiet in the number of shares traded in, Great Lakes Dredge jumped 34 points on pool activity based on reports that the company may share in the Mississippi flood control work. Waukesha Motors, a closely held issue, was pushed up 25 points by its market sponsors. Keystone Steel finished with a net gain of 20 points.

The merger of Marvel Carburetor, Borg & Beck and the Mechanics Machine company, which is practically completed, was the cause of considerable strength in Borg & Beck and Marvel Carburetor, the former closing 14 points higher and the latter ending the week with a gain of 16 points. Middle West Utilities sold up 10 points.

Baxter Gains 5 Points.

Gains of from 5 to nearly 8 points were established by Baxter Laundries, Quaker Oats, Gossard, Public Service, Standard Dredging, Auburn Automobile, Zenith Radio, Grigsby-Grunow, and Warner Gear. Other strong spots which sold up from 2 to nearly 5 points were Northwest Engineering, Beatrice Creamery, General Box, Butler Brothers, Cutler-Hammer, All-American Radio, Wahl, International Wire and Electrical Research Laboratories.

New Financing Expands Anew as April Ends

BY GEORGE HAMMOND.

Activity in the new bond market last week was on a greater scale than any other period of April since the opening days of the month. New bonds publicly offered totaled $158,080,000, compared with $228,576,000 in the first week of the month. This also compares with $105,008,000 in the previous week and $174,599,500 in the corresponding week of 1927.

Although public utility issues had the highest amount as a group, the number of individual issues in this division was small. Out of a total of $64,050,000 in bonds, all but $14,050,000 was contained in a $50,000,000 block of Cities Service company 5s. Foreign obligations showed the largest group increase over the previous week, the total rising to $25,360,000 compared with $3,000,000.

Offerings Shown by Groups.

A loan of $5,000,000 5½ per cent bonds at 95 has been arranged by the Commercial Mortgage bank and a Norwegian county loan of $6,000,000 for the conversion of two domestic issues of about 35,500,000 kroner is also under negotiation.

Illinois Bond Issue Planned.

The state of Illinois is planning to sell an issue of $15,000,000 bonds bearing a 4 per cent coupon on around May 15. The Kansas, Oklahoma & Gulf railway has applied to the interstate commerce commission for permission to issue and sell $3,951,000 of first mortgage 5 per cent bonds at not less than 94. The company plans to refund some of its outstanding obligations and to purchase $67,800 of first mortgage 5 per cent bonds of the Kansas, Oklahoma and Gulf Railway of Texas.

The largest issue of this type in sight is $15,511,000 of Westchester county, N. Y., 4 per cent bonds which will be sold on Wednesday. A local issue of importance will be $11,000,000 of Chicago Sanitary District 4½s.

WHEAT DEFIES PROFIT TAKING; UP NEARLY 4C

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Buying of wheat futures headed by houses with foreign and eastern connections was again in evidence on an immense scale. While there was tremendous profit taking the close was about the top with net gains of 3⅛@3⅝c for the day, with all deliveries in new ground for the season. Individual operations counted for little, and profit taking was quickly absorbed.

Liquidation developed in corn, especially in the May, and the close was ⅛@⅝c lower. Oats were ½c higher to ⅝c lower, the latter on September, while rye was ½@2⅛c higher.

With the exception of May corn and September oats all deliveries of grain sold at a new high on the crop during the last week, with wheat in the lead. The latter at the last showed 11⅞@13⅝c over the finish of the previous week, while corn was 1@1⅝c higher; oats, ⅝@3⅝c higher, and rye, 8@12¼c higher.

High Winds in Southwest.

Reports of high winds in parts of Kansas and Nebraska, combined with dry weather in the two states, and with the weekly forecast indicating temperatures above normal and little prospect of the drought being broken, sentiment became more bullish than heretofore, and there was also buying of wheat by traders, who sold weekly offers some days ago and were forced to protect themselves on the way up, while selling against the daily offers was a factor in checking the upturn.

Unfavorable crop comments are coming from Europe, and while there was a lack of export business at the seaboard, Winnipeg messages said exporters had been heavy buyers in that market, presumably to remove hedges against sales abroad. Winnipeg gained only ¾@1⅛c for the day, with country holders persistent sellers for profits.

Crop reports from the southwest are now the dominating influence in the wheat market, and other news has little effect. Le Counts summary indicated that the bulk of the acreage in northwestern Kansas had been abandoned. Liverpool closed ⅛@¾d higher, making a poor response to the upturn in American markets on Friday, but it had little effect. Buenos Ayres was unchanged to ½c lower.

Longs Sell May Corn.

Corn market showed a heavy undertone the greater part of the day with a commission house a persistent seller of May, and a buyer of July, transferring over long grain into the deferred delivery. The local element were good buyers at one time on the strength in wheat, but outside buying failed to follow the upturn and the close was within a fraction of the bottom. With warmer weather it is expected that planting will get under way immediately in the central west. The May-July difference widened to 3½c at the last, against 3¼c at the finish on Friday.

Oats market was unsettled, with nearby deliveries showing fair strength, while the September was heavy and closed about the bottom. Weather conditions more favorable for the new crop. Houses with seaboard connections were good buyers of rye, and all deliveries sold at a new high on the crop. Export demand was slow.

Despite an increase in supplies last week, which were larger than the three preceding weeks, hog prices continued to advance. The week's general average at $10.15, highest since last October, was only 10c under a year ago.

Hogs in midweek sold above the corresponding day a year ago, being the first time this has occurred since January, 1927. The weekly average price of hogs has been in four figures only eight times since April, 1927.

Hogs gained in average weights as well as numbers, the estimate average at 235 lbs being 4 lbs heavier than the two preceding weeks, which averaged the same.

Eager to Sell Hogs.

Shipping orders for hogs were surprisingly few on the week-end session and rather than carry stock over for next week salesmen sacrificed bulk of the supply at 10@20c lower quotations. Top declined 20c at $10.45, with general average off 15c at $10.10, against $10.45 and $10.05 the previous Saturday. Outsiders took less than 1,000 and 4,000 were left at the close.

The largest cattle receipts since middle of last November failed to stop the advance in beef steers, which reached the highest point since April 11. The market as a whole averaged $13.05, against $12.85 the preceding week and $10.70 a year ago. Prime heavy steers reached $14.90, against a top of $14.65 at the high time a week earlier. Yearlings at one time during the week outsold heavy steers for the first time of the season. Eastern shipments were largest since the week preceding the Christmas holiday.

Lambs Sell High.

Another upward swing of 50@75c last week strengthened traders' hopes of bringing the $19.00 quotations into play on the lamb market soon. Top reached $18.25 at the close, within 75c of the highest paid for Colorado fed lambs since 1920. Lambs without fleece soared to $16.75. Prevailing quotations are $4.75@5.25 above the January low spot. Aged ewes at $11.75 now compare with $7.00 early in January and with $6.50 for a long period in September and October.

PRODUCE MARKETS

Strawberries were in good demand, with only 14 cars in. Sales of 24 pint cases were at $4.25@4.50.

Potatoes were taken fairly, with prices on white stock unchanged and russets easier. Arrivals were 92 cars and 225 cars were on track. Fresh eggs advanced ¼c to 28⅝c. Butter prices were unchanged. Live hens and spring chickens were in better supply, with hens lower at 25c and spring chickens 2c lower.

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

The temper of the speculative trade in wheat was clearly indicated at the close yesterday by the bids of $1.82 for offers on July wheat, good all this week. This was 16 cents over the closing price, on top of an advance of 21¼@23⅝c since April 11. There were large eastern orders here for offers Stock operators from Wall street were in the market, and there was more general buying. With no pressure of consequence, higher prices are looked for, especially as the traders expect higher temperatures and dry weather over the southwest.

Local traders who have been emphatically bullish, several of whom have recently sold out and who reinstated their holdings, were emphatically bullish in their utterances at the close yesterday. They expect a bullish showing to be made by the private crop reports due on Tuesday, a feature of which will be the large abandonment of winter wheat acreage.

A Board of Trade membership sold at $13,000 net to the buyer, an advance of $500 over the previous sale, setting a new high record. Offerings are light.

It was said that a big line of long May corn is being liquidated through one of the largest private wire houses. It has been under way for several days and July has been bought against it, widening the spread to 3½ cents.

Broomhall's Argentine cable reports the moisture content of new corn very satisfactory and some is being machine dried. Exporters are anxious to obtain a premium for nearby shipments, and it is believed that yields are turning out better than expected in the south. Exportable surplus is estimated at 235,000,00 bu.

A South Dakota reports says: "The prevailing opinion now is that recent freeze did no damage to oats. Reports from different sections indicate they are coming up, showing good stand."

LARD PRICES LOWER

Selling pressure in May lard, attributed to eastern interests, was largely responsible for an easier market and it closed at net losses of 5@7½c. Buying on the decline was liberal and the market in all fairly active. The Liverpool market was unchanged to 3d lower. Trading in bellies was lighter and practically unchanged to 2½c lower.

Short ribs were not wanted to any extent and closed 2½@10c lower, May leading. Exports of lard were 399,619 lbs and bacon 229,000 lbs. Shipments of meats from Chicago were larger than the previous week in last year and of meats they were the reverse. Hogs were lower, with expectations of larger receipts. Prices follow:

STEEL MARKET.

NEW YORK, April 28.—(AP)—STEEL—Unchanged.

do you "buy stocks"

. . . . or do you invest to keep your capital safe and to secure a better-than-average income?

YOU know, that regardless of a man's earning power his financial position is finally determined by the results he gets from the investment of his money. To get the best results requires certain specific, definite things. In the first place, a program that is sound for one man is not for another. Age, dependents, business prospects, amount of capital and many other considerations are involved.

The starting point is to take stock of all these personal factors. Secondly—after this has established the type of securities you should own—how much in bonds, how much in preferred and common stocks—the question arises as to what these securities should be, specifically. Thirdly, and this, too, is vital to full success; when should you buy? For instance, is it a good time right now?

To sum up and analyze your personal status, to post yourself and keep posted on business conditions, money rates, security trends and special circumstances affecting a company or industry, and lastly, to select the most desirable individual stocks and bonds would seem nearly impossible for an individual. It is. Neither time nor sources of information are adequate.

Which are you doing?

So, most men, if they will stop to consider it, will realize they are doing one of two things; speculating (buying and selling on tips, advice of friends, news items or what not) or investing conservatively (government bonds, municipals, old line preferred stocks). The vast majority of speculators lose money eventually. They may profit this year or next, but eventually instead of an income return they show a capital loss. The conservative investor, on the other hand, must be content with 4%, 5% or 6%...not a large return, surely.

A SPECIAL PLAN

As the size of an investment account increases, so do its complexities. It is self evident that personal attention is valuable to all investors. Increasingly so, the large account should have different, more highly individualized consideration if it is to be fully productive.

That is the reason why Brookmire's not only urges personal consultation to all clients, but also has a special supervisory plan for those whose capital is around the $25,000 mark or higher. If this is of interest to you, will you indicate it when sending for information about Brookmire Service.

Facts . . . not guesswork are behind these results

Official reports of Brookmire recommendations for 1926 and for 1927 have been given wide publication. (In the event you have not seen them, the coupon will bring you the complete record). Both years show extremely high records of profits. This is conclusive evidence of the value of Brookmire Service, for one reason only; these reports are typical of results secured from Brookmire Service year after year, for nearly a quarter century.

In view of these facts we think it is only good business for you to know something of the scope and field of Brookmire Service, and what it offers that you can use.

What Purpose?

Briefly, the Brookmire purpose is to enable careful, intelligent individuals to secure with safety a better-than-average return from their capital, whether it be $5,000 or $1,000,000. The degree to which we have been able to carry out this purpose is indicated by the fact that the number of Brookmire clients has steadily increased, and that thousands of individuals and institutions are renewing their subscriptions year after year. There can be but one reason—they find it pays.

More complete information than can be given in this space is available. We shall be glad to forward it without obligation upon receipt of the coupon.

NEW YORK CURB STOCKS STRONG; BONDS VARIABLE

New York, April 28.—(AP)—Week-end profit taking served to check the upward trend on prices on the curb market today and while scores of issues reached new high ground, net gains were rather limited. The industrial group attracted most of the buying, which was in large volume, and the ticker closed more than a half hour late.

Bancitaly was the feature of the list, advancing about 8 points to a new peak at 215⅝. It sagged to 211⅞ under profit taking, but bounced back to close at 215. Kemsley Milbourn advanced about 3 points to a new top at 19½ on heavy buying. Columbia Graphaphone and Shattuck Denn were under pressure, the former closing more than a point lower.

New Jersey Zinc Soars.

New Jersey Zinc made the greatest net gain of the day, closing at 249, up 13 points net, after it had touched a new peak at 251. New Mont Mines reached its previous high, but closed lower under profit taking. Auburn Auto gained 3 points, Brockway Motor reached a new top at 55¼ and Ford of Canada extended its gain 2 points.

General Bronze, Gamewell, Bastina B, Bastian Blessing, Consolidated Coal, Hygrade Food Products, Marion Steam Shovel, Ruberoid and Safe-T-Stat reached new highs, the latter showing a gain of 7 points before profit taking cut its net advance 2 points. The chain store issues were weak. Kaynee, in initial trading, made a fractional gain.

The American superpower issues led some of the utilities to new high ground. The oils again were strong, Darby Petroleum, Gulf, Humble and Reiter Foster reaching new highs.

Bond Market Irregular.

Bond prices followed a rather irregular trend with week-end profit taking less extensive than usual. Further heavy buying of Hudson Coal 5s, which moved up 2½ points to their previous year's high, was the outstanding development. Denver & Rio Grande Western 5s rose more than a point. International Railway of central America 6½s sold at their best price of the year.

NEW HOLLAND VAPORAIRE

HEATING-COOLING SYSTEM

A REVOLUTIONARY DEVELOPMENT

Advantages never before available in any type of home-heating equipment are now put within easy reach of every home owner by the Holland Vaporaire System. This development obsoletes all previous methods of home heating and establishes new standards of comfort and convenience. One simple, economical system warms the home in winter—cools it in summer—and provides perfect circulation of fresh, clean, moist air at all times. Combining exclusive patented features that are years ahead, Holland engineers have perfected a system that meets every essential requirement for homes of all sizes and saves 20% to 30% in fuel. In hot weather it circulates delightfully cool air into every room. No draft—just perfect ventilation. This means the equivalent of more than a fan to each room—with one central control—at an operating cost of about a cent an hour for electric current. Investigate Holland Vaporaire. See how it antiquates all other ideas of home heating. Get all of the facts before you buy or build a new home, remodel an old one or repair your present heating system. Do this without obligation. Just sign and mail the attached coupon or telephone our nearest branch.

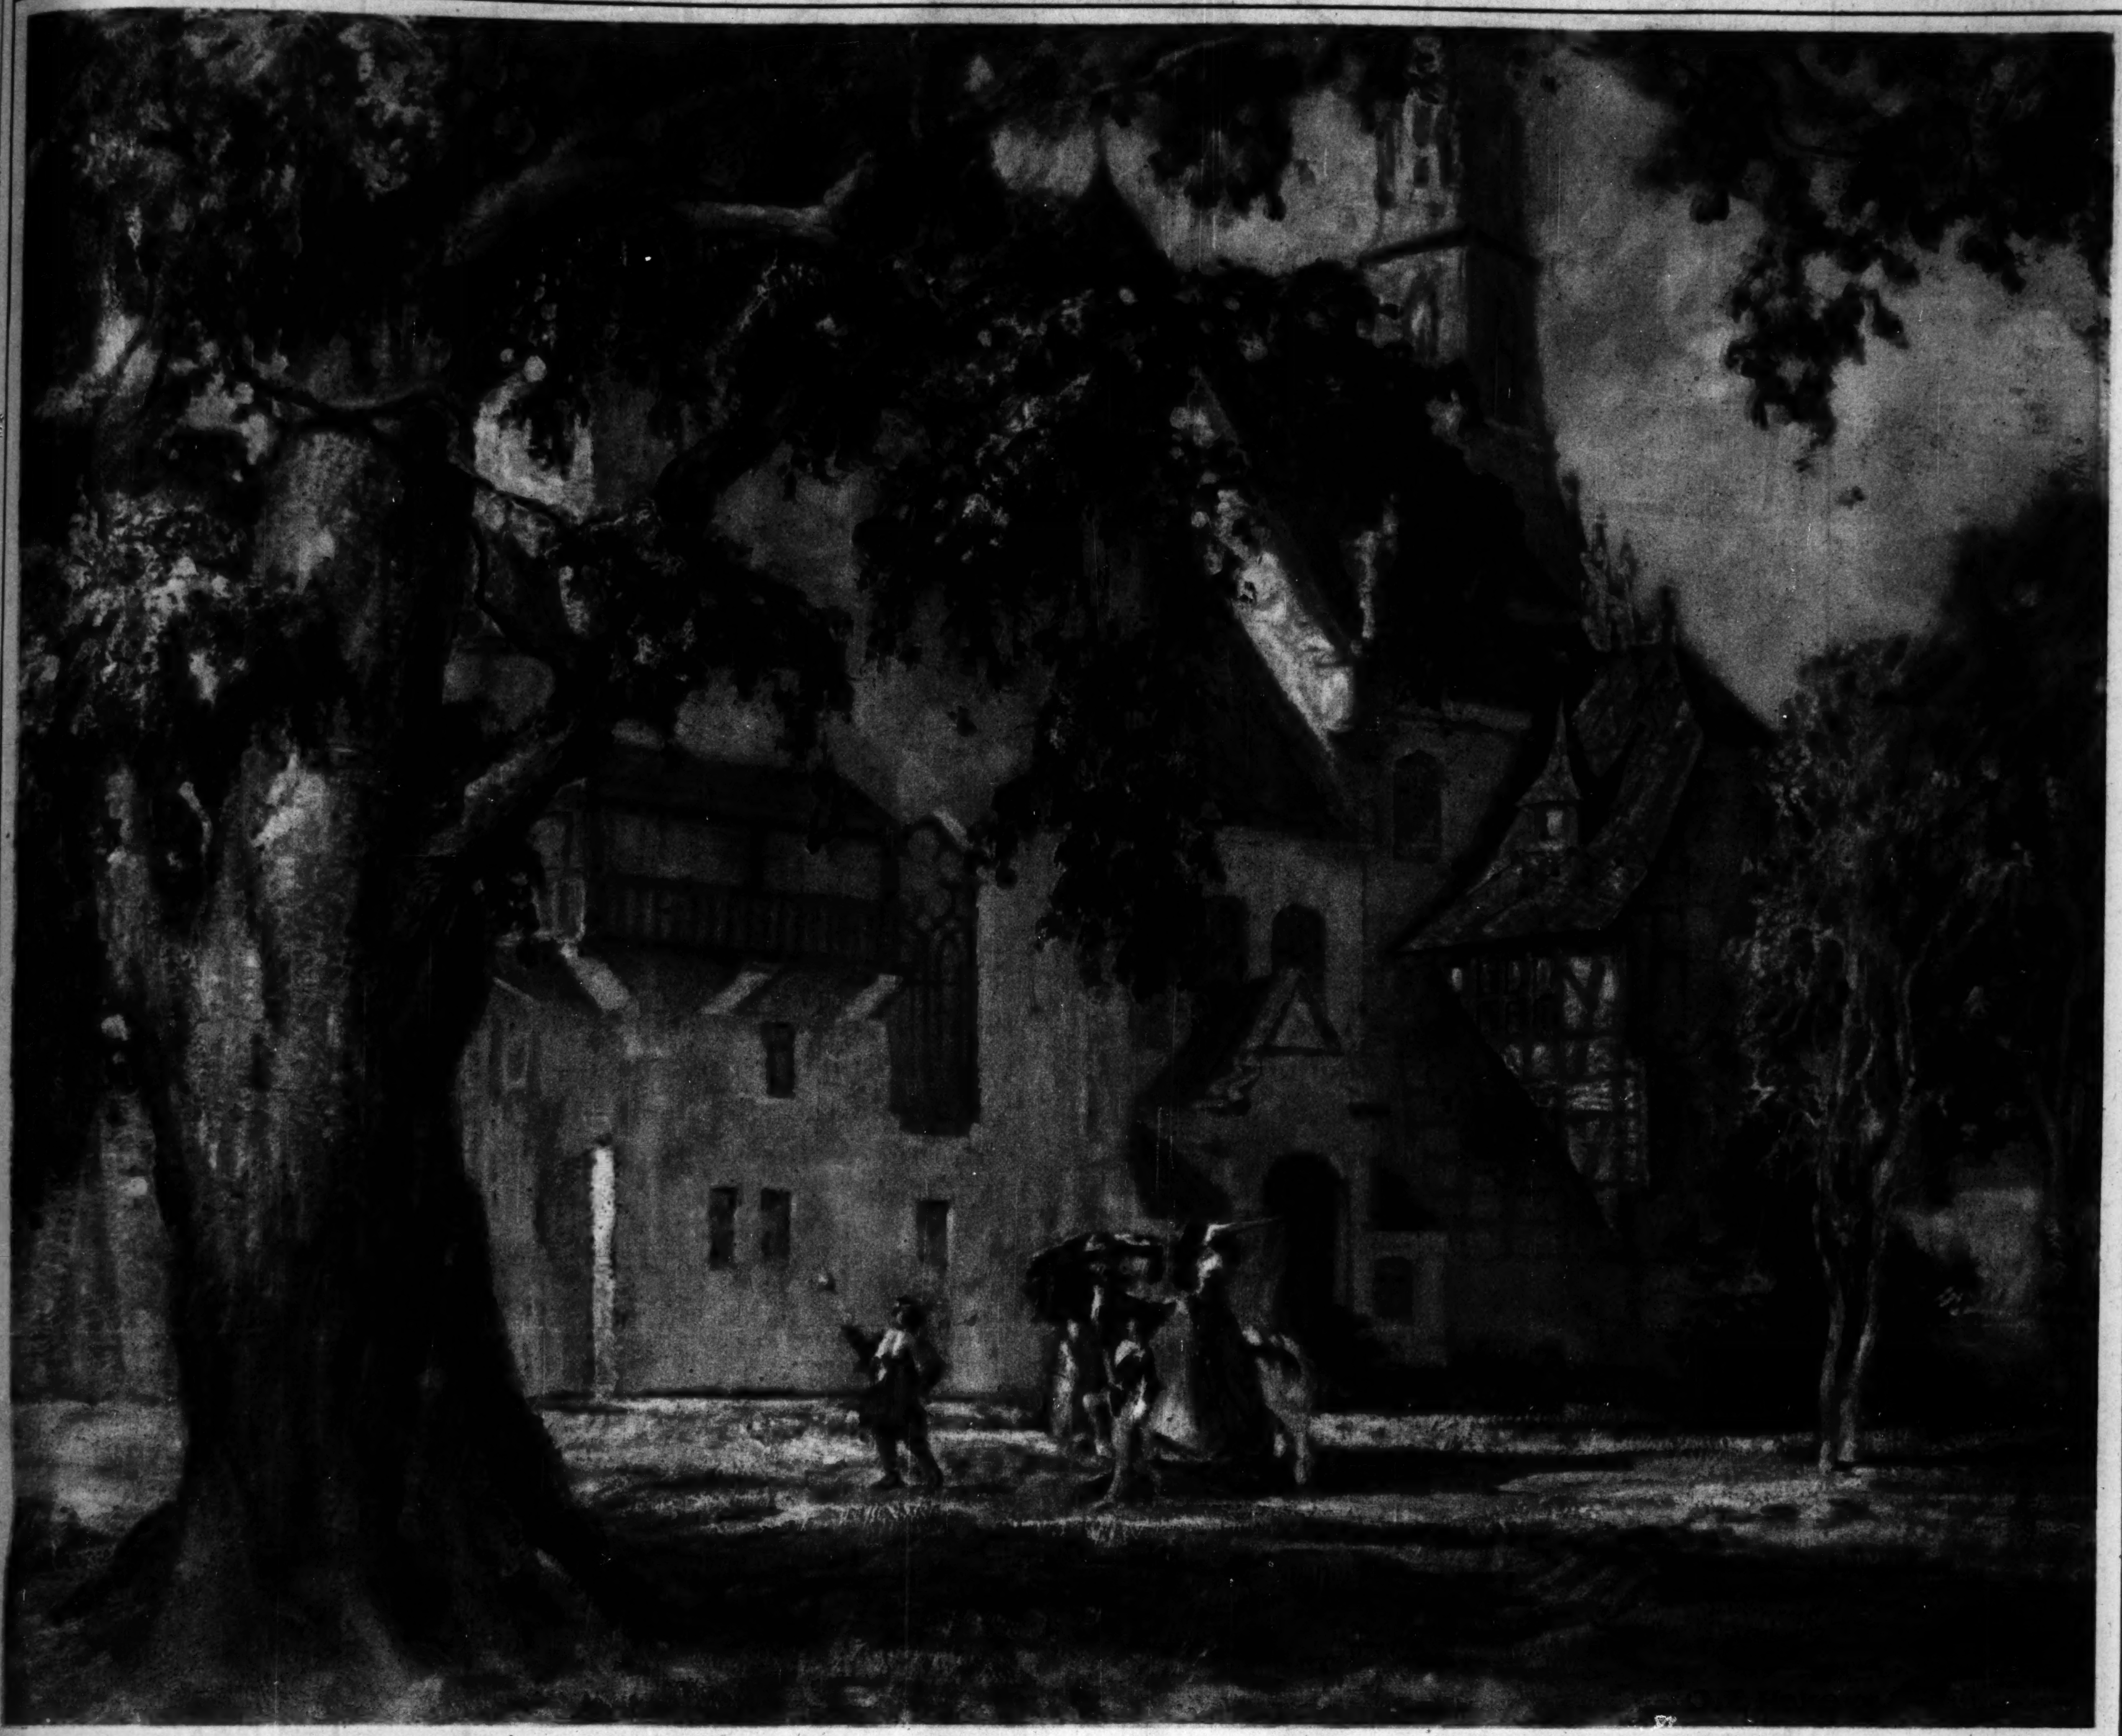
THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

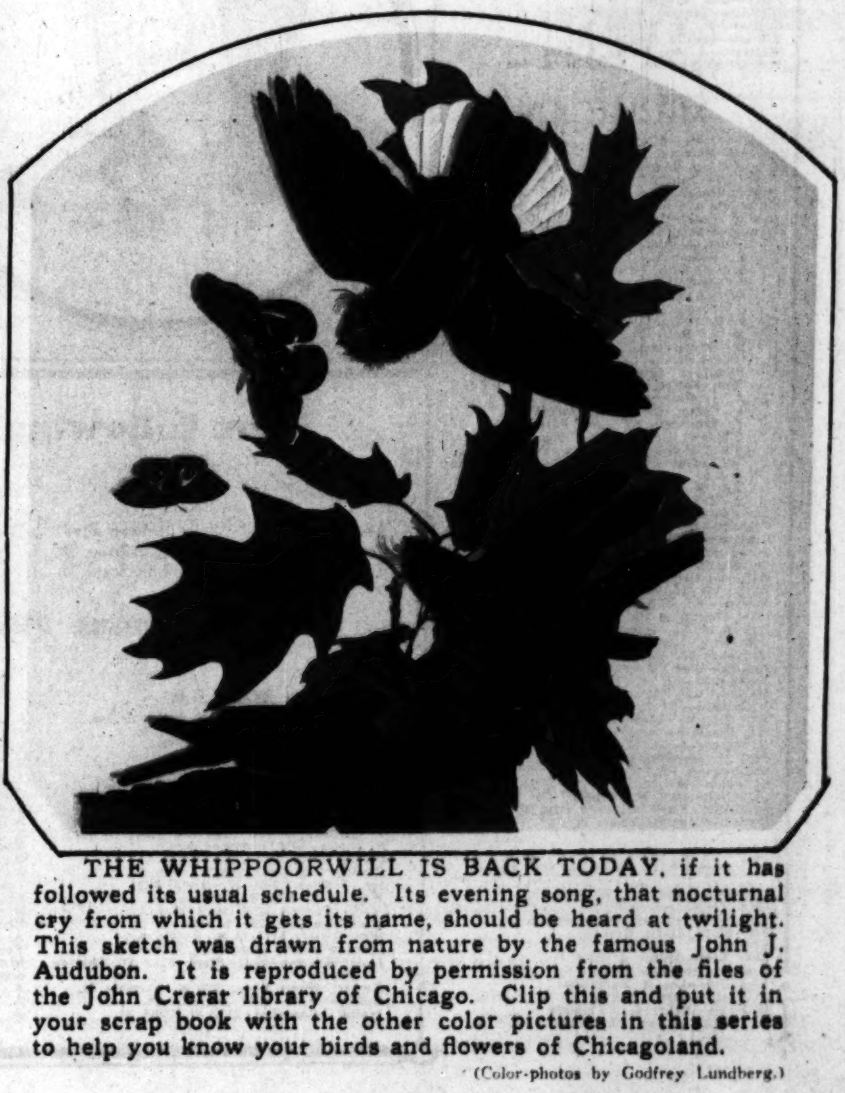
April 29, 1928



"THE OLD GERMAN BUILDING: A DREAM"—In this stunning painting Otto Hake of the Palette and Chisel club has reconstructed the old German building of the World's Fair, and given it fresh life and beauty. His mounted knights and the gallant herald who precedes them are figures of romance. In Chicago's next fair in 1933 Jackson park glories, now dead, may find themselves recreated on an island off Grant park.

FRED AND DOROTHY STONE, the co-stars of "Criss Cross," recently and successfully in Chicago, as they were the co-stars three years ago of "Stepping Stones." When next they start to study new parts they will have the fresh assistance of another of the Stone girls—Paulina.

SEPTETTE in Earl Carroll's Vanities, wherein they, with many others, were called upon to sit, stand, walk, climb, jump, or hang head downward in order to create what any unprejudiced stage director of revue or an extravaganza would term the illusion of being a huge chandelier.



THE WHIPPOORWILL IS BACK TODAY, if it has followed its usual schedule. Its evening song, that nocturnal cry from which it gets its name, should be heard at twilight. This sketch was drawn from nature by the famous John J. Audubon. It is reproduced by permission from the files of the John Crerar library of Chicago. Clip this and put it in your scrap book with the other color pictures in this series to help you know your birds and flowers of Chicagoland.

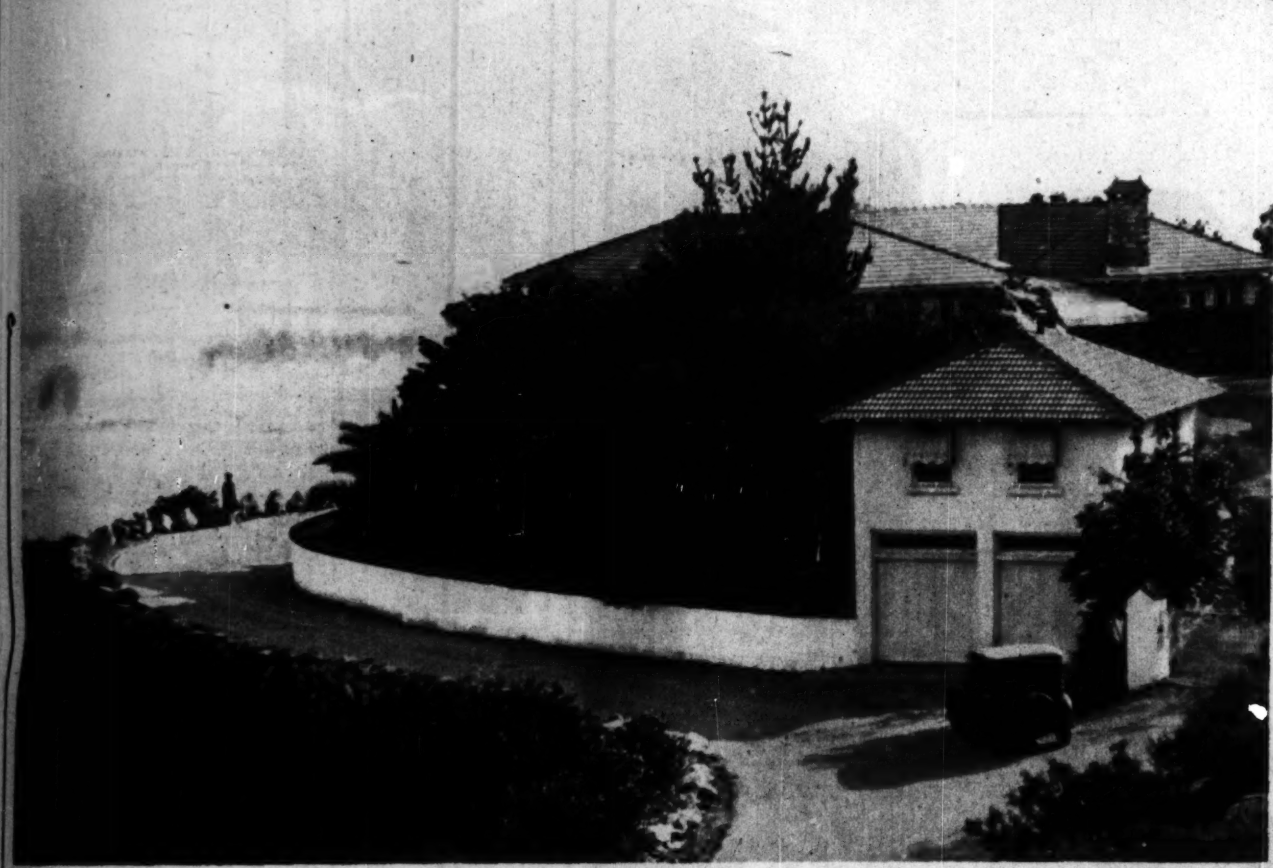
THE WORLD'S GREATEST CARVING IN STONE, the Stone mountain memorial to the confederacy near Atlanta, Ga., was unveiled with high ceremony by Robert E. Lee IV., great-grandson of the southern chieftain, exposing to view the nearly completed bust of Lee and the outline of "Traveler," the general's famous horse. The figure of Lee will dominate the central group of the great monument. (Photograph from Pacific and Atlantic.)



MME. SCHUMANN-HEINK'S GIFT TO HEROES—The famous diva has presented this $250,000 home at Grosmont, Cal., to disabled world war veterans to be used as a rest camp for the maimed. The benefaction recalls Schumann-Heink's wartime services to the American cause, the songs in cantonments with which she cheered youth in khaki. (Photograph from Pacific and Atlantic.)

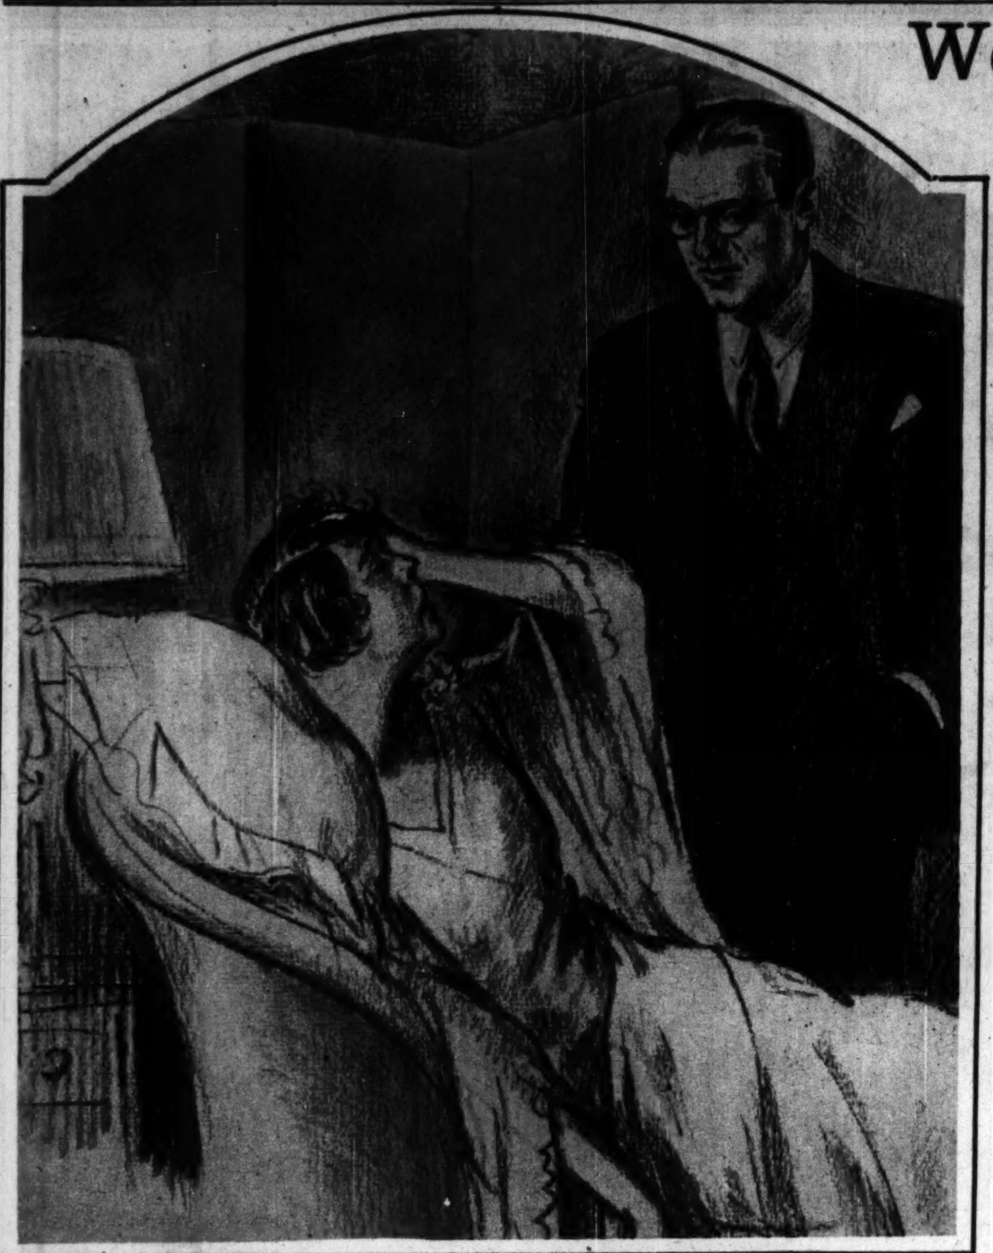
CARNIVAL TIME AT VENICE—Bombs bursting in air, myriad pyrotechnics careening madly into the heavens—that's the Fete de Nuit, staged on a lagoon of the ancient Italian city, with many thousands looking on from the gondolas. Perhaps nowhere else is there such a riotous scene of revelry. (Photograph from Pacific and Atlantic.)

THE SACCO-VANZETTI CASE GOES ON THE SCREEN—Viennese movie men have capitalized on the sentiment aroused in Europe by the famous Massachusetts execution with a film version of the story, from the paymaster's murder to the electric chair. Here Governor Fuller is represented, refusing to sign a decree of clemency presented by his secretary. (Photograph from Pacific and Atlantic.)

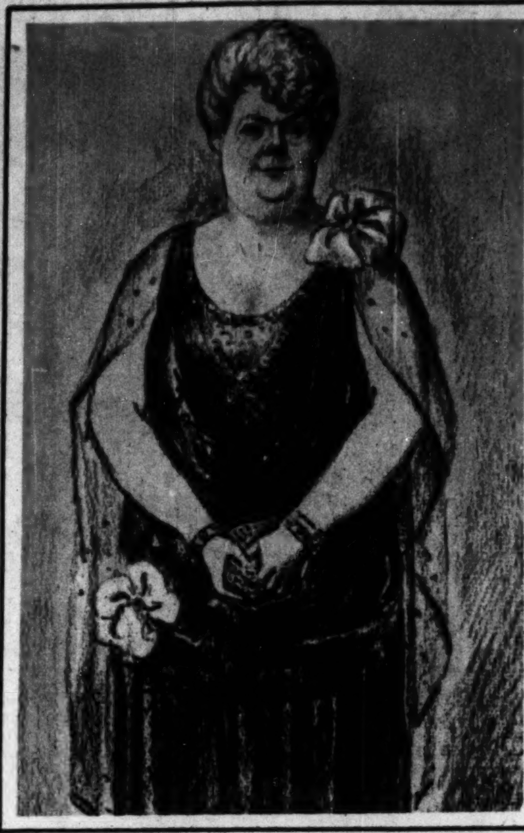
Wedded, but No Wife

By W. E. Hill

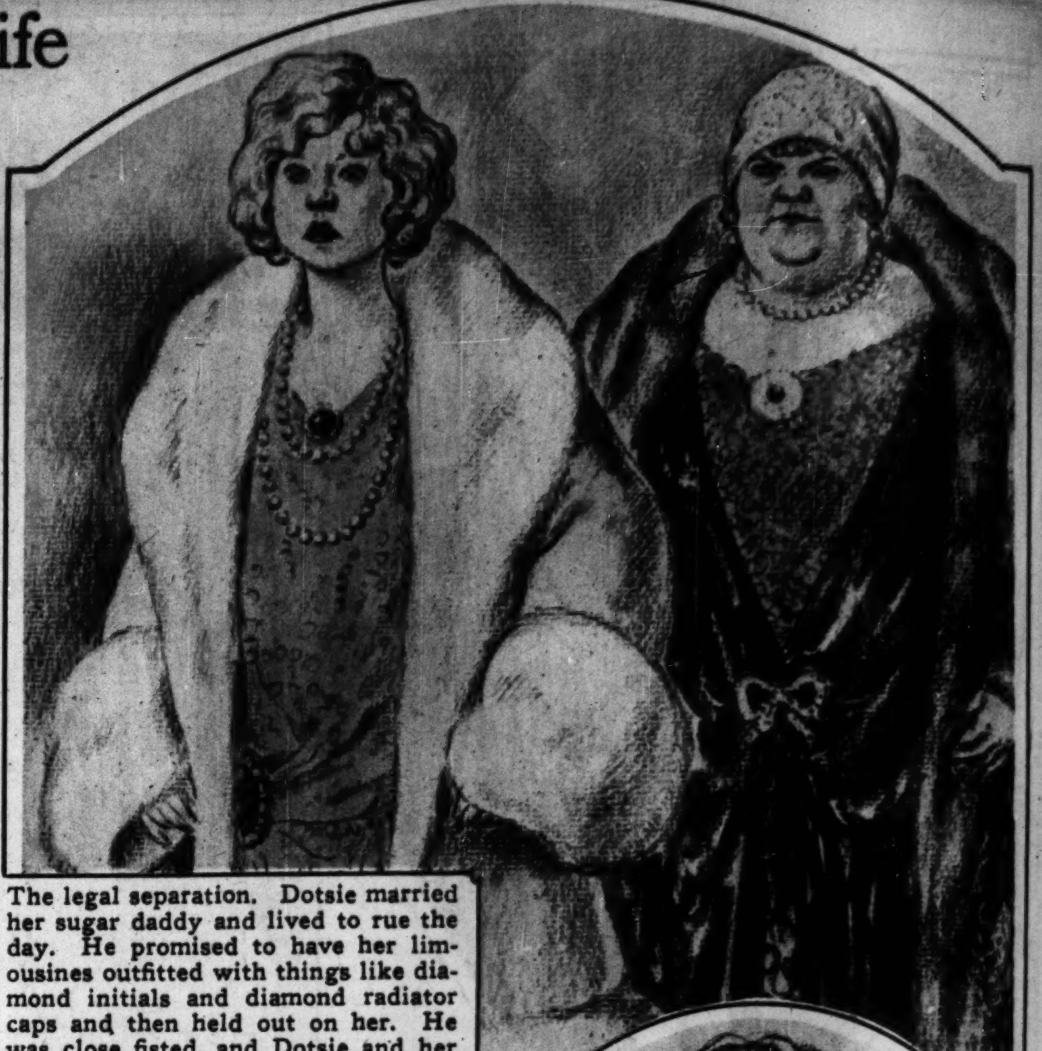
[Copyright: 1928: By The Chicago Tribune.]



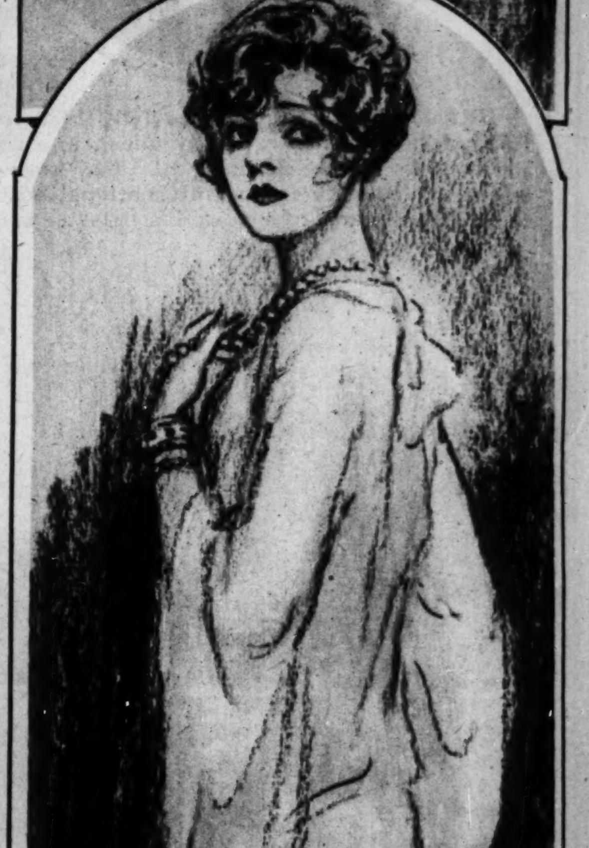
The belle of the sanitarium. Bertha is troubled with intermittent neurasthenia and has to rush to a sanitarium and eat carloads of liver every so often. She has very little to do with her dear husband because he seems to aggravate her headaches by refusing to eat bran in large quantities. If all the defunct calves that have supplied liver for Bertha's anemic condition could have been laid out end to end, there's no telling where they would reach to!



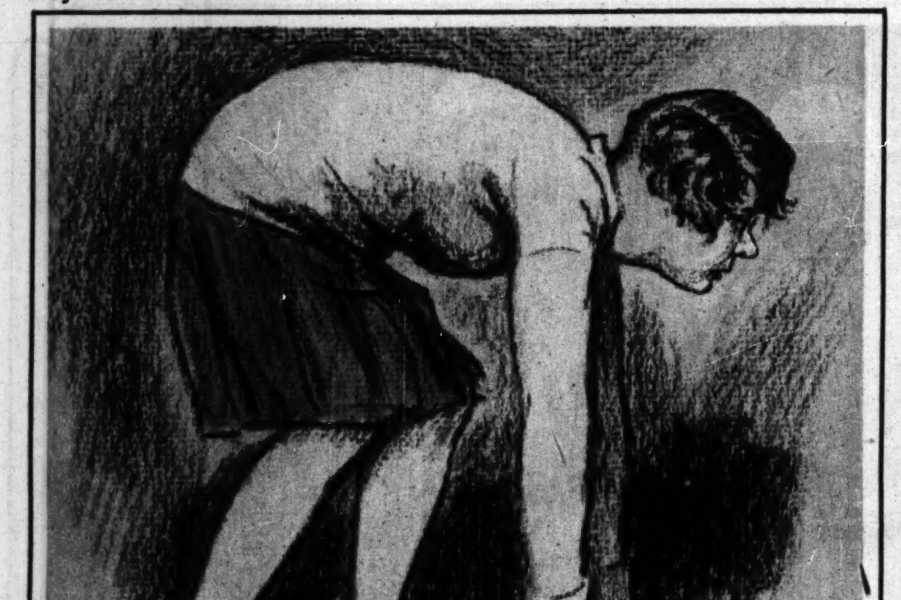
Clean politics. Mrs. Belle Waldo Emerson Riley is busy morning, noon and night with platforms and party affiliations. Wiley B. Riley, her legal bed and board, rarely if ever sees her in the home, so busy is she these days addressing the Federated Association of Latent Women Voters on "Feminism, Menace or Delight, Which?" or warning the assembled Girl Scouts to beware of liquor, opiates, and vice nests in a little talk labeled "Coming Across Clean."



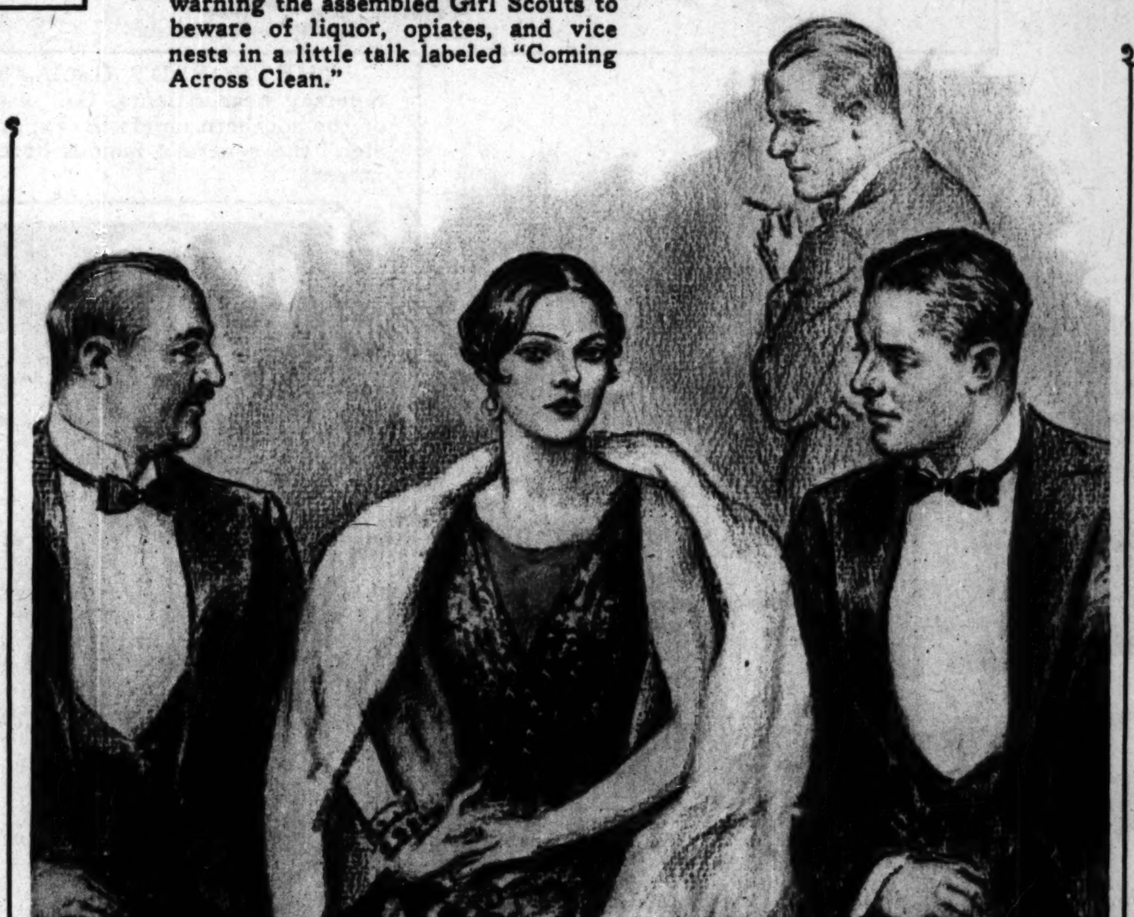
The legal separation. Dotsie married her sugar daddy and lived to rue the day. He promised to have her limousines outfitted with things like diamond initials and diamond radiator caps and then held out on her. He was close fisted, and Dotsie and her mamma wouldn't stand for it. Dotsie is suing for reparation in good round dollars. It seems the lawyers have found that Dotsie is 37 instead of 17, and Dotsie and her mamma, being sensitive girls, are terribly upset.



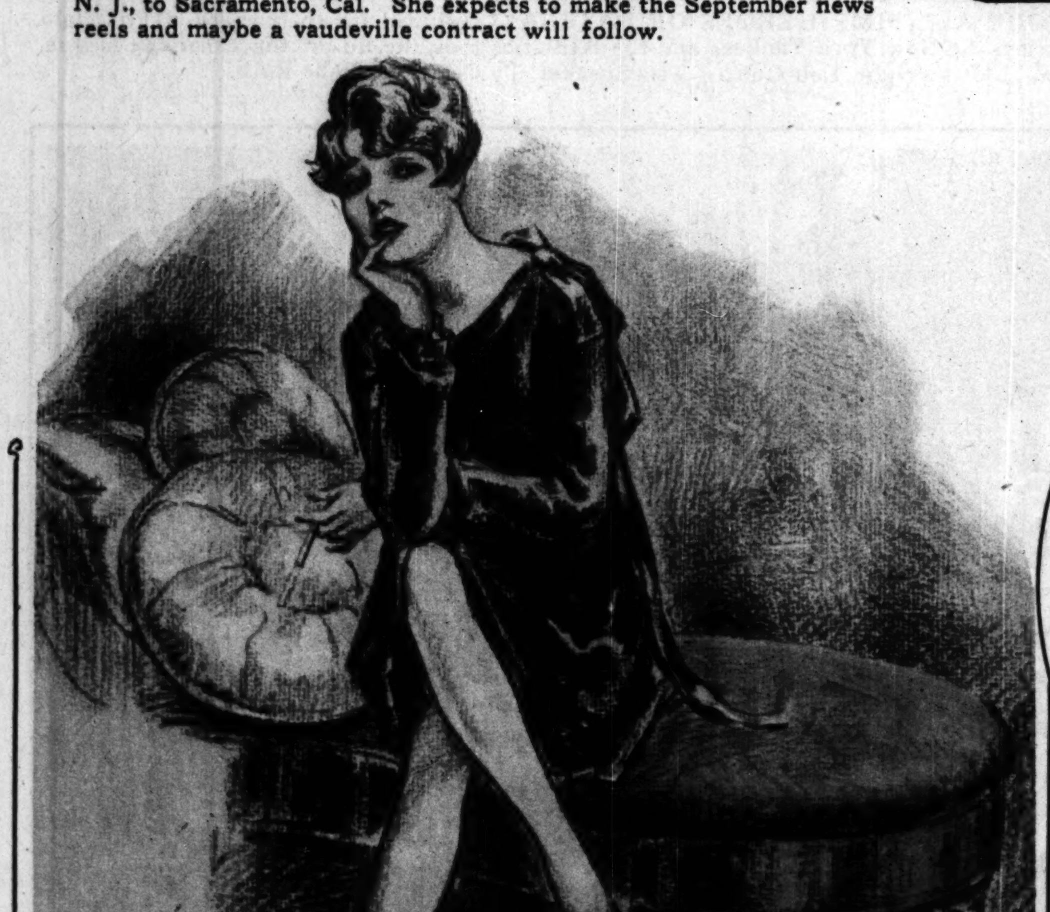
Living with mamma at present. Jessie is a very jealous wife and a little thing like the marriage tie means practically nothing when Arthur calls up from the office and says he has to go out with a client. Right away Jessie scents another woman, throws a couple of tantrums, refusing at the top of her lungs to be wife in name only, and seeks her girlhood home, be it ever so humble!



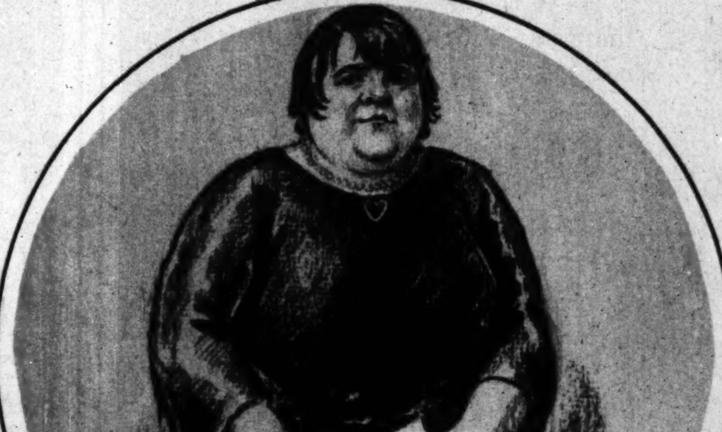
The athletic mamma. Mrs. Jennie Rackett believes that every housewife should come out of the kitchen and stay out. Let the husbands do the work. She believes that every woman should establish a record of some sort or other. Jennie is planning to roll across the continent and is training for a record speed roll from Boonton, N. J., to Sacramento, Cal. She expects to make the September news reels and maybe a vaudeville contract will follow.



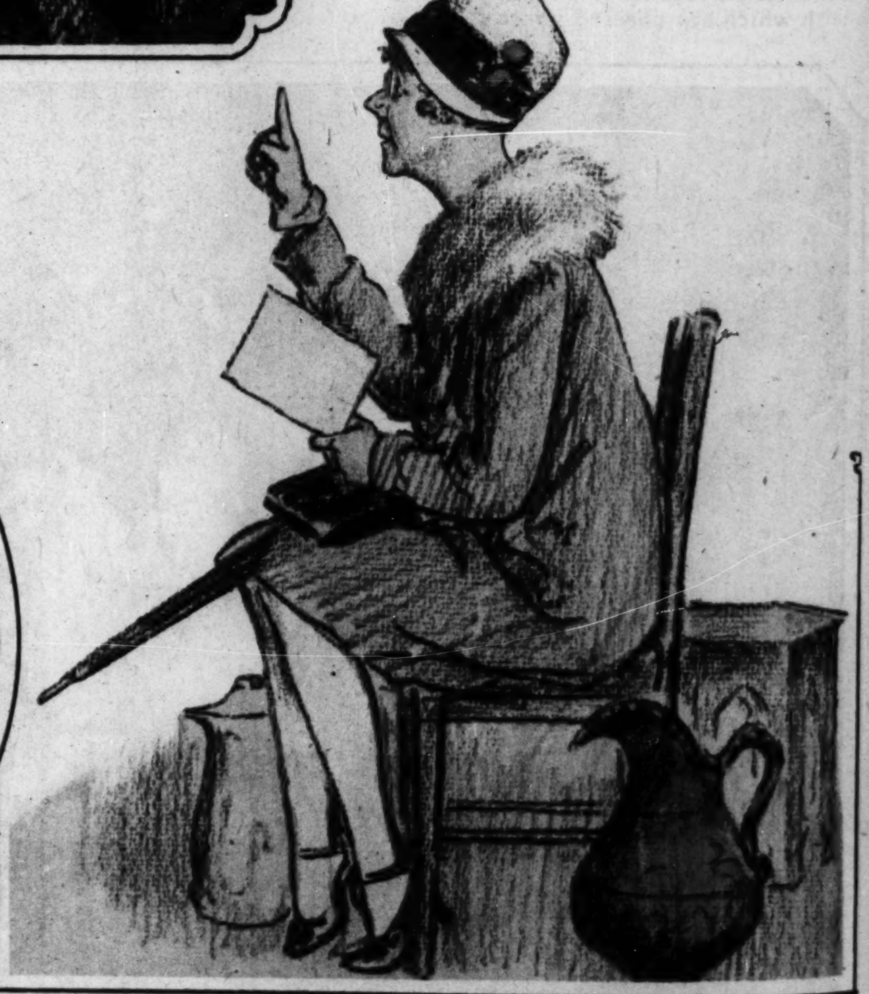
The Siren. When Grace promised at the altar to love, honor and obey, there must have been a doubt in her mind as to whom it applied. She is very wifely to every husband but her own for miles around, and is practically a living example of the old saying that woman's place is in the home—of another woman's husband.



The annulment. Lois was on the road with a swell tabloid called "Winks and Blushes of 1928" when she met and married the son of Levi P. Cucumber, the sardine magnate. They were deliriously happy for two days, then the family spirited Levi Jr. away, claiming that mentally he was only 4 years of age. How is a bright girl to get any kind of a break these days?



Leah the Forsaken. Poor Leah is wife in name only. Her so-called lesser half left home, never to return, not even having the decency to tell Leah about companionate marriage. Leah was a wonderful little wife while it lasted, and used to sit for hours on his lap, squeezing him in ecstasy. Her husband, however, had neuritis and failed to value Leah as he should have. And now the poor girl sits alone evening after evening reading her "Startling Confessions" magazine, getting more and more inhibited.



The auctions fan. Mrs. Faith Fishbone is devoted to auction rooms and never misses a sale day. Naturally, she has no time for the little wifely duties that mean so much to a man, such as counting the collars that came back from the laundry, or divesting the waistcoat front of soup and gravy stains. Even the pan under the icebox has to wait while Mrs. F. bids royally on a genuine antique bisque Louis XIV. umbrella stand.

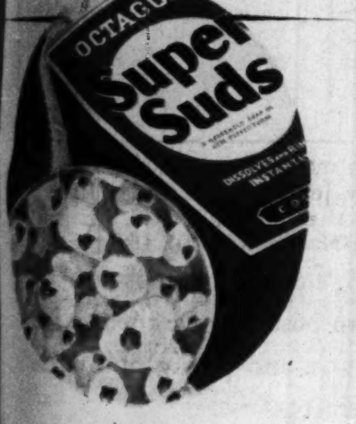
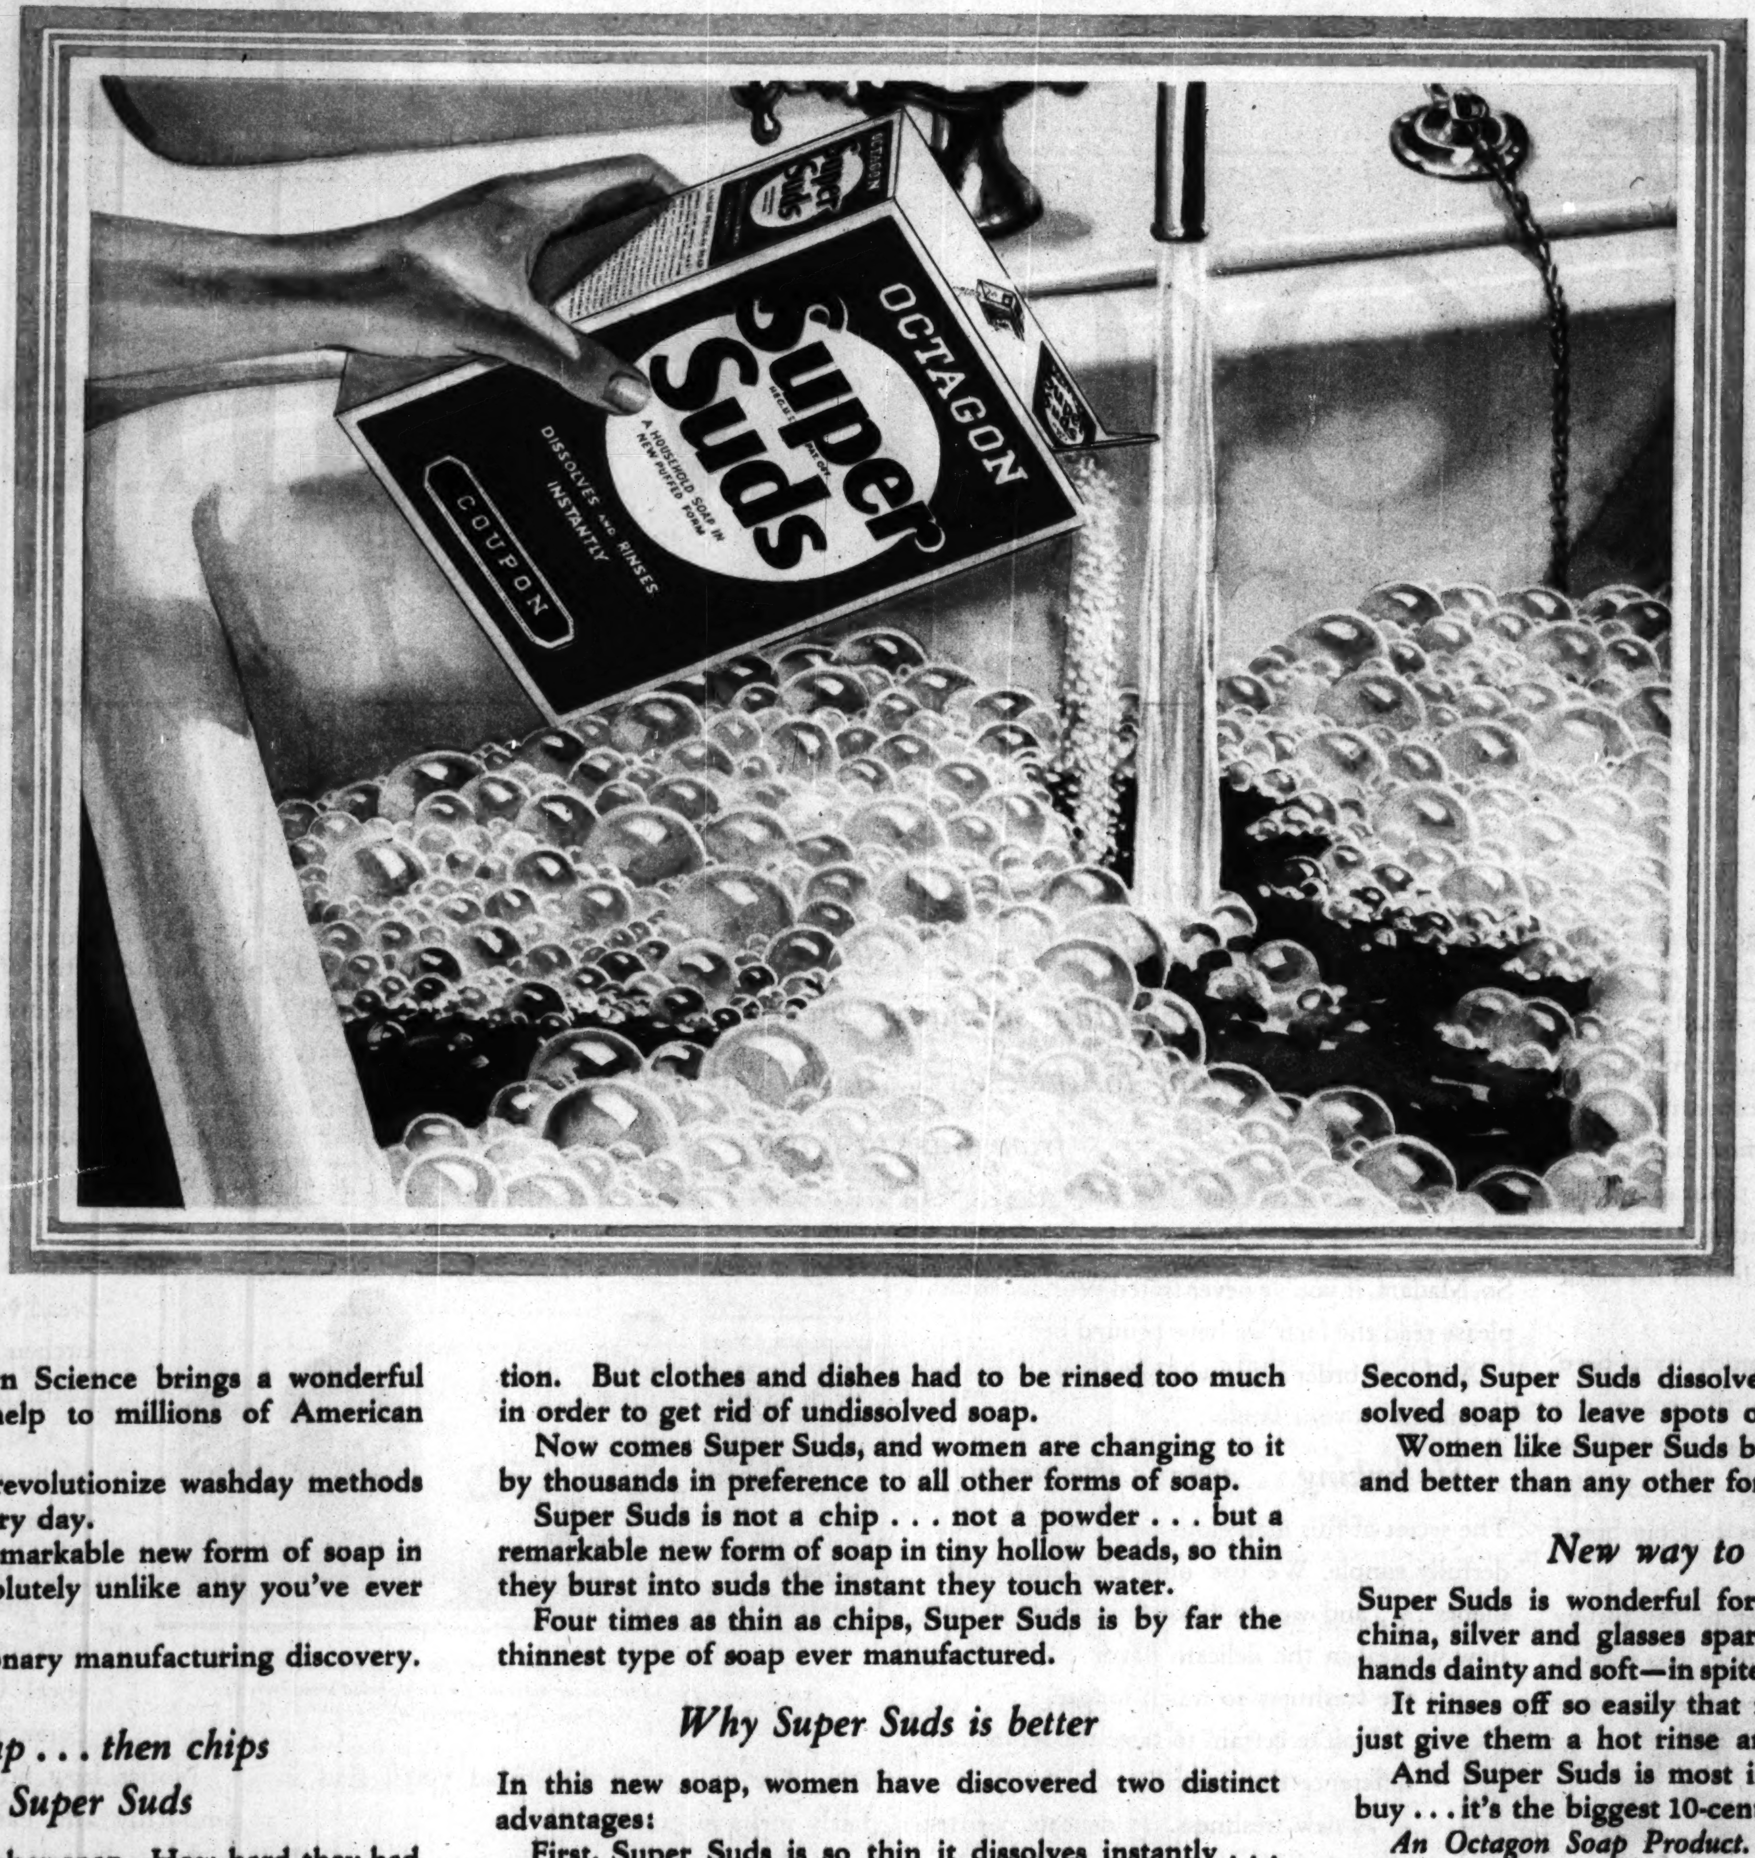
NEW.. Beads of Soap work wonders on Washday

Made in tiny thin-walled "beads," this amazing new form of soap completely revolutionizes washday methods...gets clothes whiter in far less time. A new discovery that replaces chips and flakes... made by new patented* process.





Four Amazing Features

1. It washes clothes whiter than any form of soap now in use.

2. It dissolves instantly . . . completely . . . leaving no particles clinging to fabrics to cause soap stain.

3. It saves at least one rinsing . . . your clothes are out to dry in much faster time.

4. And best of all . . . it won't roughen or redden your hands. That in itself you'll agree is a unique attainment.

ONCE again Modern Science brings a wonderful new household help to millions of American women.

A help that's sure to revolutionize washday methods in thousands of homes every day.

It's a new idea . . . a remarkable new form of soap in tiny hollow beads . . . absolutely unlike any you've ever known before.

The result of a revolutionary manufacturing discovery.

First, bar soap . . . then chips . . . now Super Suds

Years ago women had only bar soap. How hard they had to work rubbing the soap into the clothes, and how hard it was to rinse out those clinging soap particles.

Next came chips. Many women changed to this form of soap because it could be stirred into a cleansing solution. But clothes and dishes had to be rinsed too much in order to get rid of undissolved soap.

Now comes Super Suds, and women are changing to it by thousands in preference to all other forms of soap.

Super Suds is not a chip . . . not a powder . . . but a remarkable new form of soap in tiny hollow beads, so thin they burst into suds the instant they touch water.

Four times as thin as chips, Super Suds is by far the thinnest type of soap ever manufactured.

Why Super Suds is better

In this new soap, women have discovered two distinct advantages:

First, Super Suds is so thin it dissolves instantly . . . saves time and trouble . . . gives rich, lively suds in a flash.

Second, Super Suds dissolves completely . . . no undissolved soap to leave spots on clothes or film on dishes.

Women like Super Suds because it does the work faster and better than any other form of soap.

New way to wash dishes

Super Suds is wonderful for washing dishes. It makes china, silver and glasses sparkle like diamonds. It keeps hands dainty and soft—in spite of three dishwashings a day.

It rinses off so easily that no film is left on dishes . . . just give them a hot rinse and let them dry themselves.

And Super Suds is most inexpensive both to use and buy . . . it's the biggest 10-cent box of soap on the market.

An Octagon Soap Product. Every box of Super Suds carries a coupon. Save them for valuable premiums.

*A PATENTED PROCESS . . . Super Suds is made by a process covered by exclusive patents. (Product, process and apparatus covered by U. S. Letters Patent Nos. 1,051,441; 1,090,740; 1,600,503; 1,634,640 and Reissue No. 16,749.)

Out on the line . . . those spotlessly white clothes. No need now for rubbing and scrubbing. Just leave it to Super Suds to loosen and soak out all dirt, grease and grime.

Quickest thing you ever saw! Just pour Super Suds into your washtub. Then in a flash you'll get rich, lively, hard-working suds. You never knew a soap that dissolves like this!

We Offer Women

a delicate new bread flavor

This advertisement tells some interesting facts about Wonder Bread . . . the delicately flavored, slo-baked bread that so many Chicago women are changing to, these days. It will pay you to read it from start to finish

TO every woman who manages a home this brings encouraging news.

It's the story of a remarkable bread . . . that keeps fresh longer . . . slices without crumbling . . . makes crisper toast and more delicate sandwiches.

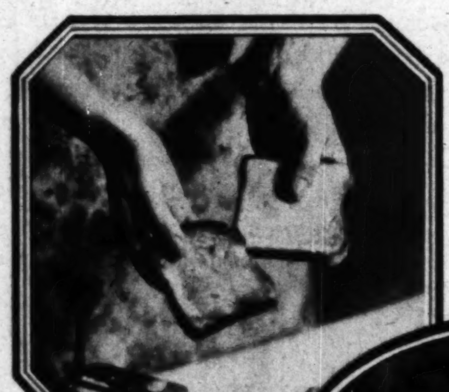
Less than two years ago the first loaves went on sale. And now it's bought by thousands daily . . . served every night on countless tables . . . welcomed by grown-ups and children as the most delicious bread ever baked.

Even the most particular women have been shifting to Wonder Bread by the score . . . adopting it in preference to brands they have bought for years . . . or vowing never to bake another loaf again as long as this delicious bread can be bought from a grocer.

But quite frankly, we'll never be completely satisfied until every housewife in town has tried it.

Please make this Amazing 3-Minute Test

Here's a test that proves how good Wonder Bread really is: Take a slice of this delicious bread and a slice of any ordinary bread. Toast each slice for 3 minutes . . . 1½ minutes on each side. The Wonder Bread toast will be browned evenly. The other slice will be only partially — and unevenly — browned.



LOOK FOR THIS WRAPPER!

Here's Wonder Bread in its unique balloon-covered wrapper. Just try one loaf, Madam, and you'll be wedded to it for life. It's so delicate and delicious . . . so easy to slice. And so temptingly, appetizingly fresh. You mothers notice particularly how quickly children take to it! They seem to notice the difference instantly. And it's so remarkably nourishing you can never give them too much.

WONDER BREAD

So, Madam, if you've never tasted Wonder Bread, please read the facts we have printed below.

And then order a loaf without delay . . . simply in fairness to your family.

Slo-baking . . . that's the secret

The secret of this marvelous bread is really wonderfully simple. We use only the finest ingredients . . . and we slo-bake every loaf. That's how we seal in the delicate flavor . . . prolong the freshness so much longer.

You're certain to taste the remarkable difference the first time you try it.

A new freshness. A delicate new texture. A delicious new bread flavor.

Such sandwiches it makes . . . and such marvelous, golden brown toast!

Just see how your grocer smiles when you ask for Wonder Bread! He'll tell you that most of his particular customers ask for this slo-baked bread every day. Most likely he prefers it himself.

Any way you serve this bread you'll find it fairly melts in your mouth.

You'll marvel, too, at the way it slices. It cuts quickly, easily and smoothly . . . there's never any danger of crumbling.

Our flour is specially selected . . . scientifically blended. Only the heart of the wheat berry is chosen. It's a far better flour than most women buy in the stores. And our recipe calls for double the usual quantity of milk.

You mothers can readily see why this bread is good for children! It's one of the most energy building foods you can possibly give them. It's packed with calories . . . and plenty of muscle and bone building elements, too.

Please make a test

Madam, if you baked Wonder Bread yourself . . . right in your own kitchen . . . you couldn't take more pains than we do.

You couldn't use any purer ingredients or measure them one single bit more carefully.

So if you pride yourself on serving good wholesome food at your table, try this delicious bread at once! Order your supply tomorrow. Serve it at every meal.

Notice how firm and tender it is . . . how smoothly and easily it slices . . . how long it keeps its original delicate freshness. But, most important of all, notice that wonderfully delicious flavor that has won so many friends.

Now just one word of warning. Insist on getting the genuine Wonder Bread. For only from this one bread can you expect the remarkable delicacy of flavor described in this advertisement.

Now at your grocer's . . . fresh twice a day. Two convenient sizes.

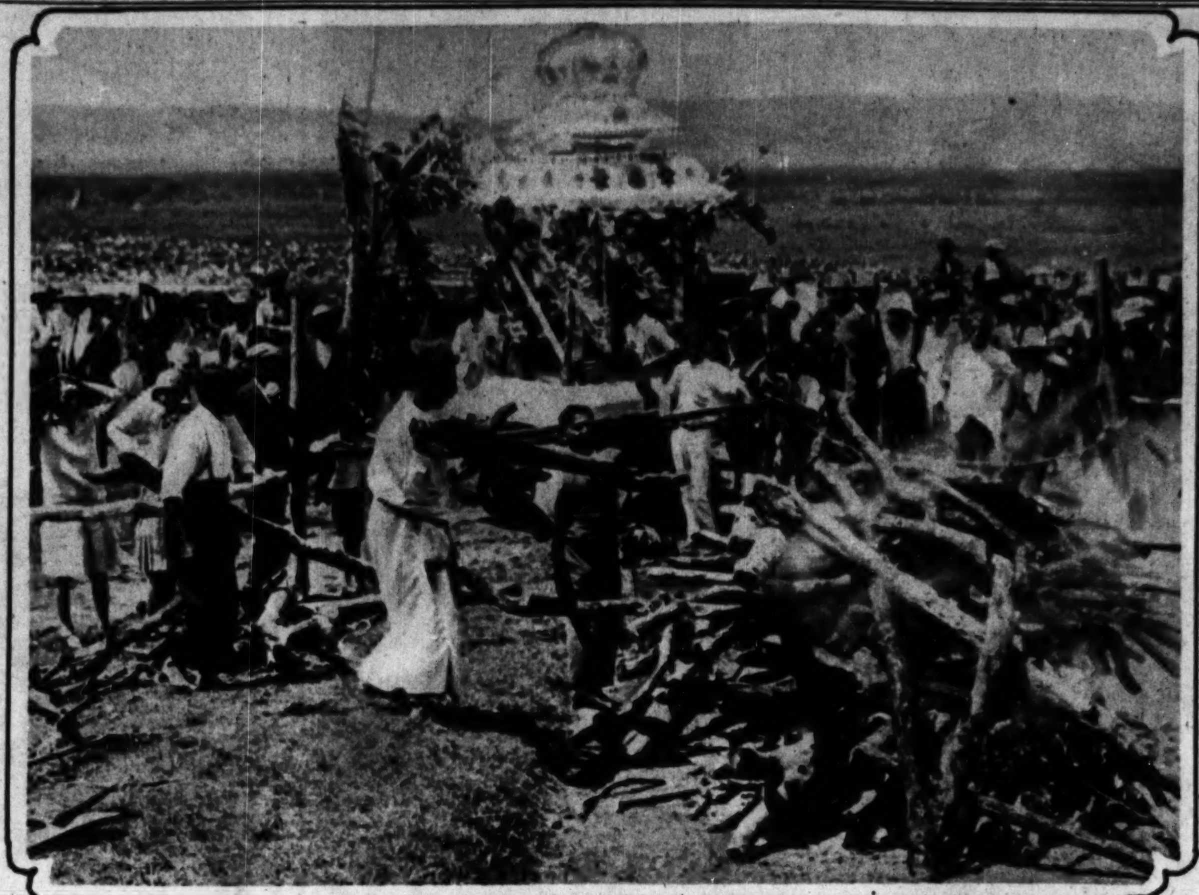
THROUGH FIRE AND SWORD—In darkest Africa, home of the witch doctor, natives still cling to the dreaded trial by ordeal. This Soutri, or sacred Hindu, has his body skewered with pins and steel instruments before treading barefooted across a carpet of fiery embers. According to a Tribune correspondent who recently saw this ceremony, the Hindu's wounds do not bleed, or bleed but little, and his feet show no signs of burns.



THE FIRE DEPARTMENT—Six tons of wood were set ablaze in preparing for a recent "trial" at Durban, where a large Indian population lives. In time the logs were reduced to white-hot charcoal, over which the holy men of the tribe treaded slowly to the thumping of frenzied tom-toms.

A HUMAN PINCUSHION—Stripped to the waist, and with weights dangling from the piece of steel stuck in his torso, a Hindu worshiper runs across the wood ashes without a quiver. His feet sink into the glowing coals, but he emerges entirely free from burns or blisters, or wounds from the pins, according to our correspondent.

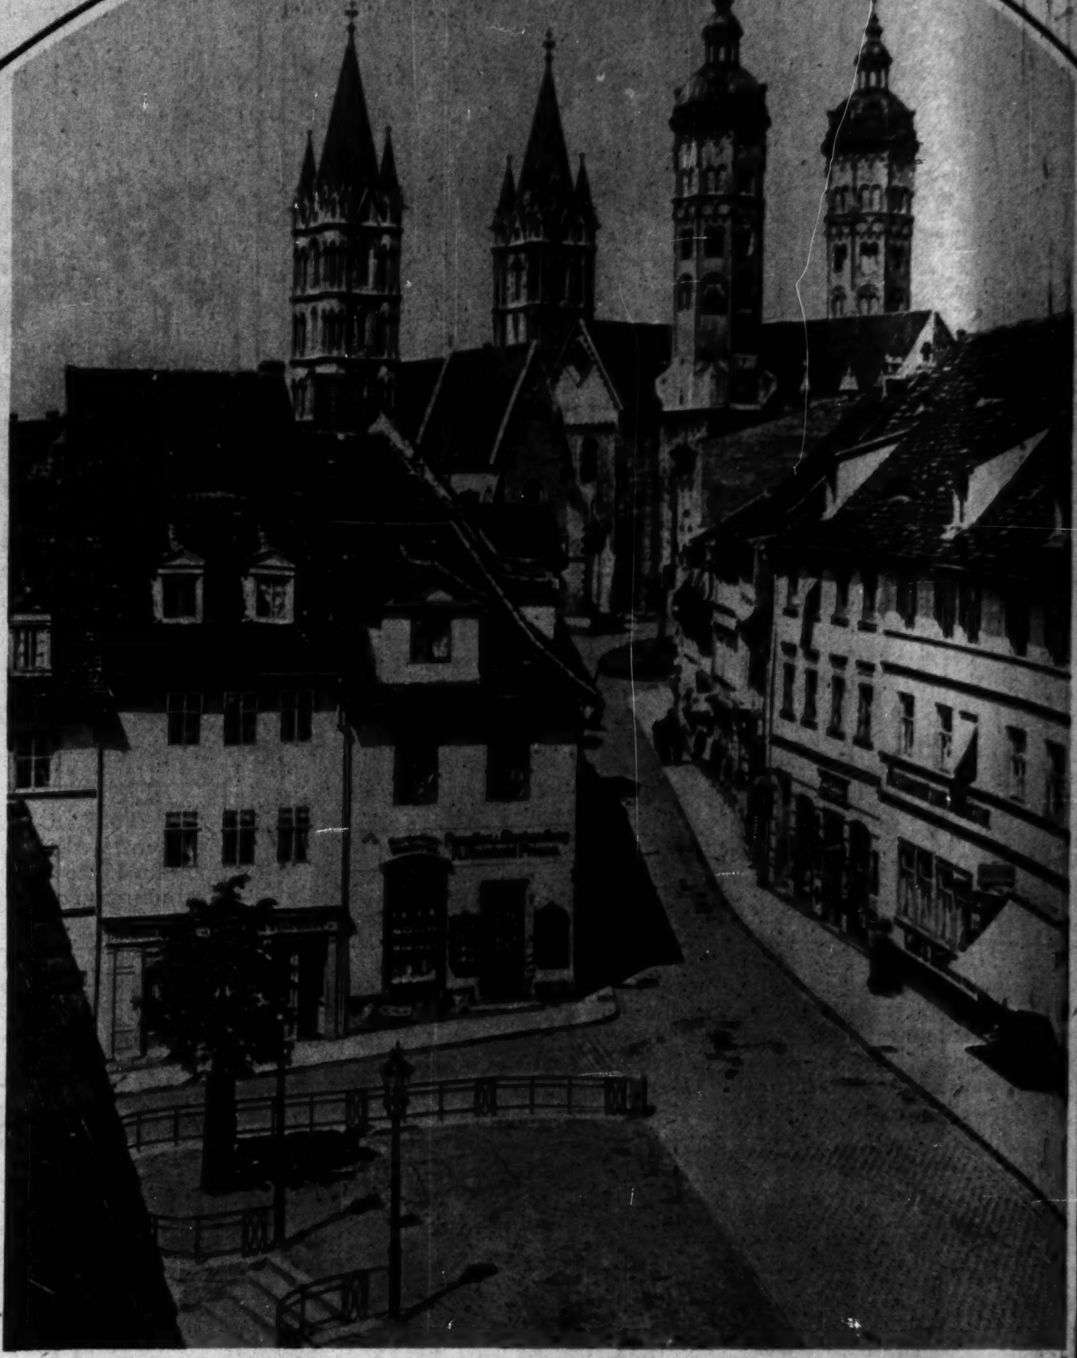
TEN CENTURIES OLD—Picturesque Meissen, on the Elbe river, this summer will observe the 1,000th anniversary of its founding. In the foreground of the airplane view shown above is its hilltop cathedral, surrounded by the Albrechtsburg, historic Saxon castle.

TIME TO CELEBRATE—Among the German cities about to reach the hoary age of 1,000 years is Brandenburg, near Berlin. Here we have at the left the residence of the Brandenburg electors, with the spire of St. Catherine's church visible in the rear. The figure at the right is not a wooden Indian, but an ancient stone statue of Brandenburg Roland.



TURNING BACK THE PAGES OF TIME—Naumburg, with its celebrated cathedral, also is planning to relive the days of 928. Plays and pageants in medieval costumery and splendor are being arranged for the coming summer.

"Winy, acid coffee from Arabia—syrupy, rich coffee from the East Indies—mild, mellow coffee from Venezuela. Uncounted different natural flavors from over forty tropical lands!

Yet no single one of them alone has ever pleased the critical coffee drinkers of this country.

The first true nation-wide fame has come to no single coffee grown, but to a mingling of many coffees—to a blend created years ago in the South.

It was to give a new luxury to the great families of old Dixie that Joel Cheek worked many months to perfect this blend. He brought into being an extra richness that soon grew celebrated in all that land of good living. Long ago Maxwell House Coffee became the favorite of the whole South.

Today the news of Joel Cheek's blend has traveled throughout the entire country. The mellow richness of Maxwell House has now swiftly made it by far the largest selling coffee in the United States.

A NEW GREYHOUND FOR UNCLE SAM'S NAVAL PACK, the cruiser Pensacola, nears the final stages of construction in the navy yard at Brooklyn. The Pensacola is to have a displacement of 10,000 tons and is designed for a speed of approximately 33 knots. (Photograph from Pacific and Atlantic.)

TO THE LAST OF THE "GROWLERS"—and let it be explained that in London town a growler is not a drinking utensil, but a four-wheeled cab. These old cabbies met at a high tea at the Cabmen's Benevolent association to drink to old times on the birthday of the taxi, which recently "came of age." (Photograph from Wide World.)

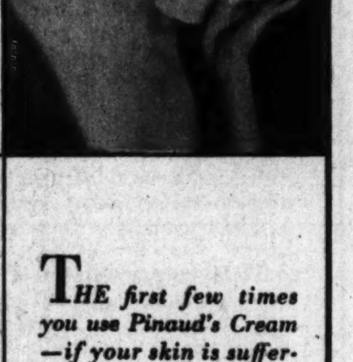
In thirty swift seconds

LOVELIER

than ever before—

· · your skin cleansed · · toned · · suppled in one lightning operation by Pinaud's amazing new Cream that Washes Away!

First apply lightly with your fingertips. Then pat your face with a pad of cotton or washcloth thoroughly soaked in cool water. Instantly both cream and dirt dissolve away!



Now powder! No astringent is necessary. After this thorough cleansing the pores close naturally. And—so exquisitely soft and supple is the skin that powder clings without an additional "base."

The first few times you use Pinaud's Cream—if your skin is suffering from deep-lying accumulations—you can actually feel its wonderful cleansing power. Feel a faint tingling as the clogging dirt is gently drawn from the pores—and then a delightful new radiant freshness!

HERE in one exquisite crystal jar is a snow white, silken Cream that world famous dermatologists say does more for your skin than the most elaborate time-consuming treatment!

A Cream that actually develops new and lasting skin-loveliness . . . even after one application your skin is fresher, clearer, more delicately blooming.

Magical? Only as science is magical today. It has taken the famous French House of Pinaud fifteen years of research and experiment to perfect this amazing New Cream that dermatologists of two continents applaud so enthusiastically.

First you smooth it on—lightly, quickly. You need not rub it in with the strenuous stretching motion used with old fashioned creams.

Miraculously—like a magic magnet—it gathers up the day's dust and powder from the depths of the pores. Then simply washes away!

Vanishes at the touch of cool, clear water, carrying with it all the dirt it has collected.

It leaves your pores really free, able to breathe. It deposits not a trace of waxy, fatty sediment in your skin (as dermatologists point out creams usually do) to foster blackheads and coarsen pores.

And at the very same time Pinaud's Cream stimulates the circulation, it tones the tissues and supples the surface skin. All in thirty swift seconds!

Now you need no astringent—you need no powder base. Just a whisk of powder, a touch of rouge . . . and you are at your best!

Think what time-saving that means to the busy modern woman . . . to the lady of the house who puts the finishing touches on both her dinner and her dressing in the last breathless half hour before the guests arrive . . . to the business girl who must hurry home and change from bee to butterfly before her dinner-date.

But more important still is the fact that each time Pinaud's Cream is used it brings the skin one step nearer the beauty Nature intended it to have! Pinaud, Paris and New York.

PINAUD'S CREAM

Comes in the loveliest crystal jar imaginable—sea-green—artistically modeled. Ask tomorrow at your favorite drug or department store and see what science can mean to your skin.

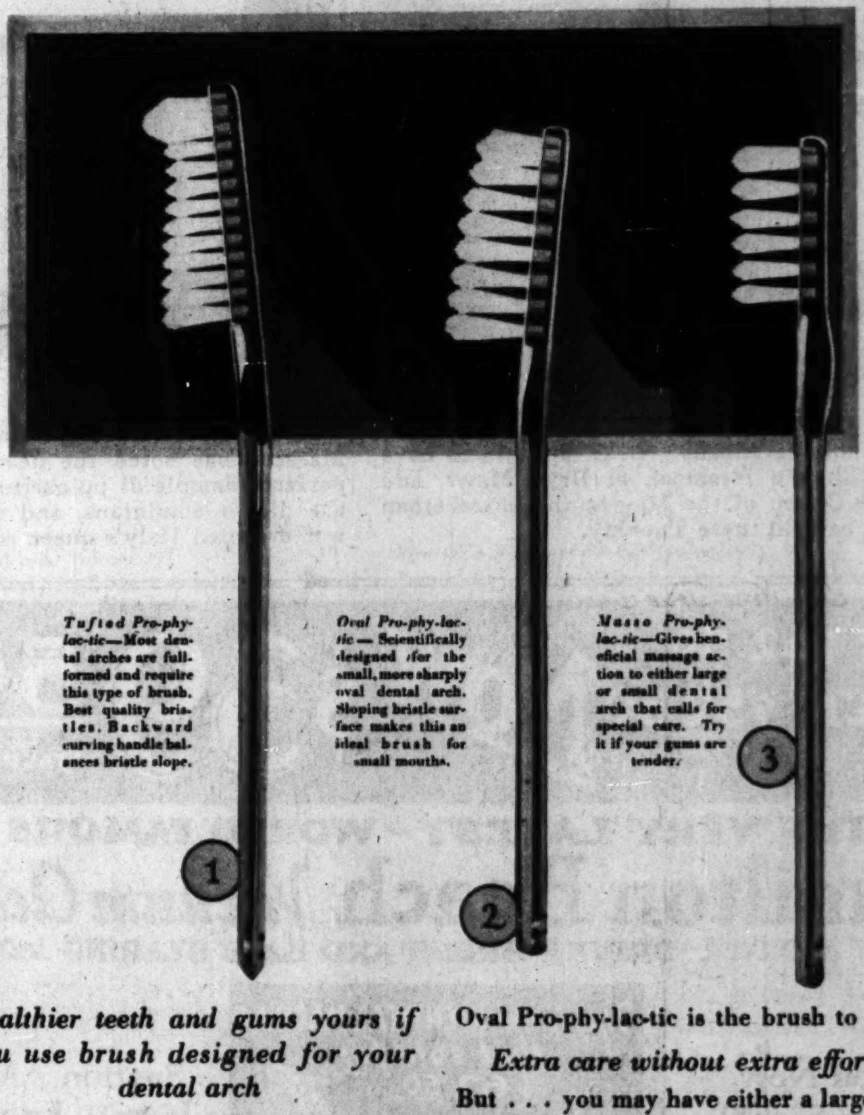
choose right Pro-phy-lac-tic



Tufted Pro-phy-lac-tic—Most dental arches are full-formed and require this type of brush. Best quality bristles. Backward curving handle balances bristle slope.

Oval Pro-phy-lac-tic—Scientifically designed for the small, more sharply oval dental arch. Sloping bristle surface makes this an ideal brush for small mouths.

Masso Pro-phy-lac-tic—Gives beneficial massage action to either large or small dental arch that calls for special care. Try it if your gums are tender.

Healthier teeth and gums yours if you use brush designed for your dental arch

SIMPLE as ABC's now to win strong, sturdy teeth . . . firm, healthy gums.

Ten seconds . . . your mirror . . . and you know what type of dental arch (teeth and gums) you have—what brush suits it best.

If your mirror reveals a full-formed face, your dental arch, too, is full-formed, of average size. The right brush for you is the Tufted Pro-phy-lac-tic.

A smaller facial contour indicates a small, more sharply oval arch. Then the Oval Pro-phy-lac-tic is the brush to use.

Extra care without extra effort

But . . . you may have either a large or small dental arch and require still a different type of brush—the Masso Pro-phy-lac-tic. This brush is for dental arches that call for special care, for teeth and gums that need massage action. Fits both large and small arches. It massages as it cleans.

All three new Pro-phy-lac-tics are alike in one respect—quality. High-grade bristles . . . Super-polished handles in transparent colors . . . Packed in individual, sanitary, air-sealed boxes . . . Guaranteed.

At the GOVERNOR'S MANSION, Columbia, S. C.

Beautiful lawns, flowers, trees assured this simple way

S. J. Ashby, Head Gardener of the State Capitol Grounds, recommends his practical plan—inexpensive for any home owner

One of the finest show places of Columbia, South Carolina's capital, is the Governor's Mansion with its wonderful grounds. Its velvety green lawns, brilliant flowers, leafy shrubs and trees, are the work of S. J. Ashby, head gardener. Here is how he secured success:

"For the past year, I have used Vigoro exclusively," says Mr. Ashby, "on the lawns, flowers, trees and shrubbery of the State Capitol grounds, as well as on the grounds of the Executive Mansion, State Office Building and my private home, with excellent results.

"It has proved highly satisfactory, because it is a complete plant food and won me immediately with its easy application and quick results.

"Applied according to the simple directions in each package, Vigoro should be a great aid in helping home owners, both small and large, achieve real success. It is clean, odorless, easy to apply and most economical."

Scores of professional gardeners and thousands of home owners have found in Vigoro an economical, practical, effective way to secure finest results.

Its cost is only 10c to 20c for every 100 square feet. It is clean, odorless, can be sown by hand—contains all elements of plant food required for early vigorous growth, full development of fruit, flowers, foliage.

For Vigoro is a scientific, complete plant food, different from any other you have ever known, perfected by Swift & Company plant food experts.

So clean, odorless, can be sown by hand.

This year have the beautiful lawn, flowers, shrubs and trees you have always wanted—fresh vegetables, too. Improve your property; increase its value. See your dealer now. Full directions in every bag—100, 50, 25 lb. sizes and 5 lb. packages.

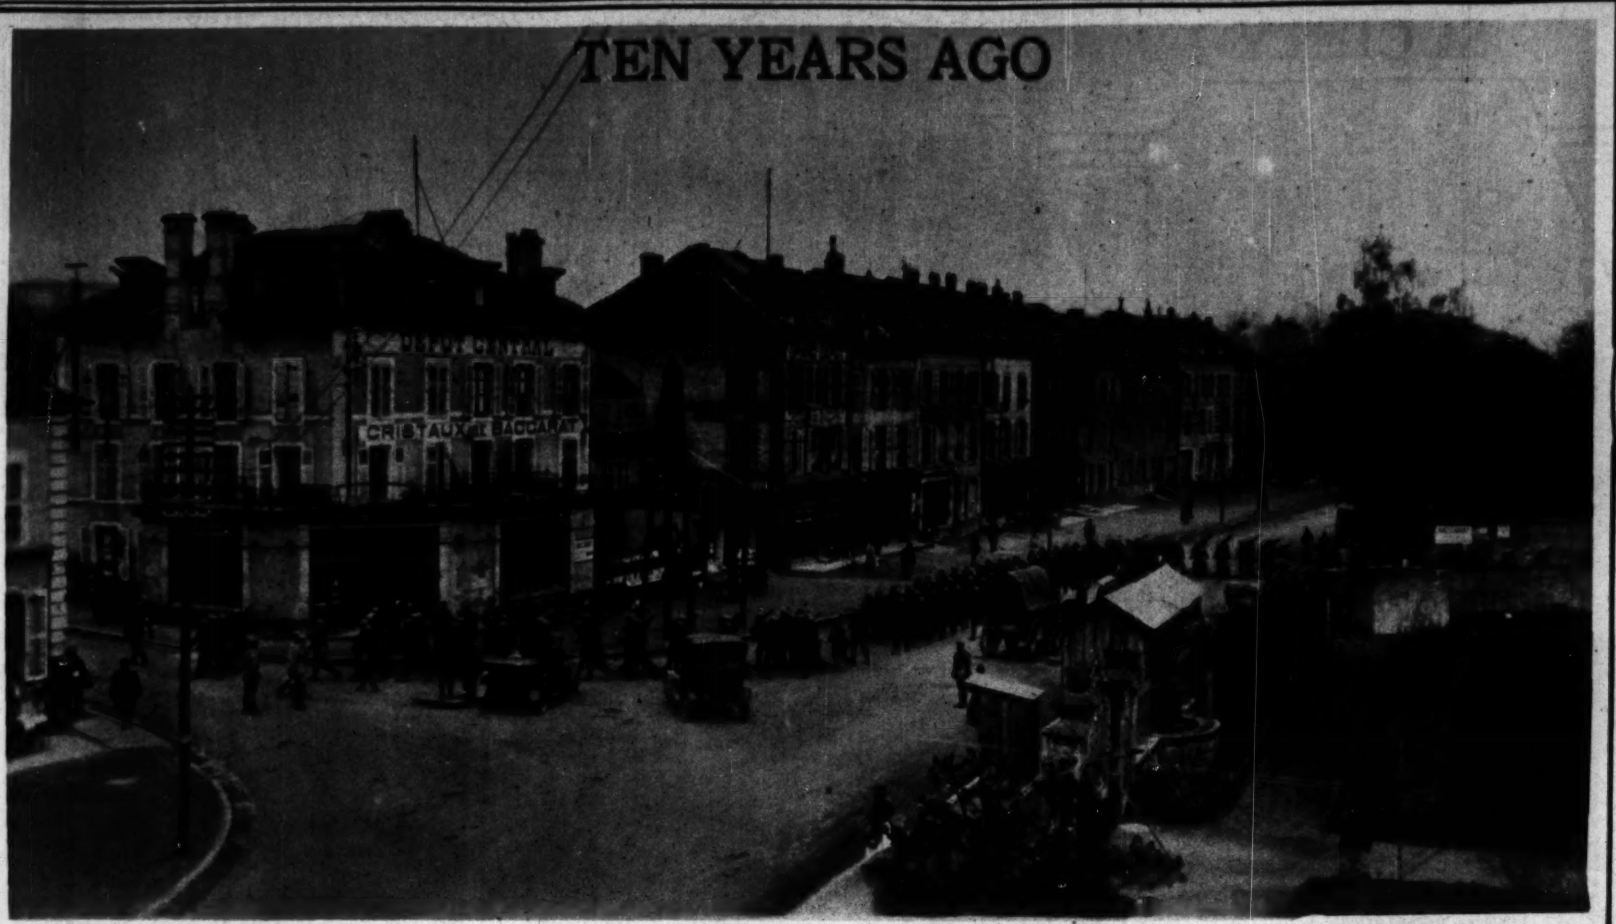
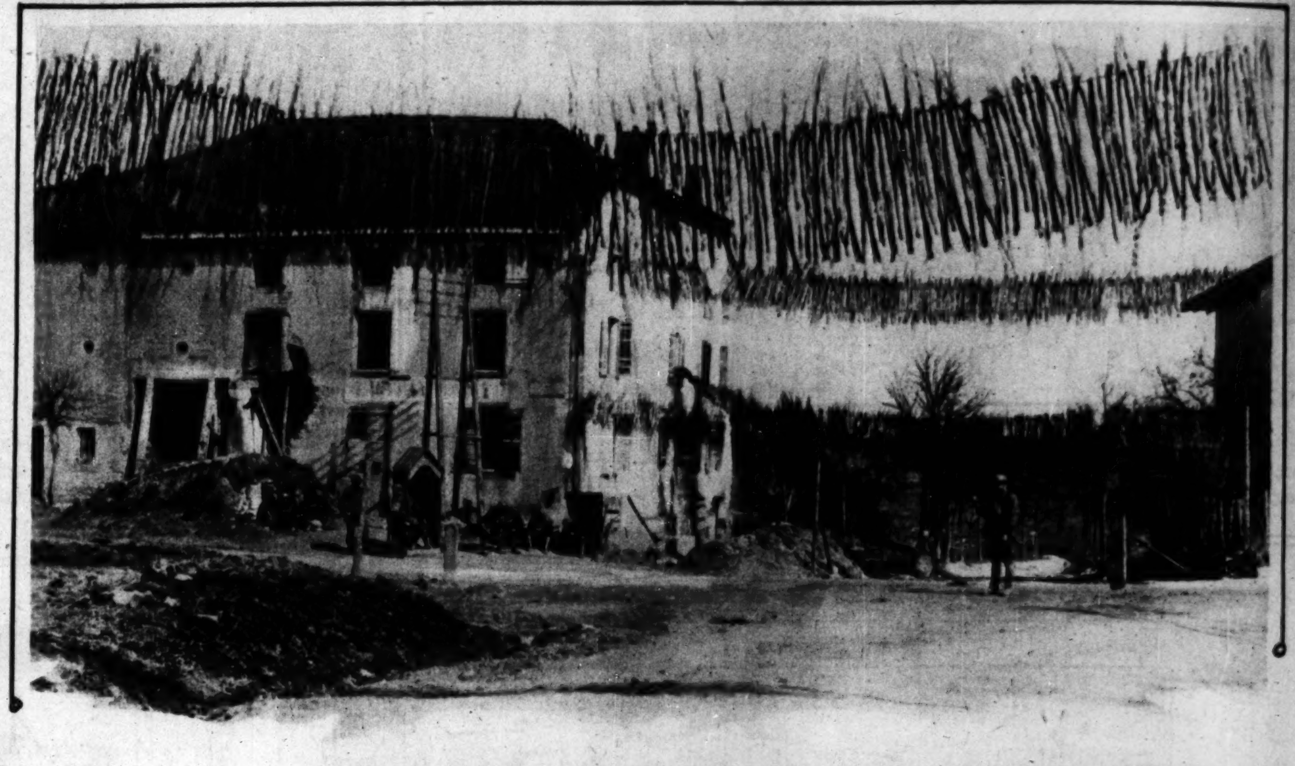
TEN YEARS AGO



TEN YEARS AGO the 166th infantry was on the move, and in this particular instance was passing through Baccarat, France, then the headquarters of the 42nd division. The date was April 27.

BARBED THREATS—Entanglements were set up between the outpost and Ancerville, France, in the great struggle. It was here that the Second battalion, 165th infantry, was to be found on April 25, 1918.

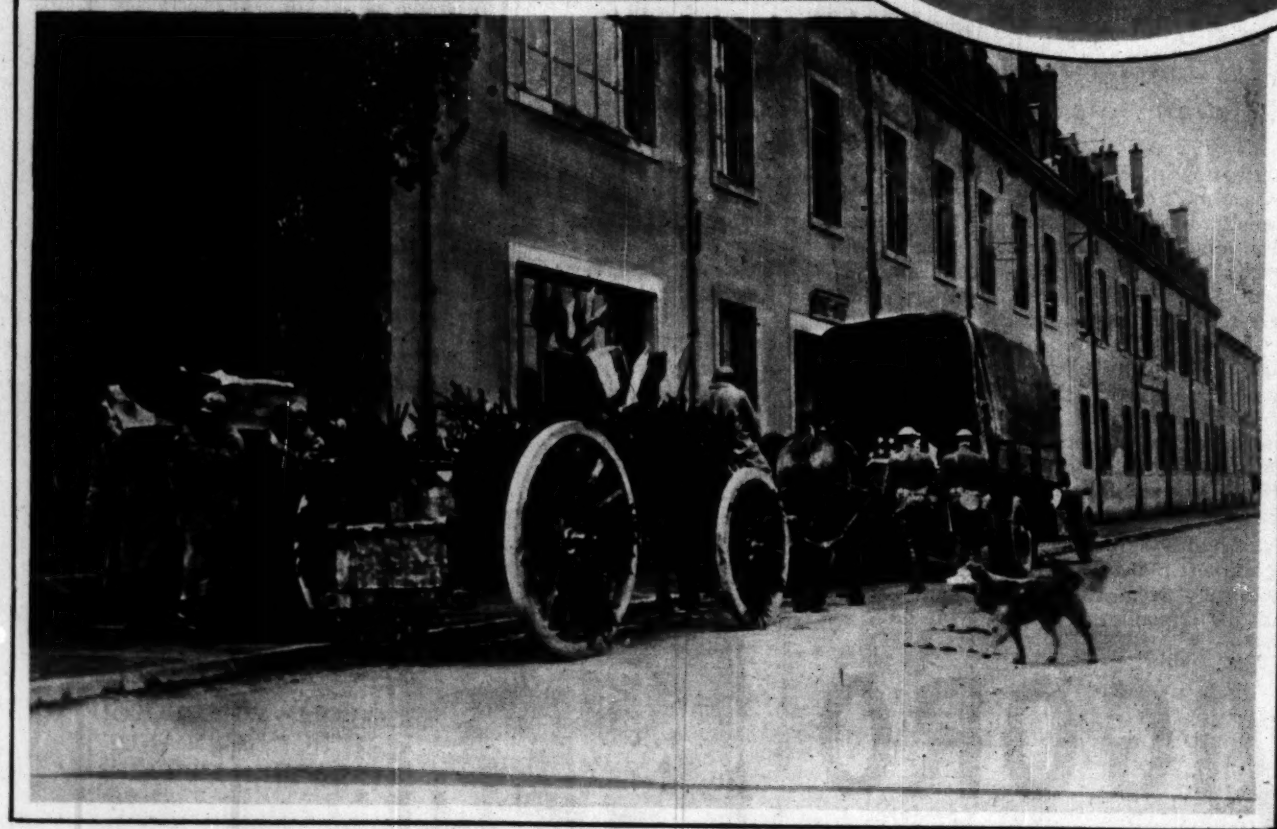
AT HOME FAR FROM HOME—The boys from out where the tall corn grows traveled a long way before they reached their destination, but when they got there they found comfortable dugouts at Badonviller. Here the 168th infantry, formed from one of Iowa's crack outfits, was quartered a decade ago today.



CAMOUFLAGED—Battalion headquarters of the 166th infantry at Montigny, France, were more or less effectively screened from the prying eyes of the enemy on land and in the air.

ON THE SIDEWALKS of, not New York, but Rue Thiers, Badonviller. The Second battalion of the 168th regiment took up quarters in the streets of the war battered town pictured at the right. The photo was taken ten years ago this day.

WASH DAY—Members of the 149th regiment of field artillery did a bit of home laundering at Selacourt on April 26, 1918.



GOING HOME—Private Elmer G. Zuschlag of Company B, First battalion, 168th infantry, 42nd division, was buried, along with French comrades in arms, at Baccarat on April 27, 1918. The flag draped casket is to be seen in the truck.

THEY PULLED THE CAISSONS—Artillery horses of the 149th Field artillery posed for this picture at Selacourt on April 26, 1918. But they didn't appear to be particularly happy about their part in the war.

THE VACANT CHAIR—Billy Roach, ardent admirer of the White Sox, is dead, but the chair he always occupied at the game was reserved for him when the Sox opened their season. That opening battle was the first Billy had missed in many years. On behalf of his friends, Metzler, McCurdy, and "Lena" Blackburne covered the seat with this floral remembrance.

A BOLT OF DEATH is caught by the camera as it leaves a torpedo tube on the U. S. S. Pope. The torpedo is aimed at a target seven miles away. The occasion was the recent maneuvers off the Philippine islands.

CIVIL WAR NURSES—State and city officials joined in paying honor to three surviving Massachusetts nurses of the war of the rebellion. In the group are Mrs. Malcolm Nichols, wife of the mayor of Boston; Mrs. Mary E. Smith, 86; Mrs. Fannie T. Hazen, 87, and Mrs. Helen E. Smith, 88, the nurses, and Mayor Nichols.

Get the PERMANENT that never disappoints

YOU, Madame, may have wondered why there is such a difference in permanent waves. Some are alluring as a skein of sunbeams, and soft. Others are dull and cold as a paste jewel.

The difference depends on the methods used in softening the hair. This simple step was a barrier to exquisite perfection until E. Frederics discovered the Frederics Vita-Tonic Process.

This wonderful process quickly adorns the hair with an alluring softness and lustre that remain undimmed as long as the wave lasts. It will neither harm, stain nor discolor hair of the most delicate texture and shading.

To avoid disappointment and to get the most beautiful permanent, go to the deft-fingered hairdresser using this process. Also see that he uses the Frederics Permanent Waving Machine. Then and only then will you look your loveliest.

To identify the Frederics Vita-Tonic Process look for the name on each wrapper used in softening the hair.

Every woman should know this Face Powder Secret

Two Kinds of Face Powder To Choose From

Sample Them Both

No one face powder blends with all types of skin—so Stillman has made two kinds of powder.

One—"Stillman Oriental"—clings wonderfully to the normal and excessively dry skin. It does not smart, will not irritate or flake. Is distinctively different from other powders. An entirely new formula that soothes the dry skin and keeps it soft and natural.

For the oily type of skin—"Stillman Bouquet"—spreads smoothly, and clings, too. Will not clog the pores, which is most important for this type of skin. Blends perfectly, removes all skin shine, making your complexion flawless and irresistibly natural.

General samples of both powders, exquisitely perfumed, will be sent you in the popular Stillman Twin Packet upon receipt of six cents in stamps to cover mailing cost. With the Twin Packet you receive a special FREE introductory offer coupon on your first box of Stillman powder and an instructive folder telling you how to care for a normal, oily or dry skin.

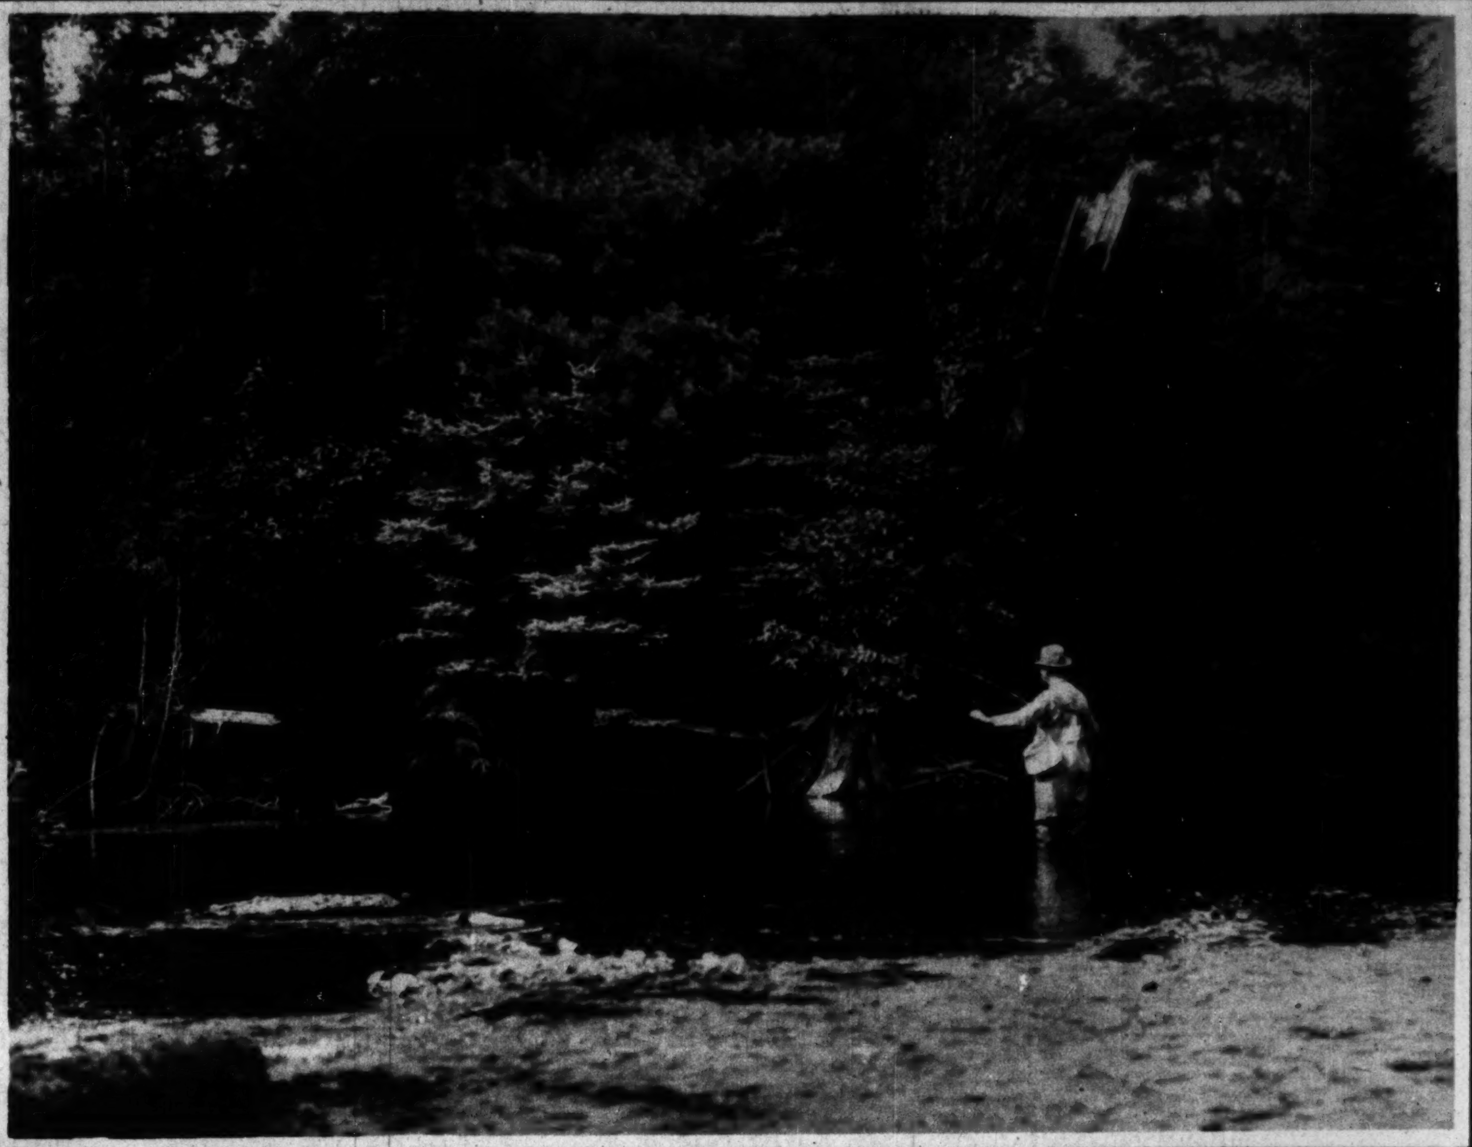
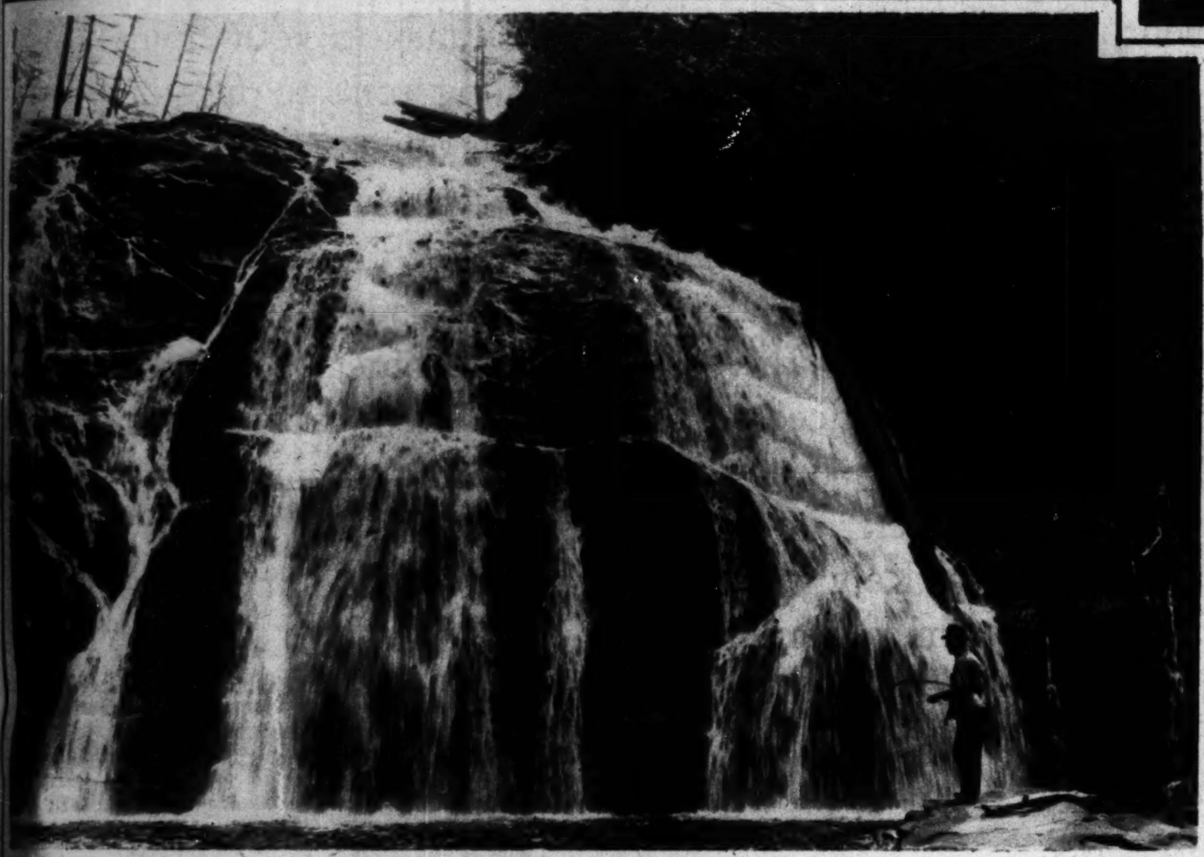
Chicago Sunday Tribune
THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

April 29, 1928

THE TROUT SEASON OPENS TUESDAY, and the trains for the northland leaving Chicago tonight will carry many and many a hopeful fisherman. Scenes such as those depicted on this page will be repeated often and often as the army of invaders swings into action against Mr. Trout. Our opening scene presents a lucky gentleman landing a brook trout in a quiet pool on Indian creek, in Wisconsin.

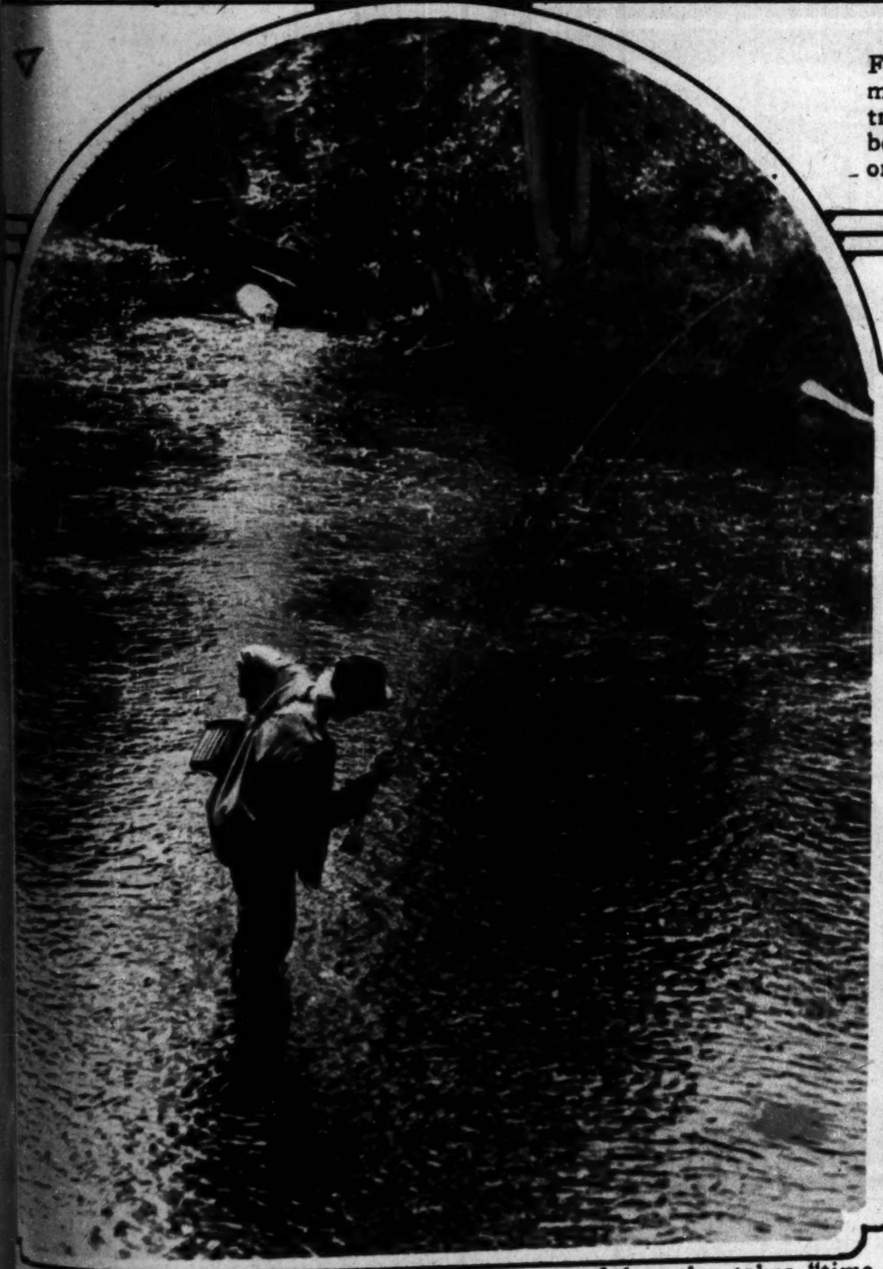


OUGHT TO BE ONE HERE, SURE, says this visitor at a deep hole in the Montreal river on the Wisconsin-Michigan boundary. And our angler stands ready for the expected strike of a brook trout.



MUSIC WHILE YOU FISH—A veteran sportsman angles for brook trout in a beautiful pool below a noisy waterfall on the Potato river.

FISHING FOAM-FLECKED WATERS for rainbow trout in the Presque Isle river. Bob Becker, fishing editor of The Tribune, is at the right, wading through the swift water for his first cast.



INTO THE CREEL HE GOES—A successful angler takes "time out" to stow away a brook trout taken from the Presque Isle river, a noted trout stream of the upper peninsula of Michigan. For the fate of Mr. Trout, see the picture at the extreme right.

A RINGSIDE SEAT for a trout battle. Mrs. Bob Becker watches her husband fish a likely brook trout hole in the west branch of the Presque Isle river.

THE END OF MR. TROUT—Fish dinners in the north woods will soon be in order. Here's a camp dinner all ready to serve—hot beans, broiled fish, and coffee. Yum, yum, and likewise ah-h-h!

The Kelvinator Company
36 N. Tenth St., Allentown, Pennsylvania

Gentlemen: During the four years since our Kelvinator was installed it has rendered continuous service without any expense for up-keep or a single adjustment. In all our experience with electrical and mechanical household devices, our Kelvinator is the most nearly perfect.

Yours very truly,

★ The letters used in Kelvinator advertising are genuine. For obvious reasons we do not publish the names of the writers, but they are on file in our Detroit offices.

"... our Kelvinator is the most nearly perfect"

For more than four years the Kelvinator about which this letter was written has rendered constant, automatic refrigeration service without a single adjustment. The utter dependability of the Kelvinator . . . even in its earliest stages of pioneering the field of domestic electric refrigeration . . . testifies to the rugged simplicity and staunchness of its mechanical features.

Many of the first Kelvinators ever made and sold . . . the first electric refrigeration equipment ever offered the home . . . are still rendering satisfactory service. Some, naturally, have been replaced by newer and larger models, but a number of them are still plugging away, day in and day out, at their work of creating leisure, comfort and wholesomeness in the homes of their original owners . . . after twelve years.

Even this Kelvinator of four years ago is, comparatively speaking, an old model . . . for Kelvinator development has moved rapidly. The new, improved Kelvinator, in its wide range of styles and sizes to meet every home requirement, is ready to take up its automatic task in your home.

There is a size of Kelvinator cooling unit to fit your present refrigerator and its installation is quickly and simply accomplished.

Or, if you prefer, you may select a new cabinet from the famous Kelvinator line. You will find exactly the refrigerator you need among these Kelvinator cabinets. They are most moderately priced, depending on their capacity and design, and conveniently arranged deferred payments may be had if you prefer.

Let the local Kelvinator dealer tell you more about this faithful, economical servant in the home. Kelvinator Corporation, Detroit.

Model 272—Five cubic feet of actual food storage . . . 7 square feet of shelf space! Attractive and durable gray lacquer exterior and heavy white enamel interior.

Model P-6—Almost 6 cubic feet of food capacity . . . 9.94 sq. ft. shelf area! Heavy, easily cleaned porcelain within and without. Attractive French Gray borders.

Model P-9—Nine and a half cubic feet of food storage with almost 15 square feet of shelf space! Heavy, easy cleaning porcelain inside and out. Striking trimmings of French Gray.

Model 298—Seven cubic feet of actual food storage with 9⅗ sq. ft. of shelf space. White lacquer exterior with heavy white porcelain interior. Finish is durable and easily cleaned.

FLYERS' FROZEN OBSTACLES—The crew of the good ship Bremen flew above such icebergs as these before finding sanctuary at Greenly island. These two infest Belle Isle strait.

FIRST ACROSS THE TOP OF THE WORLD BY PLANE—Lieut. Carl Ben Eilson and Capt. George Wilkins for nearly twenty-one hours flew above the desolate wastes of the polar basin in negotiating the 2,200 miles from Point Barrow, Alaska, to Spitzbergen. The first of Capt. Wilkins' dispatches, telling of his thrilling hop, reached The Tribune last Sunday.

CHICAGO'S RECORD BASEBALL CROWD—Thousands were turned away, but 48,000 persons managed to squeeze into Wrigley field last Sunday to see the Cubs down the Pirates, last year's league champions, by a count of 3 to 2. With one possible exception, it was the largest outpouring that ever witnessed a league game in Chicago.

Chin-lines
tell frankly of Age

A DOUBLE CHIN is never flattering. It is a frank and unmistakable sign of age, or of tragic neglect.

Dorothy Gray's long experience in caring for women's faces showed her that the under-chin line is one of the places in which age first shows. She saw how a sluggish circulation will—unless corrected—allow the muscles of the face and throat to relax, so that stretched tissues and a drooping, elderly chin-line must inevitably result.

Dorothy Gray's treatment for double chin is therefore tremendously successful, because it is based on the stimulation of a healthy, vitalizing circulation, in combination with thorough cleansing and proper lubrication of the skin.

Miss Gray's treatments are now available to Chicago women at 900 Michigan Avenue North. There, and at the leading shops, her preparations may be obtained.

TEN PARACHUTE JUMPS IN 8.2 SECONDS brought a new world record to the army air corps technical school at Rantoul, Ill., thanks to the daring of rookies who had graduated from their course only a few days before. Here are the ten jumpers in the air, caught by a single camera after they had dropped from their tri-motored 16-passenger plane at an altitude of 2,000 feet.

THE RECORD JUMPERS who fluttered down toward Chanute field in 8.2 seconds—and could have done it in five had their trainer not held them back. The trainer, Sergt. Harry Wilson, is in the front row, holding the timer.

A ginger ale known and cherished the wide-world over

And whether it be here in the Canadian Rockies or on some breezy veranda overlooking the sea-washed shores of Bermuda . . . or in the leathern dignity of a London club . . . or in the hot, dry, glaring air of Cairo . . . or in thousands of homes from Maine to California . . . there you will find "Canada Dry."

It is the flavor of this marvelous beverage which has wrought the seeming miracle of its world-wide appeal. Just as connoisseurs speak in hushed tones of their favorite port or burgundy . . . just as the eye of the enthusiast will sparkle at the mention of "Cointreau" or "Grandmanier," so do they feel about "Canada Dry." Here is a beverage defying imitation!

An allure and witchery to its matchless flavor

This ginger ale is made from real Jamaica ginger and other absolutely pure ingredients. They are carefully selected for quality and purity. They are blended in an exact proportion. Everlasting watchfulness is kept at all times to assure that this ginger ale never varies in that proportion. As for its purity—that is a matter of hourly examination with laboratory methods, all through the day. A secret method of carbonation insures uniformity and enables "Canada Dry" to retain its sparkle long after the bottle has been opened. What a delightful ginger ale!

"Canada Dry" contains no capsicum (red pepper). Many ginger ales do. They bite the tongue and have a metallic, unpleasant after-effect.

This is the goodness of man's life!

Drink "Canada Dry" tonight with your dinner! Drink it and know that it is really good for you. It is served in the leading hospitals of the United States and Canada. And as you watch the bubbles rise from its crystal depths, remember that here is a drink which has a place in "the goodness of man's life, the mere living."

DEMEYER

When busily you have been doing the things people do aboard ship on an Atlantic crossing, in five days that sped like five minutes . . . when the three hours by boat-train to Paris have dragged like three centuries . . . and you don't at all feel like your eager, vivid self . . . oh, it's good to relax, as cool hands and soothing preparations bring beauty back to that so-tired face in the Paris Salon of Elizabeth Arden, at Numero 2 of the fashionable rue de la Paix.

When you have returned from travel and are at home on Lake Shore Drive, with life getting constantly more complicated, haven't you sometimes wished, even a little wish, that there were an Elizabeth Arden establishment in Chicago?

There is!

Just off the beaten path, as most smart things are, at 70 East Walton Place is the new Arden Building in which is the Elizabeth Arden Salon.

Here are given treatments as like as twins to those refreshing ministrations you received in Paris. Every firming pat and deft stroke, everything that Paris does for face and figure may be duplicated right here in Chicago, at your very doorstep.

Elizabeth Arden promises you an utterly refreshing beauty experience. And here is a bit of advice—while you are in the Salon ask us about the marvelous new Vienna Youth Mask. Appointments may be arranged by telephoning: Superior 6952.

To fathers who bathe 3-year-olds

If you haven't bathed that young offspring yet, you will. You may think it will be easy. All fathers do — once.

But that slip of a body stays in one place like a drop of water on a red-hot stove. You think you have firm hold of an arm; but by the time you've picked a heel out of your left ear, the arm's gone. You grasp one leg — the other shoots a gallon of water into your trousers pocket.

"For Pete's sake, keep quiet!" you cry. And in reply you get a grin that would melt a judge, immediately followed by a swimming exhibition — "See, daddy? Look how I c'n swim! Lookee!"

Then, when only one grubby knee is left to be scrubbed, and you find that the sinker-soap has once more scuttled away into some dark corner of the tub-bottom and your patience is pushed to the last limit — an indignant voice from downstairs accuses you:

"Henry! I will not have my child spoken to that way! That darling! To hear such language —"

Well, sir, the joke is on you — you should have known about that sinker-soap.

Now, Ivory Soap floats. Three-year-olds love it. They sail it like a boat. They stop giving swimming exhibitions. They sit quiet. They play fair. And when you want it for that last knee, Ivory is there — you can see it, pick it up. Have you ever thought what it means to your own baths that Ivory floats?

Mothers, "It floats" for you, too!

You deserve the luxury of Ivory baths just as much as fathers and three-year-olds.

When, with a sigh of relief, you step into the enfolding warmth of your tub after a day of family cares, hoping for a quarter-hour of refreshing comfort, is there anything quite so irritating as to have the soap slip from your hand and slide to the bottom like a lump of lead?

Ivory never does that!

It stays on top of the water—you can lie back in those soothing depths with perfect confidence that when you are ready for the soap, Ivory will be ready for you on the top of the water, right where you can reach it.

And, since Ivory is also a pure soap and a gentle soap it protects you. Because the skin of your body is used to the protection of garments and is really very sensitive, it needs Ivory's purity.

Women everywhere tell us that they look forward to their daily Ivory baths as the most important means they possess of refreshing themselves and renewing their energy.

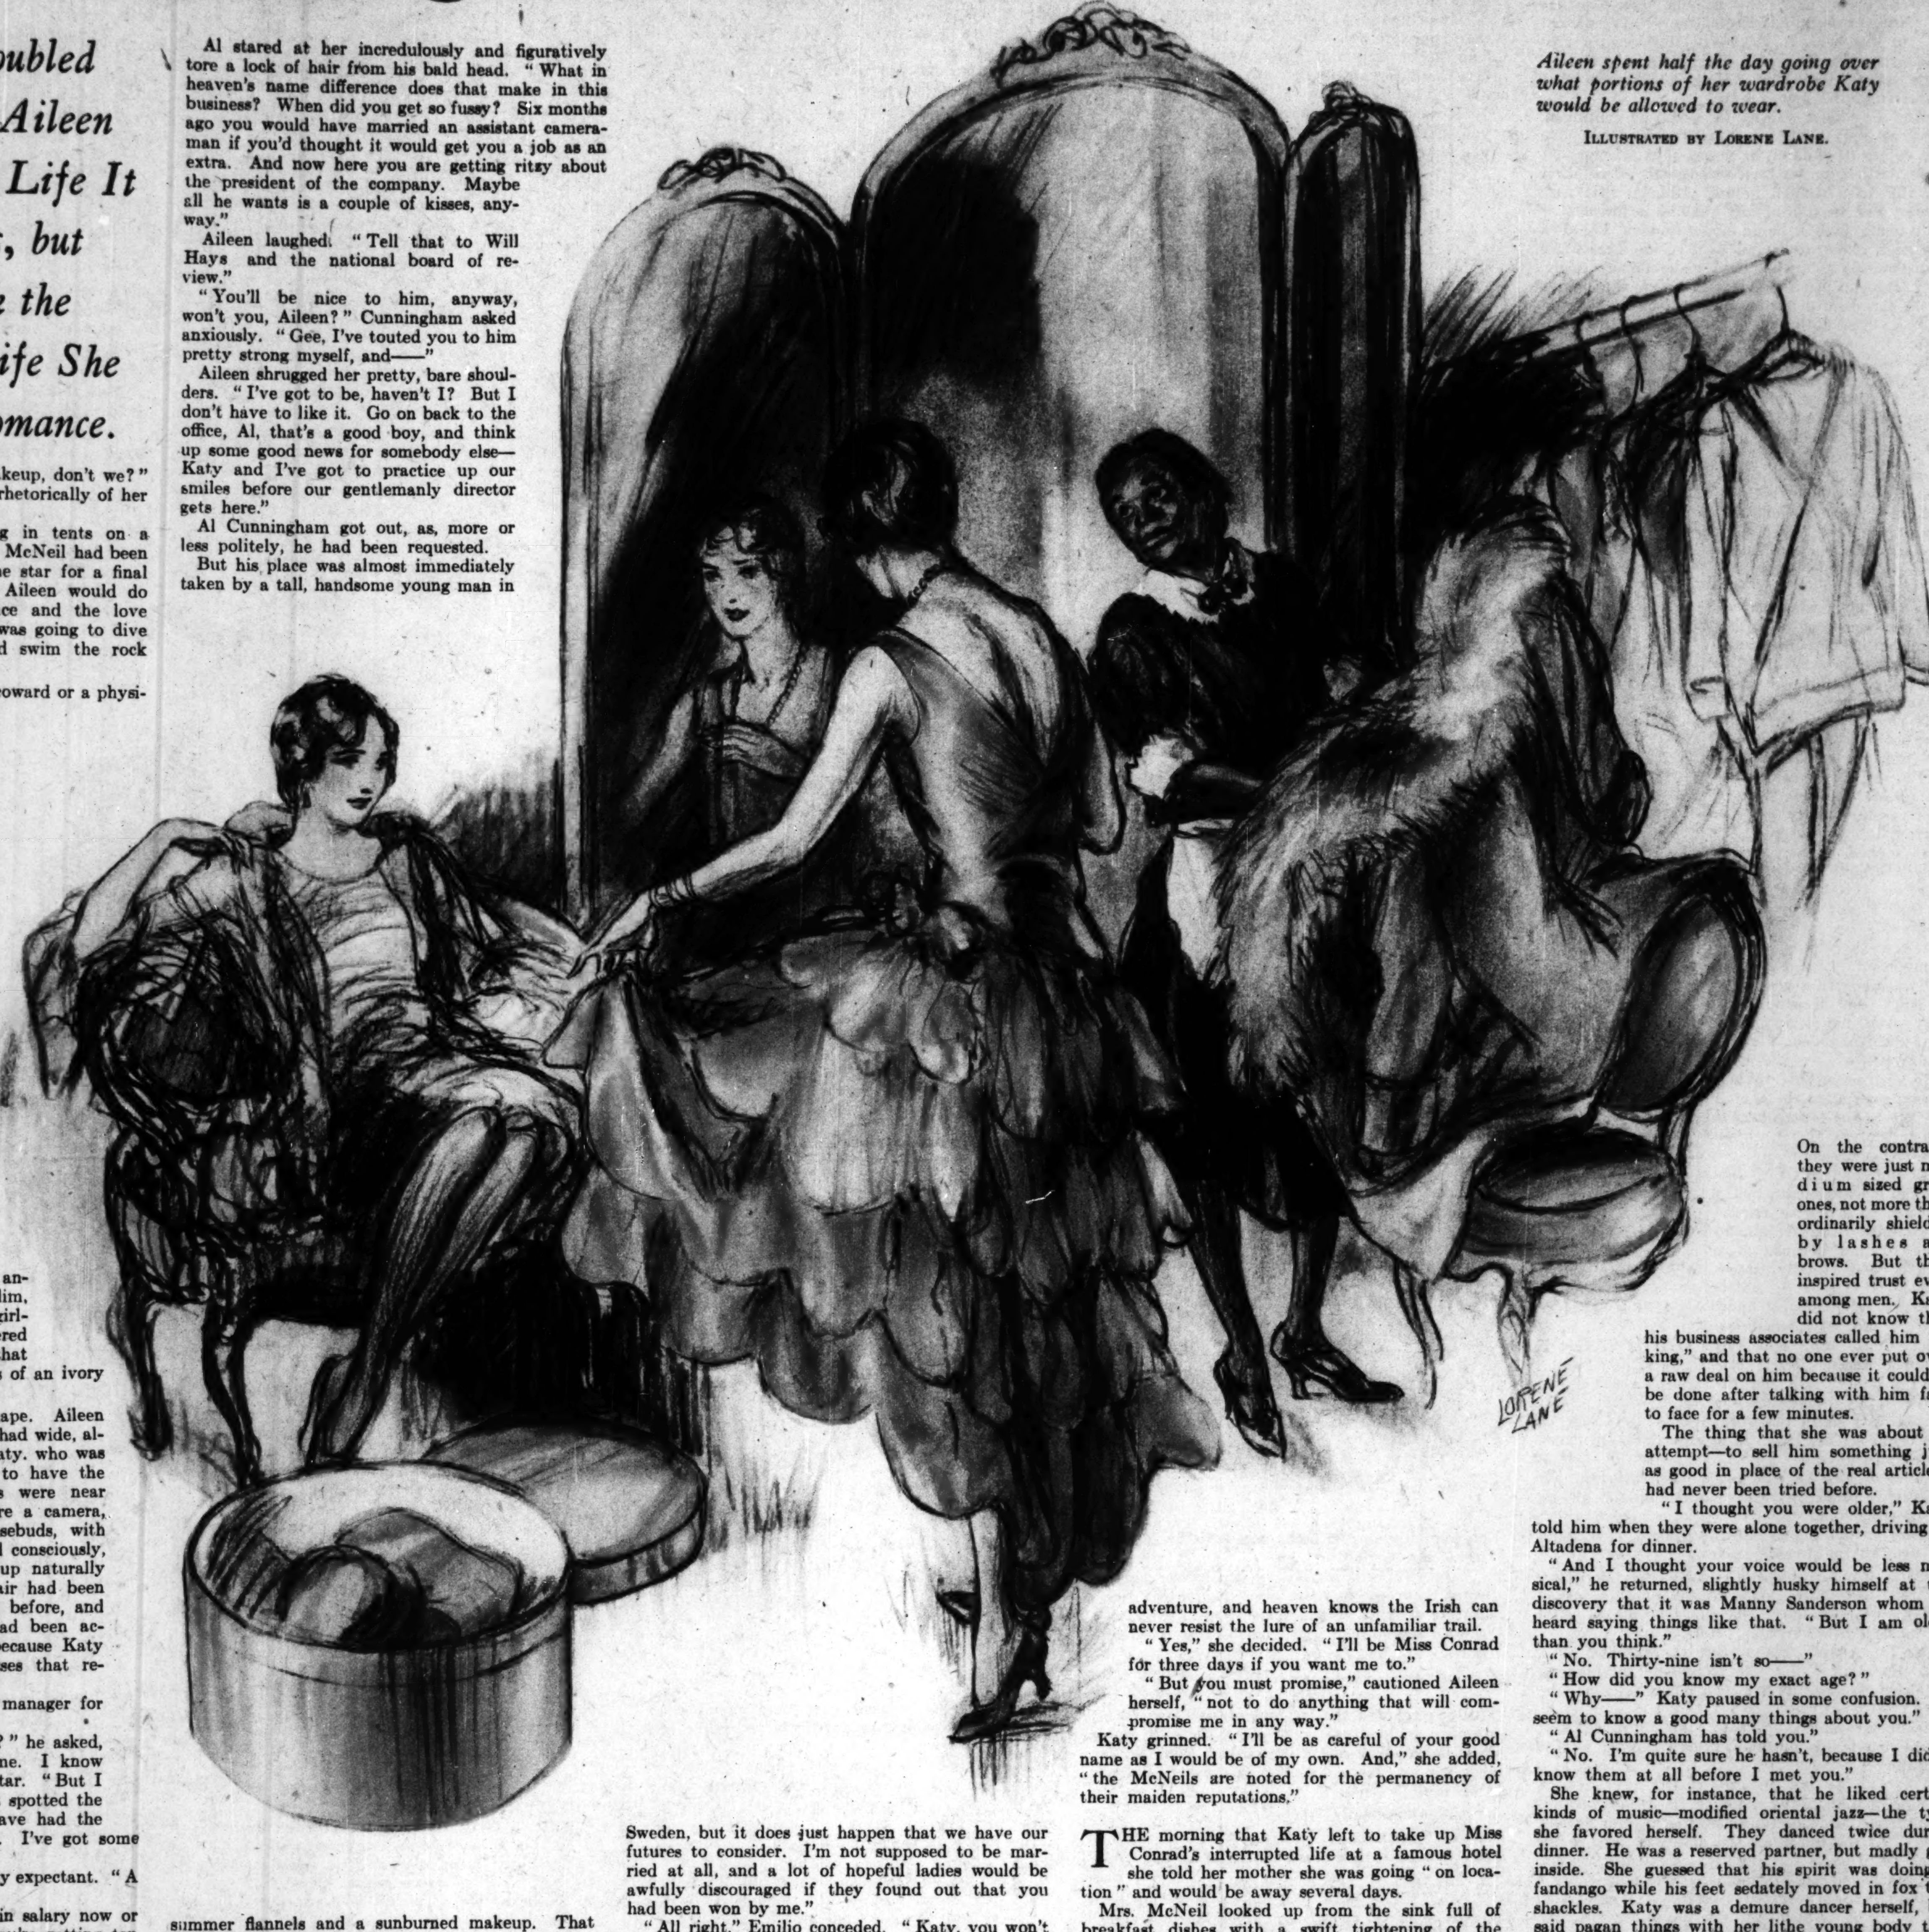
Something Just As Good

By Frank R. Adams

When Katy Doubled for the Famous Aileen Conrad in Reel Life It Was Hazardous, but When She Took the Role in Real Life She Leaped into Romance.



Aileen spent half the day going over what portions of her wardrobe Katy would be allowed to wear.

ILLUSTRATED BY LORENE LANE.

"WE do look alike in makeup, don't we?" Aileen Conrad asked rhetorically of her double.

They were dressing in tents on a stretch of Pacific beach and Katy McNeil had been summoned to the marquee of the star for a final comparison of external details. Aileen would do all of the light comedy sequence and the love scene on the beach, while Katy was going to dive from the hundred foot cliff and swim the rock strewn channel against the tide.

Not that Aileen Conrad was a coward or a physical weakling. But she had recently been elevated to stardom by the Paragon Film corporation at a considerable exploitation expense. A lot of money would be wasted if Aileen got drowned, disfigured, or even seriously ill. Katy could be replaced for ten or fifteen dollars a day.

Katy was quite a bit of girl to get for that price, if anybody should ask you. Meaning by that not quantity but quality. There was only a little over a hundred pounds of her, but the material was pure silk, first quality, with practically no perceptible flaws.

In the one-third piece bathing suits which both girls were wearing it was possible to see how much they did resemble one another. Katy, like Aileen, had slim, boyish legs and delicate, slightly girlish shoulders and breasts, covered with a fine textured outer skin that had the color and soft smoothness of an ivory parchment paper.

Their faces were the same shape. Aileen Conrad, who was really Viennese, had wide, almost Indian, cheek bones, and Katy. who was almost certainly Irish, managed to have the same characteristic. Their eyes were near enough of a shade to pass before a camera, and their mouths were twin rosebuds, with only this difference: Aileen smiled consciously, while Katy's lip corners curled up naturally just like a chow's tail. Their hair had been cut by the same barber the day before, and they were both blondes; that had been accomplished the day before, too, because Katy was naturally adorned with tresses that resembled unalloyed copper.

Al Cunningham, general studio manager for Paragon, came into Aileen's tent.

"Which of you is Miss Conrad?" he asked, genuinely puzzled. "Don't tell me. I know you." He turned rightly to the star. "But I don't mind saying that if I hadn't spotted the beauty mole under your chin I'd have had the deuce of a time picking you out. I've got some big news for you, Aileen."

"Yes?" Aileen was appropriately expectant. "A raise in salary, perhaps."

"Gold digger! No. No raise in salary now or ever, so far as I'm concerned. You're getting ten times what any woman is worth now. This is a social item. Manny Sanderson, our honored president, the high mogul of the entire shebang, is coming all the way from his nice, warm New York office just to see his newest star."

"To see me?"

"Judge for yourself. I'll read you a part of his letter. Listen! 'Dear Al: I'm leaving for the coast tomorrow. Don't make any engagements for me of any sort, especially social ones. I don't want to be vamped by any lady who wants a better job. Oh, for the love of Mike, steer away all clinging women. The only one I want to see is this new luminary of ours, Miss Conrad. For some reason or other she intrigues me. The stills I have of her are marvelous. I'm not sure that she would be quite so wonderful on the screen as she would be in the home, but I took the chance of giving her that star contract, unseen, just on the strength of my feeling that she is a rather more than ordinarily attractive woman. And now I want to know if my judgment is correct. I've got to know. The desire to find out has been gnawing at me for some time. So I am coming to have a look. Please ask her to cancel all engagements while I am there. It will be only three days.'"

Al Cunningham ceased reading and looked at the star expectantly. "How's that for a Christmas present? Darling, you have the president of one of the greatest motion picture companies in the world kneeling at your feet. If you care for it you may possibly be Mrs. President next week. What's the matter? Why don't you give three rousing cheers or something?"

"Why should I? You know what this means as well as I do. Mrs. President, my foot! He must have one or two wives living right now."

Al stared at her incredulously and figuratively tore a lock of hair from his bald head. "What in heaven's name difference does that make in this business? When did you get so fussy? Six months ago you would have married an assistant cameraman if you'd thought it would get you a job as an extra. And now here you are getting ritzy about the president of the company. Maybe all he wants is a couple of kisses, anyway."

Aileen laughed. "Tell that to Will Hays and the national board of review."

"You'll be nice to him, anyway, won't you, Aileen?" Cunningham asked anxiously. "Gee, I've touted you to him pretty strong myself, and——"

Aileen shrugged her pretty, bare shoulders. "I've got to be, haven't I? But I don't have to like it. Go on back to the office, Al, that's a good boy, and think up some good news for somebody else—Katy and I've got to practice up our smiles before our gentlemanly director gets here."

Al Cunningham got out, as, more or less politely, he had been requested.

But his place was almost immediately taken by a tall, handsome young man in summer flannels and a sunburned makeup. That the sunburn was grease paint proclaimed him as a fellow actor. Besides that, his clothes were just a little too immaculate and too well pressed for even the wealthiest idler at the swankiest beach club along the water front.

HE stepped unerringly to Aileen's side and kissed her a little fervently on the shoulder.

"Are you sure you've kissed the right one, Emilio?" she asked, really smiling for the first time.

"Positive about it, old thing. I would not have the slightest difficulty picking you out in the dark. But I doubt if it would be dark where you are. I think that probably you're luminous, like the dial of my watch."

She patted his hand affectionately, but as she did so a frown puckered her brows. "Al Cunningham was just here."

"Yes. I noticed him going into your tent."

"That's why you came over yourself. Jealous?"

"No, but——"

She laughed again. "Wait till you hear why Al came." She told him the news. "What do you think of that for a long distance sex appeal? I charm 'em from coast to coast."

It was Emilio's turn to frown. "I'll kill the pig if he touches you with one finger."

"Hush, darling, don't be too Spanish! I've got to be nice to him. We're both working for him and——"

"I don't give a damn. He's not going to make love to my wife."

"Hush, hush, Emilio! That's a secret."

"How can I keep it a secret when I get mad? No man with Spanish blood in his veins is going to let his wife be insulted by a greasy——"

"Darling, you are wonderful when your Spanish blood gets to boiling, even if you were born in Sweden, but it does just happen that we have our futures to consider. I'm not supposed to be married at all, and a lot of hopeful ladies would be awfully discouraged if they found out that you had been won by me."

"All right," Emilio conceded. "Katy, you won't tell any one, will you?"

Katy smiled; that is, she broadened the smile which was a piquantly permanent feature.

"No, sir. I'm that relieved to find out that you two are more respectable than I thought."

Emilio laughed and then frowned again as he turned to his wife. "But that doesn't settle the matter of this lecherous old moneybags who is coming out to look you over."

"Perhaps he won't want me," Aileen suggested.

"Won't want you?" Emilio echoed. "Then he won't be human. Any man would want you."

"Thanks."

"And I won't stand for it."

"What else can we do?"

"You won't need me any more?" asked Katy, edging toward the tent flap, perfectly willing to escape the family councils.

"No," decided Aileen, and then corrected herself. "Wait a minute, Katy. We might, at that. Why not?"

"Why not what?" demanded her husband surlily.

"Why not have Katy double for me socially while Manny Sanderson is here?"

All three of them considered this for a moment in thoughtful silence.

"Could we get away with it?"

Aileen shrugged. "We might. She fools nearly everybody, even those who know me pretty well. Sanderson has never seen me, and all those stills were taken with makeup on. Isn't it worth trying?"

Emilio turned to Katy. "Would you do it?"

Katy hesitated.

"For a hundred dollars a day?" he added.

Katy thought rapidly. A hundred dollars a day was a good many times ten or fifteen dollars. Further than that, the proposition savored of an adventure, and heaven knows the Irish can never resist the lure of an unfamiliar trail.

"Yes," she decided. "I'll be Miss Conrad for three days if you want me to."

"But you must promise," cautioned Aileen herself, "not to do anything that will compromise me in any way."

Katy grinned. "I'll be as careful of your good name as I would be of my own. And," she added, "the McNeils are noted for the permanency of their maiden reputations."

THE morning that Katy left to take up Miss Conrad's interrupted life at a famous hotel she told her mother she was going "on location" and would be away several days.

Mrs. McNeil looked up from the sink full of breakfast dishes with a swift tightening of the heart. She hated to have Katy double, but Katy was her own boss, and doubling did pay twice as much as being an extra.

"Is it something very dangerous this time?" the older woman asked.

"Not dangerous at all," Katy assured her blithely. "It's for some work Miss Conrad could do just as well herself, but she's being temperamental about it."

It was a long step from the crowded, cluttered three room apartment where her mother housed six children and herself to Miss Conrad's spacious suite at the hotel.

Aileen spent half the day discussing the plan and going over what portions of her wardrobe Katy would be allowed to wear. Then Aileen left for her husband's bungalow on a Hollywood hillside and Katy let herself settle down gradually into the comfortable luxuriance of her new nest.

It was very nice, Katy thought—almost as good as some of the sets in the studio. She wished that her mother might be there to share the comfort. And, incidentally, to bolster her up for the coming ordeal with this ogre—who probably ate little girls and very likely preferred his blondes raw.

She first met Manny Sanderson at dusk. He had been brought to the suite by Al Cunningham, who introduced them and discreetly pleaded another engagement.

"Why, he's a little man, and slender!" Katy thought to herself. "And I've never seen such eyes on a human being."

They talked for him, those eyes of Manny Sanderson's. He seldom had much to say for himself vocally, especially with women, but the gentle sincerity of his gaze compelled the attention of at least the lady upon whom it rested. Not that his eyes were large and beautiful, like a leading man's. On the contrary, they were just medium sized gray ones, not more than ordinarily shielded by lashes and brows. But they inspired trust even among men. Katy did not know that his business associates called him "a king," and that no one ever put over a raw deal on him because it couldn't be done after talking with him face to face for a few minutes.

The thing that she was about to attempt—to sell him something just as good in place of the real article—had never been tried before.

"I thought you were older," Katy told him when they were alone together, driving to Altadena for dinner.

"And I thought your voice would be less musical," he returned, slightly husky himself at the discovery that it was Manny Sanderson whom he heard saying things like that. "But I am older than you think."

"No. Thirty-nine isn't so——"

"How did you know my exact age?"

"Why——" Katy paused in some confusion. "I seem to know a good many things about you."

"Al Cunningham has told you."

"No. I'm quite sure he hasn't, because I didn't know them at all before I met you."

She knew, for instance, that he liked certain kinds of music—modified oriental jazz—the type she favored herself. They danced twice during dinner. He was a reserved partner, but madly gay inside. She guessed that his spirit was doing a fandango while his feet sedately moved in fox trot shackles. Katy was a demure dancer herself, but said pagan things with her lithe young body that were never in the composer's score.

Only twice they danced. "I'd be afraid of waking up into reality if we tried it again," he explained as he led her during a waltz into the pergolaed garden. "Now listen to those bullfrogs, absolutely disregarding the tempo of the orchestra."

The frogs inhabited cement pools which were supplied by wind bell fountains. There was a moon, orange blossom scent, twinkling breathless lights on the mountain sides—everything that the most astute of directors, assisted by the best property men and electricians, could have devised.

And yet he did not touch her. Katy knew that he wouldn't, although before she had met him she had decided privately just how far she would let him go.

Instead, he told her of interesting things he had seen abroad on his most recent trip to acquire American rights to European successes. "But I want to go some time with some one who doesn't think that the only difference between New York and Paris is technical prohibition, and who can look upon a hilltopped town by moonlight with a medieval mind. I want to hear the clank of armor in the streets. But it takes two to do it."

That was as near as he came to sentiment that first night.

But the next evening—it was at supper somewhere after an indifferent performance of a New York success by a touring company—he made this astonishing speech:

"I came to California to see you, Aileen, and for no other reason. I'll admit now that I thought I wanted merely to play with you. I had an idea that you would satisfy my craving for physical beauty in a woman.

"I find that I underestimated the effect you would have on me. I thought I should be quite content to buy a little of your companionship by an increase of salary or some advancement in the profession which you seem so strangely ill-suited to. Now I know that would not be enough. You satisfy me in every way—your beauty, your understanding, your gentleness, all awaken in me a wonder that I have so long existed without you. I——"

"Mr. Sanderson," Katy tried to stop him.

"Wait," he commanded. "I'm asking you to marry me, Aileen."

THERE, he had done it. She wasn't in his arms or anything. He had never even offered to kiss her. It was as old fashioned a proposal as any Puritan maid could ever have had.

She belonged to him. Katy had known that almost from the first minute.

"And I've been waiting for you," he continued, answering her thoughts. "Don't think that love only comes to children or young men starting out to carve a fortune for their sweethearts. I've never said this to a woman before, although that isn't because I've been too busy making a fortune. I don't really give a damn about money, but I've only been piling up a mess of it to kill time while I was waiting to find you. I make money easily, but I love you just as much as if I were a poor boy on the threshold of achievement. I have to return to New York Saturday. Can we be married tomorrow?"

Of course he had every right to take her consent for granted that way. Even if his position of czar in the film business had not entitled him to beckon to the one he wanted, he knew, as one man must at some one time know one woman, that she was his for the asking.

But she was sailing under false colors—colors that she could not strike without betraying the real Aileen, perhaps crippling her film future irretrievably. She knew that she was genuinely in love with this man who had so gently assumed control of her heart; but he, perhaps, adored what was only a shell of the real thing. Before she could answer him he must be told, and she couldn't tell him now, not until Aileen released her from her agreement.

"I'm sorry," she said in reply to his question, "but I can't possibly marry you tomorrow."

He looked at her searchingly. "You do not love me?"

"But I do," she replied simply.

"Then everything else is unimportant." He swept the world aside with a gesture.

"No," she insisted. "I can't even tell you tonight what the barrier is. Perhaps tomorrow——"

He let it go at that. When he said good night she offered her lips. She owed herself that memory.

Her kiss was snow fire.

It burned on his lips through a white night. Sleeplessness was a new experience to Manny. That it should come to him because of a woman was totally unexpected.

He felt that he must know what it was that stood between them. She had said that she cared. What else could matter? Not her career, certainly, because he was the one man in all the world who could set her name in electric lights on every theater in the land.

At ten o'clock he telephoned. She was out. At the studio, probably. He went out on the lot—to her dressing room.

There was no one there but a colored maid, looking through the dresser drawers.

"Miss Conrad is feelin' poorly this morning," she told him in response to his question as to Aileen's whereabouts, "and she sent me to fetch her headache prescription. Here it is."

"O, I'm sorry." Manny left the dressing room with the maid. "I'd like to see her a moment anyway. Suppose I give you a lift back to the hotel."

The maid smiled. "Thank you. But she isn't at the hotel this morning. She's staying at the bungalow."

THE maid told the chauffeur the Hollywood address. Manny stopped on the way for flowers. At the bungalow the maid left him in the living room while she went to convey the news of his presence to her mistress. She was gone quite a while and finally returned to say that Miss Conrad was not in her room, but was doubtless with Mr. Emilio and would be out in a short while.

"With Mr. Emilio?" Manny repeated, puzzled.

"Yes, sir. Sometimes they sleeps in her room and sometimes in his'n."

"You're referring to Emilio Vanarro, the actor?"

"Yes, sir."

"They're married—Mr. Vanarro and Miss Conrad?"

"Yes, indeed. Some people thinks they ain't, but I seen the certificate. You ain't a newspaper man, are you? She told me I mustn't tell no newspaper man anything."

"No," Manny assured her with his lips. His mind was elsewhere, trying to strangle his heart, which insisted that this thing could not be.

"I don't think I'll wait," he found himself saying to the maid, "and unless you feel that you have to, I'd appreciate it if you would not mention that any one has been here."

He reinforced his request with a ten dollar bill. It was enough. His visit was never spoken of.

Katy wondered why he did not come for her that day. Her wonder grew into an acute agony as the next day went past without word from him. Finally she telephoned to Al Cunningham and asked point blank for Mr. Sanderson.

"He returned to New York yesterday," he told her.

Where, now, was the highly advertised California sunshine? Katy had never known that it was possible to feel so gloomy. The thing that was in her throat could not, really and physiologically, be her heart, but it certainly felt like it.

Two days later Aileen Conrad called her to her dressing room and gave Katy a check for three hundred dollars.

Aileen was about to dismiss her, but thought better of it. "I suppose you may as well see this, too." She held out a letter. "I think, in a way, that it is meant for both of us."

Without looking at the signature Katy knew who had written it. Her hands trembled a little as she unfolded the brief single sheet of railway stationery.

"Dear Miss Conrad: This is a very difficult note to write, and yet I feel that some explanation of my abrupt departure without saying good-by is due to you.

"I suppose that I should be delighted to discover that you are such a wonderful actress and that our company has you under a long term contract.

"Unfortunately, I find myself wishing to God that you were not. You broke the habit of a long life of skepticism about women, and it is very hard for me to find any comfort in my old philosophy.

"However, I am a business man and I assure you that you need not have worried, nor need you worry in the future, about the continuance of your relations with the company, no matter what 'the barrier.'

"But you will forgive me if I never again enter a projection room or a theater where a feature starring you is being shown. Not because I should blame you, but because it would hurt.

"Yours,
"M. S."

Aileen regarded the suddenly white face of her erstwhile double with some curiosity. "It would seem almost that our distinguished employer has fallen for us. Katy, look me in the eye—did you vamp him?"

"Not intentionally."

"Not intentionally. Hum. Well, that would make it worse. How many times did he kiss you?"

"Only once."

"Woof! You must pack an awful wallop back of that smile of yours. But where is your smile? Katy, look at me again. Why, Katy, dear, you didn't get hurt, too, did you?"

Katy managed a smile. "Not very much. And besides, I'm paid to take chances. It's all in the game."

Nevis Shane pens a whimsical story of a child with the wisdom of a sphinx and the means of gaining her ends.

Aileen didn't see her again. The picture was all done and she was getting ready to take her vacation. The plan included a trip to Paris for frocks and one thing and another for the next feature. But the beautiful young star did not entirely forget the girl who was paid to take chances—even on shipboard, although, by a strange coincidence, Emilio Vanarro had booked a passage on the same line. Aileen had an uneasy memory of the death of Katy's smile, and that memory haunted her until her return to America.

In New York she determined to lay the ghost.

She called on Manny Sanderson at the main office of the Paragon company. Her presence created quite a stir among the staff, but Mr. Sanderson's secretary regretfully informed her that the president himself was out. Aileen knew that he was lying, because some one had been speaking to him on an interoffice phone when her name had been sent in.

But that evening, shortly before the dinner hour, she wrapped herself up in her most severe tailleur and called at the gorgeous hotel where Mr. Sanderson managed to eke out a wretched bachelor existence in a three room suite.

Unfortunately, the same secretary was on duty, and he was about to spring his recently received instructions that Mr. Sanderson was always out when she called when Aileen forestalled him.

"I know he thinks he doesn't want to see me. But really he does. I'll guarantee you your salary for a year if I'm wrong." And then when the secretary proved obdurate she continued, "If necessary, I'll tell you the whole story. But, for Pete's sake, let me talk to him now without announcing me by my right name. He has never seen me in his life, and if you'll stand by while I talk to him I can prove it."

She finally persuaded him.

MANNY SANDERSON came out of his dressing room and looked inquiringly at his caller. "I didn't just catch the name," he began.

"It doesn't matter," Aileen told him, with a triumphant look at the secretary, who acknowledged by his amazement that she had been right. "I have come to you to ask for a chance to double for Aileen Conrad. Do you think I look enough like her to get away with it?"

"But, my dear young woman, this is not a matter which is within my province. The casting department——"

"Never mind about the casting department for a moment. Now that I'm here I'd like your personal opinion. Am I anything like her at all?"

He did look at her closely. "You are somewhat similar in coloring and size, enough so that you might make up to look alike, but the resemblance is not close enough to fool any one who knows her well."

"Are you sure you would know her under any circumstances?"

He looked for a moment as if he would like not to answer and then he said simply, "Yes. I'm afraid I would."

Then, of course, she had to laugh. "I really am Aileen Conrad. Ask your secretary if you don't believe it."

She told him the rest of the story and ended with an apology, "I'm sorry I did it and maybe I shouldn't tell you now, but it seemed to me to be something that you ought to know."

"Yes," he conceded noncommittally. "It is something that I ought to know."

They parted without much further discussion and that evening, in spite of several important engagements, Mr. Sanderson, president of the Paragon Film company, spent in one of the office projection rooms running over and over again Miss Aileen Conrad's latest feature, not yet released. In spite of the fact that, naturally, there were no closeups of the double, he was perfectly able to tell every time that Katy appeared, even in the longest shots.

Then he got Al Cunningham on the long distance telephone and instructed him to find and hire Miss Katherine McNeil for important work in connection with Miss Conrad's new picture.

In the morning he received a long telegram from Al saying that Miss McNeil was under contract to one of the independent companies and was now on location at Fort Collins, Colo., making a "quickie" horse opera, or western.

Three days later Katy got up a little before daylight and put on a swift makeup in her tent before partaking of bacon and eggs and mounting a painted bronc that one of the cowboys had saddled for her.

"We're traveling up the trail a ways," the director told the cast. "There's a cliff up there and a pool beneath it. We're going to shoot a horseback dive this morning."

The ladies and gentlemen of the cast looked anxiously at one another. Horseback dives are not so uncommon in the movies that it was any extraordinary sensation to know that there was to be one of them in this particular masterpiece, but no one had heard the plot of the picture so far, although they had been working on it for five days, so there was naturally some curiosity as to the identity of the performer of this damp feat of equestrianism.

"Who," demanded the star, a stalwart cluck in high heels and furry chaps, "is going to take this here bath in the same tub with his fly bait? If it's me, I want to take along an extra pair of pants and——"

"It isn't you," the director informed him curtly. "Miss McNeil jumps from the cliff and you rescue her by throwing a lariat and catching her before she goes over the falls."

"That's a good new plot," commented the heavy. "I ain't been in that one for three weeks."

Katy must have looked a little startled, because the star, who was beginning to think that maybe she might be his next wife if she would listen to reason, asked her, "Are you afraid, honey?"

"Not exactly," she returned, "but I did think that they always got doubles for that kind of work.'

The director overheard her. "Doubles?" he snorted. "With this outfit? Who do you think you're working for—Manny Sanderson and Paragon? We make this entire picture for what he spends on salaries for yes-men. Besides, weren't you a stunt woman three weeks ago at ten bucks a day before we gave you this job as leading lady to the fattest ham in the business?"

"He means me," interpreted the star, who knew well enough that as an actor he was a first class blacksmith.

Katy admitted that she ought to be willing to dive off the Woolworth building with a stick of dynamite in each hand for the hundred and fifty a week she was earning now—for one week. But when they got there, the cliff did look pretty high, and from the top the water appeared as if it might be c-c-cold.

"We'll have it heated before you do your stuff," the heavy comforted. He was by way of being a comedian when the cameras were not turning. "I'll drop our Mex vamp in a few minutes ahead of your big scene and have the water almost boiling when you hit it."

A PRIVATE car which had been switched off from the main line at Greeley was dragged fifty miles or so from the junction to Fort Collins. Breakfast had just been served when the train arrived, but Manny Sanderson did not wait to eat it.

Everybody in town knew where the motion picture company was working, and he hired a local garage man to take him out to the location. Arrived there, they found that the company had gone up the trail four or five miles.

"Can your car travel that road?" Manny asked his driver.

"Sure can," the latter assured him. "We carry helium gas in our balloon tires out here so that with a running start we can jump any ordinary valley."

Perhaps three miles along the road they encountered a dismounted cow puncher who was making a stilted progress down toward the camp. He told them that they'd find the outfit about a mile ahead. "At the big rock over the river. If you hustle, you'll get there in time to see the leading lady jump off on horseback." He thought he was talking to a couple of curiosity seekers from town.

"The leading lady?" Manny repeated anxiously. "What's her name?"

"Katy Something-or-other. She's a new one on me."

"Thanks." Manny turned to the driver. "Beat it. Twenty-five dollars extra if you get there before she jumps."

"Gee, do you want to see her jump that bad?"

"No. I want to see her not jump much worse than that. Let's not tarry."

They didn't. The driver thought he could risk a broken spring to win the twenty-five dollar premium, so he gave the car all it could stand.

As they came in sight of the cliff they could see the director and cameraman perched precariously on the very edge, while half a dozen actors not in the scene were grouped behind them, watching.

"Hurry!" admonished Manny. "Push your bus up the hill."

"Right," agreed the driver, making an antelope out of his four wheeled chariot.

"Camera!" shouted the director, giving a comeon arm signal to some one out of his sight.

As the car reached the plateau leading to the cliff a group of horsemen came thundering down from the left. Just a few yards ahead of them rode a girl on a spirited pony. She was clearly frightened and cast anxious glances over her shoulder at her pursuers.

"We've got to stop her," cried Manny. "Drive your car right in front of her."

Manny was still issuing his orders after they had crossed the camera lines and had pulled up on the edge of the cliff.

Disregarding the curses of the director, who was running out on the scene, Manny jumped out of the car and grabbed the bridle of Katy's mount as he sat back suddenly on his haunches.

Katy, for the first time in her life, fell off a horse. Perhaps she knew that Manny would catch her. Anyway, he did.

And held her.

"Aren't you mistaking me for some one else?" Katy asked, struggling just a little.

"Not this time," Manny assured her. "But you're all wet. Why?"

Katy laughed. "I dived off that cliff just a few minutes before you came"

"You've dived already? Then what was about to happen when I stopped you?"

"Nothing but just riding up the cliff. You see, they didn't want to waste film on the chase in case I got hurt in the jump, so they took it in reverse sequence."

"What's the cockeyed idea?" demanded the director, coming up to the group. "You've ruined a hundred feet of film."

"I'm sorry," apologized Manny, "but it ought to be easy enough to retake it."

"Retake? We don't make any retakes with this company. You talk as if you were Manny Sanderson of Paragon and——"

"Well, that's who I am."

He and Katy finally convinced the director that that's who he really was.

"But what," the director still wailed, "can I do about that strip of film? It's going to be darned hard to write you and that automobile into the story, and yet I've got to get something out of it."

"Sell it to one of the news weeklies," suggested Manny. "They'll pay you enough for it to shoot your entire picture all over again with a new leading lady."

"Supposing I did offer it to them. Where's there any news in it? What kind of a title would they run on it?"

"That's easy. 'President of gigantic film corporation greets bride-to-be on eve of wedding.'"

"That's a good new plot . . . I ain't been in that one for three weeks."

PERISHABLE GOODS

by DORNFORD YATES

THE STORY IN RESUME:

ATHAN MANSEL finds the safe in his London home robbed of a package of letters. He and his friends, George Hanbury and William Chandos, decide their common enemy, "Rose" Noble, is the thief. He tells them the letters are mere casual notes from the wife of his cousin, Capt. Pleydell. He makes no attempt to recover them, but goes to Austria with Maj. and Capt. Pleydell and their wives. Upon return to London he receives from the captain a wire announcing that Adele has disappeared. Accompanied by his two friends, Mansel crosses the channel and dashes to Austria. Capt. Pleydell, in bed with a broken leg, reports the search has led to a blank. Following a suspect, he discovers that Noble and his gang are secreted in the castle of Gath, an old fortress situated on a mountain. In the dead of night Mansel and his forces enter an unused wing of the castle. They are overheard, and Adele cries a warning to come no further. They pretend to leave, but Mansel and Chandos hide in an archway until the next night, when they re-enter the castle and, seeing Adele on the terrace, take her to their hiding place. Before they have a chance to get her out they are discovered by Noble, who again gains possession of Adele.

INSTALLMENT IX.

We Practice to Deceive.

RY as I will, I cannot distinctly remember what then took place, and I think that I acted blindly, as a man in a trance.

I know that we were both in the passage, the main doors of which were fast shut; that our rope was dangling from a window, and that Mansel was about to go down, when the beam of a torch framed his head and shoulders and a bullet sang by his ear.

I know that the light and the shot both came from directly above, so that, placed as we were, we could not so much as reply.

I know that we were both on the terrace and that Mansel was casting the rope in the vain hope of catching a merlon in the noose he had made. I know that we were both in the antechamber; that the great door was as we had left it, and that, while I fought like a madman to shift the bolt, Mansel was kneeling beside me with his head in his hands . . .

At last I felt a touch on my shoulder, and Mansel rose to his feet. I followed him into the dining room readily enough. My head was strangely heavy, and I felt shaken and spent. Had he bade me lie down and sleep, I should have done his bidding without a word. The shock of what we had done had left me listless.

Mansel sat down in a chair, and I sat down in another and waited for him to speak.

To be honest, I hoped he would stay silent, for I could think of no comment upon our case which would not be bitter as death and wholly vain; but, when he began to speak, he did so with such composure as fairly shamed me out of a humor so ignorant and so mean.

"Something, of course," he said quietly, "has happened to George. I can tell you the time when it happened—ten o'clock last night. He was awaiting a message at the foot of the cliff. No doubt he was being watched. And, when the packet fell down, the enemy laid him out and picked it up. When I say 'George,' I mean 'George and the servants,' of course. They're not four any more—our effectives: they may not even be three . . .

"Point number two—'Rose' Noble is not alone. He may have been yesterday morning, but he's certainly not alone now. I suppose he took them in by a rope some time last night. Anyway, he's smarter than I am, and Punter or Casemate has certainly bested George.

"Point number three—we must get out of this place. I should never have split our force: and now by hook or by crook, I've got to join it again. If Carson and George are alive, they'll attack tonight, and we've got to open the gate and let them in. That's a thousand times worse, if we're still at liberty tomorrow Noble will put on the screw.

"Point number four—the 'hands up' phase is over. From now on seeing is shooting, and shooting to kill. Noble's still hoping to break me, for the sake of doing a deal: but he knows it's a chance in a million and he's not going to risk his life by sparing mine."

And there, I remember, he happened to cast down his eyes.

We were not without light, for he had the torch in his hand, but this he was holding downward, so that its beam made a circle upon the floor.

For a moment he did not move. Then he was out of his chair and down on his knees.

Clean around the table there was a crack in the floor.

It was a very fine cleft and was choked with dust and the wax with which the floor had been rubbed; but these gave way at once to the point of a knife, and then we could see that the floor had been sawn asunder with the finest of saws.

I could scarcely believe that here was another trap-door, for, for one thing only, the cleft was surrounding the table with a fair two inches to spare, and a trap-door some eight feet by five seemed out of reason: yet, for some purpose or other, the floor had been cut, and, what seemed to me still more strange, except by the dust and the wax, the cleft had never been stopped.

Mansel was speaking in my ear.

"The table sinks through the floor. I saw it once before in some castle. The idea was to gain privacy. No servants in the room; but the table descended and rose between each course." He touched the smooth oak beneath the table. "This piece of the floor is really no more than a lift: and, if we can find out its trick . . ."

I sought to move the table, but it was fixed to the floor.

"That's right," breathed Mansel. "The other I saw was fixed. I remember they said it was raised by a system of pulleys and weights. The weights weighed far more than the table, so it couldn't descend on its own or so much as budge, but had to be hauled down by a windlass between each course."

"It's as firm as a rock," said I, stooping. "You don't think it's locked into place?"

Mansel shrugged his shoulders.

"We must try to find out," he said. "If we can weight it enough . . ."

Then I saw that, with four counterweights, each, we say, of the weight of the table and lift, these would seem as much fixed as though they had beneath them a girder, to hold them in place—until there was laid upon them a burden three times their own weight; but that if we could manage to load them to this extent the table would sink through the floor and open a way of escape.

In silence we lifted the chairs and set them upon the board: they were immensely heavy, but the table stood fast. Ten more chairs we added, bringing them one by one from the other rooms and using our rope to lash the perilous pile. But, though we added our weight, the mass never budged.

And here we were brought to a standstill, for, though there were yet more chairs, we had used all the rope we had and we could not think how to get them on to the top of the structure their fellows made.

Suddenly I thought of the slab which Mansel and I had hidden beneath the king's bed.

We had dragged this into the chamber, and I was under the table, with my feet braced against the great stretcher, hauling the stone into place, and sitting, as it happened, directly upon the cleft, when I felt a definite movement beneath my seat.

At once I told Mansel, and, after a short consultation, we lay down upon opposite sides and, taking hold of the stretcher, began to pass by inches on to the lift.

As I drew myself on, I felt this beginning to move, and all at once we were sinking into some cold, dark place.

WE must have come down with a crash, but the chairs we had piled on the table were overlapping the lift, and, when these were prevented by the floor, the lift, thus relieved of their weight, immediately stopped.

The torch now showed us a cellar, with a door in its eastern wall. About us was the massive cage in which the lift ran, and at each of its corners were a pulley and a rope and a great counterweight of stone. A little to one side stood the windlass, as Mansel had said.

And now, once again, as they say, we had the wolf by the ears.

The floor was but eight feet away, but, if one of us was to descend, the lift would instantly rise and, taking the other up, lock him once more into the dining room; while, if both descended at once, the lift would shoot back into place with a shock which would shake the castle and send the twelve chairs crashing to wake the dead.

But, after a little reflection, Mansel found out a way.

On the under side of the lift, right in its middle, was a hook: to this was attached the great rope which the windlass controlled. If we could reach this rope, the trick was ours.

Mansel took my left wrist in his hands and lowered me clear of the lift. At once I swung to and fro until I could reach and lay hold of the great iron hook. With my left hand I then laid hold of the edge of the lift, and Mansel climbed round my body and seized the rope. Then we came down the rope together, on to the ground.

We let the lift rise by inches, until it was back in its place, and then, with one accord, we turned to the door.

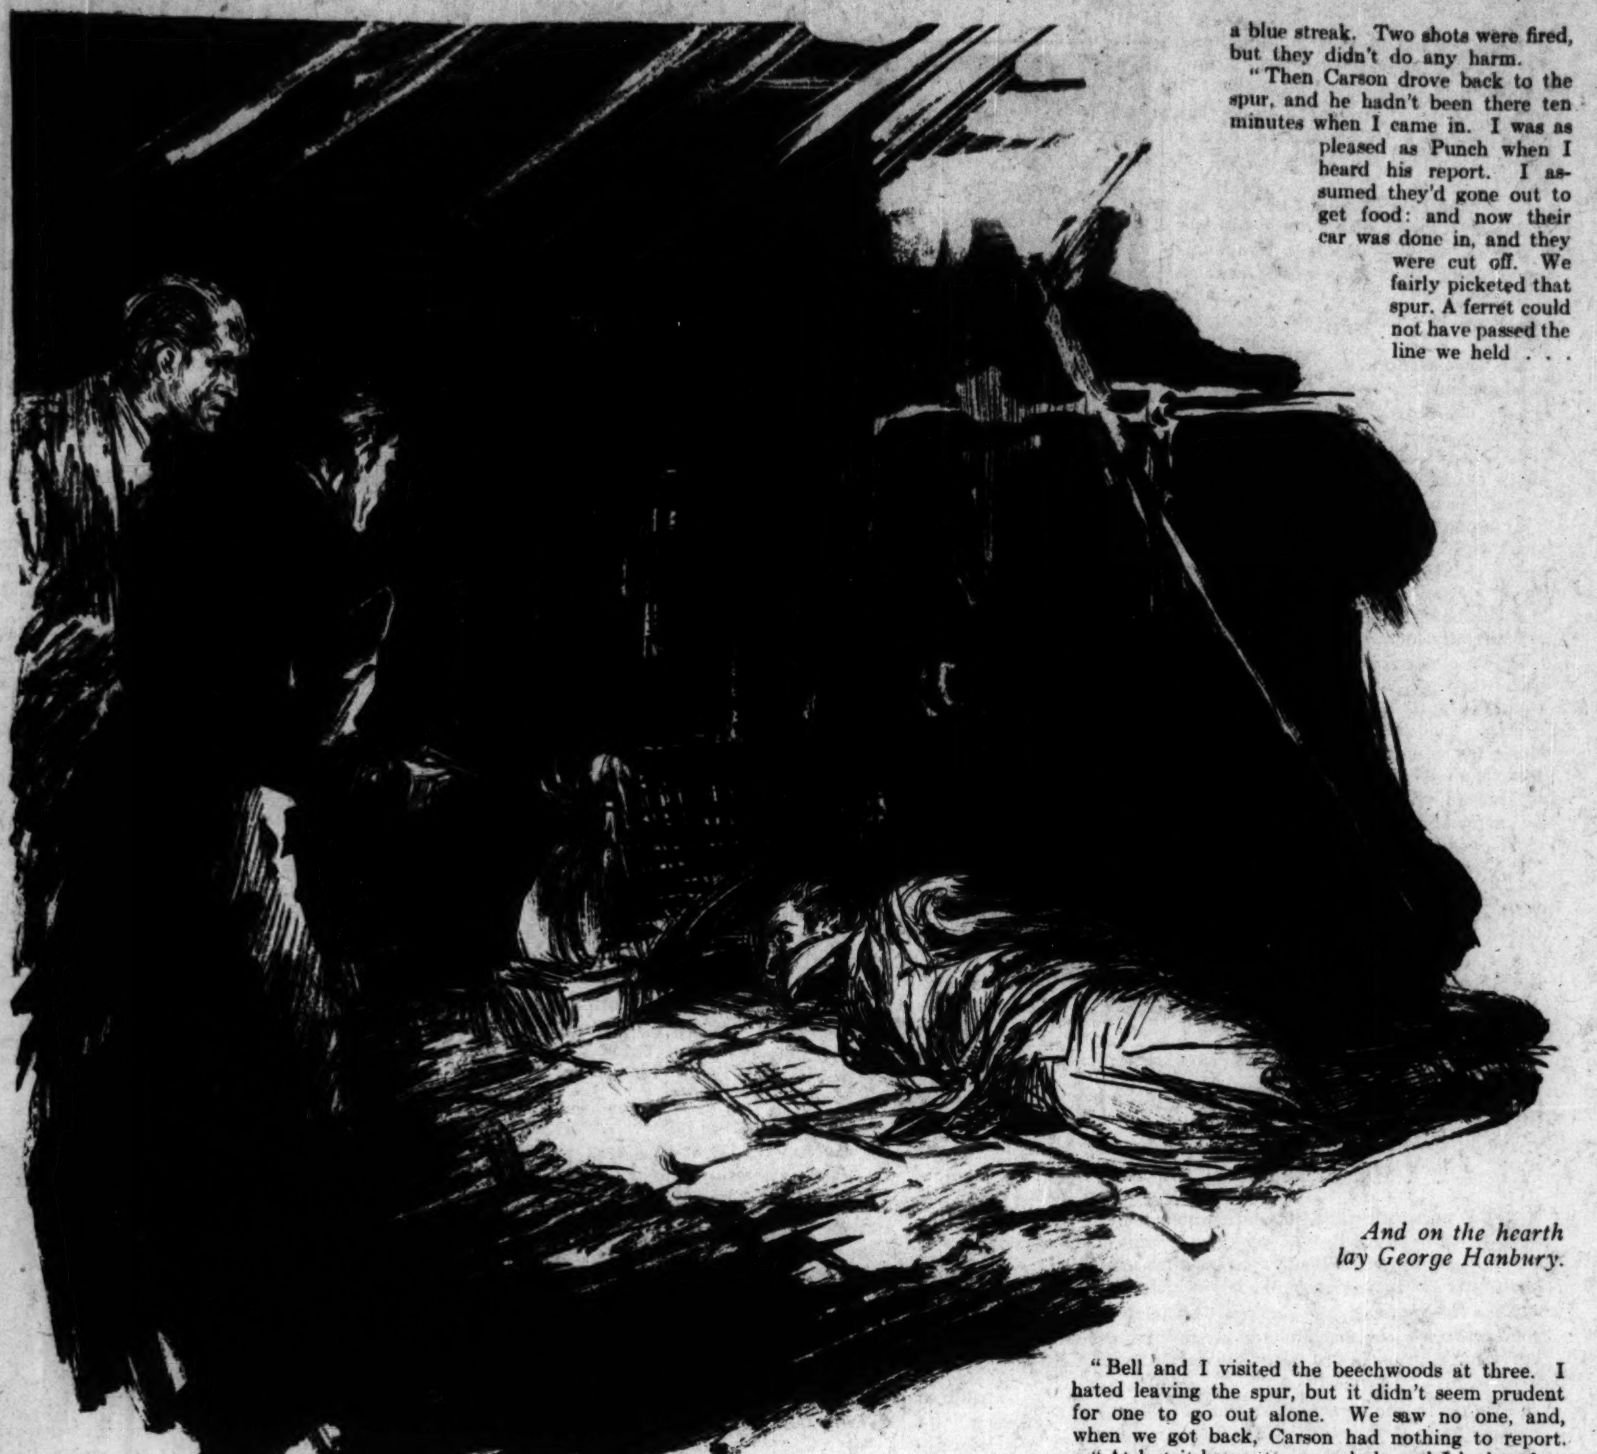
This was unfastened and brought us directly into what seemed a great hall.

For a moment I thought we were out, for I heard the gurgle of water as plain as could be, but then I perceived that the air was the air of a crypt, dank and something musty and very still.

After listening carefully, we ventured to light the torch.

The place was a kitchen, but had not been used as such for a number of years. There was the huge fireplace, with the chains for the spits hanging down and a grate, like a hay-rack, to serve a dozen joints. Five great, shuttered windows were looking upon the courtyard, and a doorway, whose step was muddy, was in the same wall.

And on the hearth lay George Hanbury, with his wrists and his ankles bound and a gag in his mouth.



And on the hearth lay George Hanbury.

That George had been left there to live, if he could, but, if he could not, to die, we had not much doubt. He had lain there, gagged and bound, for twenty-four hours: his bonds had never been loosened; he had been given no water, much less any food: he had not so much as been visited. And such as will so use a prisoner are scarcely like to be troubled to find him dead.

Happily George was strong, and his condition of health as fine as ours, and, when we had set him free and had chafed his limbs, he was able to rise and to walk as straight as he pleased. It was clear, however, that he must have food and drink, and, since there remained in the closet some brandy and bread and meat, we made our way back to the cellar without delay.

By using the windlass we had the lift down at once, but, when I would have gone up, Mansel put me aside.

"I'm going," he said. "And please give me full five minutes before you bring me down. Now that one's got to go back, he may as well cover our tracks: the pile of chairs doesn't matter, but that slab would make any one think."

With that he mounted the lift, and I hoisted him up.

And while he was gone, George Hanbury told me his tale.

"When the car came out of the castle I was down by the beechwoods at the foot of the cliff. Rowley was with me, but Carson and Bell and Tester were on guard, within sound of the drive.

"Carson heard the car coming, and the moment it passed he gave chase. I don't know whether they had expected this, but they did the best they could think of to shake him off. Of course, they failed. They didn't bother much about the foot of the cliff: they certainly went that way, for I saw them go by, but they passed at sixty and never so much as slowed up. The sight of them worried me, but I didn't see what I could do but stay where I was. Of course, Carson could have caught them, but, as Bell and he were alone, he thought he couldn't do better than cling to their heels. For half an hour they had the devil's own luck—never a check. Then comes a hairpin bend and two hundred yards farther on a flock of sheep . . .

"When Carson rounded the corner, Bunch was fifty yards off and turning his car. Sheep or no, it was an excellent move. The car has a shortish wheelbase, but our machine takes some getting round. Then Carson did well. He stopped, went into reverse, and started back to a turning he'd marked at the top of the hill. Before he could get there, Bunch was coming like hell. There was Punter beside him, and Casemate was back in the car. As they went by, Punter fired full at Carson and hit the brim of his hat . . .

"This annoyed Carson and Bell, and I must say I'm not surprised. And, as soon as our car was round, they put her along. By this time Bunch had stolen a bit of a start, but they gradually overhauled him, and, choosing a smooth bit of going, Bell took a shot at their tank. He didn't hit it that time, but he laid it open the next . . .

"It was now a matter of time and nothing else. Bunch might do another three miles, but he couldn't do more, so Carson fell back a little, to keep, as he judged, out of range. Considering they'd fired again and made a hole in the screen, I think he was wise.

"They were now not more than six miles from the foot of the cliff, and heading that way. The road was full of bends, so half the time the cars were out of each other's sight. You can guess what happened. Three miles on Carson rounded a bend to see the car, doors open, by the side of the road. Of course, he put down his foot and went by a blue streak. Two shots were fired, but they didn't do any harm.

"Then Carson drove back to the spur, and he hadn't been there ten minutes when I came in. I was as pleased as Punch when I heard his report. I assumed they'd gone out to get food: and now their car was done in, and they were cut off. We fairly picketed that spur. A ferret could not have passed the line we held . . .

"Bell and I visited the beechwoods at three. I hated leaving the spur, but it didn't seem prudent for one to go out alone. We saw no one, and, when we got back, Carson had nothing to report.

"At last it began to grow dark, and I had to face two fresh facts. The first was this: According to plan, one of the cars must now leave for the foot of the cliff and stay there perhaps till dawn. That was awkward enough, but the second was worse. It was a yard of pearls to a bootlace that Punter and Casemate and Bunch would try to get home that night.

"After a lot of reflection, I decided to go alone to the foot of the cliff. I went. I meant to take Tester, but at the last I forgot. I found the rope gone and imagined you'd pulled it up. At ten o'clock something fell down about ten yards from where I stood. As I bent over it, somebody laid me out . . .

"Well, there you are.

"The next thing I knew I was lying in the back of our car, which was doing forty over a wicked road. Then I was taken out and hauled through a ground floor window into the castle of Gath.

"Of course, it was easy. When the servants heard the car coming, they thought it was me. They probably thought it odd that I should drive on up to Gath, but, before they'd scented the trouble, the fat was burnt."

AS I bent again to the windlass, my mind was full.

Not only was Rose Noble's foresight a fearsome thing, but the fellow was very well served. Punter and Bunch and Casemate had done uncommonly well. But what struck me most of all was that, though their car had been ruined and our car was at their gate, the temptation to take it inside had been withstood. That for this resolution we had Noble to thank, I have no doubt: the others would scarce have renounced so handsome a prize. Yet, had we seen our machine in the archway, the sight would have told us that George was out of the running, and Adele would not have been delivered into the enemy's hand. This was the pink of strategy—the casting away of a scepter to win a crown: and I must confess a sudden, craven fear that we should never outwit a man so firm of purpose and so unearthly wise.

The gurgle of water in the kitchen came from a little well. This had been sunk in the floor and was fed by a pipe which clearly ran out of the channel we knew so well. A similar pipe was conducting the overflow. By this simple device, the cooks had always fresh water ready to hand, and, what is more to the point, poor George was able to drink and to bathe his aching jaws. Then we plied him with brandy and made him eat what there was, for, though he made light of his bondage, a man cannot suffer as he had and feel as sound the same night.

While he was eating and drinking, we laid our plans.

That the servants were close at hand we had no doubt. Indeed, it seemed certain that they would any moment attack. If they did so before we could reach them, they would assuredly fail, for, for one thing only, they would enter by way of the roof, which the enemy was holding against our escape from the suite. They would thus walk clean into a trap, of which we, below, could not warn them, because we could not climb up. We, therefore, determined to make at once for the gate and, opening this if we could, to bring them in. If we could contrive to do this without being seen or heard, we should for the first time have the advantage of the enemy, for, whilst they were sure that they had but two men to deal with, and those under lock and key, in fact there would be six men free and within their camp.

The kitchen door was unlocked and yielded without any fuss.

As we looked into the courtyard, hardly daring to breathe, the beam of a torch swept the wall beneath which we stood. It was little more than a flash and came, as before, from above; but it showed that the passage windows were still being watched. We had expected no less, but, although the beam was directed upon the wall, it lighted quite twenty feet of the courtyard itself, and, unless we could cross this belt between the flashes, we could not fail to be seen.

"No good waiting," breathed Mansel. "We must go across one by one. The first twenty feet on foot and as hard as we can: then, down on your face and crawl the rest of the way. If we go lightly, the water will cover our noise. Chandos first. Wait for me in the porch: I may be a little time coming, because I must shut this door. And now stand by."

Whilst he was speaking, the flashes came and went, but at intervals so irregular that no observation could help us, and we had nothing to do but to take our chance.

At last Mansel gave the word, and I made my dash.

As I fell on my face, a flicker lit up the courtyard.

Ten minutes later we were all three in the porch.

The wicket gate was locked, and its key was gone. We, therefore, made ready to open the great gate itself, using the greatest care to make no sound. And here, to our vexation, we met with another check. Though we could feel the great bolts, we could not make out how to draw them, for each was engaged with some catch which we could not release. It was dreadful to stand there fumbling, because of some simple holdfast never devised to embarrass a porter's hand, but intended to prevent the bolts turning under battery of the gate. Yet show a light we dared not: and, as the minutes went by and the catch still mocked our fingers for want of sight, I began to feel that fortune was not so much frowning upon us as laughing at us in her sleeve.

Then Mansel gave a short sigh and drew his bolt, and a moment later his fingers were playing with mine.

As the door yielded, he put his mouth to my ear.

"You go and find them," he said. "Hanbury and I stay here. If you don't strike them at once, try using the torch. But——"

And there, somewhere behind us, a shot rang out.

As we swung round——

"I saw the flash," said Hanbury. "Up on the roof."

I RAN full tilt into Rowley, who was standing at the foot of the ladders, with a cord in his hand.

"O, thank God, sir," says he. "We thought you were gone."

I shook him by the shoulder and pointed up to the roof.

"Recall them!" I cried. "Recall them! How can you get them back?"

He was tugging at the cord, like a madman, when another two shots rang out.

I could not stand there idle, but began to go up the wall.

I was on the second ladder when some one above me looked down.

"Is that you, Bell?"

"Yes, sir."

"Get Carson and come down to the gate."

"Very good, sir."

I slid and fell back to the ground, to run to the gate.

Mansel was standing, waiting, cool as a man in a garden, regarding his flowers.

"Carson must stay out," he said. "I daren't have every one in. He and Tester must feed us and keep the cars. Send him for food and drink, as soon as he's down. And two fifty-foot lengths of rope. The others come in."

Whilst he was speaking, another four shots were fired, and I ran back to Rowley with my heart in my mouth.

Him I sent to the gate and took his place. I think he was glad to go, for the firing was growing hotter, and to stand at the foot of the ladder in the knowledge that those you were awaiting might very well never come down pulled at a man's nerves.

Such concern will seem out of reason. When six men set out in a body to play with fire, it hardly becomes them to tremble lest some one be burned. But our outlook was not so simple. We feared no more for Carson than Carson feared for himself: but we all of us feared very much for the matter in hand. Our school was not that of Rose Noble. If one of us was wounded, we could not let him lie: he would have to be saved and attended at any cost: how high that cost would be no one could tell, but, placed as we were, we all knew that such a distraction might ruin our enterprise.

It seemed an age before Bell began to descend.

. . . .

"Are you hit?" said I.

"O, no, sir," said he. "Nor's Carson. But, of course, we had to go slow."

I sent him to Mansel at once.

Then a shot was fired right above me, and Carson came down with a run.

"Come," said I, and led him away up the spur.

. . . .

It was well that I did so, for a light leaped out of the darkness, and a bullet went over our heads. To round the picture, I turned and fired back at the torch. No doubt the bullet went wide, but the light was put out.

Then I stopped and gave Carson his orders and told him that we were all safe, and he promised to be at the gate in a quarter of an hour. Then I stole back to the castle, and Mansel took me in.

Two doorways led out of the archway, one upon either hand. These Mansel set us to watch till Carson should come. "But I don't think," said he, "they'll disturb us: they've got their hands full. They've the roof to watch, and the passage, and it won't be light for three hours."

Here he was right, for Carson came and went, but nobody else; and, though lights flashed on the roof and the passage windows were closely and continually watched, no one came down to the archway or entered the great courtyard.

Carson went heavily away, for, though his part was most dangerous—because, except for Tester, he was alone—and though he would be the sole link between us and the world we knew, he had the true heart of a fighter and could hardly bear to leave us at such a pinch.

Early next morning he was to drive into Lass and there to take in supplies which should last us a week. He was then to bestow the two cars as best he could, somewhere beyond the wood and by the cross roads. He was not to move during the day, but by night he was to come to the spur and there wait till one of us met him or else it was dawn.

Then Mansel shut the gate and shot the great bolts and set his face again to the business of reach-

MY FIGHT WITH RICHTHOFEN

By A. ROY BROWN

(Capt. Brown did not know that his victim in the historic dog fight on Sunday morning, April 21, 1918, was Richthofen. In his official report he referred only to the destruction of a "pure red triplane." A few hours later, when the German ace had been identified, Australian machine gunners claimed to have killed him from the ground. A third claim was entered by the occupants of two Australian two seaters, whom Brown's greatly outnumbered flight had saved from death in the midst of twenty-two German planes.)

INSTALLMENT IV.

Rival Claimants.

"Who killed Cock Robin?"
"I," said the sparrow,
"With my bow and arrow.
I killed Cock Robin."

THE question was: Who had killed Richthofen? I was absolutely sure I had shot him down. Two pilots of my flight—Lieuts. May and Mellersh—had seen him crash.

Such evidence would have been enough after any ordinary combat. But apparently Richthofen was a bird of another color.

It looked as if credit for his death was not going to be won without a second battle.

In my mind's eye I could see the tracers strike his elevators, tear along the fuselage, pour into the cockpit. I could see him crumple. And yet Australian machine gunners were emphatic in their contention that they had brought him low by bullets from the trenches.

Indeed, the Australian command had lost no time in recommending that two infantrymen be awarded the distinguished conduct medal for potting him.

Then there was the claim of the R. E. 8s—artillery observation planes, barge-like two seaters, whom we had saved from extinction by hurling ourselves at the circus—that they had finished him.

Why, Richthofen had been in the habit of picking off such blighters as an appetizer before breakfast! Their claim was an audacity. They must have been back at their base—thanking God they were still alive—about the time he died.

These matters were running through my head as I changed into decent togs. Then I climbed into the car which the wing commander had waiting, picked him up, and started for the headquarters of the Eleventh Australian infantry brigade.

We found the brigadier's tent at last, well camouflaged, on a hill in a wood. It was somewhere west of Corbie, I think.

It was Cairns who talked to the brigadier. He merely said he was interested in finding out exactly what had happened in the case of Richthofen.

"I shall send," said the brigade commander, "for the major who was in command of that section of the line."

That Australian major had his story pat. They had been watching the scrap, he said. They had witnessed the triplanes' attack on the R. E. 8s. Then they had seen the Camels jump on the tripes and engage them heavily. After a terrific mixup, a red nosed Camel had broken loose from the fight and had been immediately dived on by an all red triplane. The pair of them, one chasing the other, had come closer, closer, closer; so close and so low at last that he had ordered his machine gunners to open fire on the enemy flyer.

They had, he said, barely got their guns concentrated when they brought him down.

"Were there any other red nosed Camels about?" asked Cairns.

"No," said the major. "There was just the one that was being chased. He flew right on." And he did not bat an eye.

I spoke only once.

"And what," I asked, "did the red nosed Camel behind the all red tripe do?"

The major hesitated, flushed, stuttered.

"He—he—b-but there was no red nosed Camel behind!"

I knew then that he lied. For, whether I had or had not shot down Richthofen, he could not have missed seeing me, since he saw so much; for I was right on Richthofen's tail when he crashed.

But I made no comment. I was only a ruddy captain. The others were all field officers.

Cairns asked the whereabouts of the body and was told that it had been turned over to the Royal Air Force. We learned later that this was done only after a verbal dog fight. The Aussies had not wanted to part with it.

The Australian officers did not offer to send a guide with us; merely directed us coldly. They were unsociable, indeed.

ON the way Cairns said, "What did you think of their statement?"

"That major's a bloody liar!"

I pointed out that he could not have missed seeing my Camel on the tail of the tripe.

"But," I said, "after we inspect the body, I suggest we look at the machine. There's a slim chance he was shot down from the ground. But I'll know for sure when I've seen the machine."

We found the body of Richthofen. He was stretched on the ground near some medical huts. A little cluster of men stood looking at him.

It was with a queer mixture of curiosity and hesitancy that I drew near. This was the first man killed by my guns whom I had had a chance to view dead.

I would have given a great deal not to have had to look at him.

Richthofen was still wearing one of our Sidcot suits, the regulation one piece overall suit of the British flying service, no doubt taken from one of his many victims.

He also had been wearing a pair of our long, sheepskin flying boots. These had been pulled off and were lying carelessly alongside.

There is reason to believe these boots had belonged to a friend of mine, Jerry Nash, who claimed he had been shot down by Richthofen, although his name is not listed in the latter's published record.

Richthofen, close up, dead, gave me a shock. He seemed such a small chap. He looked like such a decent chap.

His helmet had been removed. Blonde hair, fine and soft like a boy's, fell away from a broad, high brow. His face, peculiarly peaceful, had a look almost of gentleness.

All of a sudden I felt depressed—wretched—as if I had done something mean.

There was not the slightest thrill in this—no feeling that here lay Richthofen, greatest of them all. A kind of shame, a kind of hurt rage, flooded me at having made him lie so quiet and still, so lifeless—this man who a few hours before had had so much life.

In my heart I cursed the thing that made necessary the killing of such a man. I ground my teeth. I cursed war.

If it had been possible by any act of mine, I would gladly have brought him back to life. But that was a different thing from pressing a machine gun trigger.

I could not look any longer at his face.

My eyes went to his hands. Those hands seemed to speak to me as they lay by his side. They seemed alive. I can see them now: long, white, delicate as a musician's against the coarse khaki of the flying suit.

And the nails!

Even now, after these years — nine years, nearly ten — I see those nails of his as clearly as when I first looked at them. They were well kept, well shaped, beautiful, manicured, but not effeminately manicured. They were the nails of a man, but not the nails of a man who messed with engines. They were the nails of an exquisite.

Poor Richthofen. His eyes were closed as if he were asleep. I never saw them. There was only that flash of them I got through his goggles as he turned to see where my bullets came from before they hit him.

I turned away. There was little of the victor about me then. I wanted a drink in the worst way. With my head down, I stood while Cairns completed his inspection.

Not a word had passed between Cairns and myself. It was I who spoke first.

"Come on," I said. "Let's go out. We'll go and see the machine."

We started away.

"What impression," he said, "did you get—seeing the body?"

I spoke bitterly: "He looked like a damned good scout. I don't want to talk about it."

WE walked toward the place where the red triplane lay. It was possibly a mile and a half away. A road ran part of the distance. Shells fell casually. They did not bother us much.

Then we entered the reserve trenches. And shortly we saw the machine. It lay on high ground, between the trenches, in what was once a cultivated field.

Sticking to the trenches, we got as close to it as we could, but it was still possibly 100 yards away.

An Australian Tommy came running up.

"You can't go any farther," he said, "without gas respirators or steel helmets."

"We've come to see the machine," said Cairns.

"I'm sorry, sir," the Aussie barred the way, "but it's against orders."

"Like hell!" I said. "Will you come?" I asked Cairns.

"No," he answered. "I'll wait here."

In a flash I was over the edge of the trench and running, head down, to the plane. A moment's inspection showed me what I wanted to find.

Starting at the elevator, bullets had ripped their way along the fuselage; bullets fired from above and behind. Blood spattered the seat. There was a hole in it.

This seat, by the way, is now in the Military institute on University avenue, Toronto.

I knew then, absolutely—no matter who got or grabbed the final credit for Richthofen—that my guns had brought him down.

I turned to dash back to the trenches. Then I thought of a souvenir. There was little left. Even the sides of the fuselage had been hacked to pieces and the black German crosses cut out and carried off, as well as those on the wings. All except one. And it had a square missing from its heart. But it was all I could take.

Whipping out my knife, I cut out the remainder of the cross—I have it still—and ducked back to Cairns.

"Well," he said, "what did you find?"

"The pilot of that plane was shot down from above and behind, not by the infantry and not by any R. E. There's only one way he could have been killed by infantry fire, and that is if he had been flying upside down for a considerable distance. We know he wasn't."

"Good. What should we do now?"

"Personally, I don't give a damn. I'm satisfied. But if it's of sufficient official importance to decide definitely who did get him, I suggest a post-mortem. The bullet holes will settle it beyond doubt."

"I'll see that it is done," said Cairns.

That night in the mess we had a binge that was the mother and father of all binges—a wild, enthusiastic drunk. I cannot remember many of the details.

But I do remember four of my squadron gathering in a corner with their heads together. Some of them had been swilling full tumblers of crême de menthe—ugh!

At last they came toward me, whooping. . . .

"Brownie! Brownie! O, Brownie! We've a hell of a great stunt."

They lined up in front of me, wabbling, and one said, as serious as an owl:

"Listen, Brownie. Here are four of us. "We'll follow you to hell. You lead us and the five of us will make a flight. The five of us. And we'll fly to Berlin and we'll shoot down the kaiser."

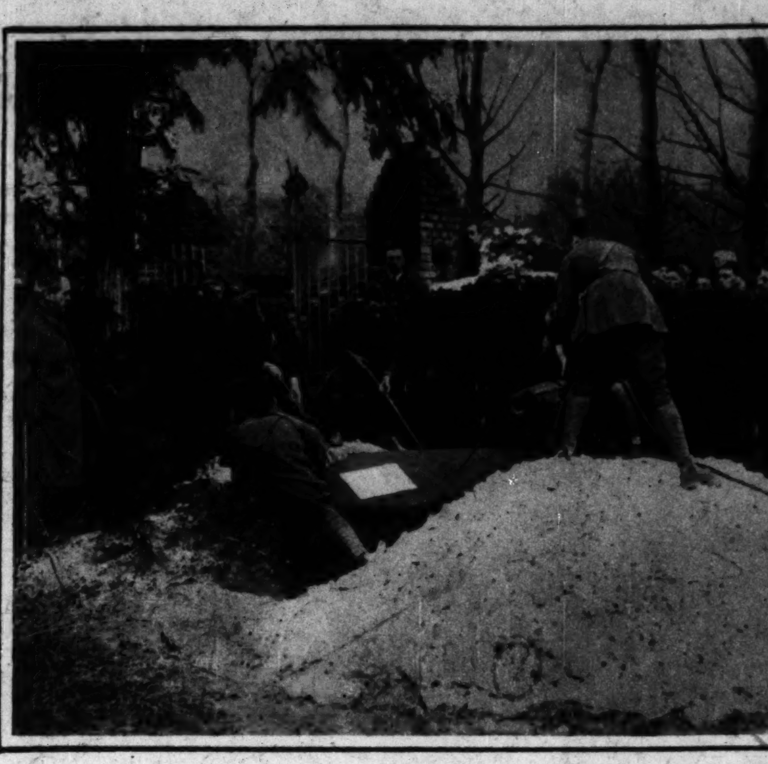
"Yes, Brownie, come on," chimed in the others. They grabbed me and tried to drag me to the door. "We'll kill the kaiser and end the war. We can do it, Brownie. You lead us and we'll go."

I had quite a time persuading the silly beggars to call the plan off. They would have started right then. Which shows the kind of night it was.

When I awakened next morning I felt like the dregs of a can of salmon. Coming on top of the stomach strike and nerve riot with which I had carried on for weeks, events of the previous day had just about sapped my last ounce of reserve. The mad debauch at the end of it had finished the job.

A hero! I felt like a gutted fish.

Then I began to think. I was able to think.



Richthofen's burial at Bertangles, France. British flyers are shown lowering the body into the grave.

"So you shot down Richthofen! Greatest of them all!"

Here I was, just an average pilot, without any special record, and by a piece of luck I would as likely as not be credited with bumping off the most notorious flyer in the German service. Maybe get a medal for it. That is, if the Australians did not——

A knock. The orderly entered and announced that a member of the Australian flying corps, whom we will call Lieut. Blank, wished to see me.

"What's he want to see me for?"

"He was in one of the R. E. 8s attacked by the circus yesterday, sir."

Naturally, I thought he was going to thank me for the part the flight had played in saving his skin. And I was in no mood to receive gratitude. It was on the tip of my tongue to send him away, but I did not want to be discourteous.

"All right, Jones; show him in," I said.

He entered, a slight young fellow in khaki, and came up to the side of the bed. He did not offer to shake hands. I soon knew why.

"Capt. Brown?"

"Yes."

"I'm Blank of the Australian R. E. 8s. I was in one of the planes attacked by the circus yesterday."

He paused. I lay looking up at him. And he went on:

"I—I fired on the red triplane."

"Yes."

"Here's what I'm getting at, Capt. Brown." The words came with a rush. "I fired on the all red tripe, and I—I'd like to get credit for bringing him down. You have the only report on which credit will be given for it. But you've shot down lots of Huns. I've never shot down any yet. If you withdraw your report I'll get credit for it. Will you do that, Capt. Brown?"

For a moment I could not speak. At first I scarcely realized the full of his meanness. Then rage took hold of me.

I wanted to get my hands on him. It wasn't enough that the Australian infantry was trying to grab the credit, but now this Australian flyer wanted to hog it. I tried to struggle up in bed.

He must have seen the wild look in my eye, for he backed toward the door, his face white.

"You young hound!"

I checked myself. I realized I was in no shape to trounce him. With an effort at control, I called:

"Orderly!"

"Yes, sir."

"Escort this officer to the airdrome."

The orderly saluted and turned. He stepped to one side while the Australian officer slipped through the door like a kicked dog.

WHEN he was gone I lay for a while trying to ease the quivering which shook me like an ague. This was the last straw of all. I seemed to have gone to pieces. It was all I could do to keep from weeping.

Later I was able to get up. Still in my pajamas, I went over to the mess. I told the flyers about the Australian's request.

The place went wild. The pilots jumped up, swore in several dialects, wanted to go en masse to the Australian squadron and smash them up. And tar Blank.

They would have gone with very little urging.

But the Richthofen aftermath generally was unpleasant enough without making it an open scandal that would stink throughout the army.

"Listen, you chaps," I said, "we know he's a ruddy cad. Let it go at that."

While I was sitting there word came from Cairns that the post-morten had shown positively that Richthofen had been killed by a bullet in the heart which had come from behind. Thus my claim was proved beyond doubt.

A little later a wire came from Royal Air Force headquarters signed by Gen. Salmond:

> Very best congratulations to No. 209 Squadron and Capt. Brown on bringing down the redoubtable Von Richthofen.

Other congratulatory messages arrived. They failed to bring me any particular cheer.

The Richthofen affair did not excuse me from getting on with the war. That afternoon I went up alone on a ground strafing job. I forced myself into the bus, crossed the lines, and flailed the trenches with my guns.

When I returned I flopped wearily into bed.

Next day I led the flight out on patrol. I was determined not to give up until I was ordered out. We bumped into some Huns. I dived on one, but my machine guns jammed. I pulled out of the scrap and came home.

That was my last fighting flight. For the next two days I could not get out of bed.

Then Butler, the squadron commander, and Cairns, the wing, came to visit me. The former had a message from Brig. Gen. Charlton. He wanted me to go to Nice on leave with some friends of his. He thought it would do me good—lift me back into shape.

I was a fool not to have jumped at his kindness. But I was sick of France. I wanted to see England. I asked Butler to thank Gen. Charlton, but to tell him I would rather be shipped right across the channel.

Then Cairns spoke. He said he had been delegated to explain why there had not been and would not be any official recognition for the shooting down of Richthofen. And, by the way, I was given neither decoration nor award, although two Australian Tommies were credited with receiving distinguished conduct medals for their unsuccessful shooting from the trenches.

But I have no complaint. It is good to be a living, when so many men you flew with—against—have been such a long time dead;
to be able to look back at all that madness f
the security of nine years after, the sanity of turned health, and the sanctuary of a grow family.

Cairns went on to say that the Australians h demanded the decorations aforesaid, and that they had not been awarded there might have b a lot of friction.

IT was apparently a question of army and i perial politics, the point of which I, in my d way, could not quite grasp. But I was just simple flight commander, merely a Canuck pilot the Royal Air Force, without any one particula interested in pushing my claims. We Canadi flyers had no identification with the Canadian peditionary force, else there might have been proper rumpus: Canada versus Australia.

So I said quietly to Cairns: "O, well, sir, does not matter. Richthofen's shot down. Th the main thing—not who gets the credit. After we're all here to win the war, not to win deco tions."

The affair petered out at that.

I was sent to a hospital in England. Two we

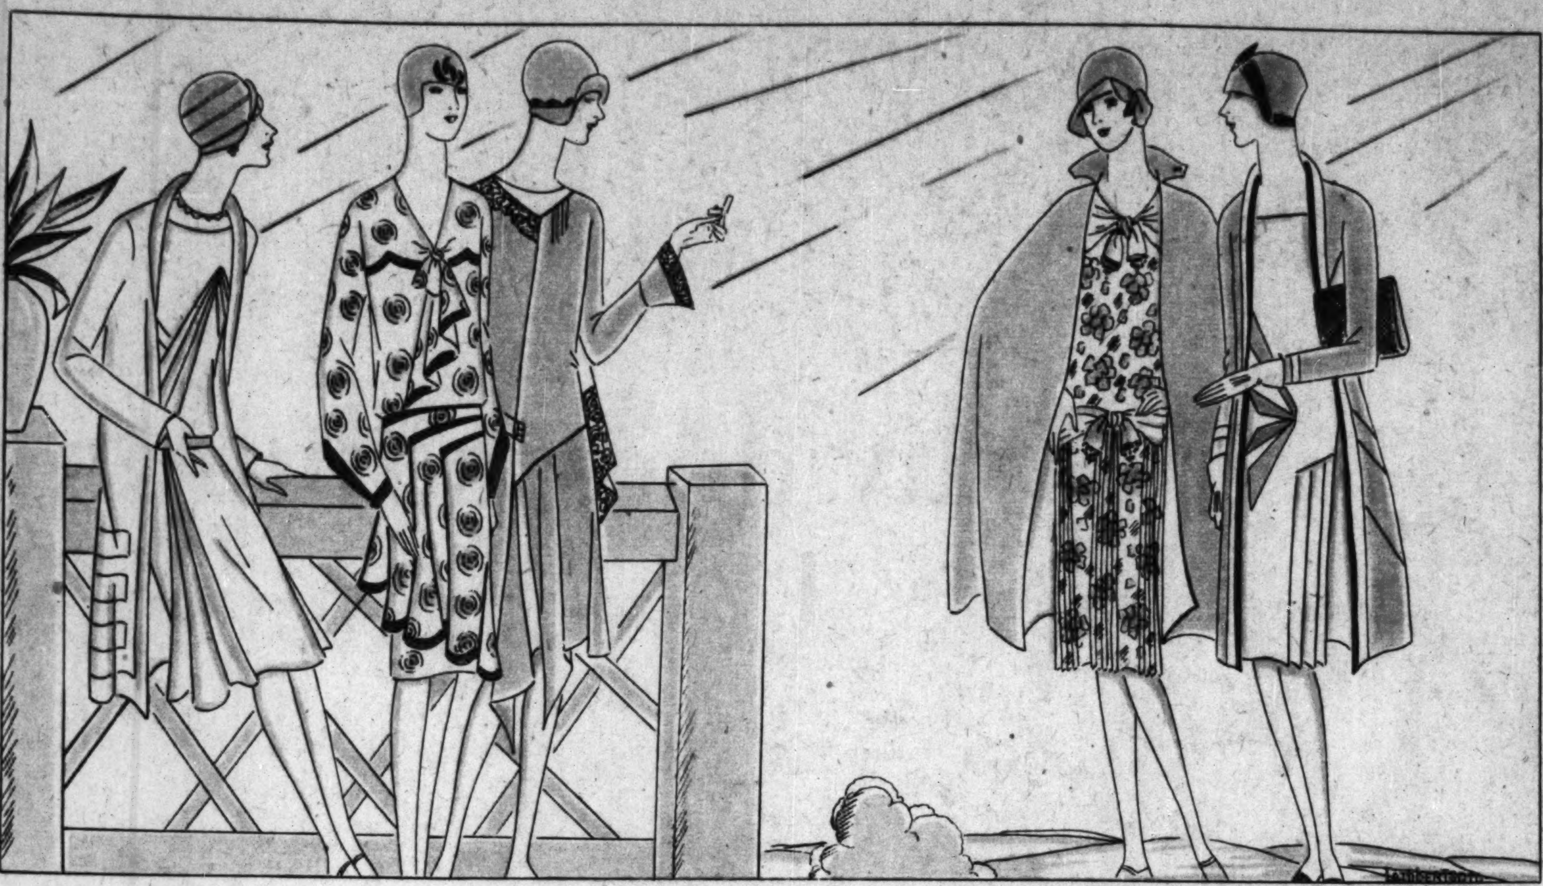
THE ENSEMBLE IS ASSEMBLED

by Corinne Lowe



Lelong uses light bronze picador crepe for the ensemble shown at the extreme left. It is a practical model because either garment may serve without the other.

Second, this gown of printed crepe de chine from Patou is accompanied by a coat which is sketched in the smaller picture on this page.

The frock third from the left is designed by Martial et Armand and is intended to be worn with the wrap shown in the small sketch.

The cape has leaped into popularity this spring. A favored style is shown on the second figure from the right where it partially covers a gay little printed frock.

Last, this ensemble cannot well be separated, for the coat is encrusted with bands of the dress material and vice versa.

NEW YORK.—(Special Correspondence.)—I am one of those magnificent, lion-hearted women who for many years have battled successfully against a great temptation. I mean ensembles. I have read about them and written about them, yet never once have I worn one. That is why the public confession I am just about to put down fills me with acute emotion. For now, at last, I have to confess that after all these long years of abstinence I am stained with the prevalent guilt. I have bought my first ensemble.

Undoubtedly, too, there are many other strong women which are sharing in my fall from grace. Only a real heroine can resist this spring a fashion so perpetually dangled before one's eyes. In fact, I suspect that Mme. Roland herself would finally say, after a tour of shops in which every coat and every frock are joined in a life union: "O, well, after all, give me one of the old [illegible]."

There are certainly more ensembles this season than there ever were before. They go right straight through from sports clothes to evening togs, and the wrap takes on Protean shapes. Coats and capes of all lengths are employed, and the cape has assumed an importance in the assembled costume which it has never occupied heretofore. It goes without saying that these capes are as versatile as coats. They come both short and long, and their treatment is as diversified as their length.

Now, the basis of my own long stand against the ensemble is the matter of cost. Impossible is it for the average woman to invest in a whole wardrobe of ensembles. The best that she can do is to start the spring season on a pair that will give her the widest possible range of service and then let other occasions take care of themselves by aid of a separate wrap and frock.

She may do still another thing. If she is very wary and calculating, she may find an ensemble the wrap of which may be employed for other frocks. This latter, however, is increasingly hard to do. It seems to me that there are more ensembles today which are made of identical fabrics than ever before, and even when this is not the case the frock is usually so identified with its accompanying wrap by trimming and lining that it is almost impossible to separate said frock from its destined partner.

To illustrate what one means: Second from the left of our page you will see an ensemble of printed crêpe de chine from Patou. Now, last season this printed crêpe de chine frock would probably have been accompanied by a coat of plain color and this year it is still permissible to follow that idea. But there is no gainsaying the fact that the all printed ensemble is newer and smarter and more in the spirit of the present day designer. Yet to follow this smart novelty means total defeat of any economical streak in us. For how could one wear this coat with any save its matching dress?

Putting aside any idea of thrift for the moment, let us trace some of the features of this stunning ensemble. It is made of black crêpe de chine printed in yellow, red and pink, and both the coat and frock are set off with black satin. The yoke of the frock, as defined by this black satin, is especially interesting, inasmuch as it pursues the newest yoke policy of the hour. That is to say, it is rounded and curves in circles under the arms. Also much in tune with the hour are those sharp triangular sections of the lower sleeve, also developed in the black material.

As for the coat, this has a double yoke in the back, and its black satin revers are relieved by fabric flowers in the tones of the printed motif. A belt of black satin is drawn in rather tightly above square pockets trimmed with triangular flaps.

Yet that it is possible to find an ensemble with a wrap which may be weaned away from its home ties to philander with other frocks is indicated by a number of black crêpe ensembles—those including either coat or cape. Of course these, too, are often so closely affiliated with the accompanying gown that the process of alienation is difficult. To this group, however, the Martial et Armand costume in the center of the page is unrelated. For here is a coat without any very strong feeling of home life. Instead of confining its attentions to that one lawful wedded gown of matching crêpe, it may pick and choose consorts like a sultan. No reason why it shouldn't be worn over your printed chiffon or crêpe just as well as over the matching crêpe gown with which we show it.

If you look at the small sketch you will see that this is an unlined wrap trimmed with white ermine, and that its sides dip down farther than the remainder of the garment. The back of this coat is interesting because of a very original type of stitching. Two lines are drawn under the fur collar to form a yoke effect and these lines separate in the center to plunge into a V. Last touch of all, one of the sides of the V is drawn down into a line that touches the hem of the wrap.

The frock, also of black marocain crêpe, has two shoulder draperies in the back, one of which is long and the other comparatively short. These are edged with black lace, as are also the sleeves, and a section of lace crosses to the front of the neck line.

In my own case, I decided that the type of ensemble which would yield the greatest possible dividends of service on its wrap was one of the light weight woolens. There are plenty of these to be had nowadays, in both sports and street interpretations, and they frequently make both units of the same color and the same fabric. Usually, however, there is such interplay of trimming that any separation of the two units is impossible. I saw to it, however, that my own coat should be noncommittal, so I had it made with abundant seaming for trimming and without a touch of anything else—even lining—to betray its mated life. Now, when this coat is not doing duty by the matching jumper frock of rose beige light weight woolen, it can commit all sorts of graceful infidelities. It can go out with little crêpe sports frocks and printed crêpe street frocks.

Of course, one of the enemies against my own policy is this style of incrustation. We are given as much, nowadays, to making incrustations as is a good old fashioned housewife to making crust. And the ensemble is certainly one of the favored resorts of this type of trimming. Regard, for example, the Lelong ensemble at the extreme right of our page. In this you will see how the system of incrustation is carried through the ensemble world.

Both coat and frock are made of the same material—a light weight woolen. For the latter is selected a light tone of beige and for the former a much deeper tone of the same tint. Observe, though, how the two exchange civilities! The one piece frock is incrusted with the dark beige of the wrap and the latter returns the compliment by its incrustations of light tone. Quite evidently here are two garments which were just made for each other and which cannot reasonably be separated.

The other Lelong ensemble at the extreme left of our page is more susceptible to division. Although both garments are made of the same light bronze picador crêpe, there is, in fact, such an independent spirit manifested in trimming effects that either garment may be worn without the aid of the other.

In the frock of this model we see the same admiration for incrusted effects observed in the other Lelong model. The coat, however, pursues its own ideas of how material should be inlaid and so, instead of the familiar geometric lines, we find here only straight bands applied to the back. These bands show lines of stitching, and so, too, do the edges of the coat. The completing touch is constituted by a bow and narrow streamers fluttering out from the neck line.

As I have previously remarked, the cape has come in for a great deal of attention this spring, and is to be encountered in many different phases. Especially delightful are some of the cape ensembles Worth has sent us. These frequently have lines of shirring deep down on the shoulders, and from these points panels float out on either side

Another new and charming interpretation of the cape is made by Molyneux. From this establishment come to us both coats and capes which are invested with a back yoke. From this yoke hangs a drapery which is usually divided in the center to form two panels. The effect in both types of wrap is eminently successful, although one associates it most definitely with the cape.

TEMPTING MENUS FOR THE WEEK

by Jane Eddington

By Jane Eddington

Significant Lettuce.

VENUS, after the death of Adonis, slept in a couch of lettuce in order that she might not indulge in useless grief. She could not keep awake to do so. The Greek physician, Galen, prescribed the eating of lettuce to combat insomnia in old people, and believed in its hypnotic properties. When his predilections got translated into mediaeval English, it was said that "Galen, whose beloved sallet it was, from its pinguid, subdulcid, and agreeable nature, says it breeds the most laudable blood." Possessing as it does the valuable vitamins, it will do all that—breed "laudable blood."

If we are looking for a bit of contrast we have but to see in our mind's eye lettuce in this day grown in great fields—in Imperial valley, Salt river valley, Idaho, and New Jersey. However, we have no record at all of anybody choosing to sleep in them, yet there is a notion to this day that lettuce is soporific as well as beautifying.

There is another story about Venus and a lettuce bed, with more than one version, but each concerning Phaon who did an errand for the goddess of love and beauty, and received an ointment which, when he rubbed it on his body, made him marvelously beautiful. Whereupon he captivated everybody, including the poetess Sappho, who threw herself into the sea because he disdained her, and perhaps because Venus loved him, and kept him concealed in lettuces. One version of his end is that he died from a wound received from a wild boar that came to feed on this salad green, just as rabbits and chickens do today, a special sort often being raised for them.

It is said that the Greek philosopher, Pythagoras, made lettuce the chief food of his diet, and that the Roman, Pliny, and many people since have believed it would bring sleep to the eater. The diarist, John Evelyn, writing in 1699, seemed to think lettuce had a regular patent medicine list of virtues, though perhaps he knew nothing of these cure-alls when he wrote: "Astringent, yet so harmless, it may be safely eaten in fevers, for it allays heat, bridles cholera, extinguishes thirst, excites appetite, kindly nourishes, and above all things represses vapors, conciliates sleep, mitigates pain; besides the effect it has on the morals."

Hebrew, Greek, Roman, ancient Frank and modern French, all consumed lettuce, and in the course of the centuries of usage scores of symbolical and medical ideas have centered around it. The Romans used it "to calm the stomach brutalized by gastronomic extravagance." By the way, if you want a sleepless night eat large quantities of lettuce, and the cold bulk of it will help you to that end. There are two sides to most shields.

The Useful Lettuce Salad.

The small seedlings of lettuce make a daintier salad than the full grown, therefore one may pick it soon after it gets started from the ground or long before it has matured, for very pleasant uses. A salad of seedlings, dressed with a French dressing, with which some people like a little sugar, is superior with hot roast lamb or with the cold meat.

The old fashion of eating lettuce with sugar and vinegar suggests that a bit of sugar with other lettuce salads adds an acceptable quality. Another thing suggesting this is that when fruit is served as a salad and always, as is proper, sprinkled with the sugar before a dressing is added, the nice lettuce base is helped to be, in some cases, quite as edible and refreshing as the fruit, itself.

But lettuce treated well is excellent first, last, and all the time, or from seedling to spindling seed stalk. There are to be found in the French 150 variations of cooked lettuce. Not one respectable leaf of lettuce need be wasted.

Plain Lettuce.

To some people one of the simplest and most satisfactory ways to eat lettuce is plain, but from a chilled salad bowl—without any dressing. All the chicories can be eaten that way with relish. Cos' lettuce or romaine is eaten in that fashion, with the final bread and cheese in England, and the plain inner leaves of this variety are true delicacies. The outer leaves may seem a bit coarse for eating raw, but they make a superior green when cooked, and even a small amount of them so prepared will make a useful and appreciated garnish for meat.

Lettuce Garnish.

The bowl of a head lettuce leaf makes a pretty container for a salad of fruit, chopped vegetables, meat or fish, and perhaps best for the latter. The platter of cold meat may have its salad garnish arranged on lettuce leaves, but as for that, taste and ingenuity relates lettuce to cold meats in no end of ways, and to all the salads not of the green order, which it properly is itself.

A young woman who had been a tearoom manager was recently demonstrating how to put lettuce around a bowl of mixed and dressed salad materials, and instead of lining the bowl, as many people do first, she put the salad into it and then pushed leaves of lettuce down around it, so saving them from getting mussed or gummed up.

Cutting Lettuce.

Because of the prevalence of steel knives, there once arose a legend that lettuce should never be touched with a knife, and this idea was followed as religiously as though it had been a law of the Medes and Persians. There is no reason why lettuce should not be cut with any knife not steel, and we use steel shears to advantage in cutting it chiffonade or slaw fashion, as we often do leaf lettuce.

Head lettuce leaves are crisped largely because they can then be cut with a fork, as we eat all foods mainly with a fork. In making a bowl salad it often seems best to tear the leaves in bits. The French do this to perfection, but we generally do not seem to get the air when we try to make bowl salads. For small and dainty salads, a base made by cutting a head of lettuce in slices is good and lends itself to a number of sorts of pretty treatment, with such items as asparagus points.

PERISHABLE GOODS

By Dornford Yates

ing Adèle, or, to be more precise, of thrusting between her and Rose Noble, before the latter knew we were there.

One thing was plain. Before the night was over, we must either have accomplished our purpose or have gained some room or corner where we could lie hid. Now the only shelter we knew was that of the cellar beneath the dining room floor, but, since our goal was, as ever, the southwest tower, we decided to make for the latter and to trust to striking another and more convenient lair.

Now, though we knew next to nothing of the way from the porch to Adèle, we had one valuable clew. When Casemate had been hounded by Noble to "turn out the car," he had certainly reached the porch as quickly as ever he could. Now his shortest path, as we knew from the bookseller's guide, was down the grand staircase and across the courtyard. But Casemate had not crossed the courtyard. It was, therefore, perfectly plain that way was shut.

We, therefore, turned to the door in the western wall of the porch, for Casemate had come out of that, and that could, therefore, lead us back to the gallery of stone.

I could set down our passage in detail, for I remember most clearly every step that we took. The hopes and fears which attended us, the sudden shocks of thankfulness and dismay, the waves of suspense and relief—all these are engraved upon my memory as letters cut upon a stone. But I think that such a recital would be out of place, for only those that were there could find it moving, and I have not the mind or the skill to trick it out.

And so I will only say that by galleries, stairs, and chambers we made our way in the darkness toward the southwest tower. Again and again boards cracked beneath our weight, and sometimes, do what we would, a hinge would whine: we made mistakes in our going and were forced to retrace the steps we had been at such pains to take: and we went at a true snail's pace and as blind men go, for we dared not use our torches in case their light should betray us and ruin our game.

At break of day we stood in a little lobby that looked out upon the mountains and seemed at that misty moment to command the world.

The place had the look of a guardroom, and so, I am sure, it had served, for a wicket gave directly on to a winding stair, which if a man ascended he came to the roof, but, if he went down, he came to the gallery of stone. It was, indeed, the stairway of the southwest tower.

So we broke and entered into that jealous keep which for six long days had mocked us and all our works.

The need for caution was now paramount.

We stood at the enemy's elbow, and he did not know we were there. We had our hand almost upon him; but he had his hand on Adèle. He was unready, but we did not know the ground. If we could strike before he could, the game was ours: but if we were to be behindhand, we had better be sitting at Lass with our hands in our lap.

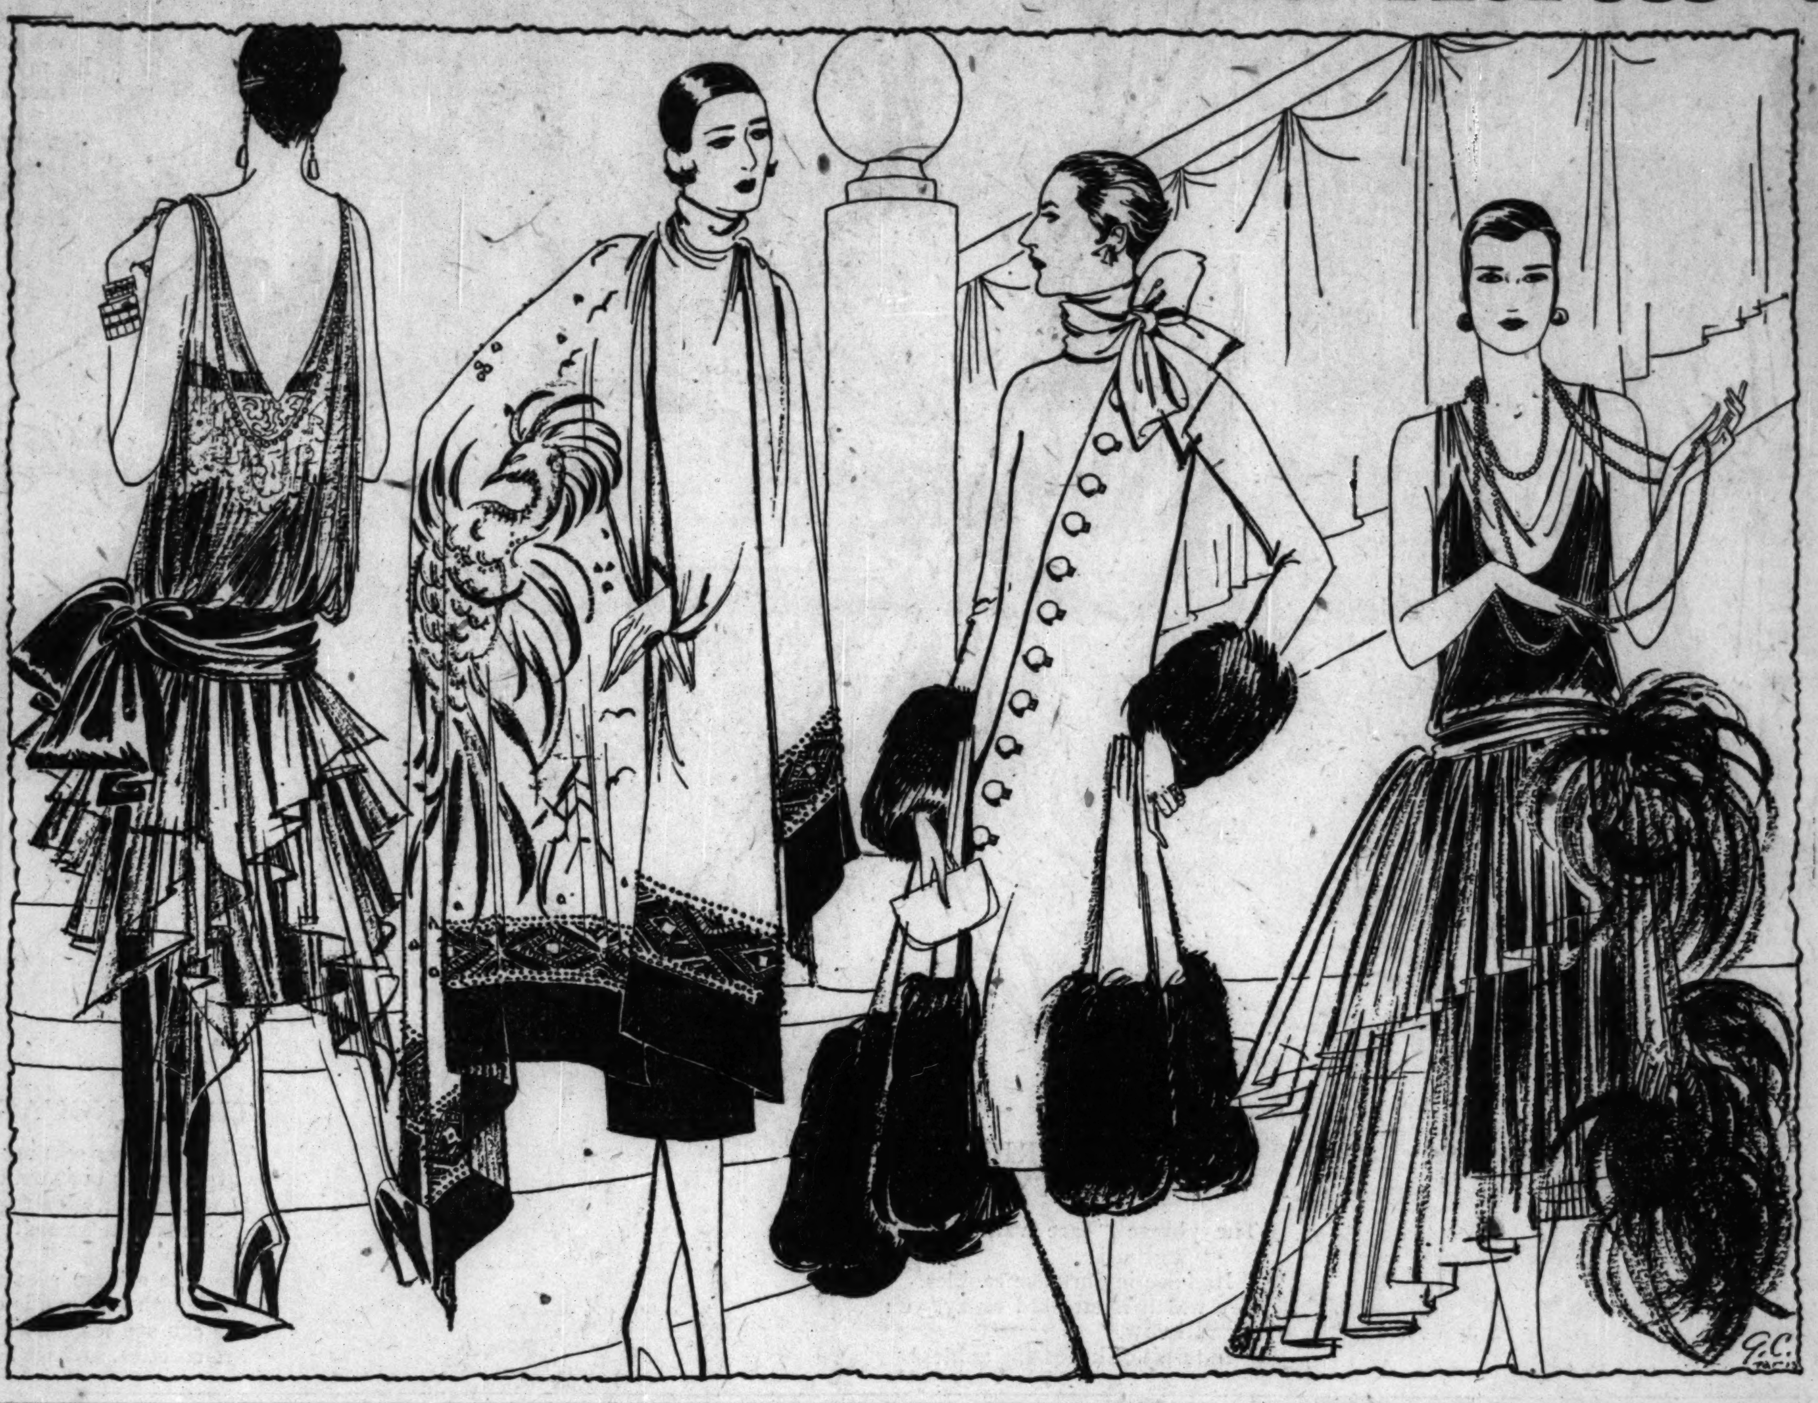
Clouds of Tulle and Chiffon Float Across the Evening

Diaphanous Materials Lend an Air of Mystery and Charm to the Parisian and Her American Cousin as They Fare Forth to Gay Occasions of the Night.

By Bettina Bedwell.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]



Black chiffon over cream lace, with an irregular skirt and sash, give unusual interest to this Doucet model shown at the extreme left.

Full length scarfs replace sleeves in this night blue evening wrap from Bechoff, sketched next. The scarf on the right is embroidered with jewels and there is a jeweled band at the top of the black satin hem.

Third, originality and chic are given this white cloak from Bechoff by the buttoned diagonal closing, and the irregular shirred panels at the sides. These panels are trimmed with black marten.

Nicole Groult places a long black sash of tulle trimmed with ostrich on an evening frock of black tulle. The diagonal ruffles of the skirt make an uneven hemline. Shown last.

PARIS.—(Special Correspondence.)—The advice of Paris this season is: "Let us be light and sparkling in our evening hours." And, as the evenings get longer, lighter and become sparkling with stars, so do fashions take to themselves lightness, sparkle and length of line. Light, in the mode, means an absence of ponderousness and not, necessarily, clarity of color. It is arrived at by the use of cloudlike materials such as tulle, chiffon and lace which give the ethereal delicacy of summer clouds that float across the evening. Sparkle is given to fashion by constellations of beads and jewels.

And how this change in fashion does change the aspect of lovely woman! Gone is the hardboiled simplicity of undecorated straight lines. It is replaced by a silhouette that suggests the eternal beauty of feminine curves, enveloping them in cloudy ruffles, panels and tiers of tulle or chiffon. The whole idea behind evening styles has altered also. We are no longer entreated by fashion mongers to sacrifice loveliness for chic. Distinction in clothes is walking hand in hand with all the beauty that the most flattering of fabrics and lines can lend to lovely woman.

Paris has taken her cue from the night which veils itself in the softest of misty darkness, and which thus becomes more alluring than the stark daylight. The twinkle of the stars in jewel formation is enough and plenty to make a brilliancy that doesn't eclipse the wearer.

Evening clothes, when well selected, give us the chance to relax from our serious daytime character and appearance into creatures that have that charm of mystery for which all women aspire and which has so potent an attraction for mere man. Sometimes it is necesary to throw aside our practical sense to get this result, but there are times when it pays to discard this in order to arrive at beauty. For a long time beauty has had a hard row to hoe in fashions, so that now when wholesale beauty is the highest kind of chic the opportunity should be seized to make the most of it.

I have never known a woman so hopeless that she couldn't approach near to beauty in the right kind of evening clothes. Prettiness may, and usually is, an undeniable fact, but beauty on the other hand is an effect. This effect must operate on both yourself and the person who sees you. And for creating this desirable illusion down through the ages women have used vaporous fabrics for veils, for scarfs for shawls and for frocks. These lighter-than-air materials are just as magical in getting the net result of loveliness now as they ever were in the history of woman. And this season they are arranged to almost irresistible attractiveness for any one.

Paris doesn't draw any color line for evening. If color is one of the factors necessary to make you feel as well as look lovely you may choose what you like. Paris is wearing the whole gamut of soft tint shades, and there is no lack of such brilliant tones as violet and flag red.

There is, however, a color combination which is especially smart in Paris, and which is one that flatters every female of the species. It consists first of black in some one of the diaphanous materials I have named—tulle, chiffon or lace, and preferably one of the first two. We have had so much black for evening that a lot of women will say, "O dear! I just won't have another black frock, no matter how becoming." However, black as worn is something else again, for black chiffon or tulle worn over some pale tint or white has both the cloud and light effect which is the great charm of the present mode.

It is also a new idea of the Paris style makers to place black chiffon or tulle over white ivory or cream lace and thus produce a new and extremely alluring combination of fabrics. There are also in Paris fashion shows many frocks of lace over a light colored foundation and there are also frocks of lace and chiffon combined and placed over a contrasting slip. Of all these variations the most novel is the black chiffon frock over lace. It gives something new and it is enhancing to every woman.

The first model illustrated in our sketch is an evening frock which has this combination of materials. It is a creation of Doucet, and is appropriately called "Rêverie" in that it suggests the mysterious dreams of the maiden, unbounded by hard realities. The lines of the blouse of this model are, as you see, slender, but rather softly ample toward the waistline, while the under blouse of cream lace is fitted to show the contours of the body.

The foundation skirt terminates in a deep hem of black satin, and the chiffon skirt is made of pointed tiers of the material shirred very full, so that these tiered flounces seem to be running in every direction. They droop below the hemline of the lace and satin foundation skirt.

The girdle is really a sash of black crêpe satin, draped closely around the hips, tied in a large bow on the left side, the long ends extending to the floor, thus increasing to greater beauty the length of line of the silhouette.

At the opposite side of our sketch is another vaporous evening gown over a pale pink foundation. This frock is made of black tulle. Nicole Groult, who designed it gives to the blouse a yoke of pale pink chiffon.

The skirt is made of two diagonally cut ruffles of black tulle, these ruffles being considerably wider on the right side than on the left, so that the hemline dips very low on one side, a new arrangement of the uneven hem that is smart. Mme. Groult makes a girdle for this frock of self-material, draping it around the hips and tying it in a knot on the left hip, where a large rosette of ostrich is placed The sash ends are also trimmed with ostrich.

The sketch second from the left illustrates one of the smartest of the new Paris evening wraps. It is a creation of Bechoff who makes it of night blue crêpe satin, the color and texture like the sky at evening. The coat has a beautiful line. The straight sleeveless foundation ends at the top in two wide scarfs that are thrown, as shown, over the shoulders to take the place of sleeves.

The hem of this wrap is of black and above this is lamé band covered with jewel embroidery in rich colors. On the scarf that covers the right side is a large bird embroidered in vari-colored stones and silks. This kind of coat is a perfect example of the trend of the evening mode toward beauty in chic.

Our third model is another new type of evening wrap from the same creator—Bechoff. It is extremely smart and is at the same time practical, for it may be worn also for occasions that prohibit a more elaborate type of evening wrap.

Bechoff makes this coat of white ribbed silk, with an unusual buttoned diagonal closing and a hemline that is also made diagonal by the floating panels at the sides. These panels are cartridge plaited at top and luxuriously banded with black marten at the bottom. The cuffs are also made of marten, while the collar is a scarf of self material.

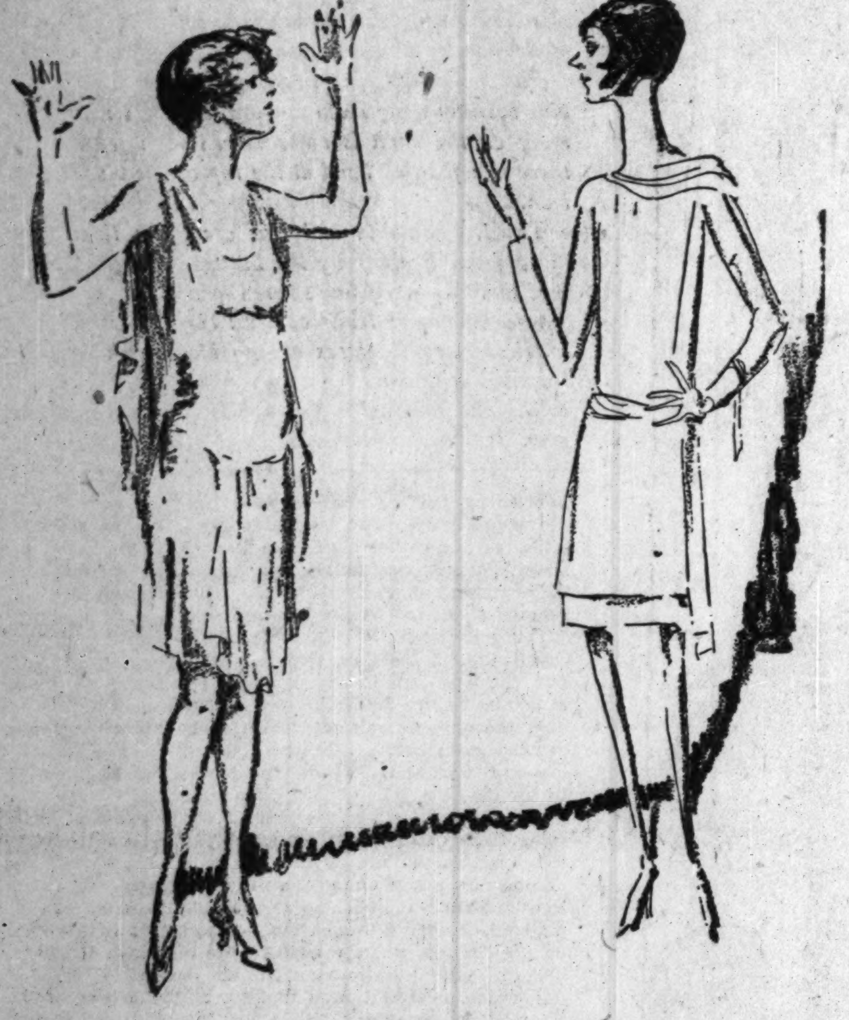
MAIDEN MEDITATIONS by Sara Moore

HER INFINITE VARIETY.

Yes, I loved before.
  Why should you complain?
Be, my sweet, concerned,
  Lest I love—again.

Nothing have you lost
  Dead loves e'er could claim.
Even I love you—
  No two days—the same!



A MOAN.

Fashion artists have wrecked my hopes—
  Back to the dismal sticks I caper.
I have no legs that fall, like ropes,
  Down from a shape that is cut from paper.

Life for me is no more worth while—
  Sadly I mourn that the crisis pinches . . .
Beaten, I give up the fight for style.
  I lack a neck that is twenty inches.

WHAT PRICE BEAUTY?

The phrase "face value" doth mislead;
  Its false importance rankles.
For worth is stressed today, you know,
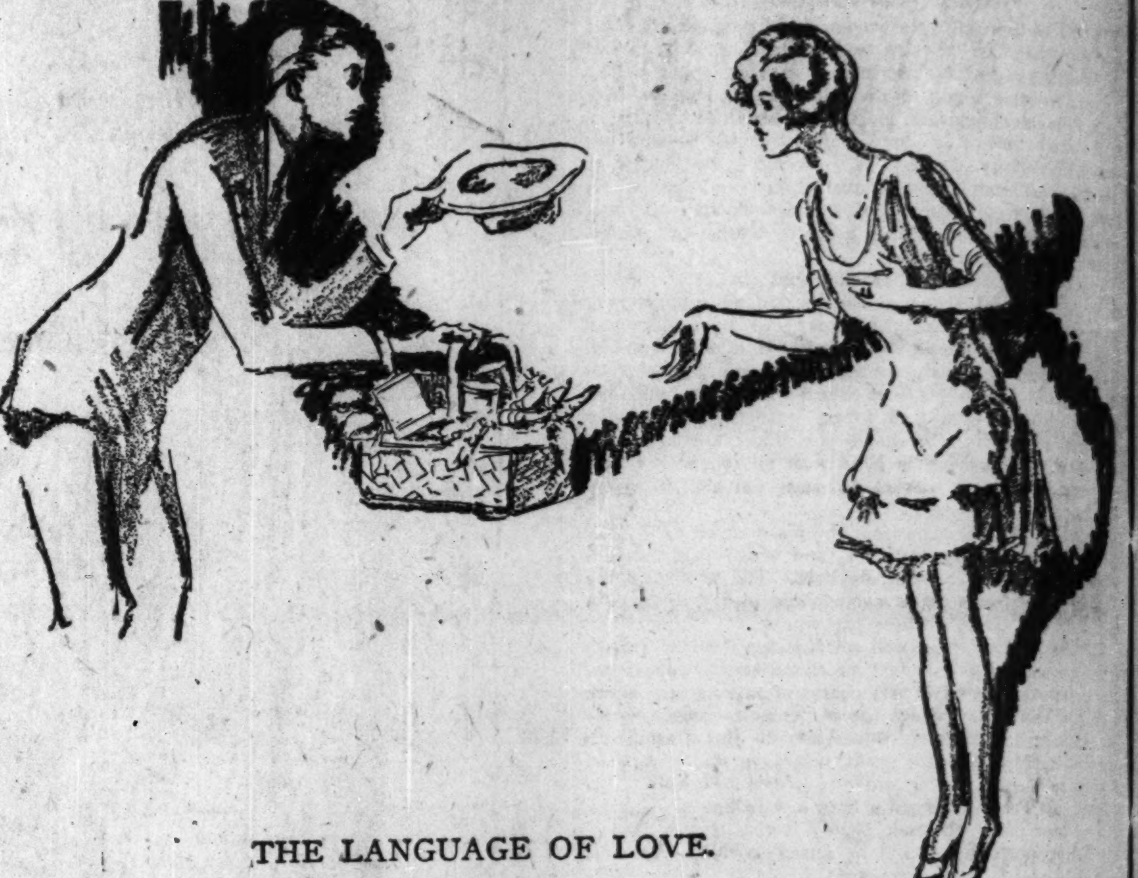
  In terms of knees and ankles!



THE LANGUAGE OF LOVE.

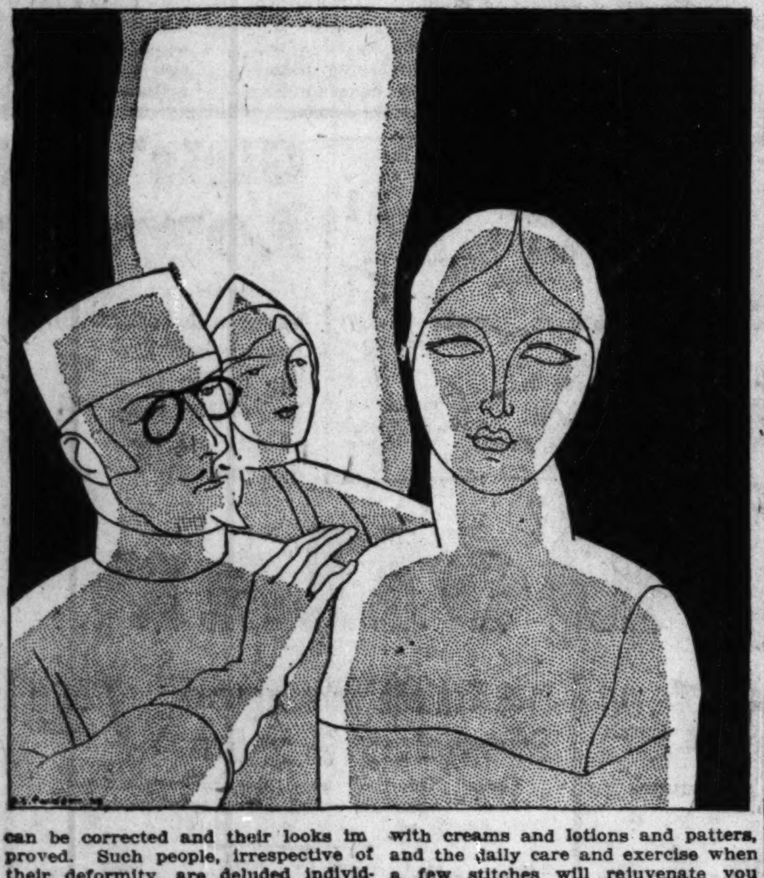
Then my lover sent me roses
  In a silver box, with cards.
Dewy, ardent, glowing beauties,
  Stems that measured yards and yards.

Now he seldom speaks with posies,
  Though his love is evident.
He can say it best with beefsteaks,
  Groceries, and ice and rent.

ARTIFICIAL BEAUTY HINTS

A Frank Discussion of Face-Lifting as a Means of Retaining Youth and Loveliness

by Antoinette Donnelly



NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—There comes a moment in the affairs of women when they query their mirrors on the idea of whether a stitch in time might not save their faces nine years.

Not all women, of course, but many. And their number is on the increase daily.

By some subterranean channel Mrs. Jones learns that Ethelinda McQuaig, her favorite stage and screen star, has achieved her 22 year old look by way of a highly successful facial uplift. Mrs. Jones also hears that a number of the other professional women are cheating the years by the same surgical process. Every beauty, professional or non, over 35, is liable to be charged with a face lifting operation by the gullible Mrs. Jones, if that professional has managed to keep her youth beyond Mrs. Jones' own.

Less than a week ago the most preposterous story about a professional who hasn't seen her 30th birthday yet came to my ears, related, of course, by one of the gullibles. The motive in relating these stories is basically the wish to be encouraged to go ahead and do likewise. I know the young woman referred to hasn't had her face lifted. She hasn't had her nose reshaped. Neither feature is in need of any help other than that which nature bestowed and her own good sense has protected.

It's the easiest thing you can say about a woman past the first flush of youth if she hasn't succumbed to the ravages of time. You can't prove the statement. Neither can you disprove it, unless she is given a chance to make a defense statement. And she is probably the last to hear the false reports about her perennial youth, so she has no way of enlightening a gullible public.

Gullibility Is a Vice.

I wish to emphasize this gullibility because it is the thing that is driving otherwise sensible women to respond to the call of charlatans and face mutilators. And I have reason to fear that we are in for an orgy of frantic and artificial efforts to be made beautiful overnight. And I'm not alone in my suspicions. Legislation to save American women from the baneful results within his professional observation is advocated by Dr. Charles F. Pabst, chief dermatologist of Greenpoint hospital, Brooklyn, N. Y.

The pressure of the demand for this kind of plastic surgery inspired Dr. Joseph Colt Bloodgood to review the types that are easiest prey. Chiefly, he cites "those who mentally exaggerate their deformity and who have gotten the idea that this deformity can be corrected and their looks improved. Such people, irrespective of their deformity, are deluded individuals with a definite, fixed idea exaggerating their defect.

"They are willing to suffer pain and prolonged discomfort and to spend the last of their money in the cost of the treatment. They are willing to pay fees out of all proportion to the work done. Their mental twist makes them easy prey to any dishonest individual, in or out of the medical profession, who will promise them a treatment which will correct their deformity."

At a comparatively recent medical convention the questions of skin-peelings, face-liftings, paraffin injections were discussed. Tales were told to indicate that this type of beauty culture is exacting a toll from its followers, in deformities, inflammations, skin diseases of one sort and another—even death.

Not All Are Fatal.

I don't wish to go on record as saying that all operations for the improvement of the face are fatal, or even dangerous. There are professional women and lay women, too, who have had face lifting and face peeling work done and to all appearance, successfully done.

There are plastic surgeons, men who are worthy of the name, men who have the respect of their profession, men who can correct a deformity and accomplish a great improvement. But to every one to whom one's face might be intrusted with reasonable confidence there are a hundred whose interest is commercial solely and purely and whose hands are not to be trusted for so serious an experiment.

In spite of the warnings that have been broadcast about paraffin and wax injection, there are still unscrupulous operators who will do the work and foolish, foolish women who permit it done on the promise of beauty improvement.

"Where paraffin and wax are injected under the skin, irritation sets in after a few months and, after a few years, you have sloughing of the tissue," says Dr. Pabst. "Gangrene sets in and even death has been known to result."

Face lifting, I presume, holds out the greatest promise to the greatest number of women today. "Why bother with creams and lotions and patters, and the daily care and exercise when a few stitches will rejuvenate you overnight?" they query. And then there are those successful cases they've heard about or maybe witnessed. Perhaps a friend has returned from Paris with lines and wrinkles completely evaporated from the map, I was going to say. Off'n the face, then. Yes, that great specialist, Dr. So and So, operated on her. The fact that it was a great specialist who operated barely sinks in. But the fact of the operation does. And so there is the immediate business of hustling around and finding a man here. And the search is usually done surreptitiously, the right man is more often not found than found.

Nothing New About It.

There is nothing new about plastic surgery, really, except its discovery by a large body of women. All the older great surgeons understood the principles of it and practiced it successfully, but they were not ambitious to be known as beauty surgeons. Their beautifying work was of a humanitarian nature, confined to cases of accident or malady.

But the field since the war, particularly, is flooded with all kinds of beauty surgeons in and out of the profession, and while there are reputable ones who will operate for improvement in beauty, there is still a professional reticence about wanting to be broadcast as a "beauty surgeon." Which, of course, makes the field more profitable for the quacks and the unskilled, there being no such conservatism about them and their claims.

I don't want to lean too far backward in my concern for women's faces. Though I wouldn't personally recommend an operator, because of the hazards that attend even the most skilled performance, there are things to be said in favor of a succesful operation. The face is wrinkle free. The discomfort and pain have not proved unendurable to some women.

On the other hand, even the best surgeons admit that the operation has to be repeated every three or five years. And it is almost impossible to avoid a certain artificiality in the look of the lifted face. It's either a smooth emptiness of expression, or, in profile noticeably, a sharply drawn skin. The eyelids may be subtly affected or the eyes given a slightly slanting look.

FIGHTING THE GREEN EYED MONSTER

by Doris Blake

Reg. U S Pat. Off

If We All Realized That a Sense of Inferiority Is the Real Basis for Jealousy, Fewer of Us Would Suffer Its Pangs.

TO that overworked explanatory, the well known inferiority complex, at least we must be grateful for its part in clearing up an old evil.

There was a time, in the coy and kittenish age, when a girl had to guess, not act, about the romantic status of a male caller, during which her great grains of comfort were secured by a well-defined exhibition of jealousy. Until said caller became deranged, slightly or largely, by the pangs of jealousy, the poor, palpitating young female wasn't exactly sure where she stood, matrimonially speaking. But one good outburst of jealous peeve convinced her beyond shadow of a doubt that here was a devotion simon pure which could end in nothing short of matrimony. Happy marriage, too, with that strong male emotion to protect her.

Then along came the scientific pryers into the deep and darkest archives of soul and motives, with the consequence that, today, the jealous male or female stands not the great exponent of a love that passeth understanding. Stripped of former glory, the exhibition is one of almost indecent nudity. Sans confidence, sans assurance, sans poise, he stands. The jealous individual, in other words, is one with a chronic feeling of inferiority. And there is nothing admirable about him nor about his inferiority exhibitions. Every outburst is a signal that confidence in self is on the wane.

Something to Think About.

And that is something to think about when one is tempted to "burn up" with jealousy. If every orgy were interpreted as an admission that the rival is a bigger, better, and stronger individual, it would go a long way toward clearing the atmosphere of suspicion and unhappiness.

This exposure of jealousy affects us all, more or less. Few there are who escape the pangs entirely, because few of us have escaped the inferiority complex entirely.

But at least we know now what is the matter with us. And knowing it we can attack the trait of jealousy honestly and frankly. If we can accept the fact that it is a lack of self-esteem we are suffering from and not a lack of appreciation, we are in a fair way to getting the green eyed monster by the neck.

It's the meanest spirit human nature has to reckon with, and the hardest to oust. All the pettiness and the vanities that possess us, either habitually or part time, feed and fatten the monster vice.

Time and again people admit, not with the shame that is due the admission, that they have jealous dispositions and they cannot get over them. These people wouldn't shout from the house tops that they are impotent creatures in their own estimation. They wouldn't exclaim that they haven't the power to attract or to hold; that they haven't ability in other directions. But that, if you will believe the psychologists, is exactly what they are crying out loud when they wallow in jealousy.

Whether we like it or not, we have to believe that it is in our moments of most humiliating inferiority that we are most tempted to choose a victim for our spleen.

Success Removes the Vice.

When a person has met with a stroke of success, jealousy is the vice furthest removed. It's when one is checkmated in a plan that the old urge to disclaim the accomplishments of another is paramount.

In the early days of marriage there is less jealousy exhibited than later on. There is a sense of power and success in getting the girl or the man one wanted. Women become most jealous when they feel they aren't keeping stride with their husbands. So long as they are marching side by side with them there is little temptation and less reason for the feeling of inferiority.

And men are most fearful of the loss of their wives' or sweethearts' love when they are most fearful of themselves.

A case in point is that of Mr. X. Ten years ago he was star salesman in a large manufacturing concern. His wife, not a beautiful woman, not even an attractive looking woman, was then engaged in a small business of her own.

A change of management affected the star salesman and he never got the footing with another concern he had in the first. His wife's business seemed to loom successful in proportion to the man's lessened income. Here, of course, was an economic angle to the old vice of jealousy—and understandable, too. But his jealous rages were directed not at the woman's success but at her personal life, which was blameless.

"Of necessity it was blameless," she said humorously. "A woman with a nose like mine is no siren." People wonder why she tolerates the man's unreasonable rages.

Another case is Mrs. James. [Not her real name, of course.] She and her young husband started out to conquer the world. Along about the third and fourth years she fell out of step and for ten she's been gradually slipping further and further behind. Her venom is directed at her husband's associates, the wives of his associates, the young women in his office, at everybody but the real culprit—herself.

Milder Cases.

In between these extremes we have the milder cases. Among women we might call some of the milder forms their catty outbursts. Cattiness is pronounced a form of jealousy. No woman makes a catty remark about another unless there rancors in her soul some shade of jealous envy, a feeling that the other woman has been able to put over something she has not been able to.

Always when you analyze the motive for jealousy there is fear of one's self behind, the kind of fear that makes for inferiority. One isn't so jealous of a young woman's youth as she is aware of her greater years. One is jealous of another woman's charm in proportion to one's own lack of it, and so on. There is always self to be interrogated first on why one is jealous.

One of the reasons why jealousy is hard to overcome is that it so often is a habit of long standing, often beginning with the small child who was unwisely treated by its parents. One child may receive more affection than the other. Partiality shown to a younger or an older one will create a feeling of injustice. By just handling, this tendency to jealousy may be decreased. Jealousy parents feel toward neighbors, friends, or relatives is often reflected in the child's attitude. And one parent's jealousy toward another is bound to create a jealous disposition in the child.

Another reason that the jealous mind balks at reform is that while indulging in an orgy of jealousy a person loses momentarily his sense of inferiority. He may not realize this is what he is doing. But the relief he gets in his outbursts of wrath encourages the habit. His own inadequacy is lost in the attack on some one else. But the intoxicated state of mind does not last. The after effect is a depression that only adds to the original sense of inferiority.

Too Great a Risk.

"Dear Miss Blake: The strange fellow I meet every morning asked me for a date. I would like to go, but we were never introduced. Please advise.
"CHARMAIN."

It is unwise to make dates with chance acquaintances, Charmain. There is an element of danger which no girl may overlook.

Enjoys Popularity.

"Dear Miss Blake: I have been going with a girl for four months. I love her dearly, but she feels towards me as a good friend and wants me to feel the same. She is popular, therefore a little vain. How can I make her feel as I do? BIG BOY."

You can't force that feeling, Big Boy. It must come naturally. Just now she is enjoying her popularity, as any young girl would. It's gratifying to one's vanity, you must admit.

Unfair.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am interested in a young man who is engaged, but he seems to care for me. G. G."

Put yourself in her place, and play the game fair.

Find a New Friend.

"Dear Miss Blake: The father of the girl I love forbids her to go out with any one. I am forbidden to enter house. What shall I do? SID."

Content yourself with the companionship of other girls for a while. To act contrary to father's wishes would complicate matters.

Answers to Beauty Queries

By Antoinette Donnelly

What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair, oily skin? Freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat-chested or flat-footed? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet, or a set of exercises for what ails you, and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply, send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, The Tribune, Chicago.

MOTHER: IT HAS BEEN AGREED upon by many competent dentists that brushing the teeth of children before they have reached the age of 2 or 3 is unnecessary. If the child seems afraid of the brush, let him play with a tooth brush for a while to become accustomed to it; then when you start to use one he won't object.

A. R.: STANDARD WEIGHT FOR a girl twenty, five feet, is 114 pounds. Best results in reducing are obtained by combining exercise and diet, and not depending on either alone, when you wish to reduce generally. For reducing the hips, exercises are most effective. Waist bending and twisting exercises are recommended for the hips. Send a stamped addressed envelope for my illustrated exercises.

M. A.: AS YOUR SKIN IS OILY you should use cold cream sparingly. Oily skins can't stand cream as a dry skin can. Use soap and water for washing and apply this lotion: Boric acid, one dram; distilled witch hazel water, four ounces. At night give the face an ice rub after the warm water wash up. It is an excellent way to reduce the pores. Send a stamped addressed envelope for further details.

GERTRUDE D.: TRY THESE EXercises for your neck: Stand with the feet about eighteen inches apart, body erect, abdomen flat, chest high, hands on the hips, head up. Without moving the body turn the head sharply to the left three times, then to the right three times. Relax head and neck muscles and roll the head around in a complete circle, going as far forward and back on the neck as you can. If you wish more exercises, send a stamped addressed envelope for them.

Drawn, Tired Complexions Instantly Refreshed

As a tired body relaxes and freshens after a warm bath at night, so drawn, "tired" faces freshen and relax after a Calonite bath. But that is not all . . They glow with healthy color and utter cleanliness. For lack of these, faces grow dull, oily, sallow, "tired"; burdened with blackheads; sluggish; old-looking. Soaps and creams cannot stimulate them sufficiently. Calonite can and will—instantly.

Calonite is a pure white powder that you apply with a damp cloth. Instantly you feel the drawn facial tissues relax, freshen. You feel the hidden oils and powder that clog the pores, that resist other cleansing methods, bubblingly dissolve. You feel the warm, reviving youthifying blood come tingling to the surface.

How clear and clean and new your skin looks then! How fresh and young it feels! And how it responds to night-cream and rest! From the very first time you use Calonite you look and feel a new person. Because your skin is clear as it never was before, and healthfully stimulated with nature's own beautifier.

Ask your druggist for Calonite. Try it—this very night. Your money back if not delighted.

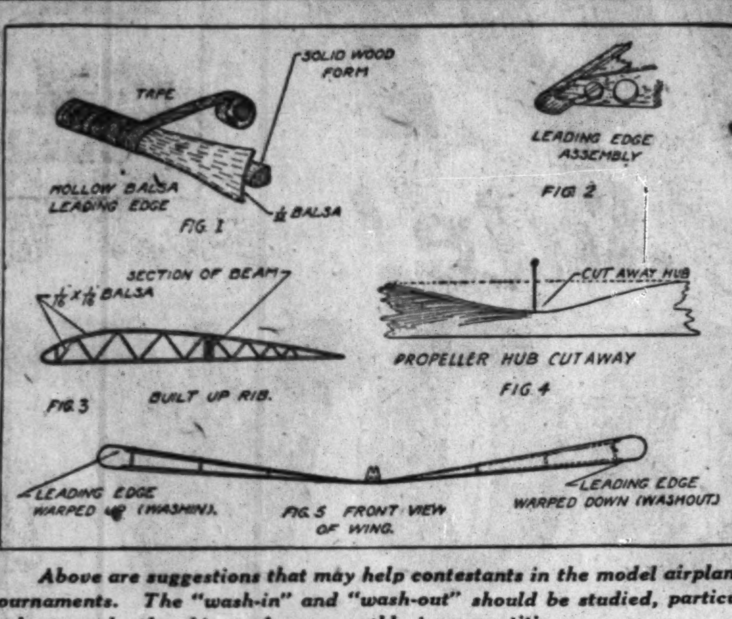
How to Get Model Planes Ready for Contest

Valuable Hints to Aspirants for Honors

BY MERRILL HAMBURG.

[Secy., Airplane Model League of America.]



Above are suggestions that may help contestants in the model airplane tournaments. The "wash-in" and "wash-out" should be studied, particularly, to make the ship perform smoothly in competition.

CHICAGO boys planning to fly away with their share of the honors and prizes at the model airplane tournament sponsored by THE TRIBUNE and set for May 19, 26, and 27, should be putting the finishing touches on their indoor and outdoor ships.

Winners of the city competition will go to the national meet at Detroit June 29 and 30, at which time they'll contest for two trips to Europe, a trip to the Pulitzer air races at Los Angeles, $3,000 in cash prizes, and trophies, medals, and certificates. And in Detroit they'll meet Clarence Chamberlin, Eddie Rickenbacker, and many other notables.

So it behooves those who wish to represent Chicago in such a glorious affair to determine now that they will not be caught napping. Success in both the city and national contests depends on the thoroughness of the preparations made in the meantime. Following are trips—for both the indoor and outdoor contests—that may prove highly valuable in bringing home the bacon.

Three Models Allowed.

The first hint to contestants is this: Have more than one model. The official rules say that as many as three different models may be used to complete the three official flights. Build those reserve ships. Then, if one cracks up, all chances won't be lost.

Second, assemble a kit of tools and materials containing a pair of round nosed pliers, a small block plane, sandpaper, a sharp knife, extra wire parts, a bottle of ambroid cement, a bottle of banana oil, several rubber motors, bamboo, Japanese imperial tissue, and silk thread. Carry this kit in the airplane box and have it ready for instant repairs. No use losing a championship just because a wing spar breaks. With the kit the spar can be repaired in three minutes. Without it, a competitor is sunk.

Build Box for Planes.

Third, carry four or five extra propellers. The prop on a contest model is tight. If the plane dives to the ground, the propeller might break. Be ready to replace it at once with another.

Fourth, build a box in which to carry the planes so they may be transported safely. Plans for building the kind that will carry at least two outdoor ships and three indoor ships appeared in a recent issue of THE TRIBUNE.

Next, preserve the life in the rubber motors by taking proper care of them. If rubber is exposed to air it becomes dry and loses its resiliency. Keep the spare motors in an opaque mason jar, tightly covered. In addition, dope them either with talc or glycerin. While a number of model aviators prefer glycerin, the Airplane Model League of America doesn't recommend it because it's somewhat messy and adds weight. Talc is light and dry and fills the same purpose—that is, it prevents friction between the strands when the motor unwinds.

Use an egg beater winder! This is one of the most important points of all. First of all, it reduces labor. The indoor endurance tractor will take more than 700 turns—some have been known to take 1,150 turns—and the outdoor twin pusher motors may be wound 1,200 times. Winding by hand would be a task. The egg beater is geared so that one turn of the handle gives five turns to the motor.

More important still, using the winder permits stretching of the rubber. With the s-hook, the rear end of the motor can quickly be detached from the fuselage and hooked to the winder. Then, while one boy holds the plane, another can back away with the winder until the motor is stretched to three times its length.

A Valuable Tip.

Stretched rubber takes many more turns than unstretched. For example, the indoor tractor motor, which is 15 inches long, will take about 750 winds before breaking if it is unstretched. But stretched to three times its length, it will take over 1,100!

Here's another tip that may add seconds to the contest flight. Don't use a brand new motor until it's been prewound at least once! Investigations show that a motor takes more turns the second time it's wound than the first time.

For instance, an unused 15 inch rubber, stretched to 30 inches, will take 660 turns. But if wound up once to 500 turns and allowed to unwind, on second winding it will take 960 turns.

Another suggestion is to join the A. M. L. A. Membership costs only a two cent stamp, and a member is not only eligible for all official national contests, but is enabled to buy materials at cost and to use the league's free question and answer service. You can join now by sending a two cent stamp to A. M. L. A. headquarters, American building, Second boulevard at Lafayette, Detroit, Mich.

Contest Suggestions.

Now for the suggestions that apply specifically to the outdoor or indoor contest:

For the outdoor, a competitor will want two ships. If the day of the competition is windy, he will want a stout ship—one with fairly heavy beams and cross bracing to stand the extra strain. If the day is calm, he'll want the lightest ship possible. The drawing suggests how up to date builders are reducing the weight of their calm weather ships.

Fig. 1 shows how to construct a hollow leading edge for the wing. The leading edge is solid balsa rounded from a beam ¼ by ¼ inch. Using the method shown in Fig. 1, a leading edge can be shaped of 1-32 inch flat balsa. Soaked, or steamed, flat balsa becomes pliable. Bend a strip of it 18 inches long and about an inch wide over a wood form and bind it with tape. When the wood dries, take off the tape. The flat balsa will retain its shape.

Painting the Hub.

Fig. 2 shows how a solid rib may be carved to fit into the hollow leading edge. Ambroid glue will hold the rib to the leading edge.

The fair weather ship may be further lightened by fitting the wing with built up balsa ribs instead of the solid ones. Fig. 3 shows their construction. There's nothing difficult about it—simply use 1-16 by 1-16 balsa shaped and braced as the drawing shows, and glued with ambroid. The only piece that needs bending is the top strip. Some builders trace a rib on a flat piece of wood, and then glue a series of little blocks around the upper curve. They can bend their thin strips of balsa between these blocks.

Tractor Must Be Light.

Figure out other means of lightening the ship. Be sure that the propeller blades are thin enough. Be sure, too, to cut away more than half of the width of the propellor at the center, where it is inefficient. Fig. 4 shows just how deeply the hub may be cut away without endangering its strength. Remember, by painting the hub with ambroid, there's almost no danger of its breaking.

The indoor tractor will need to be symmetrical, well balanced and light if it is to win. Build two or three of them. Study Fig. 5. This shows how to adjust the wings to help control the plane's direction.

Let's suppose that the plane turns in too small a circle. It tilts rather sharply to the left and tends to sideslip or dive in a spiral. The way to correct this is to twist the wing in both hands, bending up the leading edge (front edge) on the left side and bending down the leading edge on the right. Bending up the leading edge on the left allows the rush of air to strike underneath the wing and push it up. This is called "washin." It prevents that side from tilting down and compels the ship to fly in a larger circle.

Bending down the leading edge at the other tip gives that side "washout" which reduces the lifting power on that side and tends still further to make your ship fly in a large circle.

Check Over Parts.

Experiment with washin and washout. Just warp the wing by twisting it gently and at the same time breathe on the front wing spar so that the wing will hold its new shape. By this method and by bending the end of the rudder to the size of the circle in which the ship will fly can be governed.

Lightness is imperative in the indoor contest ship. Check over all its parts to see that they are right down to size. The bamboo ribs and rudder frame should be half-toothpick size—not a bit more than 1-32 inch square.

And propellers! Many builders are increasing the duration of their indoor planes by carving longer than 10 inch props. Experiment with 10½ and 11 inch props, sanded down to flexible thinness and balanced carefully so that each half weighs just the same.

The longer the prop, the more slowly it turns. As a result, the rubber requires a longer time to unwind and the plane flies longer. But the danger is that your prop will turn too slowly to pull the plane. You must determine by experiment just how long a prop you dare use.

[Next week Mr. Hamburg will present the indoor commercial model—a plane with an inclosed fuselage, and the general appearance of a man carrying ship, that will fly as smoothly and steadily as a tri-motored transport. It's not a contest model, but it will be an entirely new experience in model plane building.]

Serving a Meal on Small Tables

By Persis Standish

The Details of the Bridge Luncheon Are Explained and Simplified

Persis Standish will answer questions of all kinds on etiquette, manners, and politeness. Self-addressed, stamped envelopes must accompany each request for information. Send your letters to Persis Standish, Sunday Department, Chicago Tribune.

WHEN a hostess has a small house and it is necessary to serve luncheon on the bridge tables before the game begins, there are many small things to know which will help make the room attractive and not a sort of makeshift cafeteria. Also, there are many things which can expedite or retard service that the inexperienced would naturally not think of.

To begin with, the room should not be crowded by other furniture. As much as possible should be removed from the room that is to be used. There should be as much room as possible left between the tables. It also helps materially to hire some small gold chairs, all alike, instead of trying to use chairs of various heights and sizes and shapes which are not only not comfortable but which give the room a crazy look. Any first class caterer will rent the gold chairs at a nominal figure and deliver them and call for them with little trouble.

Harmony Is Essential.

The tablecloths used should be as nearly as possible alike. Do not use too many colors. If you cannot use all the same color, use white. It makes a great difference in the appearance of the room to have a small—a very small—bouquet of flowers on each table.

If you are having four tables and you have not four small vases alike, go out to the ten cent store and buy them. You will find plenty of small glass vases of simple design in any of the stores from ten cents to a dollar that will do very well for such an occasion. Fill them full of small flowers in bright colors, place them on the bridge tables, and see what a marked difference it makes.

The napkins and silver, as well as the water glasses, should all be on the tables. Service plates can be dispensed with when luncheon is served on the bridge table. Of course, it is more ornamental to use them, but not absolutely necessary.

Selecting the Menu.

The menu should be selected with thought of the service. Do not, for instance, choose such things as chicken livers brochette or broiled mushrooms under glass, which usually have to be cooked individually in order to be palatable. Have something that can be cooked en masse and which warming will not detroy; for instance, chicken croquette with green peas in a ramekin of pastry, or chicken à la king, or chicken and rice dish. Instead of soup, a fruit compote, which can be cooled beforehand, or a half grapefruit, or a melon supreme would be good.

Do not have too many things that have to be passed. If you have vegetables and potatoes, see that they are served in a divided dish or on the same tray, so that there will be no delays. The rolls should be buttered in the kitchen, since there is not room for butter plates to be comfortably placed on a bridge table.

Have some sort of individual dessert also, to obviate the necessity of passing it. Biscuit tortoni or other ice cream in individual forms would be nice, and the small dish of cakes can be placed by the waitress in the center of each table. The nuts and olives can be disposed of likewise, because it is more comfortable to help one's self and each other than to have too much buzzing about of service in a room already filled with people.

Coffee or tea, whichever the hostess chooses, may be served, and one would suggest that coffee be chosen after the dessert in order to give the maids time to remove all the things from the tables while the guests are drinking coffee. Thus the room has a chance of being cleared ready for the game.

When the guests come into the house they should be given their tally cards, and the tables that are set for luncheon should be marked with a number so that they will take their same places for luncheon that they keep for the beginning of the game. In this way, as soon as the tablecloth is removed and the two packs of cards and the score pad placed on the table, the game can begin without delay or confusion.

May Day

BY ELEANOR JEWETT.

Hang a May basket on the door
And run away!
Hang a May basket to tell your love—
But do not stay!

Last night on the stairs fairies hung
Their baskets gay;
A little breeze blew out of the east
And, half in play,
Tipped the baskets! The flowers fell—
See, now, today
Where those same blossoms star the grass!
This first of May.

Bright Sayings of the Children

The Tribune will pay $5 for each childish saying printed. The story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. It is not possible to acknowledge or return unavailable contributions. Write on one side of the paper. Address bright sayings to Aunty Bee, The Tribune.

On the whole, he was a good boy, but he had a predilection for football, so it was not surprising that he should occasionally play truant from school. But, alas, he was always found out, with dire consequences.

One day, however, he hit on a bright idea. Going to a telephone, he called up his teacher and assuming a deep mature voice, explained that his son would be unable to attend school that day.

"Thank you very much for the message," replied the teacher. "Who is this speaking?"

This query somewhat staggered the small delinquent. "Er—this is my father," he faltered, lamely. A. B.

Little Margy, only 3, is considered a "tag" by the older girls and quite often they resort to various pranks, I found out, to get away from her.

I reprimanded Bessie one day for doing this and said she must be nice to Margy and take her along, too.

"Well, but mother, she's too small for our gang. When we don't want her to know, we spell where we're going. That's how old she is," was the truthful rejoinder. E. P. W.

A Dollar for Your Dreams

Have you ever had a dream which later came true? If you'll mail us an account of your prophetic dream we'll pay $1 for every letter published. Address Dreams, Chicago Tribune.

Why She Laughed.

Several years ago I stayed over night in a depot hotel in Vincennes, Ind., in order to catch a 6 a. m. train to Washington, Ind. During the night I dreamed my train was two hours late. I had left a call for 5 a. m. and when called got up, dressed, ate breakfast, and went into the ticket office and bought my ticket.

While paying for it the agent informed me, "Your train is two hours late, lady."

It struck me as funny, and I laughed.

The agent said, "Well! You take the news quite different from most of the men who are waiting—they swore."

Then I told him why I laughed.

Salt, Water, and Husbands.

This dream I had while I was spending my vacation with a friend down south. My youthful hostess, another guest even more youthful, and myself were exchanging confidences in my room when the colored mammy came in and told us three to do the following: Take a thimbleful of salt and go immediately to bed. The salt would make us thirsty; however, we were not to take even a sip of water. The thirstier we were the better. Falling asleep thirsty we would undoubtedly dream of being thirsty and of some one giving us water. If that some one happened to be a man, it would be the man we'd marry.

This certainly sounded attractive. Amid much giggling the three of us went through the painful process of swallowing a thimbleful of salt each. I don't know how the other girls fared immediately after, but I was in misery, tossing about for hours before sleep claimed me. And as soon as I fell asleep the powerful thirst left me. It was as if I had taken no salt at all, and consequently I didn't dream of thirst or water. What I did dream was about an elderly and famous Chicago writer whose latest novel I had been reading the day before.

I told this dream to my hostess, adding that it probably had no meaning because the famous novelist had just recently married. In return she told me her dream. She had been riding in a coupé with a fellow whose face, strive as she did she could not see. Upon telling him of her thirst he stopped the car and bought her a drink from somewhere. The other girl had slept little and not dreamed at all.

That my hostess' dream would come true we did not doubt. And come true it did. Early last January she married a man who had always driven and still was driving a coupé. As for myself: not so long ago I met a young man with the very same surname as the author I dreamed of. June is the month.

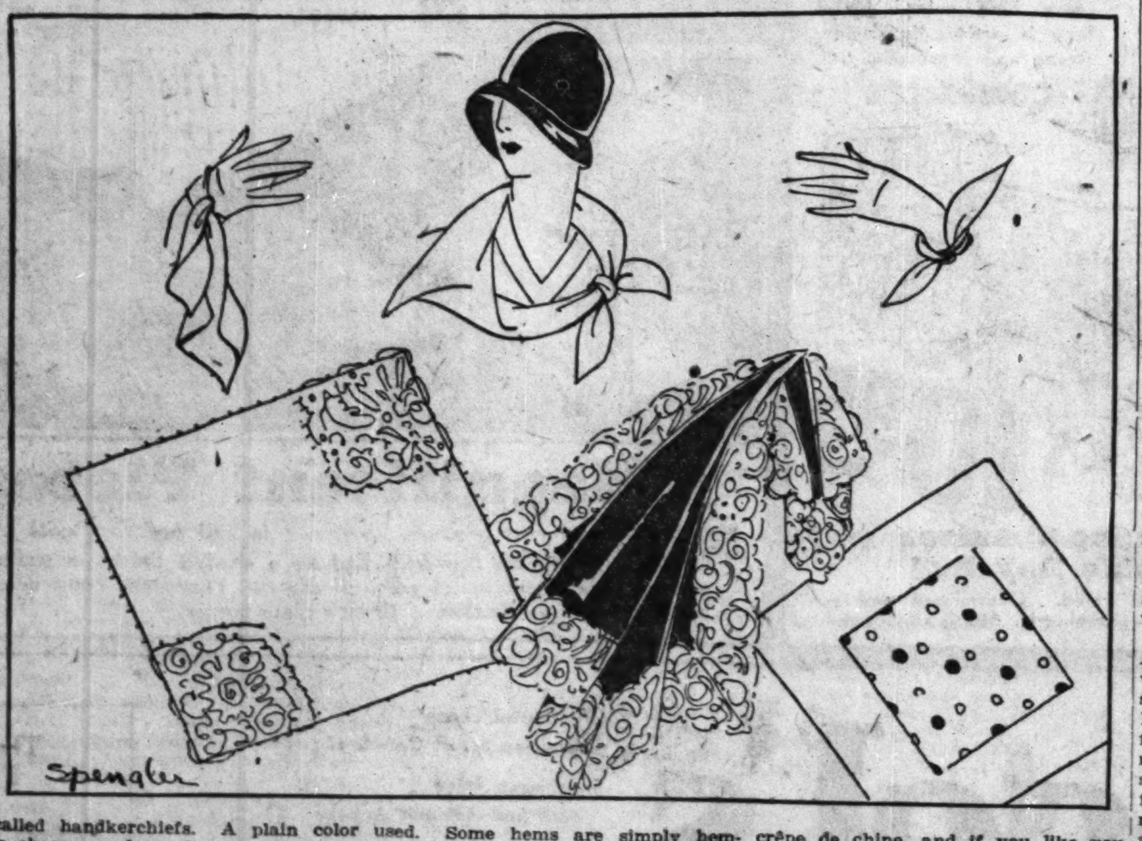
PRACTICAL AND FANCY NEEDLEWORK

By Clotilde

Scarfs and Squares of Chiffon, Crepe de Chine, and Georgette Are Effective and Are Fun to Make

What is your sewing problem? Do you have trouble in following a pattern? Do you find difficulty in making a skirt hang evenly or making a sleeve that doesn't twist? If there is anything you would like to know about these or other problems of needlework, write to Clotilde, The Tribune, Chicago, inclosing a stamped, addressed envelope if a personal reply is desired.



IF you don't happen to own a number of the gay, beautiful scarfs you should immediately make a number of them. Printed georgette, chiffon and silk crêpes are all very popular. Many of them are simply a square of the material, hemmed invisibly, while some of the gayly printed ones have a two inch wide border of a plain crêpe, chiffon or georgette in one of the colors used in the design. With sports costumes one sees one of these scarfs knotted carelessly over the left shoulder, and at the hips the knotting is on the right side. They are generally made of half a square of the material.

Then again you see some vivid, lovely color—perfectly plain, bordered with a sharply contrasting shade. You simply can't have too many of these accessories, and you can't use too bright colors. The New York shops show an endless variety of them. In one a figure had one of these scarfs around her shoulders, and on a hat with quite a brim there was a scarf of the same material, brought together in a loose knot at the left side.

For evening wear the lovely pastel toned chiffons are still used for so-called handkerchiefs. A plain color is chosen, and nearly a yard square is none too large. The edges are rolled and one of the lovely cream novelty laces whipped around. This is worn knotted about the wrist for chic, and if during an evening you should feel a draft this 'kerchief may be thrown lightly about your neck. The lace on many of these only goes around one half of the square, and should be about two or three inches wide. Some show a deep ecru shade instead of a cream, and georgette, chiffon and even taffeta are used. Some hems are simply hemstitched and have no lace. Indeed there is room for great individuality in these scarfs.

Answers to Sewing Questions.

MISS BETTY R.: Why don't you make a reversible wrap for evening wear? It could be in the form of a full length, loose fitting cloak or really a sort of cape, and for this type garment raglan sleeves are most satisfactory. Crêpe satin, using black for one side and white for the other, would be stunning. Then there is crêpe de chine, and if you like you could band each side of this cloak with the opposite color.

MRS. G. J. MOIR.: Rayon or lingette are practical materials for bloomers for play and school wear, but for wearing under party frocks a good quality of crêpe de chine will be best. These bloomers are usually made with casings at the waist and leg ends, through which elastic is run. Care should be taken not to have the waist elastic too tight. I shall be glad to send a personal reply any time you inclose a stamped, addressed envelope.

Preferred!

If you can't decide whether you like blondes or brunettes best, here's a bit of evidence that'll help you make up your mind. Artists love to paint her blonde beauty and theatre-goers rave over it. She's Elsa Cover, of 650 West 173rd St., New York City.

"When people tell me how much they admire my hair," she says, "I'm always happy to tell them what I do to keep it soft and gleamy. It's really no trouble. All I do is put a few dashes of Danderine on my brush each time I use it. That's the way nearly every really smart girl I know is doing hers. My hair doesn't need shampooing more than once a month, now. My scalp feels better than it ever has felt. It has gotten rid of all my dandruff and it makes my hair easy to dress and holds it in position."

Danderine is not oily. It removes the oily film from each strand and restores the natural color and lustre. It dissolves dandruff, cleanses and invigorates the scalp. It is delightfully fragranced. The big bottles are just 35c at all drug stores. Smooth, gleaming healthy hair for a few cents.

3407—Small girl's dress. Sizes, 2, 4, and 6 years. Size 4 requires 2¼ yards of 40 inch material.

HOW TO USE THE PATTERNS

If you are at all accustomed to making any of your own dresses, pattern No. 3235 will surely be a tempting on. It has several of the latest style features, and has an air of smartness combined with simplicity that is charming.

Don't forget before pinning the pattern on the material to verify the principal measures with your own. For naturally there may be hundreds of women who buy the same bust measure, yet lengths, hips and so on may vary some. After you have satisfied yourself on these points lay the pattern pieces on the material, allowing for any changes that may have been necessary, and then cut out and transfer every notch and perforation to the pieces before removing the pattern.

As you can see, the bodice and skirt are cut separately and joined. The back of the bodice is plain and in one piece, while in the front the yoke is cut separately from the lower part of the bodice. The back of the skirt is in one piece, while the front has places allowed for shirred insets that add much to the gracefulness of the dress.

The sleeves are plain and untrimmed, and the pattern allows for full length or short ones. The upper part of the front of the bodice is slightly gathered where it joins the yoke, and after this seam has been entirely finished, the seams can be basted and the garment tried on. The insets should be set in the front skirt part before basting the skirt seams together.

Directions that come with the pattern explain quite clearly just how bodice and skirt are set together, and about handling the full length sleeves. A narrow belt of something contrasting finishes the dress at the waist line, and the same material is used as a finish on the skirt where the gathered pieces are set in. A graceful bow of the dress material is set on at the bottom of the deep V of the neck.

Patou blue tweed, cinnamon brown Canton faille crêpe, Napoleon blue georgette crêpe, black crêpe satin, navy blue flat silk crêpe, printed silk crêpe, or figured georgette crêpe are among the chic materials that may be used for its development.

Pattern No. 3407 is a darling design for a dress for small girls. Making these small clothes is one of the most fascinating branches of sewing, and small children never look more attractive than when wearing some fresh, clean wash dress. Navy blue dimity with tiny white dots, with yokes and bands made of white organdie, candy striped tub silk, pale blue chambray, printed sateen, and printed linen with white linen contrasting are materials suggested for this small outfit. The little dress has shoulder yokes attached to straight bands that join the front and back with clusters of shirring at either side.

The long sleeves are in one piece and gathered at the wrists into narrow bands, while the short ones are simply hemmed as a finish. There is a narrow French beading that is ideal for joining seams, for instance, where the front and back skirt parts are set on to the straight bands. Or, if you use a solid color for the dress, set the parts together in a French seam and then, using white mercerized floss, cover the joining with a single featherstitching, taking short stitches. This could also be used on the sleeve bands, or, if the sleeevs are short, just where the hems are stitched.

The pattern provides for two skirt lengths, and bloomers are included in this pattern. These, of course, will be made of the same material as the dress.

Every woman likes to be attractively dressed in the morning, and nothing is so suitable for dresses of this kind as the charming wash materials. There are cotton broadcloths, percales, printed and plain sateens, ginghams, chambrays, and all of these come in solid colors as well as stripes and printed designs. Pattern No. 2953 is not at all difficult to make and is smart and up to date in its detail.

If the material you use has right and wrong sides, you will have to be careful in cutting out the fronts so as not to have them for the same side. The right front laps well over the left and fastens in surplice style on the left side. These fronts may be faced in a wrong side facing and a piping set in, or a right side facing may be used. The sleeve edges should be finished to match.

Allow for a deep hem at the bottom, because most wash materials shrink some, even with careful laundering. The string sash may be made of the dress material and the vestee should match the facing or piping, if either is used. In making the sash stitch together in a wrong side seam, then sew a tape needle to one of the open ends, first pointing the needle down inside the opening. Then push the needle down through the length of the sash, finally bringing it to view again.

This, of course, brings the sash with it, and before you know it you have it turned right side out. A patch pocket may be set on the right front of the dress, if you desire.

Wants Rules for Mah Jongg.

"I am anxious to obtain a book of rules for the game of 'Mah Jongg,' played so much a few years ago. Will you try to get me one through your column? MRS. W. H."

I am sure a number of you had these books when the game was so much in vogue. If you can resurrect yours for this reader, I know she'll appreciate it.

A Worthy Request.

"If any of your readers have cantatas, tableaux, or short plays for children they no longer have use for, I would be most happy to receive them, as I wish to send them to a friend in India who is principal of a large school there. E. D."

This is a call to teachers, instructors, and those of our readers who may be interested in children's entertainments. Won't you select one or two plays or tableaux from your collection for these little Indian children?

Arch Support.

"I have four arch supports, in good condition, to give away. They are for the right foot, and will fit a man's shoe, size 8 or 8½. MRS. H. R."

Troubled arches will find these supports a great comfort. If you can make use of these, we will be glad to hear from you by mail; please do not telephone.

Asks for Mechanical Drawing Set.

"Please, will you help me get a mechanical drawing set? I am anxious to finish the course I am taking at evening school and my parents cannot afford to buy me the set I need. "H. P."

It would be most unfortunate if this boy were not permitted to finish his course for lack of the much needed mechanical drawing set. Isn't there one among the properties of our readers he may have?

Asks for Toy Boat.

"I wonder if any of your readers would have a toy boat no longer wanted. If the hull or body is good and a foot in length, I would like to have it for experimental purposes. "J. M."

Now what do you suppose J. M. is going to do with the toy boat he receives! Anyhow, I know you'll give him yours if you no longer need it.

Plea for Old Magazines.

"I would like to ask your readers for any 'Photoplay,' 'Motion Picture,' 'Theater,' or 'True Story' magazines they no longer want. I have been ill and the evenings are so long, I would enjoy reading these. I. M."

Magazines, once read, accumulate and take up space which could be much better utilized. Here's an opportunity to dispose of some of yours and at the same time provide a little amusement for this young woman.

Old Army Shirts Needed.

"I am writing for a young man who is learning the plastering trade. As he works out of doors most of the time, he would like to have some old army shirts, size 15 or 16. Have your readers any they no longer want? "A. C."

These heavy shirts are a splendid protection against the elements and are almost necessary when one must be out of doors a great part of the time. Have you any in this young man's size?

Keep Your Skin Young

Do you know that just beneath that soiled, discolored, faded or aged complexion is one fair to look upon? Nature causes the normal skin to peel off in tiny, unseen, flour-like particles, a little each day, renewing the complexion of youth naturally, but there comes a time when this skin shedding slows up. Worry, overwork, sickness, inactivity are reasons that cause the face to be blotchy, discolored, pimply and old looking. The thing to do, if you wish to look your prettiest at all times, is to assist nature in the process of absorption by using pure Mercolized Wax. Get an ounce at any drug store or beauty counter and use as directed. It gently but surely peels away the outer scarf skin, removing freckles, pimples, blackheads or a muddy complexion. The underneath skin, now in evidence, is clear, pink, fresh and velvety, and the entire face looks years younger. Mercolized Wax brings out the hidden beauty.

To quickly remove wrinkles and other age lines we recommend a face lotion of unusual merit: one ounce powdered saxolite and one-half pint witch hazel.

Foster Parents Feel Well Repaid for Their Efforts

By Mrs. Gladys Huntington Bevans

My friend was reading me extracts from the letter I had brought in to her as she lay in bed.

"Eleanor is lovely—every one up here likes her tremendously. She is so charming, so accomplished, so adoring of her two babies, so adored by her husband. What a wonderful thing for her that the Bronsons took her—and what a wonderful thing for them, too."

My friend stopped to explain.

"Eleanor was a child from the worst slums of Boston. The Bronsons took her when she was a little thing, and they've done everything for her and loved her like a daughter. Isn't it amazing what environment can do?"

It was odd, that bit of a letter being read to me that day, because it came when I had just received two letters from readers of this column who were thinking of adopting babies. And in the train of the story about the adopting of Eleanor there ran through my mind two other cases that I knew of personally.

True Cases.

I remembered the mother I came to know in the square when I used to take my baby out for his sunning. She had adopted a little boy. He was then 5, and she and her husband were so happy with him that they were planning to adopt another baby when they moved to the country in the spring.

Then there was another young woman who had a baby and who almost died at its birth. The baby was always delicate, did not live many months, and she and her husband were grief-stricken. When the doctor told her she could never have another baby, they made up their minds to adopt one. Again they were unfortunate. The baby was exposed to an epidemic and died. Not to be thwarted in their desire for children, they adopted another baby—a very little one. It is thriving beautifully, and you never saw a more radiantly happy father and mother than these foster parents are. That baby is their sun and moon and stars.

These are only a few instances of the many men and women who have filled the void in their married life by taking into it a baby. More and more people who are denied children by nature are coming to adopt them. And not only married people, but unmarried ones, as well. I know personally a number of girls—girls who have their own way to make, too—who have adopted children.

Those men and women who crave fatherhood and motherhood and who satisfy that craving in this way not only find great happiness for themselves, but are bestowing immeasurable happiness on a little child. I think it is one of the biggest things in life to do—to give a real home to a child who would otherwise not have one, to bestow a mother's and a father's love on a child who would otherwise go through life without it. It is a truly beautiful, even a blessed thing to do.

But sometimes people who are considering the adoption of a baby are discouraged by their friends. "I could never love the baby of a stranger as if it were my own," they say. "Do you think you could? I'm afraid you're making a mistake."

Every one, of course, has not the same passion for motherhood. Some people are so constituted that they are incapable of taking the child of some one else to their hearts, though they would dearly love one of their own. We cannot all be alike.

But those people should not try to substitute their feelings for those of others, and try to influence women who are entirely different from themselves. Many men and women do possess the power to love an adopted child fully as deeply as if it were their own by birth.

A Common Argument.

There is another ground on which people sometimes attempt to thwart their friends' desires in this direction. "It's dangerous," they say, "to adopt a baby. It's such a lottery. You never can tell how such a child will turn out." I even know of a minister who tried to dissuade two of his young parishioners from taking a baby for their own by advancing this argument.

Well, for that matter, you never can be sure how your own flesh and blood will turn out. Even though there may be an element of risk in adopting a baby, it need be very slight. People don't let a baby's smile decide everything for them when they're thinking of adoption—though it is a very potent factor.

Investigating is done by the nurseries or children's aid societies or institutions which have babies for adoption to make complete the record of a child—its parentage, the status, mental, moral, and physical—of the mother and father, the baby's own health and his mental normality. Likewise every precaution is taken to insure for the baby a suitable home and desirable parents. They have something to measure up to, too. They have to be investigated in their turn and references given.

It is a very serious and businesslike proceeding—the taking of a baby—in spite of the fact that you may have made your selection because you have always wanted a little boy with fat legs, or a baby girl with yellow curls, or because laughing eyes win your heart, or because a soft, wistful beauty satisfies you, or because a sturdy independence and signs of character appeal to you more than any surface beauty. So you can be pretty sure of starting right and starting even—you and the baby.

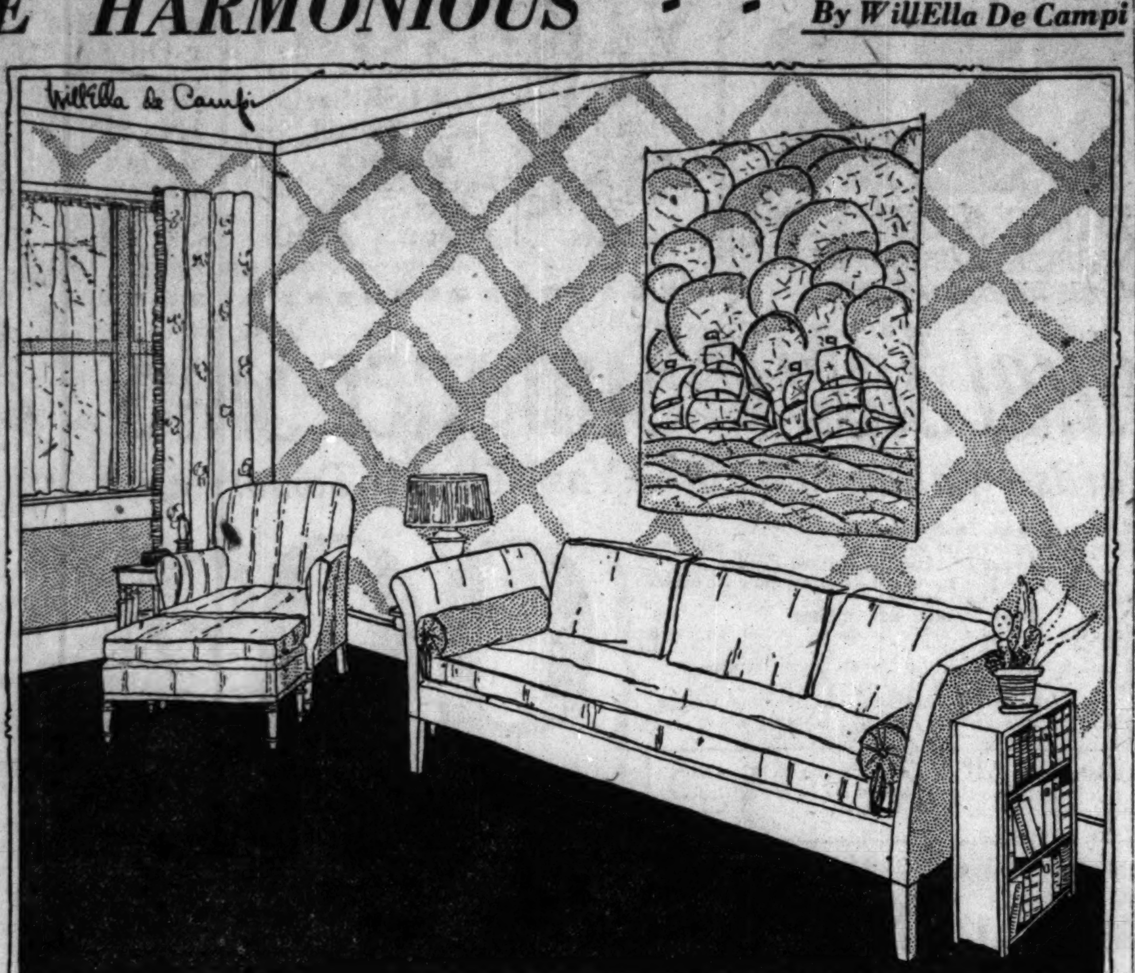
THE HOME HARMONIOUS

By WillElla De Campi

The One Room Apartment Requires Special Treatment to Keep It Restful and Uncluttered

WillElla de Campi will be glad to assist the homemaker in any problems pertaining to home building and home furnishing. Address your letter to WillElla de Campi, The Tribune, Chicago. Inclose stamped, addressed envelope for personal reply.



This corner is simple, artistic, and practical.

MANY business women nowadays find it convenient and pleasant to live in a one room apartment in one of the many large buildings in the city which supply this type of domicile. Keeping office hours, engagements for lectures, interviews, etc., doesn't leave them much time for housekeeping. Still they almost invariably want some little place they can call their own in which they may find a peaceful, harmonious atmosphere, where they may informally entertain their more intimate friends. Though they are obliged by circumstances to live compactly, they want a home, however small, distinct from a hotel room or "furnished apartment." It is surprising and gratifying to see what truly attractive "homes" are everywhere being made within small dimensions.

Care must be taken in decorating and furnishing a place of this sort to avoid overelaborate effects. There must be plenty of color, of course, but not in profusion. There may be figured materials, but not too many kinds of them, and so on. It is very easy to tire of a room when that room is the "one and only" of a home. A room which presents a peaceful, restful atmosphere is much more lastingly satisfactory than one which is overdone and "noisy."

One lovely home of this type [which is located in a large building catering entirely to women] might serve as a model for those who are planning to carry out a scheme of this sort. It is most happily complete in every detail and is truly delightful from a decorative point of view.

Woodwork and doors are painted a soft putty color, a decidedly pleasing neutral tone. The wall paper shows cross lines of a rosy rust color in a large diamond pattern on a putty colored ground. A group of three windows at one side of the room admit light a-plenty. Glass curtains, hanging straight to the sill, are of ivory scrim. Long draperies at each end of the group are made of a lovely blocked linen showing a floral pattern on a light putty colored ground. They are finished at the edges with plaited peacock blue glazed chintz.

Against the center of one wall space is a graceful day bed, shown in the accompanying illustration. It is upholstered in a rosy rust colored armure, piped in peacock blue. Giving the day bed the appearance of a sofa are three square cushions [standing against the wall] which match the cover. Bolster pillows at the ends are peacock blue piped with rust, and decorated with rust tassels. In the space above hangs a batik, in tones of violet and blue. A small table at one end of the day bed holds a blue pottery lamp with a light rust colored shade. At the other end is a low, open bookcase. On top of it is a plant in a turquoise pot.

Near the window is a luxurious arm chair done in a striped material showing three tones of putty. Beside it is a set of the ever convenient nest tables. The top one holds colorful smoking accessories. There is a pouf, matching the chair, which converts it upon occasion into a most comfortable chaise longue.

A flip-top console table with a commodious drawer has a mirror hanging above it. This, of course, serves as a dressing table and may be used, when so desired, as a card table or for serving tea and informal meals. A glass lamp and a lovely bowl of flowers are placed on this table when it is left standing against the wall. At each side is a Windsor chair. Toilet accessories are kept in the table drawer. A secretary desk, with cabinet above and drawers below, furnishes the necessary storage space. Accompanying the desk is a little chair upholstered in the drapery linen. The floor is completely covered by a raisin colored chenille rug.

In one corner of the room is a lovely three-fold screen. It is very simple in design, showing a Chinese pattern of graceful, long pointed leaves in several tones of green and black on a silver ground. The wooden frame is enameled black. Cleverly hidden behind the screen is a cabinet to hold a few necessary cooking utensils and a set of electrical appliances—a grill, a percolator, and a waffle iron. Above it is a set of shelves on which is kept a complete tea set of Canton china. It is just like "playing house" to prepare and serve here those occasional, impromptu meals which are always so much fun for every one.

Similar in character, but with quite a different color scheme, is another one room home. The walls are painted a glowing apricot color because there is a northern exposure. Woodwork is a deep bluish green. At the windows are apricot voile glass curtains to soften the light and give it more warmth. Draperies of flowered cretonne show a design in bright orange, green, yellow, brown, and black on a light mauve ground.

A day bed against one wall is fitted with down filled, boxed cushions, upholstered in plum colored mohair, piped with jade green.

Extra cushions are covered with the drapery material and with bluish green rep, piped with jade. At one end of the day bed is a convenient drop leaf table which fills many needs. It holds smoking accessories and a few magazines, when not being put to any other use. There is a wrought iron reading lamp with a parchment shade.

A flat topped desk with drawers serves a double purpose. One drawer holds writing materials, the other toilet accessories. On the desk is a pair of lamps with plaited apricot book linen shades bound in black. A mirror hangs above. Nearby stands a Coxwell chair upholstered in plum colored mohair, with a little book stand beside it.

Between two windows, in a wall space opposite the day bed, is a commodious chest of drawers. A rush bottom, ladder back chair stands in front of each window, giving a pleasingly well balanced sense to the room. Shelves built into one corner and painted to match the woodwork hold a collection of books and a set of gaily colored peasant china.

Four interesting old prints in narrow black frames decorate the walls. A screen covered with cretonne matching the draperies hides the necessary equipment for light cooking. Deep plum colored chenille carpeting lends a certain sense of depth and spaciousness to the room.

Answers to Queries.

C. F. C.—In a small room, such as your dinette must be, it is well not to have the walls divided into panels with figured paper, as the breaking up of space makes any room seem smaller than it would otherwise. You might have the walls painted a light, creamy yellow, the woodwork stained walnut, to match your furniture. At the windows, use light yellow casement gauze for glass curtains, with straight hanging draperies of striped casement silk in leaf green, old yellow, blue and black, with a fine line of bright red. Have a black bowl on the table filled with yellow or red flowers.

E. H.—Yellow organdy with green ruffled edges would make gay little curtains for your kitchen windows. Paint the chairs green, a little darker than the walls.

J. S. L.—A cool, pleasing shade for walls in a room especially designed for summer use is light French gray. Woodwork may be painted a slightly darker shade of the same. Use black and gray linoleum on the floor. Gayly flowered cretonne curtains would bring the necessary color into the room. Your gray furniture should look lovely in this setting.

Greens Carry a Message of Health

Practice in Lettuce Cookery Will Greatly Reward Any Housewife.

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

By Jane Eddington.

MONTH after month cartloads of our most universal green go to the dump, yet no leaf of it—unless defaced and rusted—is too coarse for the saucepan, while all the time there is vital need among eaters for the vitamines it stores, the iron it has—always tonic—and the suave roughage it yields when cooked, or something better tolerated by many an eater than the roughage of raw lettuce, which he eats partly for that one thing.

In short, this ocean of wasted green could give hosts of people just what they need for continued health, and so often go without, while it continues to be raised at a money and man or even child cost, sent to market at considerable expense, only to be handled unintelligently three-fourths of the time, and ends as barrels of waste.

Lettuce is in the market all the time, and at all seasons, as everybody knows. Probably perfection of culture has been more nearly attained in growing it than in growing any other edible we have, especially certain varieties of it. Yet the lovely leaf lettuce has all but disappeared from our markets—at any rate, from those I frequent—because people do not learn how to cook it with many variations, and how palatable it may be when cooked.

But, though leaf lettuce is not seen in the market often, it will presently appear in little forests often in home gardens, but half or less of what is raised in those precious spots is often unutilized. I once made inquiry about a wonderful lot of it in a small garden joining a suburban cottage and learned that, though it was grown so rampantly, none of it was eaten, though the children living in that cottage would have been benefited no end by eating it, and showed the sorest need of such foods. Children are more likely to like it cooked than raw.

Lettuce Cookery Is Ancient.

The statement has been made by eminent French students of food that lettuce has been cooked from times exceedingly remote, and, in fact, may have been one of the bitter herbs of the Jewish passover, and also that health-giving properties were attributed to it in the remote past. The Greeks appreciated it, and, like the English of today, ate it at the end of a meal or at the beginning. And it figured in Roman repasts at both the beginning and end, with the idea that it did one thing medically if served at first and another if served finally. It is said that the emperor Domitian, following his doctor's advice, was cured of hypochondria by the use of lettuce, so he ordered it planted in all gardens and served on all tables.

I once translated 150 French recipes for cooking lettuce, and these had various bits of introduction giving these entertaining historical facts. One of the entertaining statements made was this: "The culinary methods of the Greeks and Romans have been transmitted to us with great imprecision."

But the great French cook, Carême, made some decisions about it, while the work of others shows that in Charlemagne's time—his cook wore a sword and fought for his king masterfully—lettuce was used in soups, stews, and cooked and served as a vegetable.

Why, then, have people forgotten mostly that lettuce can be cooked, as it can, at any stage of its growth beyond the seed leaflets, and may even be delicious when it has spindled up to blossom to bear seeds?

With Sauces.

Though the French specialize in braised lettuce, they seem to know all the ways it may be prepared and varied. On their authority we have it that lettuce cooked and arranged on a dish with hot melted butter poured over it is English lettuce; that when served in white sauce it is German lettuce; that when served in a rich brown gravy, so being almost equal to a meat dish, it is Spanish lettuce. It is made quite like a meat dish by stuffing it and serving it with egg. As for ourselves, we may learn that no sauce pleases us better than a little hot cream, which may be modified variously. But it may also be served with the fine Hollandaise, or the humble Creole, or sauces that are made according to what you have in your frying pan, like the butter in which ham has been fried.

Easy and Quick.

A nice big head of leaf lettuce—spindling heads are a little more trouble—may be inspected, washed, cut up on a board, blanched or not as one chooses, and put to cook in a little butter with almost less trouble than we can prepare any other vegetable. After it is once cooked there are many ways to finish it, as suggested by the use of the different sauces, etc.

There are more ways of finishing cooked head lettuce than of finishing leaf lettuce, but the first direction for cooking head lettuce, no matter how it is to be finished, is quite generally this: Pull the head to pieces, wash, drop it into boiling water, usually but for the briefest time, rinse with cold water, drain and press it dry. After that it may be cooked in plain water, in butter, in meat stock, in a thickened meat gravy or in some sauce, or perhaps a puree for soup will be made.

Puree of Lettuce.

This is a French recipe for a preparation much used in France because of its economical aspects, as well as its esthetic: Blanch, braise, or stew lettuce in butter, cook dry and put it through a fine strainer. Heat up again after the straining with a little butter and seasonings, and use it as a vegetable or as a garnish. The French recipe says this puree can be used as a garnish for entrées, meats, fish, eggs, etc., or when combined with butter or cream or gravy or sauces it is used independently. It is used for a stuffing by adding to it one-fourth its measure of mashed potato.

Lettuce can be cooked without meat gravies, and be almost as savory as with them, especially when cream is used. In such preparations it is used in crusts of pastry, in frying batters, or is made up with other mixtures into croquettes and all the relatives of this form.

Braised Lettuce.

Plain braised lettuce, which is hardly different from stewed lettuce, is the favorite general preparation in French cookery, to which we must go if we wish to learn lettuce cookery. In this case it is given the initial preparation of blanching, and a head of lettuce may be cut in two or in quarters, stuffed with something, arranged in a saucepan and further cooked. It is possible to do work that seems quite elaborate in braising this vegetable, yet it is really easy.

One definition of braised lettuce is lettuce which has been blanched and squeezed dry, and then put to cook in meat stock, with a slice of salt pork and some seasoning vegetables. It should be in a small pan and covered and cooked over a tiny fire. With gentle cooking it keeps its green color, but with much heat it turns yellow, which is not an advantage.

When fine sauces are to be used with lettuce this is a good way to prepare it. t more humble ways of doing the work can be devised, as when one has a fried ham in butter. Add a little water to the pan and you have something in which to braise lettuce which has been blanched first. Add several tomatoes or some tomato sauce, one onion, or the juice only, and two or three carrots sliced thin. Add a bit of sugar and some salt if needed, and cook.

Chiffonade I.

This method of cooking lettuce gets its name from the way the lettuce is cut up, which is slaw fashion, called chiffonade, in French. A chiffonade salad is lettuce cut in this fashion, and it is an excellent way to cut it when it is to be used in soup, as well as when it is to be stewed or braised. Look over two large heads of lettuce carefully, wash thoroughly, and cut them up like slaw.

Put into a pan and pour boiling water over it and generally pour it off immediately and rinse the lettuce in cold water, drain it and squeeze it dry, then put into a small saucepan in which have been melted two tablespoons of butter. Cover the pan and cook gently until the lettuce is tender—ten minutes. Season and use plain as a green or garnish or serve with any preferred sauce.

Chiffonade II.

Squeeze up a handful of lettuce after it is washed and cut it across slaw fashion. Instead of pouring boiling water on the cut up lettuce, put it to cook without doing so in the butter, covering the pan quickly so that the lettuce cannot wilt but will begin to steam at once. This method of cooking is sometimes called melted lettuce.

Lettuce Soup.

Lettuce cooked chiffonade style may be added to a thick soup, whether cream or a meat soup to make lettuce soup, and it may be a great addition to something that was not eminently good. It may also be added to a bean or pea soup to give a lively quality. When the lettuce is to be added to soup it is best almost truly melted, or cooked for ten minutes, first, and it may be blanched first or not.

The chiffonade or melted lettuce may be used cold with a boiled egg garnish for a salad. Or it may be used hot with the hot bacon dressing such as is used for wilted lettuce—it is really the perfection of wilted lettuce.

Cooked Lettuce on Toast.

Adding hot cream to lettuce cooked chiffonade fashion truly makes for height of quality, and there is no prettier way of serving it when so cooked. It is delicious on toast, and is as quickly prepared as a Welsh rabbit, as well as being a lighter digestive bit. Cut up two good heads of lettuce, blanch, stew in two tablespoons of butter, then boil up in two tablespoons of cream which is half reduced in the boiling because so small in quantity. Serve on toast or with boiled rice.

"Budino" (Italian).

Blanch a pound of lettuce, cool, drain, and press, then stew in butter and chop fine of sieve, as in making a purée. Stir briefly and rapidly over a hot fire to dry out the liquid, take it from the fire, and stir into it two or three beaten eggs, and season with a bit of salt, pepper, and mustard, and mix well. Butter a baking dish and fill it with the preparation.

Bake it for thirty minutes with hot water around the dish. Take from the oven, let stand a few minutes, and unmold. It will be more compact if allowed to stand. Pour over it a superior cream sauce, or hot butter, or hot cream. With meat and gravy this can be served from the mold as a side dish, but with a sauce it is a good vegetarian center dish.

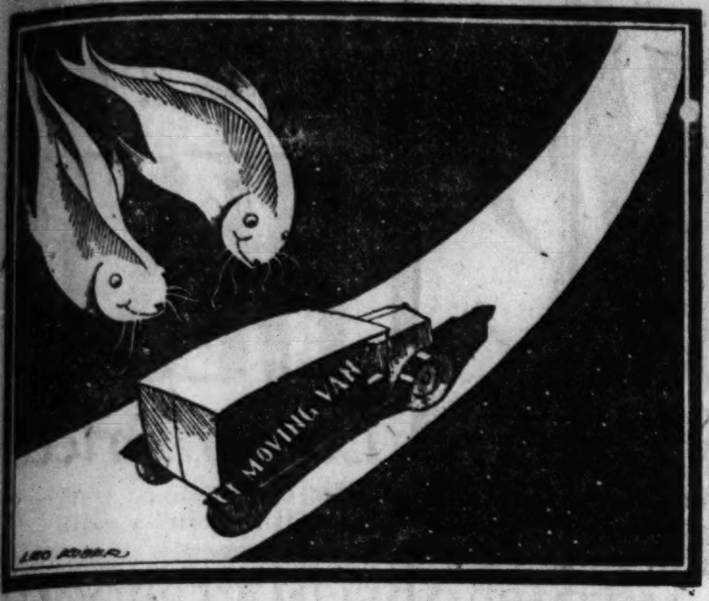
Birthday This Week? Luck Year Ahead



Marion Meyer Drew's weekly articles are presented solely for the entertainment of readers. Separate answers to individual questions cannot be given.

By Marion Meyer Drew.

THIS week brings the birth dates which are going to make the rest of the world envious for the remainder of the present year—at least, that part of the world which likes to hear the pennies rattle in the pants pocket or break the postman's back under the burden of the love letters being left at the front door. The benefic planet Jupiter is about to make his periodic call on these Taurus people; there is scarcely a material blessing listed in the mail order catalogue which will not be offered to this group, and, indeed, many forced upon them.

Practically the only portion of the coming year which could be called at all difficult for the group who celebrate their birthdays this week is the period around Oct. 5 to 18, and that will be a purely temporary annoyance which can doubtless be avoided entirely through careful judgment and the elimination of hasty correspondence, impulsive pleasure trips and speculation in risky business deals.

It must be remembered that in writing a general astrological forecast, such as these articles, one must necessarily omit reference to a sensitive point which will appear in an individual horoscope but which will not be characteristic of the group for that day or that week. For instance, certain people born on April 29 will find a good deal of opposition, disappointment, and delay in their dealings with women, and may consider the month of December, 1928, a very unhappy one.

Certain other people of this same date may experience troublesome events at that same time, but, due to personal peculiarities of their individual horoscopes, will bless the day that brought about the change in spite of its apparently disagreeable nature. These are points which cannot be taken up in detail in general horoscopes, and readers of any prepared astrological work must make allowances for this fact. The aspects which are mentioned in these brief interpretations for the year are characteristic of the period, as a rule, and can be counted upon to influence entire groups. The charm of complete exclusiveness may thus be lacking, but the love which misery displays for company may take its place.

Today—the 29th—is a fortunate date for this year. It may bring a little illness, depression, or loss during the winter months, and the same is true for the 30th of this month, too; but the good old advice of thinking twice before speaking will come in mighty handy here, as will the advice to study whatever system of philosophy seems to you to explain most logically the workings of our mundane affairs. Taurus people do not take much stock in religious or occult subjects, but this year would be a wonderful time for these men and women to broaden their views along spiritual lines.

May 1, likewise May 2, have even more intense influences, acting along similar lines during the coming twelve months, with the addition of an aspect tending toward upsets in domestic and emotional affairs, particularly for the men of these dates, while the women will feel this erratic impulse in their legal, traveling or governmental connections. But for either sex the month of August or September ought to prove a very joyous period.

From May 3 to 5 the general aspects are not quite as good as for those born earlier in the week. Money matters still look good, but money is not everything, and this section of our present-day group will have a good deal of trouble with health, family, and any secret matters in their life. People born on these dates in any year would find better results in the near future by avoiding deals with women, the general public and young persons, confining their business or intimate activities to those older than themselves, in superior positions and, as much as possible, keeping away from all close contact with women. The months of November, December and next January are the most critical for them, but finances at this period will probably be good.

For the rest of us this present week holds opportunity to make money—O, yes, and to spend it! We cannot help fingering coin just now, whether it's coming in or going out. Perhaps this first week of May will be most pleasant and merry for those who were born about the middle of April or the third week in December, but everybody will find something good at this time.

The least beneficial birth date just now appears to be Dec. 9 or March 10 to 14. Saturn and Mars, the two malefic planets, are just now forming an aspect which will cause accidents or quarrels for persons born on the above mentioned dates. But Jupiter and Venus—the two great fortune carriers—are working together to overcome any evil for the same group, and should bring unexpected pleasures or benefits.

Uranus, who always manages to upset matters for any one it touches, is now powerful in the affairs of those born during the last week of March, and these people would profit through caution, forbearance and the exercise of whatever humor they possess.

LEAP YEAR PROPOSALS

Do you know of any girl who invited a man to leap into matrimony with her? Was her proposal met with eager acceptance or graceful refusal? If you'll send us a brief account of the affair we'll pay $1 if we print it. Address Leap Year Proposals, Chicago Tribune.

A Fag Proposal.

The party around the bridge tables had been discussing the quarrels that led to the divorce courts, when a young man remarked: "As soon as I'm alone with my bride I'll light a cigaret and settle the smoking question right there."

"I'll knock that cigaret out of your mouth," piped up one of the girls.

"I didn't know you had planned to be there, but it is perfectly all right with me," answered the young man.

The wedding followed two months later.

What Could He Do?

The night was balmy and we walked hand in hand, the girl whom I loved and who was in ignorance of that fact, and I—two young things taking advantage of the day like spring (it wasn't, you see). I looked at the moon, listened to the happy-go-lucky sparrows calling love notes, and gazed into her soft, brown eyes, but Fate was so unkind and my bashfulness hung on so that I just couldn't ask that so important question.

Well, we walked, but finally she broke the lull with, "Pal, what nationality are you?"

Of course, being a gentleman in spite of the fact that she is brunette, I answered her (just what I answered is best unsaid; it might cause international difficulties); but the answer failed to please, for the lady wrinkled up her nose, and uttered certain murmurs intimating disgust.

I demanded an explanation, and remarked, "And pray, saucy damsel, what wouldst thou be?" and, blessings upon blessings, she answered, so sweetly and demurely, "The same as you, dear."

Now I ask you, what's a poor fellow to do? Curtain.

From Santa.

We met in November, 1920. I loved him almost from the first and I was pretty sure he felt the same. Before Christmas he asked what I wanted Santa to bring me. I replied, "Something I can't have."

He kept teasing me to find out what it was and finally, half jesting, I told him, "I want you."

To my surprise he replied, "Well, I guess you can have me."

Soon I was wearing a diamond and in June we were married. So far our marriage has been a happy one and he never seems to tire of teasing me about that leap year proposal. C. S.

Gives Your Hair Unusual Beauty

The attractiveness of even the most beautiful women depends upon the loveliness of their hair.

Fortunately, beautiful hair is now easily obtained. It is simply a matter of shampooing.

Proper shampooing makes the hair soft and silky. It brings out all the real life and lustre, all the natural wave and color, and leaves it fresh looking, glossy and bright.

While your hair must have frequent and regular washing to keep it beautiful, it cannot stand the harsh effects of ordinary soaps. The free alkali in ordinary soaps soon dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle and ruins it.

That is why discriminating women, everywhere, now use Mulsified Cocoanut Oil Shampoo. This clear, pure and entirely greaseless product brings out all the real beauty of the hair and cannot possibly injure.

Two or three teaspoonfuls of Mulsified is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather which cleanses thoroughly and rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.

It leaves the hair soft, silky and easy to manage and makes it fairly sparkle with new life, gloss and lustre.

You can get Mulsified Cocoanut Oil Shampoo at any drug store.

A four-ounce bottle lasts for months.

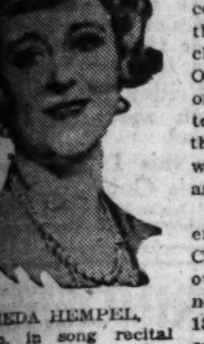
THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

APRIL 29, 1928.

Early Days of Opera Surveyed by Critic

By Edward Moore.

IN the interval between the closing of the Civic Opera company, Chicago's opera of the winter, and Ravinia, Chicago's opera of the summer, it is a good time to look back some eighteen years or so and see how Chicago began to have its own opera. Some interesting history was made in those days.



FRIEDA HEMPEL, soprano, in song recital at the Studebaker this afternoon.

In 1910 Chicago began to develop operatic growing pains. During the sixty years previous, beginning in 1850, opera in Chicago had consisted merely of such visits to the city as traveling companies chose to give. The Metropolitan Opera was in the habit of coming on from New York to the Auditorium for a season of two weeks, three weeks, four weeks, what it was thought the city could stand as an operatic orgy.

That was all. It was not enough in the minds of certain Chicagoans. Chicago had had its own symphony orchestra for nearly two decades. Founded in 1891 by Theodore Thomas, and continued after his death in 1905 by Frederick Stock, it had taken rank in the minds of those who knew as one of the noteworthy orchestral organizations of the world. Besides, Boston, in addition to having its own great orchestra, had begun operations with its own opera company. Wherefore, said the same certain Chicagoans, it is time for Chicago to show some operatic activity: let us then go out and make a few artistic gestures of our own.

New York the Scene of a Struggle.

A set of fortuitous circumstances aided them. A terrific battle for the operatic control of New York had been going on for three or four seasons. Oscar Hammerstein, he of the silk hat, the spade beard, and the cigar making machinery, had built the Manhattan Opera house and organized the Manhattan Opera company with the avowed intention of putting the Metropolitan out of business. The Metropolitan was equally avowed in its intention of not being put out of business.

It was a battle of giants, and they fought with every available weapon, with publicity and check books, almost with teeth and nails. They raised a furious uproar in the columns of the newspapers; they spent money as press agents say money is being spent in Hollywood today. Hammerstein organized a brilliant company which gave New York its only real view of French opera up to that time, and Italian opera almost as glamorous. The Metropolitan concentrated on Italian and German works, meanwhile engaging every singer of note who could be induced to sign a contract.

Mary Garden made her first operatic appearances in this country with Hammerstein. John McCormack was a member of the Manhattan company, so was Maurice Renaud and Hector Dufranne and Gustave Huberdeau; while the Metropolitan had Caruso and Slezak and Gadski and Scotti, to name only a few of the first who come to mind. Hammerstein brought Cleofonte Campanini to this country to be his chief conductor; the Metropolitan based its faith on Arturo Toscanini for the like post.

Balmy Days for Audiences.

It was a wonderful row while it lasted and a time of deep and abiding joy for all beholders. Probably never in the history of the world had there been a chance to observe so many fine operatic performances so lavishly cast or so brilliantly performed. Competition was the life of operatic trade just then; it was also the cause of galloping tuberculosis in operatic bank accounts.

The last time that the Metropolitan company visited Chicago, during the month of April, 1910, its Italian and German wings were actually two companies. This is not in the least an exaggeration. There were two sets of principals, two choruses, two complete orchestras, two staffs of conductors, Toscanini at the head of one, Alfred Hertz leading the other. In effect there were even two general directors, though these bore different titles, Giulio Gatti-Casazza and Andreas Dippel.

It is true that Toscanini used to conduct some German operas in addition to his Italian list, just as he has done with marvelous effect ever since. His dealings with "Die Meistersinger" have never been forgotten in Chicago after all these years. It is also true that Slezak would be a stunning Walther in the same "Meistersinger" one night and then raise the roof with his Radames in "Aïda" a few nights later, and that Gadski, primarily a Wagnerian soprano, could start generous applause with a list of Italian rôles. But in practice if not in theory, the Metropolitan was a double company.

Such a fight could have only one end. The Metropolitan's war chest was deeper than Hammerstein's and finally the brilliant Oscar had to succumb. The Manhattan Opera company went out of existence at the end of the 1910 season; among Hammerstein's articles of capitulation was a signed agreement to keep out of operatic activities in New York for a period of ten years; the Manhattan forces were without leadership; the Metropolitan had about twice as many artists as it needed. It was Chicago's chance.

Hammerstein Loved Publicity.

Probably if Hammerstein's money had not run out he would have been battling yet. Though his passing was the biggest single item in the formation of the Chicago company, I, for one, always regretted it, if for no other reason than that he was the most picturesque figure in the operatic history of our time. He had the imaginative soul of the creative artist, he dearly loved a fight, and he was the only one whose tongue was warranted to be as quick as or quicker than Mary Garden's. It was he who used to say, "Praise me if you can; roast me if you must; at any rate, mention me." If he did not invent the phrase; he acted on it. Publicity was frankly his life's blood.

One year Miss Garden got into a row with him, walked out, and sailed for Europe before the season was over, saying at the dock that she was leaving because Hammerstein had treated her worse than a chorus girl. The reporters, with commendable curiosity, went straight from the dock to the Manhattan to hear Hammerstein's comeback. This was it. He took a puff of his cigar, grinned, pushed back his silk hat, and said:

"Miss Garden has no right to say I treated her worse than a chorus girl. I never even treated her like a chorus girl. Miss Garden owes me $5,000 at this moment, and no chorus girl who ever lived was ever able to do that to me."

With his passing the decks were clear for the organization of a new company, and a committee of Chicagoans and New Yorkers put themselves to the task of forming the Chicago Grand Opera company. The Chicagoans were there because they wanted the company. The New Yorkers joined them because they were desirous of sitting on Hammerstein's operatic grave and seeing for themselves that he staged no resurrection.

At that they had reason to be wary. He had built an opera house in Philadelphia and another in London, in addition to his New York theaters of various kinds, and he talked at length about putting up one in Chicago. All one day he rode around downtown Chicago in a cab, stopping and gazing solemnly at vacant lots as though at possible building sites, trailed throughout the day by a group of reporters, finally driving over to the lake front and, with equal solemnity, taking out a tape measure and pencil and figuring the sizes of a pile of stone placed there after the wrecking of another building. He never went further in the plan, but he was ever a cause of disturbing thoughts and unquiet dreams to those who wanted to see the last of him.

By Mae Tinee.

GOOD MORNING!

This picture, adapted from the John Fox Jr. book and stage romance of the Kentucky mountains, gives Richard Barthelmess a vastly different rôle than was his in "The Patent Leather Kid." Here he is more on the order of "Tol'able David," though his Chad Buford had for me none of the charm or appeal that made "Tol'able" so dear.

RICHARD BARTHELMESS is seen in a rôle a little like "Tol'able David."

The pull of "The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come" lies in its delightful scenery, realistic sets, and quaint and authentic costumes of civil war days. Much intelligent care has been taken with the staging and, as usual, cause produces effect.

Then, there is considerable caste in Mr. Barthelmess' supporting cast. Note first of all the presence of Eulalie Jensen, who is, without doubt, one of the greatest actresses on the screen, as she is one who is seen most rarely. It is a marvel to me that directors ever permit her—and Mary Alden—the latter is not in this production—to have any rest. The fact remains that they do, to our loss and their own. Eulalie Jensen is, however, here to lend the glow of her presence, and I personally thank First National for a sight of her.

Then, still speaking of caste, there is Martha Mattox, who does her brief bit as a slatternly mountain homekeeper, perfectly, as she would; and David Torrence and Claude Gillingwater are also there. And Gustav von Seyffertitz. These give tone to a cast that is otherwise all right but not remarkable.

Molly O'Day, playing opposite Mr. Barthelmess, seemed rather out of place as the mountain maid. Doris Dawson in the other feminine lead is a pretty little thing, but no great shakes as an actress.

The Other Film of This Story.

Back on the 5th of April, 1920 (don't I read just like Mr. Donaghey?), I reviewed "The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come," only that time it was a Goldwyn picturization and Jack Pickford played Chad.

I liked the picture much and it seems to me that this issue might to advantage have included a number of incidents which helped to make the film of eight years ago a heart-warmer.

Pauline Starke was in that one—Clara Horton, Edythe Chapman, and some other fine players—and for the last scenes Jack Pickford stuck on a ridiculous little moustache that made him look like a monkey on a stick!

Do you remember the story? Reverting to my lazy habit, I shall let the press sheet tell it in part:

"Chad Buford, a boy of 14, in the Kentucky mountains, loses his foster-parents. Nathan Cherry, a mean character of the mountains, attempts to sell him into an apprenticeship. Chad flees into the mountains with his dog, Jack. After days of wandering, he enters a community in the hills where the Dillon boys 'sic' their dog on Jack and attempt to beat up Chad. Chad is taken into the Joel Turner home as a member.

"Caleb Hazel takes him to Frankfort with him on a visit. Melissa Turner, a shy daughter of the family, weeps when he leaves. Chad attends a horse auction in the city and bids $5 for a blooded horse. Gen. Dean, the owner, is attracted by the boy and signals the auctioneer to let him have the horse at the price. Chad misses the train that carries Caleb out of the city. Chad starts to ride to the mountains. When he reaches the Dean estate, Margaret, beautiful daughter of the General, recognizes the horse and thinks it was stolen. After a wordy bout with the boy, her father appears and explains it is really Chad's horse.

Chad Enlists in the Civil War.

"Chad is taken into the home of Major Buford, friend and neighbor of the Deans. Mrs. Dean objects to her daughter becoming friendly with the boy of unknown parentage. Chad is told by a servant to leave.

"Chad is sent to Lexington to school. The civil war breaks out and he leaves to enlist. He and Margaret Dean have fallen in love, but Margaret spurns him when he announces his decision to join the Union army. The Deans and Major Buford refuse to bid him good-by.

"Toward the close of the war, old Cherry becomes ill. Melissa, aware of the fact that Cherry knows the secret of Chad's parentage, and that Margaret once sent him away because of his humble origin, goes to Cherry to learn the story. Then she walks to the Blue Grass country to tell Margaret that Chad is a Buford, son of a relative of the major's. She returns to find her home in the hands of the Dillon boys and their guerrilla band. The war has ended and Chad, now a captain, is sent with his men to wipe out this band. . . . (Some of these scenes have been omitted from the picture.)

"The Dillons kill Joel Turner and are about to attack the women of the family when news comes that Chad is in the vicinity with his men. Daws Dillon, the leader, plots to surprise them and wipe out the entire camp.

"Melissa hears the plan, makes her escape, and gets to the camp in the midst of a terrific storm. She brings a warning in time and Chad's men defeat the guerrillas, and Daws is killed.

"Melissa is hurt, and Chad carries her back to her home. Margaret tells Chad of his parentage, and takes him back to the Blue Grass country. Melissa tells him he should go. . . ."

The picture shall give you the news of what happens after that.

What do you demand for your movie fare? That is the question you must answer before I can say as to whether or not you will care for "The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come." If you must have sex and machine guns and "pineapples" and all sorts of intrigue, why I reckon you won't find it so hot. But if you can do with a reasonable amount of excitement, and can enjoy a love story without any jazz, I feel free to recommend this film to your attention, even though its star does not merit the exceeding honorable mention he did in "The Patent Leather Kid."

The Case of American Cities

By Clifford Raymond.

CHICAGO is a suddenly big city which has crowded infancy, adolescence, and maturity into a minute of history. It joined rail and water with grain, cattle, lumber, ore and coal and arose out of its duck marshes, a gangling curiosity which outgrew its shoes every day.

It is only some thirty years from its own indigenous frontier vices. While it had them it was a roaring town, but not much different in that from other American cities of the time. When Mike McDonald was boss of the city he used to get so drunk that the First National bank couldn't recognize the signature on his checks and that fairly well illustrated social manners for the boys about town.

Morals were easy. Vice walked the streets. Gambling joints had public criers and no one thought anything particular about it.

Even as late as 1900 Chicago was almost as bad as London, Berlin and Paris. It was almost as bad as Naples, Rome, Bucharest, Constantinople, Moscow, Tokio, Peking and other habitations, including New York, Philadelphia, Los Angeles, San Francisco and San Antonio. But Chicago was one of the first to clean up. Its moral energy was a municipal phenomenon. It broke from the licensed traditions of European and of many American cities and became respectable. It toned life down to the accepted standards of a Moravian village. Public decorum was maintained and the appearances of public decency were respected. That's about all any city can do with or for its population.

Chicago never had been quite as wild as New York or Boston or quite as tough as Tombstone, Ariz., but its social reformation was an achievement. It was cleaner than most small towns. In that respect it is notable that when a vaudeville team gets tough and smutty it's not on the big city circuits but out on the minor range.

The success in keeping the city where a good Sunday school teacher would like to have it has followed the line of most human endeavor. It's had its ups and downs.

Chicago is not as presentable morally now as it was a few years ago, but it is still a fairly clean big city. What chiefly happened to its reputation came from some audacious and imaginative organized gangsters playing with and in politics who began their real operations with the murder of the attractive gangman, Dion O'Bannion, among the plants and funeral floral pieces of his shop across from Holy Name cathedral and came to their high spots in the murder of two political candidates and the bombing of the homes of Judge Swanson and United States Senator Deneen. These Haitian touches in Chicago life were good for a world reputation of dishonor and disgrace, but, in spite of pineapples and plunder, racketeering, machine gunning, hoisted politicians, wrecked front porches and the new political technique of kidnaping and assassination, the town is not the world's great failure in democracy, although its government sometimes is. It grows, it makes its parks, puts in its playgrounds, shoves up its towers, maintains its charities and has a higher than average success in keeping away from the metropolitan disease of slums. As a city, all its municipal corporations considered, it probably does a bit better for its people even than New York, having a better chance, more room for parks and recreations, easier access to playing fields and the bathing beaches of a great lake front.

The things which will fix a city's reputation in the world's sewing circle opinion are somewhat curious. They are not wholly relevant. A half dozen active pineapple planters can do Chicago or any other American city more damage internationally than will be caused by a general community acceptance of conditions debasing to public morals, offensive to public decency or productive of widespread misery.

It isn't cable news that a city tolerates slums and the physical and moral decay they entail, that its community life is disfigured by a parade of depravity and that there is indifference to even the externals of decency. That gets into the books of a Carnegie Foundation survey or into the reports of a committee of the league of nations.

American metropolitan bombers and machine gunners swing out of the darkness in a fast car, do their stuff and are gone, but the brisk explosive consequences of what they have done are good newspaper copy the globe around. The city does not consent that the things which disgrace it should exist. That point is valid. These are acts of violence with a source in mixed populations, incidental defects in the practices of a democratic judiciary and in faulty or corrupt political action and government. There isn't a community code of morals which condones them or is indifferent to them.

American cities are justified in examining the codes of their critics. It is realized that the new country hasn't the inheritances of the old, many of them full of charm, but also full of disease. It hasn't so much to tear down before it can find a way out. If the new country must rid itself of something reaching back to the frontier, the older must rid itself of something reaching back to the middle ages. But with all allowances, the cities of the older culture and civilization have been a long time achieving, tolerating, or enduring conditions which an American city would regard as an indictment of its intelligence or a disease to its physical body. There is a temptation to say that if the English speaking people had to choose in a deluge between London and Chicago, to preserve the one and give the other to the flood, they would be foolish if they did not let the flood have the past and allow the future to have the new.

Aristocratic government has proved itself a social failure. In only one particular has the censorious old lady, London, qualified as a competent city in the treatment of its population and that has been in providing a splendid police and a judiciary of hanging judges. Otherwise, London is not much more of a municipal success than Benares or Tia Juana, and its liberals confess that its belated efforts to raise its standards of living are not proceeding "on anything like an adequate scale." [London Spectator, which refers to the "slum horrors of Great Britain."]

London was in a fair way to cause a deterioration of English stock and may yet, if it does not get ahead more rapidly with its reclamation projects. It may even get the Yorkshire and Devonshire breeds, the boys of the ridings and of the sea. The salt wind in the eyes of the Devonshire lads once was the making of empire, but a metropolitan cancer might ruin a race.

The mere avoidance of such acts of violence as have come out of schematized crime and politics in Chicago and other American cities is not a sufficient virtue. It might be for London an encouraging sign if any one had the imagination and spunk to plant a pineapple on the front porch of Mr Baldwin, Mr. Lloyd George or in a sentry box at Buckingham palace.

Calling the next case, shall it be Berlin? A city of such violent political discussion that a mere parade involves armored cars and police in regiments and threatens the continuity of government. Its curious architecture may be passed over, noting only that when Berlin planning is most successful it produces the nice, clean appearance of a hallway in a hospital. That's unimportant, and the Berliners will do much better than the Londoners because they have more sense, but the street morals and manners of some of the herrs in their casual admiration of decent women would get them a fine hanging by the neck from an oak or a telegraph pole in Nashville, Tenn.; Columbus, O., or Herrin, Ill.

Next case, Paris, with a realistic vice which no American city could endure without perpetual sickness at the stomach. The home of tourist man traps. A city advertising itself as the oriental harem of the white world with a cosmopolitan scum living on wealthy women and accepted as professionals. Shall Chicago as an American city respect Paris or Berlin or London and be dismayed by their virtues, their moralities, or their conceptions of civilization?

American cities, in spite of their able, enterprising, and forward looking criminals and their frequently peculiar methods of police and politics, are making quite as good a job of it in providing homes fit for living as can be perceived in most other quarters of the globe.

How a "Follies" Girl Accepted Motherhood

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—We are not through with the back stage plays yet. An April entry is called "Box Seats." Why the box seats no one seems to know, exactly. True, the hero, being a western college boy in a coonskin coat, steps out of a box and comes back stage to apologize to the heroine because he and the other boys, being a little tight, have made unkind remarks about the heroine's hula dance. But otherwise he has little to do with the plot.

ELLIOTT NUGENT and his father have written another play, "The Breaks."
[White Photo.]

The story has one point of common contact. It relates the experience of a "Follies" girl who is also a mother. I suppose everybody has wondered more or less how a "Follies" girl would accept motherhood. So few of them, by the records, ever invite the test.

It happens that this one was a mother before she submitted herself to the Ziegfeld glorification. She had been unhappily married in the west and had deserted her husband and her baby. Running away to Detroit she became more or less common, taking up with several of those automobile fellows.

Years afterward her brother-in-law appeared with her child, now 12, in tow. The father was dead and none of the relatives was willing to accept the responsibility of rearing the child.

Awakens Her Maternal Instincts.

At sight of the unkempt and terrifically unhappy youngster something human prompts the mother to take on the job. She goes even farther. Whatever she has been, she says, her kid is going to be kept clean. So she quits her protectors and goes back into the show business. Makes a dancer of the child and joins a burlesque company.

A burlesque company is not exactly the environment you or I would have chosen, but we probably know as little of that business as any one can. At any rate this child grows up and retains her sweetness until she is 19. Then mother discovers that she is planning to elope with the son of the lady who owns the show.

She does everything she can to convince the child that the boy is a rotter, and when all her other arguments fail she confesses that she, too, has been the juvenile's sweetheart.

A nasty mess, surely. But it clears the situation. The next season mother and daughter have joined the "Follies" and then the boy who had stepped out of the box on the road appears in New York and wants to marry the girl.

Tabloids Join in the Uplift.

Being a millionaire's son, as they so often are on the stage, mother thinks the best way to make the marriage certain is to advertise it. So she gives the story to the tabloids and the marriage follows. And yet there are some people who insist the picture papers are not a power for good!

The first two acts of the play are rather soundly human, even though they are also rather messy and profane. The last act is not so good, except for the happy enders. I do not imagine "Box Seats" will last long, but it should at least give the "Follies" girls new ideas. It is played principally by Joan Storm, who is the mother, and Patricia Barclay, the daughter. They are both perfectly cast.

New Light on Augustin Duncan.

If you have been reading Isadora Duncan's story of her life (Boni and Liveright) you will remember Augustin Duncan. He does not figure often in that amazing story of the world's most perfect pagan, but he took part in many of the pilgrimages of the irresponsible Duncans. Augustin, I gather, was the anchor man of the family.

Most of his life has been devoted to acting and to stage direction. He has done many fine things in New York. Notably the service he rendered the Theater Guild when it consisted of a little band of enthusiasts without any money. It was Duncan who staged, directed, and played the leading part in their second production of "John Ferguson," which saved them and made the Guild possible.

Bravery Overcomes Blindness.

A few months back Augustin suffered the loss of his eyesight and thought he was through, but he made a brave fight and last week came back to try again. For the Nugents he directed the production of a new comedy called "The Breaks." The play does not amount to much, but when the last curtain fell the company assembled in the wings and on the stage, there were speeches by Dr. Louis Anspacher, George Abbott, and Edith Wynne Matthison.

They told the audience what the people of the stage thought of Augustin Duncan and presented him with a scroll attesting their love and loyalty. He accepted the tribute and spoke his thanks. He was 55 years old that day, he said, and he had been standing where he could count the lights. There were just fifty-five of them, he said, and smiled hopefully. Which made us all weep a little because we were glad for his hopefulness and proud of his courage.

New Play Not Up to Standards.

The Nugents, J. C., the father, and Elliot the son, have written two or three good plays. "Kempy" was one of them and "The Poor Nut" another. In "The Breaks" they revert

ENGLISH WITHOUT A DON'T

Why Infinitives Are Split.

By Wallace Rice.

ONLY one reason has been given for not splitting the infinitive: that the adverb can be placed before or after it without change of significance. The rest is prejudice.

Prof. George O. Curme of Northwestern university, after studying the locution for years, proves the contrary by showing that variance of position brings variance of emphasis and so variance of meaning.

With the adverb before the verb, the verb takes the stress: He almost succeeded. I almost believe it. I half suspected it. With the verb preceding, the stress goes to the adverb: When he acts he acts promptly. All that I have learnt farther. The infinitive being often felt as the verb of the clause, to give it its significance it is necessary to put the adverbial immediately before it. Prof. Curme cites: "He hoped to more than retrieve [his fortune]," from Roosevelt. "To first imperfectly conceive the idea," from Herbert Spencer, "Inviting them to first consider whether business is letting politics alone," from Woodrow Wilson. In these, changing the position of the adverbial to before "to" or after the verb will be heard on reading to change the stress, and the meaning, if change is possible at all.

Many adverbials indicating quantity can only be placed after "to." Try rewriting the following into English as clear and terse: To more than compensate him for his sacrifice is impossible, to less than compensate him were a crime, to quite compensate him demands equal sacrifice from us.

As Prof. Robert P. Utter rightly observes: "It is hard to find an equivalent for 'Enough to more than cover expenses' short of the circumlocution 'enough to cover expenses and more than cover them.'" Prof. Lounsbury is in agreement with this.

There are reasons, good ones, for splitting infinitives on occasion.

This Thing and That Thing of the Theater

By Frederick Donaghey.

SO FAR as May 7 in the Adelphi Theater is concerned, the play named "Café Tomaza" is off the Chicago calendar. That theater will be shuttered next week, and will be reopened May 13 with Patrick Kearney's play named "A Man's Man": at least, such was the arrangement at midnight Friday. Nothing is yet known as to the cast. . . . I took occasion in the season of 1925-'26, after seeing "A Man's Man" in New-York, to say that it was a good play, and that it would have been clearly entitled to that season's Pulitzer award had George Kelly's "Craig's Wife" not been a better play by most of the considerations and estimations. . . . That the piece was recently given for a week by the resident players out in the National Theater, in Englewood, is not now news.

JOHN BARKER
He used to be just Jack, and he's here now in "The Love-Call."

That the Harris will be relighted late in May for the new piece named "The People" has been indicated in THE TRIBUNE. Miss Marjorie Wood will be in it with Richard Bennett and Miss Sydney Shields. From what I have been told, the piece is about Roman Catholics and Jews in politics, their right to hold high official positions in the Federal service, and so on, and that it has its inspiration in the aspirations of Al Smith to be President. Although known to have been written by Edward H. Robins and Clarke Silvernail, two well-known actors, it is credited to the authorship of an unidentifiable William S. Carson. However, as Ashton Stevens long since quoted a friend as saying, "plays don't care who writes them." . . . Nor does the public seem really to care. The only persons who are quite particular in these matters are the men and women who write them: even when somebody else successfully rewrites them and makes them of box-office value, the original authors insist on having the kudos. I have in mind a recent case wherein the author of a failure, after reluctantly having consented to permit a practical man of the theater to rewrite the play, gave fifty percent of the considerable royalties to the latter on condition that he would not insist on having his name in the playbills as collaborator.

Only the Selwyn, of the Chicago theaters, can reasonably assert that it is set for the Summer: I don't think it likely that "Good News" will cease to interest the public between now and Labor Day. Mr. Powers says he has nothing in sight for the Illinois, where Miss Lillie will finish Saturday night. Indications are that the Blackstone has nothing to worry about for some weeks to come, so popular is "The Baby Cyclone." Incoming through next month are "The Nineteenth Hole," "Sunny Days!" and, as told above, "A Man's Man." The Studebaker is not booked beyond Mr. Ames' fourth and final week of Gilbert-and-Sullivan. . . . "Café Tomaza" is a possibility; and so also is "Babes in the Wood," by the author of "The Barker" and "Fly-by-Night."

Another of the Indestructibles.

Some memoranda in Page 3 by Figaro McGee have to do with certain aspects of "The Pirates of Penzance," which Mr. Ames' singing-actors will put on tomorrow night. The operetta has not been frequently sung in the last twenty years in Chicago, and is, as are most of the series, a tradition to many who have become theater-goers even since the last revival—that by De Wolf Hopper early in 1915 in the Auditorium. (There may meanwhile have been incidental performances of minor quality.) So, to the Signor McGee's comment I should like to add the statement that Sullivan put some of his best and his loveliest music into "The Pirates": he was, when he wrote it, still strongly under the influence of Mendelssohn, so that the score markedly reflects that influence, especially in the choral passages. The first-act waltz for Mabel is a gem; the orchestration of the Sergeant's song, "A Policeman's Life," is a lasting delight—as, indeed, is all the music leading into the encounter of the police with the pirates; and it is for the good of our souls to remember that the most rousing of this nation's peacetime battle-hymns derives from second-act music in this operetta: I mean the anthem starting "Hail! Hail! The gang's all here!" . . . As to Gilbert's contribution, it would still be a classic if there were in it nothing save the scene wherein the Pirate Chief and Ruth explain to Frederic the dirty trick played on him by Fate when the Astronomer-Royal decided that February 29 was a dandy little date to have in the calendar once in four years.

About Performers:

Miss Henrietta Crosman is to be in the New-York revival by the Players of "The Beaux' Stratagem." So is William Courtleigh, also.

Miss Elizabeth Risdon has been engaged for next season by the Theater Guild for its "acting company," as it terms the performers employed by it in New-York.

Eugene O'Neill has written or is writing for the Guild a piece he calls "Dynamo."

Miss Laura Hope Crews last night ended her tour in "The Silver Cord," wherein she recently appeared in the Studebaker.

Miss Polly Walker, who has had the principal feminine rôle in "The Merry Malones," is mentioned for semi-starhood in a new piece by George M. Cohan.

Miss Elizabeth Hines, for some time in retirement, also is mentioned for special attention in something new by that author.

Miss Irene Franklin is returning from a London engagement which is reported to have been marked by no diminution of her popularity with the English.

Fred Stone and two of his three daughters, Dorothy and Pauline, are to have a new conveyance in the Autumn.

Miss Fannie Brice is to be photographed and phonographed in a picture-play for the Vitaphone.

John Barrymore says he will give outdoor performances of "Hamlet" at Hollywood and in the Greek theater of the University of California.

Eddie Cantor is mentioned for a song-and-dance version of the comedy named "Six-Cylinder Love," used here in 1922 for the opening of the Harris Theater.

Miss Elisabeth Marbury, late in what has been a varied and a busy life, is returning to theatrical management in New-York.

James Walker, the self-hating Mayor of Manhattan, is to take part tonight in a public gambol by the Lambs.

Mistinguette, in Chicago in 1924, is as popular as ever in Paris, and is now appearing there in a revue which permits of her impersonating Du Barry.

Among Shakspere's Titles.

Harper & Brothers have been good enough to send to me "To Kiss the Crocodile," by Ernest Milton. I've not had time to read the romance; but I've read the jacket: I never miss doing that much in behalf of any new book. Well, the leaf of the jacket devoted to Mr. Milton tells me that he is an actor, that he has appeared in many plays here and abroad, and that "in England he is considered the greatest living actor of Hamlet." He might be all of that without my knowing it, although I like to believe that I'm live and aware in such matters. Mr. Milton is now, the blurb goes on to say, acting at Cairo in Shakspere "by command of King Fuad," and "is playing Hamlet, Shylock, and Angelo in 'Reason for Reason.'" So, having learned about that, I've decided to read "To Kiss the Crocodile" without much delay.

Opera's Early Days Surveyed by Critic

By Edward Moore.

L. Hutchinson, Otto H. Kahn, Philip M. Lydig, Charles H. Mackay, Harold F. McCormick, John J. Mitchell, Ira Nelson Morris, La Verne W. Noyes, Max Pam, Julius Rosenwald, John G. Shedd, Charles A. Stevens, Harry Payne Whitney, and H. Rogers Winthrop.

Out of these was formed an executive committee with Mr. Mackay as chairman, Mr. Shaffer vice chairman, and Messrs. Kahn, Lydig, Dawes, Rosenwald, Shedd, Whitney, and Winthrop as other members. The officers of the new company read: Harold F. McCormick, president; Charles G. Dawes and Otto H. Kahn, vice presidents; Charles L. Hutchinson, treasurer, and Philip M. Lydig, secretary. Andreas Dippel was released from the Metropolitan to become general manager, Cleofonte Campanini was appointed general musical director, and Bernhard Ulrich business manager.

Maestro Campanini, being general musical director, was also first conductor, the rest of the staff being Attilio Parelli, Ettore Perosio, and Marcel Charlier. The stage director was Fernand Almanz. The stage manager was Joseph C. Engel, who had served through the Hammerstein régime and is one of the few persons able to claim continuous service in the Chicago company from its foundation to the present. One of his assistants was Carlo Muzio, whose fame is mostly vicarious, since he was the father of Claudia Muzio, too young at that time to have begun the career that has since made her name known to the opera goers of three continents.

The other assistant stage manager was Sam Katzman, the chorus master was Pietro Nepoti, the ballet master Luigi Albertieri, and the premiere danseuse Esther Zanini.

Roster of Artists in 1910.

The list of principal singers was rather startlingly long for a new company. It would seem reasonably lavish today, and at that it had the addition of several famous guest-artists. For the Chicago company started its operations by being able to invite guests of high degree to take part in its performances. Like a good many other good things, the system fell into partial or almost complete disuse, registering among the items that might make opera seasons more stimulating but that are not being done.

Here is Chicago's 1910 roster of artists:

Sopranos—Marie Cavan, Suzanne Dumesnil, Minnie Egener, Geraldine Farrar (guest), Johanna Gadski (guest), Mary Garden, Lillian Grenville, Jeanne Korolewicz, Marie La Salle-Rabinoff (guest), Lydia Lipkowska (guest), Nellie Melba (guest), Carmen Melis, Jane Osborn-Hannah, Mabel Riegelman, Serafina Scalfaro, Marguerita Sylva, Carolina White, Alice Zeppilli.

Mezzo-sopranos and contraltos—Clotilde Bressler-Gianoli, Tina di Angelo, Eleanora de Cisneros, Giuseppina Giaconia, Rosa Olitzka (guest), Ferrari Pattini, Marian Walker.

Tenors—Amedeo Bassi, Enrico Caruso (guest), Florencio Constantino (guest), Charles Dalmores, Jean Delparte, Francesco Daddi, Mario Guardabassi, John McCormack, Emilio Venturini, Edmond Warnery, Nicola Zerola, Dante Zucchi.

Baritones—Wilhelm Beck, Alfredo Costa, Armand Crabbé, Desiré Defrere, Hector Dufranne, Nicola Fossetta, Maurice Renaud (guest), Mario Sammarco, Antonio Scotti (guest).

Bassos—Nazzareno de Angelis, Vittorio Arimondi, Berardo Berardi, Gustave Huberdeau, Pompilio Malatesta, Constantin Nicolay, Michele Sampieri.

With the exception of the guests, these were mostly from the Manhattan company, with some accretions from the Metropolitan and other sources. The scenery, costumes, musical scores, and other items of physical equipment had been bought in a mass and at panic prices after the collapse of the Hammerstein company. After years of fighting on one front and months of planning on another everything was now ready.

And so on the evening of Thursday, Nov. 3, 1910, the curtain of the Auditorium went up and Chicago stepped out with its own opera company.

With the Melody Makers.

Another young Chicago singer would seem to have made several strides into the professional musical life of Europe. She is Edith Orens, remembered here for her performances in "Hansel and Gretel" with the Chicago Opera. This department is in receipt of some clippings from Brussels saying pleasant things about her appearance as one of the Norns in "Die Goetterdaemerung" at the Royal Conservatory of Music of that city. The information adds that she also sang with great success at the American embassy there, and that she has been engaged for operatic appearances at the Casino in Ostende in July and at the Royal Opera in Antwerp in September. Her debut in the latter assignment will be as Charlotte in "Werther," and later she will appear as Fides in "Le Prophête," the name part of "La Navarraise," the mother in "Louise," Delilah in "Samson and Delilah," and several new works.

HELPING

MISS ESTHER MUIR

She's with Mr. Dowling in "Honeymoon Lane," wherein it is part of her task to serve, in the rôle of a tough quirister, as the horrible example used by the hero in persuading the girl he loves that she shouldn't be on the stage.

Meanwhile the cable brings news that Marion McAfee, whose concert appearance in London was mentioned here a week ago, has been engaged for German operatic parts in the coming season at Covent Garden.

A concert will be given at Orchestra hall to commemorate the anniversary of the death of the Ukrainian poet, Taras Shevchenko. Salomea Krushelnitsky, soprano, of the Opéra of Paris and La Scala of Milan, will present the program.

The International Society for Contemporary Music will hold a business meeting in the studio of Rudolph Reuter, Fine Arts building, at 8 o'clock Wednesday evening. At 9 o'clock a program will be presented by Michel Wilkomirski and Georges Spinalski, violinists, playing works by Honegger and Ravel; Leo Podolsky, pianist; Szymanowski, Reger, and Debussy; Lucille Stevenson, soprano, songs by Loeffler, accompanied by Gordon Campbell, pianist, and Stella Roberts, violinist; and Rudolph Reuter, pianist, Busoni and a sonata in one movement by Wesley La Violette, chairman of the Chicago chapter.

The Norwegian Singers' league of Chicago, assisted by the B. Bjornson orchestra, will give a concert at Carl Schurz High school tonight. Carl Neeb is the orchestral conductor. The various choral bodies of the league will be directed by Emil Bion, M. Sommerfelt, Otto Clausen, Knute Hansen, and Gustaf A. Carlson. In the final number, Greig's "Landkjending," Olov Brandt will sing the baritone solo.

The Little Polish Symphony orchestra is announced for a program tonight at Schoenhofen's hall under the direction of Casmir Jasinski. Marie Sikorska, pianist, and Waclaw Malinowski, violinist, will be the soloists.

They speak in New York of a generally commendable performance of "Lohengrin" given by the All-American Grand Opera company for the benefit of the Intercollegiate Musical Council, Inc. But why do musical organizations seeking to do good deeds in a cacophonic world construct such names for themselves? Isaac Van Grove of this city conducted, and the singers were Orville Harrold, Robert Ringling, Alma Peterson, Marta Wittkowska, Herbert Gould, and Carl Rollins. With the exception of the last named, all have at one time or another been well known in Chicago musical affairs. The company plans to give "Carmen" May 6, and, in spite of its title, tells of doing its operas in the languages in which they were written.

THE ARMCHAIR PLAYGOER

By Fanny Butcher.

For those who do their theater going in the armchair, or who like to read the plays they have seen.

IN NEW YORK.

THE only opening in New York which armchair playgoers could attend last week was "The Waltz of the Dogs," one of those pleasant little Russian pieces where everybody goes to the dogs, but not in commemoration of the title. It was a posthumous play by Leonid Andreyev, who had, for a spell back, a great vogue in the theater. His "He Who Gets Slapped" was one of the great events of a few years ago, and brought him to the attention of many playgoers and many readers to whom the author of "The Life of Man" was unknown.

"The Waltz of the Dogs" is a little waltz which the hero of the play learned, after the fashion of the "Songs My Mother Taught Me." He plays it with a couple of fingers, the way most of us typewrite, and it symbolizes to him great emotion. He plays it in the first act to amuse a group of his friends who have come to see the apartment which he has prepared for Liza, who will be his bride in seventeen days. He is a gay, happy, respected man.

In the midst of the party there arrives a letter from Liza saying that she has been forced to marry a man with money. From that moment the play gets somberer and somberer, with its dourness shot with the cupidity of the hero's brother, the hero's sinking into criminality, and Liza's affair with the brother, and ending with "The Waltz of the Dogs," played by the hero just as he grabs a revolver and goes into the bedroom to shoot himself.

There is a famous sentence in it which has been taken as a Russian's critical judgment of the Russians: "The Russians don't live; they only remember something—and whatever they do or whatever they write is always a recollection."

IN CHICAGO.

And tomorrow night "The Pirates of Penzance," by that incomparable pair, Gilbert and Sullivan. Having been very good little armchair playgoers and read, as you were told, the script of the Pirates as well as the script of the Mikado last week, and having found your chuckle a line in "The Bab Ballads," this week you are to dig up Sidney Dark's life and letters of W. S. Gilbert, which was published in 1923, and meet one of the most amusing characters in the English life of his period.

PUBLISHED.

"The Plays of Georg Buchner" contains two plays and a fragment by the German playwright who lived between the years 1813 and 1837, wrote communist tracts before Karl Marx, and analyzed personality before Pirandello. One of the plays, "Danton's Death"—here published in English for the first time—was one of the successes of the recent Max Reinhardt season in New York.

PLAY TOURNAMENT.

The second annual play tournament of the Drama League of Chicago will be held at the Goodman theater the week of May 7th. The final contest will be held on May 13th at 8 p. m. at which time the four plays which have won in the preliminary groups will compete for the silver cup.

Best Plays

Send us a letter telling about the best play you have ever seen and we'll pay you $1 if we print it. Address Best Plays, Chicago Tribune.

The Magnificent Vagabond.

I shall probably see a great many more plays in my lifetime, but I am sure that even the most perfect of them will give way in my mind to the breath of romance that was the "Vagabond King."

Dennis King as François Villon, for a few fleeting hours transported us from our drab world to one of fantastic adventure, making us pray that the curtain would never go down. Villon, the scapegrace, his wit as sharp and ready as his flaming sword; Villon the soldier, thrilling us with the vibrant strains of the "Vagabond Song"; Villon the poet, singing and loving in the rose garden, filling us with the exquisite sadness of perfect beauty. A glorious character, gloriously portrayed by the lovable young Englishman who is now cracking the shell of hard boiled old New York.

Dennis King brings to his characterization of Francois Villon all the youth and beauty and magic, all the swagger, the insolence, and the fire that is for us the spirit of the mad poet.
E. N. G.

Frank Bacon.

The best play I remember seeing was "Lightnin'" with Frank Bacon. His acting of the poor old shiftless ne'er do well hurting nobody but himself by drinking a little too much, though loved by every one, was filled with comedy and pathos.

The part he took was so natural that it made the audience forget it was just being acted and made one feel it was actually being lived. To me, it was the best play I have ever seen. C. O.

Ten Years Ago in Chicago Theaters

From The Tribune of April 28, 1918.

WITH much stealth and secrecy, David Belasco is arranging to present a new play in Baltimore Tuesday evening. "Over the Hills" is said to be its name. Hutchinson Boyd is its author and Frances Starr its star.

And "Over the Hills," when it emerged from the stealth and secrecy, proved to be nothing at all for the advancement of Mr. Belasco in wealth, Miss Starr in eminence, or Mr. Boyd in popularity. It was just another play with Miss Starr in it.

Lincoln J. Carter's military ripsnorter, "An American Ace," is to be renamed "Our Boys in France." It is explained that from its title the audiences in the East believed it to be a gambling play.

The play, by one or the other title, was exhibited briefly in the Princess, where France was duly pronounced Frahnce, and proved to be just sludge. Mr. Carter was an ingenious mechanician of backstage, and had made wealth with a number of "effects" and illusions in the days ere biff-bang melodrama was put out of business by the movies. The "effect" in "An American Ace" was of airplanes.

Miss Marie Cahill in a new comedy, "Just Around the Corner," is a Summer probability for Chicago.

Miss Cahill came along in "Just Around the Corner," and created no real disturbance at the box-office. She had had her day of starhood: indeed, she was for years, following her success with the song called "Nancy Brown," of immense popularity. That song was written by the late Clifton Crawford, who was unable to get a laugh out of it when he, himself, sang it in the farce called "Foxy Grandpa"—although that was long before he won a place for himself in public esteem. Miss Cahill first used the song in a show named "The Wild Rose," and afterward had a piece written for herself and named for the song. Her name occasionally appears nowadays in the two-a-day bills in and near New-York.

Donald Brian will transfer his cheery presence from "Her Regiment" to "Madame and Her Godson" before long. The new habitat is a Parisian farce changed into a musical comedy by Bolton, Wodehouse, and Ivan Caryll.

The piece in question was called "The Girl Behind the Gun" when given early in 1919 in the Colonial; and it wasn't good.

Ernest Glendinning at the age of 34 has gone to war in the Marines. He was the actor of Youth in "Experience," and he last played in "The Gypsy Trail" in New-York.

Mr. Glendinning is still active in the theater: he was here early last season in "Coal-Oil Jennie." He didn't appear in "The Gypsy Trail" in Chicago: when that comedy was given in the Cort, his rôle had Otto Kruger as its actor.

Twenty Years Ago

From The Tribune of April 26, 1908.

POWERS' Theater will be the first one of the downtown playhouses to start a Summer season this year. Tomorrow night a company of well-known American players, assisted by Dallas Welford, the English farceur who was here a year ago with "Mr. Hopkinson," will present a three-act farcical comedy entitled "Twenty Days in the Shade," which is planned to stay on at this theater until well into the convention days. An added attraction will be a company of Irish players, from Dublin, who will present a short three-act Irish play entitled "The Building Fund," written for them by William Boyle.

"Twenty Days in the Shade" wasn't a bad farce: the trouble with it was that the basic plot was the same as that of "The Man from Mexico," for which theater-goers of twenty years ago had a memory. Richard Bennett was in the principal rôle. Mr. Welford has not since "Mr. Hopkinson" been able to duplicate his success in that farce, which was by R. C. Carton, whose death in England was a recent item of cable-news in THE TRIBUNE. The last engagement of the actor in Chicago was in "The Student-Prince" in the course of its long run in the Great Northern. . . . The paragraph next following explains who the Irish Players were. As to "The Building-Fund," it was, oddly, the first piece acted in Chicago by the company of the Dublin Abbey when, in 1912, it made its first visit.

The Irish players—W. G. Fay; his brother, Frank Fay, and Miss Bridgit O'Dempsey, wife of W. G. Fay—were first brought to the attention of Charles Frohman by J. M. Barrie, who wished to put them on at the Duke of York's Theater, London, as a curtain-raiser to his "The Admirable Crichton." W. G. Fay was for some time stage-director of the Literary Theater of Dublin, Ireland, which afterward grew to be the Irish National Theater Society of Dublin. Things were in a fair way for Ireland to develop a drama of its own, racy, thoughtful, and stimulating. Plays were contributed by such writers as W. B. Yeats, Lady Gregory, J. M. Synge—author of "The Playboy of the Western World," which, because of its slur upon the chastity of Ireland's women, finally broke up the movement—and William Boyle. This dramatic movement in Ireland was wrecked upon the shoals of not too many cooks, but too many playwrights, each insisting that his was the manuscript the people wished to see. With all the principal actors, headed by the Fays, temporarily seceded, went to London, and there were taken under the protection of J. M. Barrie and Charles Frohman, who arranged for their appearance in America.

The foregoing memoranda, which may have held the personal opinions of THE TRIBUNE'S drama-editor in 1908, makes quaint reading in 1928, with the Abbey Theater still flourishing in Dublin. The secession of the Fays didn't deter Ireland from developing "a drama of its own—racy, thoughtful, stimulating." The plays of Yeats, Lady Gregory, Synge, and Boyle are still acted there. And [illegible] special reference to "The Playboy" is comical in retrospect: Synge's plays, more than those of any other Irish writer, were the making of the enterprise. . . . The Fays were good actors in their milieu: W. G. was, indeed, hardly less clever than his successor, Arthur Sinclair. But nobody took notice of them when they toured here under Frohman: "The Building-Fund" seemed, detached from its surroundings, to be a commonplace farce of Irish hut-life.

Owen Wister's and Kirke La Shelle's stage-version of "The Virginian" will begin a two weeks' stay in McVicker's Theater today, making its first engagement in Chicago at popular prices. W. S. Hart is the Virginian this season and Frank Campeau is playing Trampas, the part he originated.

"The Virginian" is fondly remembered as a good show, if not a good play. Dustin Farnum, long since gone into films, was vastly popular in it. The play was too old by the time Mr. Hart took over the title-part for him to win special attention in it. For that matter, he was of no great consequence to the public until he, too, took to films. And to the films went Mr. Campeau, also, but not until after he had played Tranpas over and over in other rôles.

"Buster Brown," the R. F. Outcault newspaper cartoon play which has "delighted the children as well as the older folks of the entire continent," is to be the week's attraction in the Great Northern Theater, commencing this afternoon. Little Jimmie Rosen, a small comedian, plays the rôle of Buster, and Al Grady that of Tige, Buster's dog.

George Broadhurst was credited with having made the play of "Buster Brown," although it is remembered that his name didn't appear in the billing as the dramatist. The piece was "one of those things": it had long and high vogue in the theaters where a dollar or less was the cost of the best seat; and its earnings were probably in excess of a million dollars. Little Gabriel, the most engaging and tolerable of the midgets who were actors in those days, had the title-rôle when the piece was new.

THEY'RE IN MR. AMES' REVIVALS

WILLIAM WILLIAMS MISS PAULA LANGLEN

MR. WILLIAMS, pictured here as Frederic in "The Pirates of Penzance," is the tenor whose voice didn't respond last Monday night in "The Mikado," so that he was, doubtless, happy when another tenor stepped from the ranks of Titiputians and took over Nanki-Poo's aria. He was bulletined to return to the cast yesterday. . . . And Miss Langlen, also garbed for "The Pirates," is a member of Mr. Ames' ensemble who had nothing to say and little to do in "The Mikado." She will, in this week's revival, be one of Major-General Stanley's fair daughters.

G.-and-S. Stuff.

SIR: In this matter, now, of "The Mikado," I'm inclined to say that you're more than half-right about Mr. Ames' being the best performance. As one brought up two minutes' walk from the Savoy in London, I've brought with me certain prejudices, of course; and one of them is for George Grossmith's Ko-Ko. But, after all, "The Mikado" was not so far distant in years from the early pieces, like "Thespis" and "The Sorcerer"; and they, played as they were in London (although I've never seen "Thespis" and have but a slim memory of "The Sorcerer"), were really little more than minor singspiels, giving out quite as much pleasure in the reading as in the performance.

Chicago: April 24, 1928.

SIR: I hate to give in to you, especially when you are right; but I'm doing so in the case of Mr. Winthrop Ames' "way with 'The Mikado,'" as you put it this morning. I was born too late in life to have seen "The Mikado" in the London Savoy, which was about through as the "home" of the Savoyards by the time I was old enough to go to the theater with a set of brains. My knowledge of "The Mikado" there was gained from the touring company, with Mr. Harry Lytton as the comedian; and I thought him a sad person as Ko-Ko through his trying too hard to be funny. The character-woman of that company, Miss Bertha Lewis, was quite the best in the eccentric dames and spinsters of Gilbert I had seen until last night, when I was quite taken by Miss Vera Ross as Katisha. Well, cheerio!

CHEYNE WALK.

Chicago: April 24, 1928.

SIR: Have you any means of finding out how an audience such as that of last night in the Studebaker may be assembled? I should like the information for use in a monograph I plan on the relationship between humans and vegetables in the matter of intelligence when in the playhouse. I have been to the theater in all the known lands without ever before encountering such a gathering of oafs! The impresario, Mr. Winthrop Ames, must be said to know his onions—if you don't mind my preserving the literary figure; for only on the grounds that he had prescient certitude regarding his first Chicago audience for "The Mikado" may he be excused for the childish foolery with the umbrella-bearers in the Mikado's great song.

THOMAS R. ASHTON.

Evanston: April 24, 1928.

SIR: If what I saw last night was a good performance of "The Mikado," then Governor Small won a smashing victory in the recent primaries! From what ten-twent'-thirt' show of the Eighteen-eighties did Winthrop Ames get that gorgeous inspiration to kill off "My Object All Sublime" with the antics of the umbrella-bearers? Like you, my score on "The Mikado" runs far above two hundred; and I hope that, in figuring it out, I've missed the shows in which the umbrella-bearer was featured as a character.

ONE WITH LINES TO SPEAK

MISS MARIETTA O'BRIEN

SHE'S in "Artists and Models," along with many, many other comely girls; but Miss O'Brien is distinguished from most of the others by the fact that she has parts to play in the sketches and interludes, and that, having parts to play, she also has lines to speak.

A Piece About the 29th of February

By Figaro McGee.

NEITHER Gilbert's libretto nor Sullivan's music permits of a star's really dominating "The Pirates of Penzance," which will be given tomorrow night in Winthrop Ames' revival in the Studebaker. I doubt if the average theater-goer old enough to regard himself as a seasoned patron of Gilbert and Sullivan's works possesses any recollection of an individual stand-out in "The Pirates" unless it be of De Wolf Hopper as the Sergeant of Police. Although Hopper didn't take up the rôle until 1912, his impersonation was entitled to be called what actors mean when they speak of a "creation"; and it is to be remembered that I'm writing of a rôle in a work originally staged in 1879! Other low-comedians who had undertaken the part in this country made the mistake with it that they (and Hopper, himself) made with Dick Deadeye in "Pinafore"—that of regarding Edward, the sergeant, as a consciously-comic character. He is, as a matter of fact, a veritable "slave of duty," although not in the sense of the sub-title of the operetta. I think that Gilbert, himself, would have been delighted with Hopper in this rôle—provided, of course, that Hopper should have played it for Gilbert without heeding the accretions of gags that had grown about the part in the American annals of "The Pirates."

American comedians have always fought shy of the part of the Major-General because it gives no opportunity for clowning and hokum, although, taking over the Sergeant of Police, they have looked enviously on the great patter-song of the Major-General. But, although written for George Grossmith, nobody could fairly regard the Major-General as a star's rôle.

It is pretty well known that the first public actor of Major-General Stanley, in an English provincial town, was the late Richard Mansfield: the performance was merely for copyright, and was given by a touring cast of "Pinafore." Mansfield at the time was an unknown. But what is not generally known is that the accompaniment of the Major-General's song that is regarded as part of Sullivan's score was really Mansfield's. It seems that Sullivan had put aside what was for him the light task of setting Gilbert's patter to music, and that, in the rush of giving the copyright performance, no accompaniment had been provided. Mansfield, a good musician, improvised the jingling little tune; and what he improvised was accepted by Gilbert and Sullivan as just the thing.

The fact is that, when they were in preparation of "The Pirates," Gilbert and Sullivan were bent upon outfitting the singing-actors they had in mind—the performers who had been drilled into their ideas through taking part in "The Sorcerer," "Trial by Jury," and "Pinafore." They wrote good rôles for tenor and light soprano, for basso and character-woman, and gave no especial thought to making any one performer stand out. But, then, a student of their works will find that to be the case with virtually all of their works in collaboration.

When Hopper was asked by the Messrs. Shubert in 1911 to go into a revival of "Pinafore," he had his choice among Dick Deadeye, Admiral Porter, and Captain Corcoran—rôles diverse enough, in all conscienc, but of about the same actor-value. He decided on Dick Deadeye not because he found it to be the best for him, but because Fritzi Scheff had been hired for Josephine.

Hopper had consulted Digby Bell as to the choice. Bell asked who was to be the Josephine, and, on being told Miss Scheff, said:

"Take Deadeye: then you won't have to meet her on the stage!"

This is the cast of "The Pirates" for tomorrow night:

The pirate chief	John Barclay
His lieutenant	J. Humbird Duffey
Frederic, an apprentice	William Williams
Major-General Stanley	Fred Wright
Mabel, a daughter	Lois Bennett
Kate, another	Suissabell Sterling
Edith, another	Virginia Fox
Isabel, another	Bettina Hall
Maud, another	Paula Langlen
Ruth, the pirates' maid	Vera Ross
Sergeant of Police	William C. Gordon

How a Follies Girl Took Motherhood

By Burns Mantle.

to an artificial story that is not quite up to the standards of their best work.

Their hero is Jed Willis, a cross-grained bachelor cotton farmer in Texas who rules the countryside. His enemies are the Dolfs, his cousins, and if he dies without an heir they will inherit the property. He tries to circumvent the terms of their grandfather's will by forcing his 19 year old housekeeper into marriage, though he knows she is really in love with the Dolf boy, his younger cousin.

Then he discovers that, according to the reports of the surgeons on the occasion of his last hospital visit, his chances of ever being a papa are definitely remote. He shoots himself then and the plot is cleared.

Father Nugent, a comedian by rights, tries to play the mean minded farmer, but he is not good at fooling people. Nobody believes he is what he pretends to be. Young Elliot is the son and Sylvia Sydney the little housekeeper.

"The Breaks" is one of those excessively unimportant little plays that the stock companies and picture folk may take up, but I doubt if it ever goes touring.

"Abie's Irish Rose" Well Filmed.

Speaking of pictures, we have the screen version of the perennial "Abie's Irish Rose" on display. I'll say this for it: It is a better picture than it was a play. The scenarist has gone back to the early emigrant days of Abie's family, then jumps to his school days and shows him taking the oath to the flag in public school, with Irish and Jews, Italians and Hungarian boys lined up patriotically alongside of him.

There is another lapse of time and we meet Abie in France, where he meets Rosemary Murphy as a singer in the Y. M. C. A. huts. The romance develops naturally from there on, which gives the story a much stronger foundation than it had in the play.

Great care has been taken, too, not to offend either Catholic or Jew in the later story. A Catholic priest and a Jewish rabbi, the program relates, sat with the director during the shooting of the scenes and saw that it was properly done.

The cast, too, has been wisely chosen. Nancy Carroll, a fine little actress, plays Rosemary, and a handsome young juvenile named Charles Roberts is the Abie. He gained picture prominence in "Wings," that most exciting of the recent war films.

Circus Emerges from Hibernation.

You can safely begin disciplining the children by promising to take them to the circus if they are good. The big top is out of storage and ready to be put up. After three weeks at the Madison Square Garden, the Barnum, Bailey and Ringling folks start touring next week.

It is a grand circus this year, with a sea elephant as big as a house as its chief curiosity. They are feeding him (I trust I have the sex right) such quantities of live fish at each performance that I fear his tummy may be all scratched out before he even gets to you, even if his digestion holds out. But I dare say they know their animals. They probably feed him a can or two of bicarbonate of soda between shows.

Music Festival Is Proposed for the World's Fair

AN international music festival, bringing together the most famous conductors, singing societies, military bands, orchestras, choruses, and choirs of Europe and America as the spiritual message of Chicago's centennial celebration was suggested in a letter to Rufus C. Dawes, president of the world's fair committee, by A. G. Gulbransen, piano manufacturer, sponsor of opera in English and of Christmas carol singing.

Chicago's position as one of the world's greatest musical centers, Mr. Gulbransen pointed out, would be greatly enhanced by the staging of a program which would give every nation an opportunity to express itself in the one universal language—music.

Cultural Values Needed.

"Such a carnival," said Mr. Gulbransen, "would impart to the fair a spiritual element that would not soon be forgotten. Too much emphasis perhaps has been laid on the material aspects of the exposition, the symphonies of brick and mortar, the vision of lagoons and islands.

"These, in time will perish, but whatever there may be of cultural value will remain, a permanent contribution to the humanities.

"Programs could be arranged featuring the music of each nation, and introducing such organizations as bands, choruses, and orchestras.

"Chicago by reason of its civic opera, its symphony orchestra, its Apollo club and its many music colleges, conservatories, and studios, is today one of the greatest music centers of the world, and such a festival would go far toward the enhancement of its prestige.

The Universal Language.

"Music speaks a universal language, reaching the hearts of all people, and with the close international friendships now being cemented, Chicago would thus have an opportunity of promoting brotherhood and good will among the nations such as a century of world courts could not accomplish.

"Brick and mortar will not long endure, but the inspiration provided by a musical congress of all nations will be remembered after the more material aspects of the fair have been forgotten."

We're with the Audience.

A musical comedy playing in New-York City had these lines in a dialogue between two funmakers: "Where's your chivalry?" "I traded it for a Dodge." Night after night, absolute silence followed this gag. The audience didn't get it. So the director had the comedians cut it out of their lines. And that happened in sophisticated New-York!—Los Angeles Examiner.

The more absolute the silence after that one, the greater the sophistication, is our story.—From the New-Yorker.

The Voice of the Movie Fan

An Answer to an Inquiry.

Dear Miss Tinée: I just recently saw Richard Barthelmess in the "Noose," and after discussing the picture with friends who had seen it there have been heated arguments as to whether the mother knew that the boy was her son. I say no, because it seems that if she knew he was her son she wouldn't have waited until the last minute to save him, regardless of the fact that her reputation was at stake.

We all agree to take your view in the matter, so if you will kindly print your answer for us in THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE we will appreciate it very much.

Yours very truly,
M. A.

Editor's Note: No, she did not know he was her son. She just knew she was greatly drawn to him and that the thought of his death was insupportable to her. You're welcome.

Defending a Favorite Actor.

My Dear Mae: This is in answer to "Ann" in THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE of March 18. What's the matter with her, anyway? If she doesn't like Fred Thomson, why go to see him? She should have known what kind of a picture "Jesse James" was. I have no patience with any one who does not like a certain actor or actress and then goes to see that person, because they always knock them.

As far as I'm concerned, Fred Thomson is one of my favorite movie actors. Regarding "Jesse James," I do not recall him shooting any one, except where he shot his way out of the trap into which his cousin brought him, and then he didn't kill any one, just wounded him enough to make his getaway.

Well, Mae, I don't write often, but then when I do it is only to defend one of my favorites that somebody has been knocking. FLO.

Editor's Notes—When in woe—call on Flo!

We Need Films Like This.

Dear Madam: In the last week's issue of THE CHICAGO SUNDAY TRIBUNE, in the section dedicated to the Voice of the Fan, there is a certain G. C. C. B., if I remember correctly who seems quite prejudiced against "What Price Glory."

It is, it seems, the trend of the age to omit from one's life the thought or portrayal of anything honestly and ghastly enough human, for such this photoplay was—absolutely truthful, the cruelty, wonder, and glory of war personified.

In the estimation of the writer, it was a wonderful spectacle and a war drama which should have been seen by young and old alike. At the time the writer saw this picture she was inspired and thrilled by the ordeals our boys went through so that we, over here, might partake of the benefits of the struggle, and resolved to try to live her life a little better so that their sacrifice might not be in vain.

Seemingly I was not alone in my resolution. In the theater in which I saw the picture there was an elderly woman beside me who cried during the unreeling of the film. I tried to pacify her, but she wanted to cry and she said she was happy, for she thought her boy was mere cannon fodder, whereas now she was proud he left life while enshrouded in the glory and horror of war.

For my sake, please tell your correspondent that we occasionally want to see such photoplays, if only to make us realize how lucky we are in this happy environment and to remind us to pray a little for the boys who gave their all.

Yours very truly,
F. G. P.

Editor's Note: I will let YOU tell my correspondent, F. G. P.

Praise for Mary's New Film.

Dear Miss Tinée: I did not read your review on "My Best Girl," but I would like to express my opinion about it. I think that it is Mary Pickford's best film in a long time. At least, I enjoyed it the most. It has humor and pathos, romance, and tragedy.

Mary's acting was fine in the "kitchen" scene, where she tries to convince "Joe" that she is a gold digger. It was nice for a change to see her having a real love affair instead of throwing pots and pans.

In other words, I liked it because it was different from Miss Pickford's regular films.

Buddy Rogers was great, too,
Sincerely yours,
ANN W.

Editor's Note: It is a nice picture!

'Gadfly Pen' Stirs Hollywood

By Rosalind Shaffer

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—[Special Correspondence.]—Jim Tully, who, at one time or another, and in various publications, has taken many of Hollywood's famous down-the-line and given them plenty, has been the central figure in some dramatic episodes.

One portion of Hollywood has resented Tully's writings. Another portion entertains him. Another circle cannot curb its vehement words about things he has written. Under Mr. Tully's dexterous pen, some assert, a little smudge on the ankle has seemed, in print, a foot of clay.

One magazine article from the same authorship as "Beggars of Life" recently aroused John Gilbert. The article mentioned Gilbert's acting, his ambitions, his ancestry, his looks, his personality, and his pictures. A shaft that sank into John's sensibilities referred to the actor as "A romantic prop upon which Miss Greta Garbo hung an American reputation."

His Ego Suffers.

In view of the sentimental friendship between the screen lovers, the blow landed in Gilbert's ego. The bitterness with which John received such an article was communicated to others of his studio and circle of friends. Foremost among his well wishers is a young woman with an important job on the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer lot. Not a romantic matter, she is Gilbert's good friend as she is a good friend to others. Katherine saw the article and knew that John would be feeling badly. Leaving her own office in search of him, she burst out: "John, I think the writer of such things is a so-and-so."

Next morning a huge package, large as the coffins Lon Chaney is using in his next thriller, arrived at Katherine's home. Opened, the mysterious bale revealed a perfect avalanche of gorgeous roses. Buried beneath the fragrance was a small card with this legend: "All my appreciation for your sweet words," signed "John Gilbert."

Profit in Animal Actors.

The law of supply and demand has produced a queer business in Hollywood. It makes a very comfortable income for its originators, two young British war veterans named Stafford Breckensdale and Archie Breckensdale. The venture is a small casting office which originated with a tiny bird store on Main street nine years ago. Now the brothers will produce anything from an elephant to a bedbug trained to work before the camera.

Consistent wage earners for them are "Chutie," a trained Peke who earns $150 a week when he works, and "Roger," a buzzard who flies and lights again or flaps his wings at command. "Oscar," a trained canary, brings in a pay envelope of a dollar and a half a day, while Hollywood's only tame black rats fetch $1 each, daily. Trained ravens are used often. A trained deer, alligators, 120 dogs, and many other things round out an enviable collection.

The brothers have a good time. It consists of furnishing thrills for companies which wish closeups of a snake attacking a man. The brothers will take a snake bite at $50 a bite from their own snakes whose fangs have been medicated.

Engagement Is Rumored.

Sue Carrol [Mrs. Allan Keefer] and Nick Stuart, a young Roumanian who is being groomed for leading rôles by the Fox studio, are being questioned by their friends as to the imminence of an engagement announcement. Sue refuses to answer seriously. She has not as yet obtained her final divorce from Keefer, a Chicago business man.

She and Stuart are flying daily at Clover field in "The Air Circus." Sue has handled a plane in the air via dual control, as have David Rollins and Arthur Lake, who are other principals in the cast.

A mock combat was staged by two planes with Dick Grace and Leo Nomis as pilots. A crash was planned also, but high winds from the sea made it unsafe for the aviators to attempt it and they spent the day maneuvering in combat tactics with three other planes.

Romance on the Rocks.

Alice White and Dick Grace, stunt aviator, announced their engagement not long ago. In the last two weeks rumor has been that all was not well with the engagement. Alice gave her version when she appeared on Sunset boulevard considerably ruffled about a supposed altercation with her sweetheart and told a friend that she really was silly to have thought of marrying and that she had since decided to think it over for quite a while before she assumed any nuptialties.

Dick Grace was at the flying field waiting to go up when he was asked how things stood. He said, "You'll have to see Alice about that."

News of Films and Players.

While Estelle Taylor and her husband, Jack Dempsey, are in New York, Estelle's sister, Helen Taylor White, is making rapid strides toward regaining her health at Hollywood hospital. Mrs. White incurred severe burns recently in a mysterious gas explosion in her home. She is now allowed to have visitors.

Nina Romano, wife of Lou Tellegen, has plans to head her own producing unit soon. The statuesque dark eyed beauty has just completed a rôle in "Hell's Angels" for United Artist's release, her first picture work of consequence in some years.

"TEA FOR TWO"

MISS GLADYCE JAMES

She's to be Nanette in today's revival by the Dudley Players, out in the Kedzie Theater, or "No! No, Nanette!" a delightful memory of four years ago. . . . And Miss James spells Gladys the way it is spelled under the picture.

$5 for War Letters

Tears on His Freckles.

It was my first morning on duty at evacuation hospital No. 1. I followed meekly behind the chief nurse, a militant figure of a woman, trying to look as intelligent as possible.

Pausing before a bed inclosed by screens, she informed me this was an S. I. W. patient awaiting G. C. M.

"Do not allow the other patients to associate with him."

I was still trying to decipher the meaning of these mysterious letters when I was called to assist the surgeon in his daily dressings. Behind the screens was revealed a small, red-haired chap of about 18, freckled under his pallor and shy.

His right arm ended in a gangrenous stump. A groan he could not repress was wrung from "Red" as the dressing proceeded, and the doctor's curt rejoinder that it must have hurt more than that when he did it was sufficient enlightenment. The surgeon hurried to the next cot and I stayed for a minute under pretext of arranging the covers, giving "Red" a friendly pat as I did so. This unexpected tenderness caused the tears to well up in his eyes, and my heart contracted quickly as I thought of a little brother who was "somewhere in France" and wondered how it fared with him.

At mealtimes I generally managed an extra dainty for "Red's" tray, which caused an understanding grin to appear on the faces of the ward men. Although I had no desire to break rules, I could not fail to note other chaps slipping in and out behind the screened bed, and I really believe they established a sort of lookout in case some other person should come into the ward during my time on duty.

One summer afternoon I entered the ward to find the shrouding screens missing. The uncurtained room was filled with sunlight, which seemed to form a sort of halo around a tired little head, but "Red" was sound asleep. I tiptoed softly over to his corner, and my astonished eyes fell upon a croix de guerre that had been pinned to his empty sleeve.

The boys were all agog to tell me the strange news. Two important French generals had visited the ward that morning. "Red's" C. M. had proved that, while on sentry duty, "Red" had heard an approaching party and, in the act of flinging a hand grenade among them, had recognized our own men and had held the deadly thing in his hand rather than injure some one by pitching it aside.

"Red" had been kissed first on one cheek and then the other by every Frenchman in the crowd, and, knowing what a shy chap he was, I could understand why his cheeks were stained with tears even in his sleep.

Best Movies

Barrie's "Peter Pan."

The first day I read this column I wanted to sit right down and write about "Peter Pan." Now I can add little to what H. G. has written, except to say that I really believe there has never been a picture so enjoyed by old and young alike and it isn't easy to find a picture like that. Every one I ever spoke to about it felt as I do and many had gone to see it more than once.

I was so well pleased that I made a speech about it at the regular meeting of the club I belong to and must have been enthusiastic, as I was loudly applauded. I hope it will be repeated some time and it cannot come too soon.

Betty Bronson was the one who played Peter Pan and it was the making of her.

D. H.

Simple Beauty.

"The Shepherd of the Hills" is a picture that is not easily forgotten. It makes one realize that faith is really everything. In these busy, hustling days people pour into the theaters nearly every week and how many pictures impress them? But pictures like "The Shepherd of the Hills" create in one a feeling for finer things.

Alec Francis plays a wonderful part, while the little boy's part was really great. How he loved God's friends—animals and the more simple things of life.

Children would like the picture because of the litite boy's acting; young people because of the simple love affair it holds; older people because of the difference of the two grandfathers. Which was the more wonderful one? It is hard to say.

Baptists of the Baptist northern convention are in the last days of trying to exceed the goal of last year's giving to foreign missions and to reap the benefit of a conditional gift of $250,000 offered by John D Rockefeller Jr. Mr. Rockefeller gave $250,000 outright and then said he would give dollar for dollar increase over the offerings of last year by the churches, so that if the churches raise $250,000 more than they did last year, they will have in their treasury an increase of $500,000. This is the last Sunday before the ending of the fiscal year. Reports from Illinois and from the church at large already indicate increased giving and it is hoped that the final rally will send the amount far enough over the goal to make secure Mr. Rockefeller's total gift. If the experiment is successful this year, Mr. Rockefeller has promised to repeat his offer for next year.

The Essex Community church will dedicate today a $100,000 building at 74th street and Blackstone avenue. The pastor, the Rev. John Ashworth Gardner, will preach in the morning. Morgan Williams will preach at 8 p. m. on the subject "Our Distinguishing Mark." At 11 a. m. the Rev. Edward G. Schutz, district superintendent, will preach. The Rt. Rev. Bernard J. Sheil, D. D., chancellor of the archdiocese of Chicago and recently honored with the title of monsignor, will be elevated to the episcopacy on Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock at the Cathedral of the Holy Name, North State and East Superior streets. His title will be Titular Bishop of Pege and Bishop Auxiliary of Chicago. The consecration will be conducted by His Eminence George Cardinal Mundelein, archbishop of Chicago, assisted by the Rt. Rev. Edmund M. Dunne, D. D., Bishop of Peoria, and the Rt. Rev. Edward F. Hoban, D. D., bishop designate of Rockford. The sermon will be delivered by the Rev. William J. Bergen, C. S. V. In anticipation of the consecration on Tuesday, our picture shows the honored prelate in the full robes of a bishop.

Bishop Designate Sheil was born forty years ago in Chicago. He was educated at St. Viator college and seminary, where he is to be honored by a reception on June 5. He was ordained priest at the Cathedral of the Holy Name in 1910. His first assignment was St. Mel's church. During the world war he was chaplain at the Great Lakes Naval station, where he served for two years and was commended for his tireless work, especially during the influenza epidemic. Following the world war he was assigned to the Holy Name Cathedral, where he remained as an assistant, until his appointment as chancellor in 1924. He was treasurer of the international Eucharistic congress held in Chicago in 1926. He accompanied Cardinal Mundelein to Rome when his eminence was raised to membership in the sacred college of cardinals. He again accompanied his eminence in his recent trip to Rome. On both occasions he was given special honors by his holiness the pope.

Grace Episcopal church, formerly located on Wabash avenue, near the present Coliseum, will lay the cornerstone of its new building costing $150,000 this afternoon at 3:30. Bishop Charles P. Anderson will lay the stone and many of the Episcopal clergy of the city will be present. The new church is located immediately south of the new portion of St. Luke's hospital, facing on Indiana avenue. Access to the church will be afforded directly from the hospital. On the second floor there will be a gallery for the use of patients in wheel chairs, to be known as the William Gold and Lydia B. Hibbard Memorial. William E. Johnson has given the altar in memory of his wife. The pulpit and chancel screen will be memorials to the late Dr. William Otis Waters, for 25 years rector of the parish.

The Rev. David Holmes is the present rector of the parish and also chaplain of St. Luke's hospital. Grace church for many years was an important family church. Thirty years ago the parish established St. Luke's hospital. The present connection of the church and hospital is therefore significant.

The Very Rev. Robert S. Chalmers, dean of St. Matthew's cathedral, Dallas, Tex., will address the South Side Church School institute of the Episcopal church Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock at the Church of the Redeemer, 56th street and Blackstone avenue. A dinner will precede the address.

Did you put your clock one hour ahead ahead last night? Today begins the observance of daylight saving and unless you recognize the fact, you will be one hour late to church. Watch your step!

A conference of Walther League Educational Secretaries of North Illinois will be held at the Mount Olive Evangelical Lutheran church, Tripp avenue and Byron street, this afternoon at 3 o'clock and continuing through the evening. The conference will be under the leadership of the North Illinois Educational committee, of which the Rev. B. H. Hemmeter, pastor of the Mount Olive church, is chairman and the Rev. E. Frenk of Sycamore is secretary. Dr. P. E. Kretzmann of the department of religious education, Concordia seminary, St. Louis, Mo., will be present and will preach the inspirational sermon at 8 p. m. The Rev. C. Kurth, district president, Joliet, Ill., and the Rev. J. M. Bailey, International Educational secretary, will also take part.

The Rev. T. Ferrier Hulme, D. D., of Bristol, England, will preach this morning at the First Methodist Episcopal church, Chicago temple, Clark and Washington streets, at 10:45. Dr. Hulme is ex-president of the Wesleyan Methodist church of Great Britain and is the fraternal delegate of this church to the general conference of the Methodist Episcopal church which begins Tuesday morning in Kansas City, Mo. He has the distinction of being one of only a half dozen Wesleyan ministers to preach in an Anglican cathedral. While here Dr. Hulme is the guest of Dr. John Thompson, pastor of the First church.

Mrs. Edward L. Ryerson has just given $30,000 to the Episcopal Church of the Holy Spirit, Lake Forest, as a memorial to the late Mr. Ryerson for the purpose of paying off the debt on the new parish house, completed two years ago at a cost of $100,000. Mr. Ryerson left $50,000 for St. James' church, Cass and Huron streets, in his will. The Ryerson family attended the Lake Forest parish during the summer months.

Jewish Young People are to furnish the program this evening at the convention of the United Synagogue of America at the Stevens hotel. Provision has been made for 500 young people, representing more than twenty junior organizations. Persons affiliated with the Young People's league through local clubs are also invited.

The following is the program: Opening, George Schatz, chairman midwest branch Y. P. L.; greeting, Herber, J. Roedert president national Y. P. L., "Why the Y. P. L.", Rabbi Charles Sydney, vice president Y. P. L.; symposium, "What Can Our Synagogues Do for Jewish Youth?" "What Can Our Jewish Youth Do for Synagogues?" "Y. P. L. Influence on Jewish Youth," Rabbi Norman Salitt. The officers are: George M. Schatz, Miss E. Abrams, Miss F. Gelbspan, Irving Freedman.

The Illinois conference of the Augustana Lutheran synod is engaged in a campaign to raise $30,000 to supplement $70,000 already secured. A total fund of $500,000 is the goal. The purpose of the fund is the establishment of new congregations in communities where they are most needed. The Rev. Frederick Nordquist of Porter, Ind., is in charge of the immediate campaign.

The Episcopal Young Peoples' association of Chicago will give an entertainment at the Drake on Friday evening for the purpose of raising funds for a Chicago cathedral. They have already contributed more than $5,000 to the cathedral fund. Dr. Duncan H. Browne of St. James church is counsellor for the group, and David E. Evans is president of the association.

The Rev. H. L. McLendon will become pastor this week of the Covenant Baptist church, Normal boulevard and 60th place. The Rev. W. W. Chandler, former pastor, has gone to the Glen Ellyn Baptist church. Dr. J. W. Weddell has been acting pastor during the interim.

The Rev. William Tullberg will speak today at 4:30 p. m. at St. Luke's Episcopal church, Evanston, on the subject, "The History of St. Ansgarius Swedish Episcopal church, Chicago, from 1848 up to the Present time." The Swedish congregation is outgrowing its little chapel at 5648 Lincoln avenue and hopes to have a new church building this fall.

Bethany Presbyterian church, Humboldt boulevard near Cortland street, will celebrate today its fortieth anniversary. The Rev. William J. Ohan, the pastor, will preach an historical sermon this morning and this evening one of Bethany's young men, Samuel S. Isa, a nephew of the pastor, will be ordained to the ministry. On Wednesday evening the anniversary banquet will be given. The church has a membership of 580, the largest in its history.

The Rev. David Rhys Williams will preach his farewell sermon as pastor of the Third Unitarian church, Austin, this morning at 11 o'clock. He has accepted a call to the First Unitarian church, Rochester, N. Y., one of the most important churches in the denomination.

The Chicago Church federation has appointed the following ministers and laymen to serve on the world's fair committee: The Rev. Charles W. Gilkey, D. D., the Rev. Joshua Oden, D. D., the Rev. Albert W. Palmer, D. D., Charles M. Thomson, George W. Dixon, and Walter R. Mee.

"Religion Today 1928" is being appreciated in many quarters but an article printed in the Fayette, Ia., local paper shows that the Rev. John D. Clinton, pastor of the church attended by many of the students of the Upper Iowa university, is taking the matter seriously. On each Sunday evening he comments on the ideas expressed in one editorial he selects, giving his own text. Moreover, he has ordered a large consignment of the books for distribution to the congregation so that, as he says, they may make a study of the thoughts of leading ministers and laymen. Go thou and do likewise.

The Rev. Herbert W. Prince of Lake Forest, chairman of the local committee which is raising funds for the erection of a Chicago building at St. Paul's Negro school, Lawrenceville, Va., announces that $32,000 has been raised of the $35,000 needed. Julius Rosenwald contributed $10,000.

The Irving Park Lutheran church, Belle Plaine and Harding avenues, will begin today at 11 a. m. a series of four confirmation services. The class will give in a public review an account of the course of instruction which it has received during the past months. Next Sunday the confirmation rites will take place under the direction of the pastor, the Rev. Joshua Oden, D. D.

The Rev. Phillip W. McDonald of St. Martin's church, Austin, will celebrate the mass and preach at the 11 o'clock service at the Cathedral Shelter, Washington boulevard and North Peoria street. The Rev. David E. Gibson is the priest in charge.

St. Luke's English Lutheran church, Park Ridge, Ill., the Rev. Walter D. Spangler, pastor, will begin tomorrow a campaign to raise a fund of $30,000 for a new church building. Dr. David A. Davy, superintendent of the Inner Mission society of the Chicago area, will direct the campaign. More than fifty volunteer workers will assist. Twenty thousand dollars was raised more than a year ago. The Rev. Mr. Spangler has been pastor since the organization of the church in 1915.

The speaker this evening at 8 o'clock at the Sunday Evening club, Orchestra hall, will be the Rev. T. Ferrier Hulme, D. D., LL. D., on the subject, "The New Age." Dr. Hulme is a distinguished leader of the Wesleyan Methodist church of Great Britain and will represent his church at the General conference of the Methodist Episcopal church. Dr. Albert W. Palmer, Oak Park, will give at 7 o'clock the final Bible talk in the series, "Some Typical Saints and Sinners." Elmer T. Stevens will act as chairman and Rush C. Butler will have a part in the program.

The Chicago Fundamentals Ministers' union will meet in the First Congregational church of Cicero, 52d avenue and 24th street. The sessions will be at 3 p. m., supper at 6 p. m. and the closing address at 8 p. m. by Dr. W. B. Riley, Minneapolis, Minn., president of the World's Christian Fundamentals association.

My Greatest Thrill

Write and tell us about the greatest thrill you ever experienced, and if we print your letter we'll pay you $1. Make your letters short and snappy. Address them to "Greatest Thrill" Editor, The Chicago Tribune.

Chills and Thrills.

Last summer when my friend and I were at a carnival we came upon a tent marked "A Death House." We bought our tickets and went inside. As we walked down a dark hall we felt spider webs on us, which gave us a clammy feeling. As we approached some steps we felt ourselves slipping into a dark hole. However, our feet soon touched another floor which also proved to be a hall, dimly lit. I almost screamed as I saw a bunch of grimy snakes coiled on the floor. As we turned a corner we came upon some Indians, stirring something in a pot over a fire. What I saw a moment later almost made me faint with fright, for close to the fire was a coffin with a dead body in it. We turned to shut the sight from our eyes and saw a door which proved to be an exit.

I had never experienced anything so harrowing in my life. D. S.

Close to Danger.

My most thrilling experience happened on April 9, 1928. I was coming back from the drug store and I had to pass an alley where trucks and cars run often. Just as I started to go across the alley a truck started out. I was so frightened that I stopped suddenly and slipped, hitting the side of the front wheel and fender.

You can be assured that that was a thrilling experience and that I look before I cross now. B. B.

Once Is Enough.

The biggest thrill I ever had was in Ireland in 1921, during the black and tan régime there. I was walking up College green one afternoon when the streets were crowded with people coming home from work. I heard a revolver shot and, looking around, saw a man lying dead about 30 or 40 yards behind.

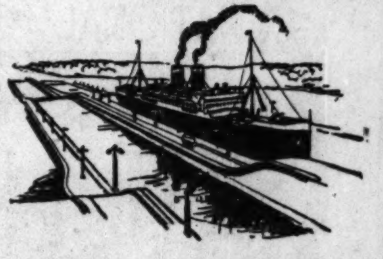
I had on a heavy coat with large military pockets, which were then fashionable. Suddenly, in the thick of the crowd, I felt a weight in my right hand pocket. I thought some one was picking my pocket. I put in my hand to find a revolver. I knew by the feel of it what it was.

In almost a second police and black and tans drew a circle, held up all traffic, and the order "Hands up!" went around.

My first thought was to hand over my unwelcome present to the policeman on duty, but I knew too well what that would mean, so I held on to it, marched past the black and tans with my hands up with hundreds of others. But luck was with me. Being a woman, the tans let me pass on as searched. Ye gods, I never want to have a thrill like that again! F. C.

through the wonderful PANAMA CANAL
Engineering marvel of the world

en route to CALIFORNIA via HAVANA



NO trip of similar length holds the thrills and the striking grandeur of the transit of Panama through the Canal. Here, man has created the engineering wonder of the world and framed it in scenes of rare beauty and charm. A delightfully equable climate prevails, varying only 2 degrees between winter and summer averages.

A call at Havana en route offers another interesting divertisement on the famous Recreation Route.

Canadians Hold Folk Song Festival

MEDIEVAL music will be a feature of the Canadian folksong festival in Quebec May 24 to 26 under the direction of Dr. Marius Barbeau of the Victoria National museum and Harold Eustace Key, music director of the Canadian Pacific Railway, the high spot of the festival being the revival of the thirteenth century comic opera, "Le Jeu de Robin et Marion," composed by the troubadour Adam de la Halle.

The opera will be directed by Wilfred Pelletier, assistant conductor at the Metropolitan Opera house, and Robin will be sung by Armand Tokatyan, tenor of the Metropolitan. Others in the cast will be Rodolphe Plamondon, tenor of the Paris Opera; Camille Bernard, pupil of Yvette Guilbert; Cedia Brault, formerly of the Boston Opera, Pierre Pelletier of the 1926 Naples Opera and Ulysse Paquin, formerly of the Montreal Opera company.

Ballad Opera a Feature.

Jean Beck, professor at the University of Pennsylvania and authority on troubadour music, has reconstructed the harmonies from the old manuscripts, which he discovered. Another feature of the festival will be the ballad opera, "L'Oedre du Bontemps," named after the society of good cheer founded by Champlain at Port Royal, in which Leon Rothier of the Metropolitan Opera will sing a leading rôle. Other singers will be J. Campbell McInnes, one of the American Opera company directors, and Rodolphe Plamondon.

Other artists to appear at the evening performances in the Auditorium, Quebec's new theater, and at the matinees in the Chateau Frontenac include Juliette Gaultier de la Verendrye, who specializes in Canadian folksongs, including those of the French-Canadian, Eskimo and Indian origin; Jeanne Dusseau, contralto of the Chicago Opera; Charles Marchand, interpreter of French-Canadian chansons, with his Bytown Troubadours in their homespun checks of Canadian sashes; Eric DeLamarter, associate director of the Chicago Symphony orchestra, who will conduct the prize winning orchestral suite; Victor Brault, popular singer of French-Canadian folksongs, and the Hart House quartet, the most famous chamber music group in all Canada.

Habitant Artists.

Among the habitant artists will be the humorous Phileas Bedard, Vincent Ferrier de Repentigny, with his repertory of 400 songs learned from the lips of his mother as she sang them at her spinning wheel; Johnny Boivin, champion violonneux of Quebec, and Jacques Garneau, who remains champion dancer of Quebec in spite of his sixty years.

Arthur Cleland Lloyd, 20 years old and student of the piano in New York under Harold Bauer, has just won the major prize of $1,000 in the E. W. Beatty competition for musical composition based on French Canadian folk melodies in connection with the folksong festival. Mr. Lloyd's orchestral suite, together with the other winning compositions, will be first performed at the festival.

Mr. Lloyd studied music first in his native city of Vancouver and under Felix Borowski in Chicago before coming to New York.

Prizes totaling more than $3,000 will be shortly distributed by the judges, to whom all manuscripts were submitted anonymously, the composers' identity being contained in sealed envelopes. These envelopes were opened by Mr. Beatty personally and awards given on a majority vote of the judges, there being only one unanimous decision—namely: that for the winner in arrangements for male voices.

The decision on cantatas for which a prize of $1,000 was offered has not yet been made, as all the judges have not yet rendered their verdict on this group.

List of Winners.

The list of winners follows:

$1,000 for orchestral suite—open to all comers. Winner, Arthur Cleland Lloyd, born Vancouver, B. C., 1908.

$500 for orchestral suite for string quartet—open to all comers. Winner, George Bowles of Winnipeg—born in Quebec.

$250 for arrangements for male voices confined to Canadian composers. Winner by unanimous decision, Ernest MacMillan, principal of the Toronto Conservatory of Music.

$250 for arrangement for mixed voices—confined to Canadian composers; prize divided in proportion of $150 and $100 respectively between Alfred E. Whitehead, Montreal, and Irvin Cooper, Montreal.

Supplementing the above mentioned prizes, Mr. Beatty has authorized special prizes to competitors recommended by judges for honorable mention—namely:

$100 to George Bowles, Winnipeg, for orchestral suite.

$100 to Miss Wyatt Fergeter of Bournemouth, England, for suite for string quartet.

$100 to Pierre Gautier, Ottawa, for group of four chansons arranged for male voices, which did not conform strictly to the terms of the competition, but were recommended for some award.

Noted Judges.

The judges in this competition were Paul Vidal, professor at the Paris Conservatoire; Sir Hugh Allen, principal of the Royal College of Music, London; Dr. R. Vaughan Williams, distinguished British composer; Eric DeLamarter, associate conductor of the Chicago Symphony orchestra, and Achille Fortier, leading French-Canadian composer.

The competition excited widespread interest, and numerous compositions were submitted from Hungary, Denmark, England and the United States, as well as from al parts of Canada.

Beans.

Willie entered the parlor where his sister was entertaining Mr. Sapleigh. He walked straight up to the caller and held out his hand, in the open palm of which were a half dozen small white objects.

"What's them?" he tersely said to Mr. Sapleigh.

"Why, those are beans," answered Mr. Sapleigh without hesitation.

"See, sis, he does know 'em," said Willie to his sister. "You told ma last night after he left that he didn't!"

She's now in the rôle of Frieda in "Four Walls"; and the historian of that entertainment says that, in taking over the work Miss Jeanne Greene first had in the Adelphi, Miss Day is resuming a rôle she originated. . . . Miss Day may be recalled by theatergoers of 1925-'26 as the girl with the cough in "The Dove."

Marmeins Start Dance Art Society

By Alfred Frankenstein.

NEW YORK, April 28.—[Special Correspondence.]—New York is a town full of dancers. Singers of songs and players of instruments we have in abundance, but their activity is proportionately no greater than that in other communities. The offerings of the dancers are proportionately far more than the dance exhibitions of other cities.

In accordance with the customs of the era, the writer has been invited to his share of these shows. He has seen many young ladies set themselves in various postures while music played. They have all been individual performances and they have all been extraordinary only in their resemblance to each other. It is as if all the instrumentalists of the city had decided to become soloists, and orchestras were thereby rendered impossible.

Something had to be done about this. Something was done. It is called the Dance Art society. Its founders and backers are the sisters Marmein. They have gathered what should become a permanent choreographic group and the prospect looks toward something quite different from "dance moods," "plastic interpretations" and the other phrases of the past season.

Modern and Original.

The three Marmeins have brains. They have learned that to be modern in a stage production one does not have to be tragic, or even wistful. They have learned also that pictures of skyscrapers and gas tanks have been done before. Thus they have worked out a piece called "New York architecture" in which they dress in Egyptian costume, and which employs not a single visual suggestion of steel except the arms of the dancers. Another sketch deals with the machinery of an industrial plant, the dancers armored in shining iron, working out the speedy interlock of cogs and belts with the greatest of good humor.

Other offerings concerned themselves with electricity, Aztec worship, and even geology. In short, the Marmeins hold the promise of modernity plus complete originality—an all too rare combination.

Featuring Young Americans.

Not as much can be said for the inaugural of another modern organization. The composers, Aaron Copland and Roger Sessions, have joined forces to promote a series of concerts of the works of young American musicians. Their first bill brought to hearing pieces by Theodore Chanler, Walter Piston, Carlos Chavez, and Virgil Thomson.

The short, snappy, hard and cold sonata and sonatinas by Chavez sounded much like slight pieces that might be dashed off between meals by a Honegger or a Hindemith. Thomson's song, "Five Phrases from the Song of Solomon," consisted of a beautiful vocal line accompanied in three of the "Phrases" by a gong, in one by a pair of cymbals, in one by a Chinese box. The other works are cause for weeping and rending of garments.

The second of the Copland sessions, as the concerts will inevitably be called, due May 8, will bring to New York a group of preludes by Ruth Crawford of Chicago.

Lace and Chiffon Fashion Successful Tea and Dinner Frocks, $40

At the most fashionable teas and dinners the vogue for lace and chiffon is pre-eminent . . . because it is so flattering, so feminine in its cobwebby loveliness. Little wonder society is turning out en masse in either, for so much individuality can be expressed in a single mode.

The dinner gown at the left divides its chic between lace and chiffon, and adds a pair of detachable sleeves that convert it to a very graceful afternoon mode . . . in black, beige, bronze.

The afternoon model at the right, entirely of lace, introduces the new Paris bronze and the new circular drape caught up at the side is one of the distinguishing notes in the mode.

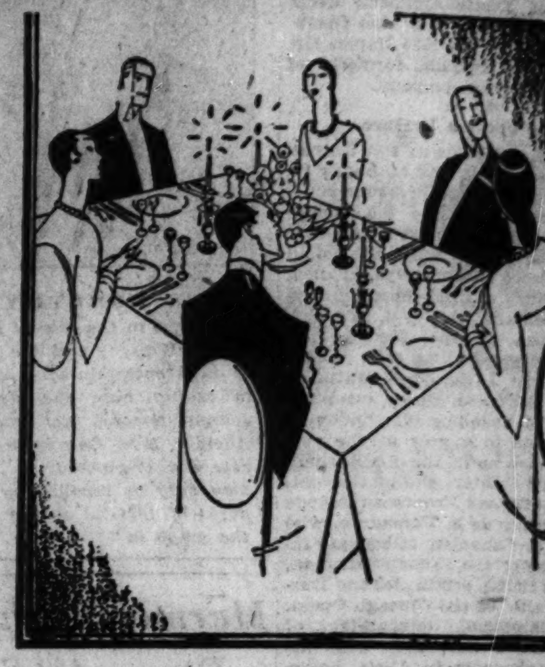
Tables will be set to illustrate both the smart, modern use of pastel tinted linen damask as a foil for colored crystal and china, as well as the classic beauty of fine white linen damask.



Miss Morris will speak on "The Successful Hostess," "Altars of Hospitality," "Color Psychology in Entertainment," and kindred subjects. "The Gracious Art of Entertaining," "The Antiquity and Romance of Linen," "What the Well-Dressed Table Will Wear," "The Art of Dining."

The Tweed Coat Changes Its Lines and Increases Its Chic, $95

No longer is tweed simply confined to tailored lines . . . it has smartly broadened its scope and lends itself to femininity with much grace and eclat. The chic woman now chooses a tweed coat not only for sports but for afternoon wear as well, for tweed is decidedly smart.

At the left . . . a cape model of a fine imported tweed shows its flare for individuality in the way the cape flares about the sleeve and curves down to the hem in the back . . . in beige, gray and roseglow.

At the right . . . quite a simple but luxurious mode of imported blanket tweed in blended roseglow tones . . . a snug little collar of natural wolf declares this the ideal motor coat for spring.

Mme. X. Discovers Pioneer Foe of the Mosquito

Dr. W. J. Matheson Antedates Work of Gen. Goethals

By Mme. X.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—One of the most worth while and interesting people that I met in the south was Dr. William J. Matheson of Miami and Huntington township, Long Island. Not only is he an intelligent and well read mortal, but he has the great distinction of being the original pioneer in the mosquito extermination business, antedating even those famous crusaders, Gen. Goethals and Dr. Gorgas, of Panama fame.

Nearly thirty years ago Dr. Matheson took up his summer abode near Oyster Bay, and found himself in a community rendered both unhappy and ill for two months in the summer by an inescapable pest of mosquitoes. Land dropped in value. People who came there sold out at a loss and betook themselves to less stricken neighborhoods, and it looked as if the country thereabouts would become a wilderness habitable only by pachyderms of a surface density impenetrable by those industrious anopheli and kindred species.

To this menaced district came Dr. Matheson. His keen mind saw the predicament, but was undaunted by it. He studied these insects; found out their habits and habitats; learned that it was only under certain conditions that they flourished, and, furthermore, came to the conclusion that these conditions were perfectly accessible to change and extinction.

An Interesting Discovery.

He sent a band of young scientists to study the lay of the land and to map out the districts where this pestiferous stinger most abounded. He sent out other bands of young medical students to make a similar scrutiny of the health conditions that prevailed thereabouts and to make maps indicating the maladies and general health of the inhabitants. When these two sets of maps were brought to him he laid one on top of the other and found that the parts of the region where malaria, fever and ague and similar illnesses were most prevalent coincided almost exactly with those haunted by mosquitoes.

Proceeding from this discovery he secured co-operation of a few far seeing residents of that part of the country and raised a sufficient sum of money to enable him to go ahead and arouse the entire district to fight the made, hundreds of them, to be distribmade, hundreds of them, to be distriuted throughout that part of Long Island to enable the inhabitants to organize a war to the death on the mosquitoes.

Then stepped in that human element which, since the beginning of time, has hampered the progress of mankind, the conservatives, they sometimes call themselves. At any rate, they are the folk who instinctively range themselves against any change whose promise of betterment they cannot see, or which threatens some of their interests.

In this case it was chiefly the dealers in real estate, who claimed that their livelihood and the property in which they dealt was menaced by this campaign. It is not the first time obstacles have been placed in the way of progress. Probably, Providence, which works in a mysterious way its wonders to perform, permits such restraining influences in order to prevent mankind from leaping with one great bound from the primeval ooze to perfect fruition and inheritance of this earth.

Bourke Cockran was prosecutor for these objectors and protectors of the mosquito. Paul Cravath defended Dr. Matheson and his intelligent cohorts. Justice is sometimes blind. The Matheson group lost. The carefully made maps were ordered destroyed. This was done.

The Work Went On.

How often in the history of mankind has science been so thwarted and hampered by benighted mortals! Nevertheless, Dr. Matheson was able to secure the adherence of enough of his intelligent neighbors to carry on privately his campaign of extermination, by attacking the mosquitoes in the early stages of their development with kerosene oil. Thorough searches were made for every scrap of stagnant water, whether in hidden pools, in slime covered and sluggish waterways, in gutters, in empty cans, in the secret places of the forests under shrubs and at the roots of trees. When it was possible these breeding places were drained or emptied, otherwise the deadly film of oil was spread over the surfaces. No group of people had more reason for being grateful for this wise and successful service than those same property owners and real estate dealers who tried to head off the extermination of these mosquitoes. A prompt and enormous rise in land values followed this benign handling of the countryside's most menacing problem.

Not only did that part of Long Island profit by it, but our great enterprise, the building of the Panama canal, was made possible only by Dr. Matheson's having paved the way for a similar solution of a like and even more direful situation. His methods were studied and followed by those two great men, Goethals and Gorgas, whose names will forever be linked with the construction of this, one of the nation's most important engineering enterprises.

Nearer Home.

By the way, isn't it about time for this battle, started in and around Chicago last year, to be set going again for this coming summer's welfare and comfort? It is a fine opportunity for the new mayors elected this spring in various of our outlying suburbs to make great names for themselves as successful eradicators of the countryside's greatest pest. On the coats of arms of these benefactors of their kind, if we have a mosquitoless summer, ought to be inscribed the anopheles in catena, or in chains. Those who do nothing to abolish this anti-social insect should bear on their shields the

NEW YORK SOCIETY

Gotham Society, in Large Numbers, Sees Spring Races

By Nancy Randolph.

NEW YORK, April 28.—[Special Correspondence.] — This last week has brought forth much in the way of development of the spring season. To be sure, the United Hunts meet that took up two days of the week-end had a great appeal, and necessarily so, since Aqueduct, where the steeplechases were run is far from an attractive place. Compared to Belmont terminal, where the United Hunts used to hold forth, Aqueduct is dark and dismal. There is no lovely Turf and Field clubhouse—no splendid parklike ground. Only a bare grandstand, and a clubhouse that is part of it.

And yet how society did turn out! There was wind and dust on one of the days and cold on the other. But spring clothes were all about and notables even more apparent. Mrs. H. Denny Pierce and Mrs. Martin Brown Saportas were among the many who returned recently from the mid-southern resorts and put in an appearance at the United Hunts.

In the Limelight.

One couple there got no end of attention. This was Sarah Jane Sanford, daughter of John Sanford and sister of Gertrude and Stephen [Laddie] Sanford, who was escorted all about by none other than Monsieur Julien St. Charles Chaqueneau of Paris.

As every one knows, Chaqueneau was originally Julian Shakno of Brooklyn, and his marriage to Adelaide Kip Rhinelander came as a surprise to society and a shock to her family. For several years the Chaqueneaux have been living in France, where the change in the spelling of their name was evolved. For some time past, however, Adelaide has been in this country, and she is now at Reno awaiting the granting of her divorce.

This being Julian's first visit in a long time, he has made it a notable one by giving Sarah Jane Sanford a big rush. They go dancing together and to the races. Society is beginning to wonder whether or not Julian is not looking ahead to the time when he will be a bachelor once more. Certainly the Sanfords, if not as long on lineage as the Rhinelanders, are socially much more active, being, due to the children of the family, internationally known.

Startled England.

"Laddie" Sanford startled England by winning the Grand National with his horse Sergeant Murphy, and has since become well known there as a poloist.

"Laddie," incidentally, has been quite pally this last winter with "Jock" Whitney, son of Mrs. Payne Whitney and the late Payne Whitney. Together they made an airplane tour of the continent, and seemed to have had a most enjoyable time.

While "Jock" is yet but a lad, society was pleased this week to hear that henceforth the famous "Greentree stables" will be owned and conducted jointly by "Jock" and his mother. Jock, or John Hay Whitney, is one of the richest young men in New York and has a most likable disposition. The "Green stable" colors will be even more popular than ever with him at the helm.

Wearing the Royal Purple.

Mrs. Jerome Napoleon Bonaparte's foibles no longer startle New York. At the races last week, just prior to departing for Europe, she appeared in an ensemble of royal purple. While one might have thought the choice of color was merely coincidence, society knew better.

Since her marriage to the great-grandson of the king of Westphalia, Jerome Bonaparte, brother of the Little Corporal, Mrs. Bonaparte has sighed for her royal prerogatives. The choice of purple as a color scheme for her clothes is directly an outcome of the kingly cravings.

Prior to her marriage to Jerome Bonaparte Mrs. Bonaparte was firstly Blanche Pierce, and later Mrs. Harold Strebeigh. She divorced Mr. Strebeigh to almost immediately marry the descendant of kings. And she decided quite easily that having married the great-grandson of a king, who should be considered kingly himself, she was entitled to queenly honors.

Some years ago Blanche was utterly thrilled at the possibility of her husband becoming king of Albania. But nothing came of this, and she is forced to take out her queenly feelings in the wearing of the royal purple.

Charity Ball Imminent.

With the charity ball taking place on Wednesday the vast number of notables performing are being driven to rehearsals day and night. The affair at the garden will enlist the services of some two or three thousand people and every one who has the faintest right to be considered as a social possibility is in it.

In groups of ten, twenty, and more, the different members of the cast of the "Magic Carpet" pageant have been going over their work at all the hostelries in town. Lila Agnew Stewart is almost out of her mind with the rehearsals, and the trying on of her costumes is the word of the day.

All the debutantes have parts in the pageant. There is to be a "Follies" number, with Eleanor Hutton as chairman, and the "Follies" girls, including Hope Richardson, Betty Tailer, Ro[illegible] Bristow, Mildred Vander Poel, Virginia Chapin, Muriel Smith, Edith [illegible], Polly Brooks, and Beatrice Greenough.

The older girls and younger married women are also deep in preparation for the coming event on May 2. Among the women taking part are Mrs. Lawrence Copley Thaw, Mrs. Leonard Cox, Mrs. Martin Brown Saportas, Mrs. Edward F. Hutton, Mrs. Ira F. Warner, Mrs. Robert Stone, Mrs. James Russell Lowell, Mrs. Esmond P. O'Brien, Mrs. Clifford Vail Brokaw Jr., and Mrs. Vincent Hubbell.

As a benefit for the Judson Health center, the carnival will lend a fitting touch to what might be called the end of the indoor season.

Soon town will begin to become deserted once more. Villas are being opened at Newport and Southampton. In fact, all the Long Island resorts are waking up, and as soon as they do, the preparations will begin for the outdoor fêtes at Southampton, Roslyn, Quogue, Easthampton, and Bayshore.

anopheles rampant, and may they, these shiftless ones, get good and bitten!

As a resident of Lake Forest, the writer is putting all her bets on young A. B. Dick, that community's latest mayor. Junior, as his friends know him, has here a great opportunity for undying fame. A biteless summer would so redound to his credit that Lake Foresters would evermore cherish his name and fame. History would be writ with this summer of 1928 as a focal date. "Before the Dick summer" or "after the Dick summer" would be the way events would be chronicled. So here's hoping the soldiers of the army of fighters are already girding their loins and skirmishing about that lovely but pestiferous Skokie valley, breeding ground for so many millions of the summer's worst enemies!

One More Glimpse of the South.

Just one more glimpse of the south before this peripatetic pillar of politest piffle returns to the haunts of the beau monde that makes Chicago the center of its periphery. Nearly five weeks spent south of Mason and Dixon's line left one or two impressions of a more than passing intensity. The genial, kindly, easy going quality of the indigenous folk there is a pleasant thing for the wayfarer to meet. The daily pace is not so fierce, nor so rapid, as with us in the north, even in southern Florida, where business is supposed to be "humming."

The countryside is far from pretty, being flat and, owing to man's infernal industry, largely denuded of trees or foliage of any kind. Its palm trees, pines, and the ocean along which it lies are southern Florida's only claims to beauty, together, of course, with its delightful climate.

In Need of Paint.

One thing that the entire south seems to need is a couple of good and complete coats of paint. Were I in search of pelf and had I energy, I'd certainly take down there, not only a big carload of pigment, but of brushes and folk to dab it on. I did not see a single house or structure of any kind through the countrysides traversed going to Aiken, S. C., and thence to Palm Beach and Miami, Fla., that was not in direst need of paint.

Palm Beach itself, beloved haunt of the world's greatest aggregation of multi-millionaires, of course, was spick and span. Almost all its houses and business structures are of plaster, stucco, stone, or brick, and the exceptional ones of wood were agleam with fresh paint, but not so those homes and shops that adorn Aiken and other settlements in Georgia, and the two Carolinas, North and South, and the wayside stretching for miles and miles along the railways. It is evidently very poor form to have a look of fresh paint down there. Even if they were provided with pots and pots of it, I'm not sure that the inhabitants would take the trouble to put it on.

At Viscaya.

I must mention a visit paid to that most remarkable of all American places, Viscaya, the royal palace and its encircling gardens built by the late James Deering on the shore of the blue Atlantic at Cocoanut Grove, a suburb of Miami. Certainly nowhere else in this country is there such a remarkable combination of architectural splendor and stately garden design as this estate, nor do I remember its equal in Europe. The house itself is of Italian type, a more genial and charming kind of architecture than anything Spanish or France has produced. It is spacious, dignified and gay in aspect, with a beautiful portico, formerly entered through curtains that used to hang heedless of weather or sun. On the sea side of the mansion a delightful terrace hangs over the harbor created to be the water approach of the place.

Right opposite the steps that lead from the ocean to this terrace a great stucco caravel, high pooped and high prowed, rises from the water. It is such a craft as Ludwig of Bavaria might have conceived and ordered built. With poetic license, it is planted with thick shrubbery at either end. Around it lie the vivid pale green waters of the harbor embraced by curving walls, with an anchorage for a yacht at one end and at the other a lovely little pavilion, lined with a green trellis to serve as a tea house.

Out beyond lies the great Biscayne bay, for which the place is named b and v being interchangeable letters in Spanish. Far off on the horizon low lying and verdant isles are to be seen, while to the south and north the shores sweep away in a wide semi-circle.

The grounds are laid out most sumptuously with terraced and balustraded gardens, charming little temples and kiosks, exquisite bridges leaping over still and gentle waterways where the sighing tides rise and fall. Everywhere nature riots in extravagant growths of tropical and semi-tropical foliage and flora.

Sheltered from the World.

Tuneful and many hued birds live a lovely and sheltered existence there. Otherwise, of life there is little sign, though the place is well kept and orderly. But it is untenanted except by caretakers and has that almost haunted air characteristic of such well groomed solitudes. At every turn you expect to meet some one. From behind the shrubbery you imagine that eyes are peering at you. Whispers come from the little temples. Lying as it does along the highway that leads south from Miami, it is nevertheless completely sheltered from the passersby. Its closed iron gates set in high stone gate posts keep out any would-be visitor. The sturdy stone walls that line the roadside complete the exclusion. Above this wall great festoons of bougainvillea are draped from pillar to pillar. When I was there this lovely vine was in its perfect bloom and gorgeous was its contribution to the wayside beauty, as the purple glory swung from post to post.

The present owners of this extraordinary place are Mrs. Chauncey McCormick, Mrs. Richard Ely Danielson, Roger Deering and Deering Howe. The first three are the children of the former owner's brother, the late Charles Deering, and the last is the son of his sister, the late Mrs. Richard Howe. What they will do with Viscaya remains to be seen. I am told that once James Deering offered it to the state of Florida as a park, but the gift was declined because it would be so expensive to maintain.

So there it stands, like the sleeping beauty in a magic slumber. It takes a small army of people just to fend off the wrack and ruin that overtakes everything in that warm, damp country. Silks rot there; leather goods get mildew; wood crumbles; stone flakes off; vines grow too thick; shrubbery runs riot; trees become jungles; nature cries out: "What a puny thing is man! See how I can crush, smother and wipe him out!"

A Lovely Home.

Not far away from this palace of a potentate's prideful dream is a much less pretentious but utterly charming abode, that of Mrs. Charles Mitchell. Mrs. Mitchell is the widow of the late Donald G. Mitchell's brother and is herself a member of the well known Tiffany family. Her brother, Louis Tiffany, has a winter home nearby. She is also the mother-in-law of one of the well known men in our present day life, Hiram Bingham, United States senator from Connecticut and well known archeologist. His wife was Miss Charles Mitchell. The Binghams have seven sons, as handsome a progeny as any well known American couple can boast of in these days of few offspring per capita among our foremost families. A stately human stairway they make as they range themselves shoulder to shoulder.

Mrs. Mitchell, the proud grandmother, is over 80 years young and a most alive and delightful member of society she is. Her Cocoanut Grove house literally hangs over the ocean, her sitting room being all glazed at one end with windows that open clear to the top and admit the sun and sea breezes as completely as if there were no walls on that side of the house. It is a lovely site.

An Item for Flower Lovers.

An item for garden clubbers was when I met for the first time in southern Florida a lovely and strange flower called from its discoverer, the Pacheras. It grows on a good sized shrub before the leaves come out. At first sight I thought those bare and slender twigs were the resting place for a flock of exquisite birds of paradise whose soft, yet brilliant, bluish pink egrets were blazing forth in the southern sunshine. Then I found that they were growing on those nude and slim branches. These with the Madagascan Parkinsonia were the chief floral adventures of my trip to those verdant regions.

The last named is a frail, golden blossom, deliciously fragrant, that grows on a diaphanous shrub whose leaves are like the finest saw toothed files. This shrub was the great event in Mrs. George A. McKinlock's garden.

Mrs. McKinlock will go down in the history of horticulturists as the first president of the Palm Beach Garden club, a newly formed association in which she is taking the greatest interest.

Since this chronicler watched the birth and development of the Lake Forest Garden club, she has the conviction that such associations are animated by a red blooded zeal unexpected in the advocates of this gentle art. Members of the Palm Beach club have the same eager spirit for rapid advance to perfection that their like elsewhere have consistently manifested in the last fifteen or twenty years.

In the early days of the present Lake Forest club there were injected into its formation and growth certain personal feuds and differences of opinion of somewhat unfloral nature. Rose petals strewed the battle fields and tall, pale lilies trumpeted in warlike manner at many a committee meeting. But this is ancient history and it is of today that we are prating.

A Wedding of Interest.

At the moment of this writing the most exciting and interesting bridal couple that Chicago's beau monde has welcomed since Mrs. Arthur Ryerson married Forsyth Sherfesee last November, Col. and Mrs. George Tayloe Langhorne, are nearing New York on the S. S. Olympic. By the time this p. p. p. meets your eye they will undoubtedly be the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Edward C. Waller, parents of the bride, the well known and popular Miss Mary Waller of River Forest.

Miss Waller met the colonel in the Philippines a few years ago, where she was the guest of himself and his sister, Mrs. Powell Clayton. It is not many bridal couples who, on their wedding day, have the added excitement of being entertained at Lord Astor's famous estate, Cliveden, and there meeting such a widely celebrated quartet as King George and Queen Mary of Eng-

Century Club Leases Loop Quarters

MRS. JOHN F. McKEON, president of the second district, Illinois Federation of Women's clubs for the last two years, is the new president of the Women's Century club, which will open temporary quarters next month, preparatory to erecting a new club building in the loop. Details of the club's organization and personnel are given in the next column.

Mrs. A. Willis Bryne of Hartford, Conn., president general of the National Society of New England Women, will preside at the fifteenth annual congress of the society on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday at the Stevens hotel. Mrs. Franklin M Miller is president of the Illinois society.

Mrs. Theodore Tieken is a member of Mrs. Frederic Upham's committee in charge of the spring luncheon to be given by the Central Council for Nursing Education on Thursday at the Palmer house.

Temporary Rooms Engaged Pending Building of Home

By Kate Webber.

PLANS of the Woman's Century club, which has been in the making for the last several months, have developed to the stage where temporary quarters have been engaged, until work can be started on the new loop building. Rooms in the Tower building at 6 North Michigan avenue, have been leased, and will be open sometime before the end of May. There members may have resting and dining facilities and meeting privileges.

The aim of the club organizers is to have a monumental building in the loop district, plans for which are already made. The founders are outstanding women representing more than 100 clubs. They are going forward with the drive for members who long have felt the need for such a club building within the shopping district; a place for service, recreation and amusement; an athletic and cultural meeting place for professional, business and club women. Conveniences and comfort for husbands and friends of members have not been forgotten in the arrangements for a club which will be an achievement for club women in the city and vicinity.

Courtesy Committee Planned.

It is planned to have a courtesy committee composed of women of every nationality, so that a hostess may be provided for foreign guests of distinction. One of the chief regrets of the busy club woman today is that calendars often are filled, and visitors of note who are passing through the city are not greeted with the attention they should have if there were a special committee to take care of them. The cultural department will have charge of programs and classes in music, art, drama, literature, and the languages. There will be an open forum for the discussion of subjects interesting to the home and public welfare.

Hall of Fame.

There will be a hall of fame to perpetuate the names of the women who have achieved distinction, such as Dr. Mary Thompson, the organizer of the first hospital in Chicago; Frances Willard; Mrs. Potter Palmer, the first president of the first woman's conference ever held in the world, and the many, many other women who have done and still are doing things in civics, arts, and sciences.

The club will be housed in a building dedicated to the achievement of women. The plans call for large lounges, dining rooms, meeting rooms, both public and private; banquet hall, large assembly hall, ballroom, guest rooms, gymnasium, and swimming pool.

The officers are Mrs. John F. McKeon, president; Mrs. Walter Edward Schwind and Mrs. Myrtle Tanner Blacklidge, vice presidents; Mrs. David MacLean, treasurer; Mrs. Samuel D. Snow, secretary, and Mrs. Louise M. Traer, corresponding secretary.

The directors are Dr. Sadie Bay Adair, Mrs. Edgar Foster Alden, Mrs. Charles S. Clark, Miss Julianne Doane, Miss Agnes Foreman, Mrs. Katherine Magoun, Mrs. H. E. Ratcliffe, Mrs. Charles Shearman, Miss Geraldine Smith, Miss Norma Stahle, Mrs. Charles Walgreen, and Mrs. William Westerlund.

MRS. EDWIN ROMBERG.
[Koehne Photo.]

Mrs. Edwin Romberg is general chairman of a committee of Chicagoans sponsoring the Carnival of Venice to be held the entire week of May 21 to raise funds for the finishing and equipment of the new building for the Daughters of Zion Infant Home and Day Nursery, which will accommodate five times as many children as are now receiving care.

CLUB ETHICS - - - By Maude Swalm Evans

A GROUP of convention delegates were talking excitedly as they came from the audience hall after the morning meeting.

"We just can't let that resolution stand!" declared the Harter delegate. "Those downstate people don't know what they're doing to us. It was just our luck to have the thing come up when so many of our delegates were in that special conference. We must round them all up. I'm going to move to rescind the action this afternoon."

A visitor to the convention who was standing with the Chapman delegate spoke up quietly.

"The first thing, and the easiest thing to do is to move to reconsider, that is, if you can get some one on the winning side to make the motion."

"I don't want to reconsider the matter. My mind's made up. I want it repealed, abolished, quashed, killed! That's what rescind means, isn't it?" she replied belligerently.

"Mrs. Black is my guest," the Chapman delegate warned her. "Perhaps she can help us. She's considered one of the best authorities on parliamentary law in her state—Mrs. Martha Black of New York."

The Harter delegate collapsed.

"O yes, Mrs. Black—of course—we're greatly honored. Yes, do help us. You say it's best to reconsider. I don't know why, but of course you're right."

"To reconsider requires only a majority vote and no previous notice," explained Mrs. Black. "It can be done the same day, or the day after, only To rescind requires a two-thirds vote without previous notice. You haven't given notice."

"I see now, thank you," said the Harter delegate. "Reconsideration is the best. We'd be sure of a majority vote with our delegates all in. It would be much harder to get two-thirds."

"Have you some one who voted for the resolution who will move its reconsideration?" asked Mrs. Black.

"I believe Mrs. Knapp of Bellfield would," replied the Harter delegate. "She voted for it, but she's very fair-minded. I'll talk to her. You girls pass the word to as many as you can," she told her group as she hurriedly left on her errand.

Question.

"How should a motion to accept a resignation from membership be handled?
A Reader."

Reply.

It should be stated and voted upon just as any other main motion.

Palette and Chisel Club Holds Exhibit

Members Attain Excellence in Their Annual Show

By Eleanor Jewett.

THE Palette and Chisel club prides itself on its annual exhibition of paintings and sculpture. The event is held in the spring, and for weeks before anticipation runs high. Last week the 1928 exhibit opened. The members of the club are to be congratulated. While there are canvases here and there which are slight, and one or two which might be called experimental, for the most part the paintings impress one by their excellence. Unfortunately but two pieces of sculpture are shown. Each is a success. The mother and child is a beautiful group, and the little slim active figure in green bronze is exquisite.

The Lydia Bontoux purchase prize of $300 was awarded to a portrait of a young girl, an unaffected and charming likeness, painted by a Mr. Gray. the name is a new one on the walls of the club and the first name remains a secret. The Palette and Chisel club gold medal was awarded to Edward T. Grigware for a stunning landscape, a picture in which summer and fields and trees and a slow stream of water, down whose current dreams might float by night, intermingle their emotions and their beauties and become part of the bridge, and then allow the bridge to expand like a gigantic balloon and absorb them all into its subtle coloring. The bridge is the keynote of the painting. But it is not obtrusive. It keeps its significance carefully sheathed. At first it does not seem to be there at all, then suddenly it catches the attention and the whole landscape sighs, and turns and flows into it, only to be released, so that the bridge may play its trick again upon the next unwary visitor.

Many Artists Represented.

The jury of selection for this exhibit was composed of Edgar Cameron, Frederick Poole, Edward Klauck, Carl Preussl, and Emil Zettler. They have hung a wise selection of pictures. Among the artists who are represented are J. Jeffery Grant, John Spelman, Oskar Gross, Oscar Erickson, Maurice Greenberg, Edward T. Grigware, Glen Sheffer, Othmar Hoffler, Otto Hake, Leo Marzola, Holger Jensen, and James Topping.

The painting by Othmar Hoffler is a little reminiscent of his "Joan of Arc," which hung in the Chicago artists' exhibit at the Art institute. A young girl, similar in type to his Joan, sits at the foot of a great tree. A tiny girl is beside her. Behind are a ewe and her lamb, placid animals with snow white fleeces. It may be that this Joan is a maternal Joan and the visions in her eyes are for the future of her little daughter. The suggested ideas are charming and the picture is painted in an assured, confident manner. The colors are rounded and mellow; there is an underlying glow which warms the composition, taking from it its risk of too much formality.

The painting by Oskar Gross is a portrait. The portrait of a sculptor it is, and he is at work on a bust with his studio as a background. Life and vitality tingle in every detail. Mr. Gross is a great painter. He is a versatile painter. Dealing as he does chiefly with persons, he makes of each person an individual. Do you remember his colonial girls and men? Do you remember the fascinating portrait of the young actress which hangs in the Goodman theater? Do you remember his self-portrait? And the smiling girl in yellow in the "Masquerade" of last fall at the Chicago galleries? Mr. Gross has understanding, intuition, and ability. His portraits are invariably adventures into pleasant realism.

An Intriguing Canvas.

Otto Hake shows a splendid conception of the old German building from the World's fair, restored. It is intriguing. Oscar Erickson shows a brilliant landscape, full bodied and full colored, verging on an "ism." Glen Sheffer has two entrancing pictures. Delightfully he has betaken himself to other gods and instead of an exquisite orientalish half nude in a luxurious setting he gives us a street scene alive with foreign subtleties and a pleasure boat about to leave the dock.

They are painted in the incomparable warm manner which is part and parcel of Mr. Sheffer's style. The colors are pure and glowing. He throws a glamour over his subjects and the spell catches the spectator, too, in its web. A street and a pleasure steamer—what more prosaic theme could be discovered? But there you wrong the artist. Of these two subjects Mr. Sheffer has made two poems, irresistible and unforgettable.

"TEAPOT AND CANDLE," by Paul Bartlett, found in the Professional Members' Exhibit of Painting and Sculpture current at the Arts club. This tiny painting is one of the triumphs of the exhibition. The show as a whole is a success, far better than that of last year. It will continue through May 5.

Exhibit by Olive Rush.

The exhibition of paintings by Olive Rush will continue at the Allerton galleries to May 5. It is an attractive exhibition and charmingly hung. The room is of good size and the walls are a neutral color, giving a good background to whatever is placed upon them. Miss Rush shows a number of oils, a few designs, and a group of water colors. The designs for murals are fascinating. Miss Rush apparently has a free brush and a whimsical way of breaking up set things and making informal, jolly compositions out of the pieces.

Her water colors of birds and beasts are wholly charming. The slightest touch of color, a line here and another there, the turn of a head and an implied half quarter, and before you stands a friendly, timid deer. She obtains marvelous effects with blanks.

In her larger paintings, the oils, more color is used and a rougher touch. Everything is told you. The result is effective, but just the least bit monotonous, everything is so exact and so solid. In the water colors there is no hint of monotony. They are all charming.

Paintings by Arthur Spear.

At the O'Brien galleries there is current an exhibit of paintings by Arthur Spear, a Boston man. The atmosphere of the room where it is hung is, on first entrance, oppressive. Surely never was so much sweet sentiment grouped together in any one place since family albums went out of fashion! And then, on a nearer approach, the sentimental atmosphere is displaced by a feeling of romance. These are the romantic vaporings of a young man who tells his love in color rather than in type. Each canvas is literally a verse to beauty.

Against a velvety background of interwoven colors stand or sit his charming maidens. Between the dozen or so of them three scarfs, a few transparencies, several bracelets and a number of chaplets might be found, otherwise the group is distinctly and beautifully nude. It is a curious fact that while from a distance these romantic creatures are all lovely, a good many of them have hard and even ugly faces on closer inspection. Where Mr. Spear has suggested the features and not too carefully delineated them, the result is the most charming.

For example, "Fantasy" is a relaxed and exquisite little person, "The Moon Maiden" is lovely. In "Spring" there is a pretty face. "The Nymph and the Butterfly" is exquisite. In "The Afterglow," there is a pretty girl, pretty and wistful. Set in between these paintings are others, the names are unimportant, and in them the girls are not as pretty; there is a hardness and harshness about their faces which gives the whole thing away. It lets down the pitch of romance to which Mr. Spear evidently tunes his talent.

Sensual and satisfied is the upturned face of the "Pearl," a slim lost mermaid abandoned in the milky shell of a monstrous oyster. This painting could be the continued episode following "The Pearl Diver," in which a stalwart figure darts through the sea waters to the bottom where "The Pearl" waits. The two run in together, but the impression which the first makes upon the unbiased the Athletic club during the dinners given there by the Forty club.

The fourth annual meeting of the South Side Art association was held at the Shoreland hotel Tuesday evening, April 17. The following officers were unanimously elected: Lorado spectator is of a rather vampirish lady under that white skin.

News of Art and Artists.

Antonin Sterba completed a portrait of Wilbur D. Nesbit last year, shortly before the writer died. This portrait has just been purchased by the Forty club, of which Mr. Nesbit had been president for eighteen years. The canvas, draped with the American flag, will hang in the ballroom of Taft, honorary president, and Mrs. Albion L. Headburg, president, were elected to succeed themselves for the fourth term; Florence White Williams remains as first vice president and Mrs. James A. Ostrom as second vice president; Miss Josephine Perry, recording secretary; William H. Eppens, corresponding secretary, and Edward R. Bixby, treasurer, succeed themselves. The directors are Alice L. Bidwell, Mrs. Chester M. Turner, Josephine L. Reichmann, Greta Allen Dietz, and Agnes Potter Van Ryn.

The Renaissance society of the University of Chicago has for its fourth exhibition of the year a collection of Japanese prints and textiles lent by S. H. Mori. Miss Helen Gunsaulus, keeper of Japanese prints at the Art institute, will talk in the gallery this afternoon at 4 o'clock.

Hiram Powers Dilworth, a guard at the Art institute, is a poet by avocation. His latest work, a memorial ode to Fanny Bloomfield Zeisler, is just leaving his publishers' hands. It is said that it compares favorably with his earlier book of verse, "Memorial Sonnets."

An exhibition of landscapes by Frank G. Ritchie is announced as being hung in Rooms 1414-16 Straus building.

At the Anderson galleries there is concluding an exhibit of paintings by Frank M. Armington and of etchings by Caroline Armington, his wife. The paintings and etchings deal with the landscape and architecture of England and France. They are full of charm and beauty.

WEDDED

MRS. CHESTER CHAPPELL GUY.

[Moffett photo.]

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Sterling Smith of Oak Park announce the marriage of their daughter, Helen Isabel, to Dr. Chester Chappell Guy of Chicago, son of Dr. and Mrs. J. Milton Guy of Danville, Ill. The couple are motoring in the south on their wedding trip and will reside in Chicago on their return.

land, and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ford of Detroit, Mich. Isn't that a sextet to interest Chicago readers of the W. G. N., the Windsors, the Fords, and Langhornes? My eye!

Rain in the Desert.

That other bridal couple to which I referred above, the Sherfesees, who planned a honeymoon in Timbuctoo, were deterred from having this unique experience by an event that could not have been previsioned by the liveliest imagination; namely, a violent tornado and rainstorm in the desert which foundered their automobile and stuck them in a morass, foodless and exposed to wandering lions for two long days.

When succor reached them they abandoned their southward way and returned to northern Africa, glad to escape the moist inclemencies of the earth's driest region. Would such an unprecedented adventure happen to any one but Mrs. Sherfesee?

As Mrs. Arthur Ryerson she had probably the most varied and exciting experiences of any woman on our social register. The wreck of the Titanic sent her adrift with three of her children for four hours on an ice covered sea and took the life of her first husband, Arthur Ryerson. A few years later she spent months in France at Nancy under fire again and again, both there and in Paris and London. A few years after this her eldest daughter died, and the latter's husband, George W. Patterson, to whom Mrs. Ryerson was devoted, after a couple of years, disappeared in a way that has never been solved. Many of his friends think he is still alive somewhere. In the last few years Mrs. Ryerson spent most of her time in travel. She explored innumerable remote parts of the earth, including China, Angkor, Java, the Holy Land, southeastern Europe, and so on. At present she and her second husband are motoring through Greece and Turkey. They will visit France and England and return late in June to Ringwood, her country place on Lake Otsego, where they will spend the rest of the summer. It is not probable that they will be in Chicago for any time for some years to come. I fear also, that we shall lose our former belle. Miss Mary Waller, as the Langhornes will probably live abroad.

Chicago's Fate.

Alas, that Chicago is always mourning the departure of some cherished personalities! Our vigorous community breeds the finest human stock in the world, and then the rest of the species seems to need them and forth they go, never to return. Perhaps, when we get old and a little bit rotten, this delightful and cosmopolitan growth we make possible may find it worth while to stay here. But that will be many, many years hence and this chronicler will not be here to record their doings in Chicago.

Chicago is a seething caldron where youth bubbles up to the top and makes the mixture required to reinforce the rest of the human race. Palaces built in other parts of the world are erected by Chicagoans. Great financial institutions in New York and other cities are headed by Chicago born and bred men. Powerful newspapers are edited and run by Chicago's sons and daughters. Fine mansions in New York and elsewhere are designed and adorned by Chicago talent. Foreign noble families are enriched by marriage with Chicago stock.

And so the story goes on. Hail, virile and generous city by the western sea!

Greek Prince of Famous Family Loves America

By La Dauphine.

FROM Greece, where you may wake up any morning to find a revolution, the royal family has long since decamped. After the great war, Constantine managed to get back on the throne, and his sons, George and Alexander, each had a brief moment of holding the scepter; but republican sentiment rapidly consolidated to the point where no sovereign could stand the pressure.

Constantine himself died in exile in Palermo in 1923. Three of his brothers, George, Nicholas, and Andrew, live in or near Paris, where royalty is apt to foregather when the going is bad at home.

Constantine's youngest brother, Prince Christopher, shows an increasing predilection for the United States. Unlike his elders, he never had any penchant for the hurly-burly of political life. Before his marriage to Mrs. Leeds of Cleveland and Pittsburgh, Christopher had never visited America, but since her early death—after a love idyll of a few short years—he has gradually come to spend more and more of his time in New York and Palm Beach.

A Famous Marriage.

Prince Christopher, fifth and last son, was born in 1888 at the same castle of Pavlovsk in St. Petersburg, where his mother, Olga, was born in 1851. He was always her great companion and favorite. After a long courtship, he married in February, 1920, at Vevey, Switzerland, Mrs. William B. Leeds. To become his wife she not only adopted the Greek orthodox religion, but insisted on her right to the full title of princess; in other words, she refused to accept a morganatic status. The Greek government, with Venizelos then premier, acquiesced in her wish and she was given royal rank.

The ceremony at Vevey, with full orthodox rites, was wonderfully picturesque, the new Princess Christopher wearing a long chinchilla train and a diamond tiara, in the form of a crown, which few royal houses could match. By the terms of William B. Leeds' will Prince Christopher's bride—after her marriage, Princess Anastasia—could not leave, as was generally supposed, her great estate to Christopher; the bulk of it was held in trust for her son, William Leeds, who in October, 1921, married in Paris the Princess Xenia of Greece, daughter of Christopher's sister, Marie, by her first marriage with the Grand Duke George Michailovitch.

Limited by a Will.

Thus William Leeds became Christopher's stepson and nephew. Christopher's wife, who died in August, 1923, in London, could only bequeath him such personal property as her jewels, which she provided in her will should be divided between her husband and her sister, Mrs. Green, who lives in America. She hoped that her son, William, would buy her pearls, which Cartier found difficult to set a price on, because their value is constantly rising. For purity and matching they are, perhaps, unequaled; her emeralds and pear shaped diamonds were recently admired by the Amir and Queen of Afghanistan in the Rue de la Paix.

Christopher has a strong leaning to the arts, especially music, in which he has marked talent as executant and composer. During his wife's last illness he played and sang constantly to relieve her pain and raise her spirits. Although he keeps his charming villa in Rome, he is much in America, where gossip, that tireless matchmaker, hastens to couple his name with that of Mrs. Fair Vanderbilt, recently divorced from Willie K. Vanderbilt.

Many stay here the year 'round because of the healthful climate and because fruit-growing and other business opportunities spell big profits.

Michigan's shore line is longer than the Atlantic Coast from Maine to Florida. More than 21,000 miles of improved roads make all points readily accessible. All transportation lines offer low summer fares. Consult: Pere Marquette Railroad, Ann Arbor Railroad, Goodrich Steamship Lines, Michigan Transit Corporation.

NEW MORRISON HOTEL, CHICAGO
The New Morrison, when completed, will be the world's largest and tallest hotel—46 stories high, with 3,400 rooms

A SUNDAY of outdoor pleasure never offers a more fascinating lure than at this season of year. And the best climax of all is the delightful dinner-dance given every Sunday in the beautiful Terrace Garden.

A Perfect Menu and Brilliant Vaudeville

Six delicious courses are served from 5:30 to 9 p. m. at popular prices, while Spike Hamilton's splendid orchestra plays the dance music and accompanies the variety program. The location, at the heart of the city, is very handily reached by motorists, and also lies closer than any other hotel to the grouped railroad terminals.

Rooms, $2.50 Up. Why Rates Are Low

This central location has developed subrental revenues that pay all the ground rent—making it possible for the Morrison to offer rooms at $2.50 to $5 that would cost $5 to $8 at any other hotel of premier standing.

Princess Mary Sees Longchamps Races

By May Birkhead.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

[Copyright: 1928: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, April 24.—[Special Correspondence.]—The visit to Paris of Princess Mary of England has somewhat stimulated the social animation during the last week, at least at the races, if not among officialdom.

The royal visitor and her husband, Viscount Lascelles, stopped at Ville Lumiere on their way home from a recent trip to Egypt. Having signified their intention of not accepting official entertainment on account of the death of the princess' cousin, Lord Trematon, their only amusement was attending the races.

They were among the spectators at Longchamps last Sunday, the most interesting day of the spring season, so far as sport is concerned, the attraction being the great Kantar, the yet unbeaten crack under American colors, owned by Ogden Mills, and the sensation of the season, having won five successive races.

Other celebrities, much in the public eye for the moment, attending the races are the Duc de Nemours, son of the Duke and Duchess of Vendome and nephew of the king of the Belgians, and his American bride, Miss Peggy Watson of Washington. They have just arrived from London, where they were married last week. They will be here for a fortnight, to make peace with the duke's family before going to Morocco. The young duke spends much time in big game hunting in Africa, as proudly shown by his bride, who carried a bag and wore shoes made of snakeskin, one of his African trophies.

Several prominent Chicagoans attended the Longchamps races, among them Arthur Reynolds, president of the Continental and Commercial bank, with Mrs. Reynolds, who has been on the Riviera and in North Africa for the winter.

Also Mr. and Mrs. Edward Swift, who on the same night gave a dinner party at the Ritz, and expect to be here some weeks, stopping at the Hotel Meurice.

Clothes Make the Maid? Not in Chicago, She Finds

Aviation Club at Lane Tech Seeks Prizes

Tilden and Crane Also Enter Big Tourney.

By The Aviation Editor.

THE Lane Tech High School Aviation club is building for the all Chicago model airplane tourney which is being sponsored by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE. And Lane's club is confident that some of the prizes will be pinned on the chests of its members.

The model tournament will be held on three days. On May 19 at Soldiers' field the outdoor duration contest for scale models will be held. On May 26 the outdoor duration, open class, will be run off on the big meadow at Washington park while the indoor duration tourney will be held in the 132d infantry armory, I. N. G., at Rockwell and Madison streets on May 27.

Lane has sponsored the building of model airplanes and a model airplane club for the last two years. Previous to 1926 there were several boys in school who built model airships and flew them but there wasn't a supervised effort to carry on the work. In 1926 William A. Sears, a flyer who gained considerable repute in the government air mail service, took over the model building and immediately plans were laid for the formation of a club.

* *

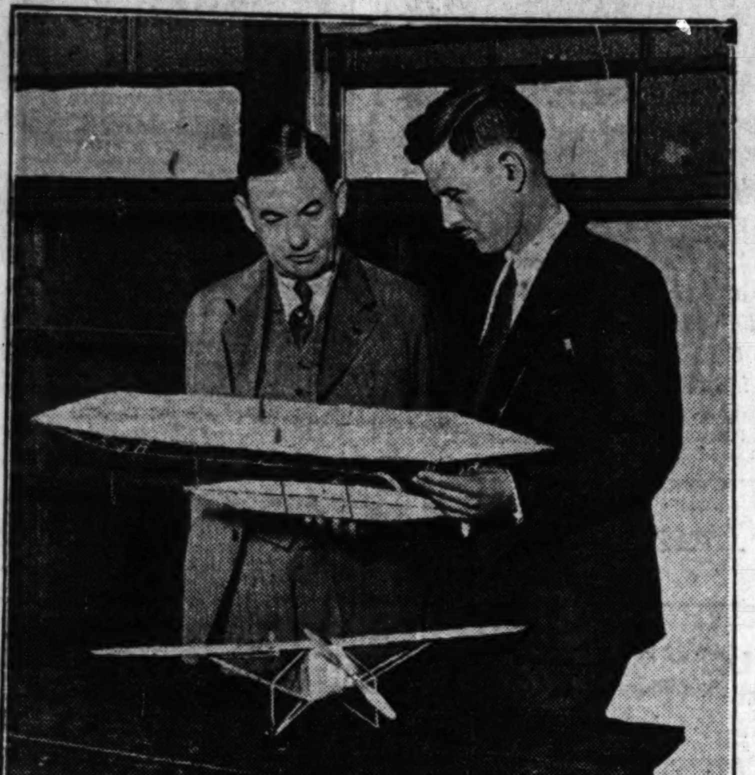
Make Scale Models Only.

The Lane Tech club makes scale models of planes only. Some of the boys have tried the single stick flying machines but Director Sears doesn't encourage this work.

"We want to build scale models," Mr. Sears said. "We want the models of real flying machines which will prove of value to the boys after they get out of school, and the club works along this plan."

Each boy must build a scale model of some popular type of airplane before he gets his club pin at Lane. Any boy in school can attend the club meetings and get advice and help by the members and Director Sears, but before the pin emblematic of a membership in the club is conferred upon a boy he must present a ship built from plans furnished by the club.

LEAD LANE AVIATION CLUB



MAX STRASS, dean of boys at Lane Tech High school, and William Sears, instructor in aviation and faculty adviser for the Lane Aviation club, are inspecting two models built by the boys of the north side prep school. On the table is a model of Col. Lindbergh's trans-Atlantic plane, the Spirit of St. Louis. Mr. Sears is holding a model of a dirigible built by one of the Lane boys.

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

All materials used in the construction of the models can be purchased at the school. But the work of building the planes is done mainly in the boys' respective homes. This is necessary because Lane Tech is crowded for space in its old school building and until the new Lane Tech building is built the model work will be home work.

Have Plans for Course.

Principal Grant Beebe of Lane and Athletic Director Max Strass, who besides his athletic work takes a keen interest and lends a hand in the running of the various clubs in the school, hoping to increase the aviation work in the school when sufficient space for work and club rooms are available. It is hoped that the plans now in the process of drawing for the building of a new and greater Lane Tech high school, on the grounds now occupied by the Mid-City golf course at Addison

Girl Reporter Gets Lesson from Freda

Seeks Kitchen Work in Mediocre Getup.

By Kathleen McLaughlin.

WHEN you're in Rome they do say it's advisable to do as the Romans do. And when you set out to impersonate a maid in search of a job the same logic ought to apply.

My intentions certainly lay along that line—but I found myself somewhat handicapped by lack of knowledge of what maids do when they go job hunting. Then, too, there was the problems of what maids wear on such occasions.

Intent as I was on gleaning first hand information as to the reason for the popular unpopularity of the trade, profession, or calling of domestic service, these things mattered to me. Indeed, they assumed unduly important proportions at first—proportions that faded into insignificance as my experience accumulated along with the number of my applications.

Somebody once remarked that clothes make the man. Maybe. But they don't make the maid. That was my mistake.

* *

The Mediocre Makeup.

My initial excursions in pursuit of a phantom job were made, as an earlier chapter related, in my unadvised impression of the wardrobe the average maid might be expected to adopt in her leisure hours.

The mediocre getup I chose avoided anything resembling the ensemble idea: brown hat, blue cloth coat, black dress, hose and shoes. All had seen adequate service but were good for considerable more. A sort of discreet neutrality, it was, between the chic and the shabby.

Then, quite by chance, I got an object lesson that left me temporarily clothes conscious and much amused.

One of the addresses I had selected from the want ad columns was on Bradley place, west of Lincoln avenue. Just about here an intersecting north and south street is apt to prove a bit puzzling to strangers in the vicinity. Eyes on the street numbers and, my mind on my street guide, I was wandering down Lincoln avenue when a girl, coming in the opposite direction, halted me with a question.

"Pardon me—coot you tell me where iss Bradley blace?"

She had a wonderfully musical voice, a marked German accent, and a wealth of blonde hair. If her name wasn't Freda or Brunhilde or something equally Teutonic, it should have been.

Instantly I knew that we were in search of the same number, and that here was a potential rival for the position I intended to inquire about. Preserving my gravity with something of an effort, I asked what number she wanted. Righto! She named the one I was seeking.

"It seems," I told her, "that we're looking for the same place. Did you want to see about the ad?"

"Yess," she acknowledged, "I am looking yor a bosition."

Shaded by Comparison.

Only the situation itself saved me, for I giggled outright. The other girl, who could not possibly know that I was laughing at myself and not at her, looked at me doubtfully, then smiled a slow German smile as I explained that it was very funny we should have met.

What was much funnier than that was—that here was a bona fide maid, actually and earnestly in search of a job, and that her costume (for it was that) would have done credit to any business woman, be her calling what it may.

Subconsciously I developed holes in my glove finger tips, ravelings on my coat, a runner in one stocking. Con-

LEARNING ABOUT WOMEN

WHEN the newspaper woman set out to "hunt" a household job she encountered a fellow seeker whose clothes were better than her own. While the two scanned a street guide to find the location of an advertised address, the stranger told the reporter about kitchen work and how to get it—and about her fellow women.

LADIES' DAY

JUST how many of the fair sex understand baseball in all its finer points the photographer doesn't know, but he has caught the expressions on the faces of a group during "ladies' day" at the Cubs' ball park, and he leaves it for you to decide as to their reaction to the play that has just been made. At least one of their concerns, it would appear, was to keep warm.

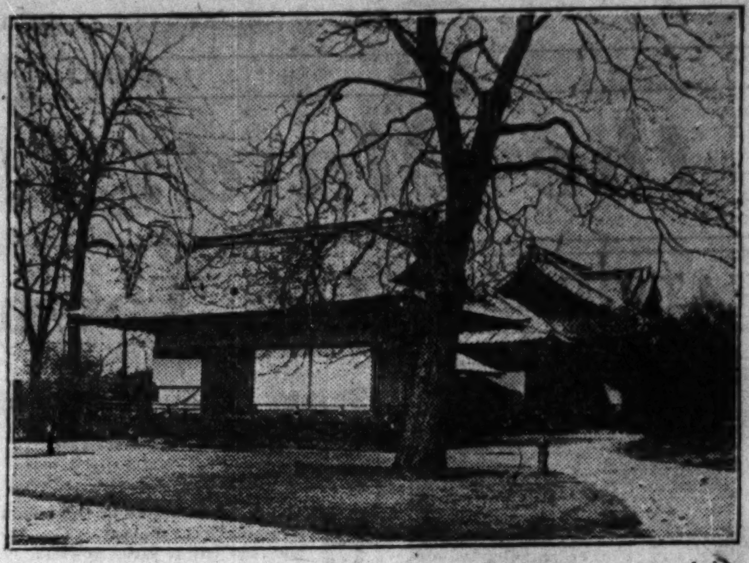
NOT A SCENE IN TOKIO



ONE might easily imagine that this picture was snapped in the land of the Mikado. And no wonder, for Japanese carpenters built the three houses out of teak wood from Japan, and two hundred Japanese students did the interior decorating. In place of cherry trees we have the Chicago variety of timber, for the houses are located on Wooded island in Jackson park. During the World's Fair the bungalows were used for Japanese tearooms.

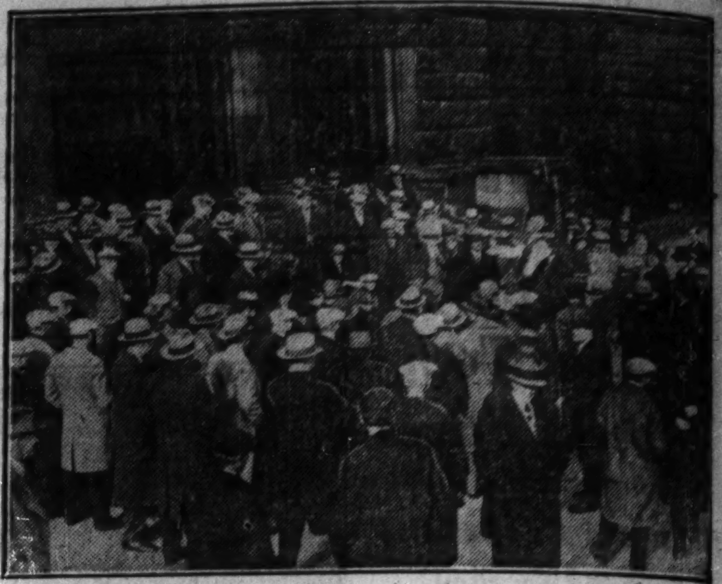
SOAP BOX ORATORY



AN added symbol of spring is the appearance again of open air oratory in Washington square. Or, rather, the sound of oratory and the reassembling of speakers and their listeners. This gathering has crossed the street to the steps of the Newberry library, and the address is being given by Sydney Percival Eaden, B. A. No doubt several members of the audience are having their "say" at the same time.

From Small Job in Small Town to Big One in City

Woman Scores as Advertising Manager.

By Marion Reagan.

"A LAZY man is merely professionally misplaced. Give him something he is fitted for, something he likes to do, and he'll do it well, without the need of prodding."

That sounds encouraging. And simple. Just let every one pick out something he wants to do for a living instead of something he doesn't, and there'll be no more failures, no more malcontents.

But there's a trick in it. The rub comes in finding out what the lazy man, or failure, really wants to do and what it is he's fitted for. Usually, on close personal analysis, it turns out, by his own admission, that he is not fitted for much of anything useful, and what he really wants to do is something easy involving a large income, little responsibility, and plenty of leosure time. But, as most of us—who have spent our lives looking for just such jobs—know, they are hard to get.

And again, as known to most of us who have spent much time trying to search ourselves for talents, that intensive self-analysis and introspection is, in the long run, a waste of time. For the truth seems to be that most of us haven't any special, God given talents. Most of us are just ordinary folks, with ordinary intelligence, whose only chance for making a material success of our lives lies in training for something definite. "Genius" says a well known educator, "is a gift from God, but talent can be developed by training."

And it is perhaps because women, on the whole, do not train themselves for lifelong careers that the outstanding success of any one of them is "news."

Getting Down to Cases.

Now, Mary Leland, who is advertising manager for a large north side department store, set about getting into the advertising business in such a well planned manner, took such a sensible, well thought out course, that her experiences in following it, and what she has to say concerning it, should be of interest to that annually increasing number of confused young women who leave our high schools and colleges each June, diploma in hand, the confident predictions of well-wishers ringing in their ears, but who look down the vista of the future tremulous and uncertain.

She didn't just slip into a near-at-hand job in the small town she lived in, and she didn't wander into the well-beaten path of the pad and pencil parade of girls who open the door of business opportunity with the typewriter keys. Nor did she set herself any surpassing feat, difficult of accomplishment. Looking the commercial situation squarely in the face, she saw that the only way to get "in" was to be able to do some one special job. And, as she saw it, the wisest thing was to pick a "special job" closely related to the higher-up position one wanted to get eventually.

Her List of Requirements.

She wanted to be an advertising manager. She chose advertising because it was lucrative, and, to her, fascinating. But there are so many who think the same thing about advertising that the field has become highly competitive and jobs harder and harder to get.

Miss Leland was young, just out of high school, and her chances for slipping under the advertising gate were slim. With a cool, level head she sat down to analyze and enumerate the qualities necessary for making a success of advertising, and decided on this list:

Merchandising—First of all she must know goods, must know how to sell, must have a certain amount of store experience.

Art—Every advertiser, she said, should know how to make a layout, should know how to judge good art work, how to direct an artist to make the illustrations she wants used. And that must involve technical knowledge and some skill.

Writing—She must learn how to put words together, not to startle any one with their literary effect, but to convey, clearly, her ideas.

Adaptability—She must learn how to adapt herself to changed conditions, how to adapt herself to people, to do things as they want them done rather than as she might prefer to do them.

Back and Forth to Chicago.

She came up to Chicago, went to the Art institute, and studied design. She learned how to trim a window, to make display cards, to lay out an advertising page. With that ability she felt ready to apply to a small town department store for a job. She already had learned something of merchandising in her father's little department store in her home town, and writing was something she kept practicing constantly.

Through an ad in the paper she learned of an opening in Marshalltown, Ia. She answered, and got the position because of her art training and knowledge of small town department store work. The salary was not big, but it was enough to live on and the experience, she knew, was valuable. She stayed four years. At the end of that time she was ready to try for big city work. So she came back to Chicago, offering definite training and experience in exchange for the job she wanted to get. She got the job.

Not a Literary Job.

Curled up in a corner of a large davenport in her apartment on Belmont avenue, Miss Leland, a slight woman, with black, closely cut hair and laughing gray eyes, was talking recently to some younger friends who wanted to break into advertising. Modest, she took little credit for what she has accomplished in becoming an advertising manager of a store, and as she told the story of how others might follow her example it seemed a simple course. But while it is true that what she says, and what prominent educators say—that we can train ourselves to be practically anything we want to become—still in all fairness it must be admitted by any one who has met Miss Leland that she is an exceptionally bright young woman, with an unusual, imaginative flair which has materially aided, with her training, in making her successful.

"One difficulty," she points out "with many girls who want to be advertisers is that they think the position is literary. Girls who like to write flock into advertising and frequently fail, because fundamentally the business is not literary at all. It is a practical matter of being able, through words, to make goods move off store shelves."

AT THE TOP

Mary Gloria Leland started out to scale the heights via a straight line. Spurning all detours, she stuck to the path leading to an advertising managership. The path was stony, but she plunged on. She was determined to win, and she did.

Queen Sends Doll to London Museum

LONDON.—(AP)—Queen Mary has sent to the London museum a beautifully dressed doll, representing Queen Alexandra, the king's mother, when she was a girl.

The doll, which is 15 inches high, was made in 1863, and is perfectly dressed according to the fashion of the day, including a crinoline. The dress is made of silk in the queen's favorite mauve shade. A little panne velvet jacket is worn over the dress. It is lined with white silk and trimmed with white silk braid. The pink underskirt is worked in crochet. The correct hairdressing fashion of the time is illustrated in this doll. Pads were then worn at the nape of the neck and the hair tucked under. A net was worn over the head.

The doll's jewels consist of a large brooch at the neck of the dress and a small pearl necklace. There is also a long gold chain. A bouquet of pink roses is carried. All the garments are beautifully made by hand.

and Western avenues, will include this room for aviation.

Principal Beebe and Director Strass have plans for putting aviation ground work in the school as a credit course. The work would be run as a part of the regular mechanical course, and would be with both model and full sized planes. Some of Detroit's high schools already have instituted an aviation course, according to Principal Beebe.

There are several complete models in the Lane Tech club now. One boy even has built a model of a dirigible, and plans to fill the big gas bag housing with tiny balloons inflated with hydrogen. This flying machine of course would not be accepted in THE TRIBUNE's tournament. Several of the models are exact reproductions in miniature of the big ships now in government and commercial service.

Director Sears states that his club boys would start building new machines and repairing their old planes to start in the tourney.

It is expected that more than 50 flyers will compete in the tourney under the colors of the Lane club.

Active at Tilden Tech.

Out at Tilden Tech high school, Principal Evans reports that his aviation club is working overtime to prepare for the tourney. E. R. Christiansen is the instructor at Tilden in charge of the boys, and he has been kept busy getting out supplies. More boys are taking to aviation at Tilden than ever before, and indications point to a big entry from the south side school.

Crane Tech also has an aviation club which has done considerable work with the models. Crane isn't going to be left behind and several of the west side boys are making ships for the meet.

The tournament is open to all boys. There is no entry fee, and THE TRIBUNE is providing the prizes. The tournament is a part of the national meet and the winners in the all-Chicago events will be sent to Detroit to participate in the national championships which will be held during the summer. The high points of the rules are printed below. All that is required to enter is to clip out the entry coupon appearing in THE TRIBUNE, and fill it out and mail as directed.

A SLIGHT ERROR.

She waited on the corner joyously, then pensively, then expectantly, then casually, then anxiously, and two hours passed.

"Man," she said, "is a perfidious animal, faithless and untrue, incapable of consummating a promise," and so she became a cynic.

Two hundred yards down the street he said the same thing about women—she was on the wrong corner.—London Tit-Bits.

Italian Courts Close Doors to Morbid Guests

ROME.—(AP)—Th good old Italian phrase "in camera" will henceforth be applied to many more court cases than heretofore. An order of Minister of Justice Rocco decrees that "closed doors" will be the rule every time that publicity of the facts in the case "might produce a weakening of the moral tone of the spectators."

Moreover, court audiences in future are to be more carefully supervised. Bailiffs, ushers and others charged with maintaining order before the tribunals are instructed to see that no previously convicted persons, or individuals "under special surveillance" of the police, or women of questionable character shall be admitted.

Finally, special seats shall be set aside only for the press and the members of the bar, thus doing away with the "society gallery" of highly placed ladies. The standing rule that "any public manifestation of any sort shall be strictly forbidden and severely repressed" is reiterated with renewed vigor.

Overpays Fine for Fishing, Is Offered Bath

STARNBERG, Upper Bavaria.—(AP)—Even tenors of international fame are not permitted to fish in Bavarian lakes without police permits.

This regulation, forbidding fishing without license, was brought drastically to the knowledge of Leo Slezak, noted tenor, during his recent visit to the Starnberg lake, Upper Bavaria.

One fine morning Slezak decided to have an hour of fishing at the lake. He hadn't settled down on the shore for more than ten minutes when he saw a spiked helmet advancing towards him.

"You are not permitted to fish here," the policeman told Slezak, "and for doing so I have to fine you five marks." Slezak did not say anything but reached into his pocket and handed a ten mark bill to the representative of the law. The policeman, taking the ten marks, said: "Sorry, I have no change, but if you'll take a bath in this lake I'll have to fine you another five marks and then we are square."

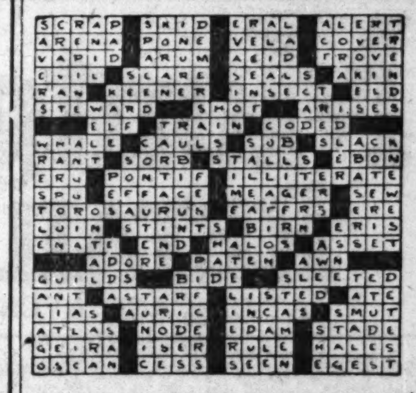
ANSWER TO LAST WEEK'S PUZZLE



Living Men's Faces Carved on Building

LONDON.—(AP)—Faces of living men are carved in stone on the new million pound building of the Imperial Chemical industries nearing completion at Westminster.

One of the faces is that of the head of the concern, Sir Alfred Mond. All the other carvings are said to be excelent likenesses of many men prominent in the chemical world.

The sculpture around the building also includes figures of peacocks, which are said to be there as a symbol of incorruptibility, following the ancient tradition that the flesh of the peacock is incorruptible.

POSITION WANTED.

A Chinese newspaper contained this letter from an applicant for work:

"Sir: I am Wang. I can drive a typewriter with good noise and my English is great. My last job has left itself from me, for the good reason that the large man has dead. It was on account of no fault of mine. So, honorable sirs, what about it? If I can be of big use to you, I will arrive on same date that you should guess."—Tit-Bits.

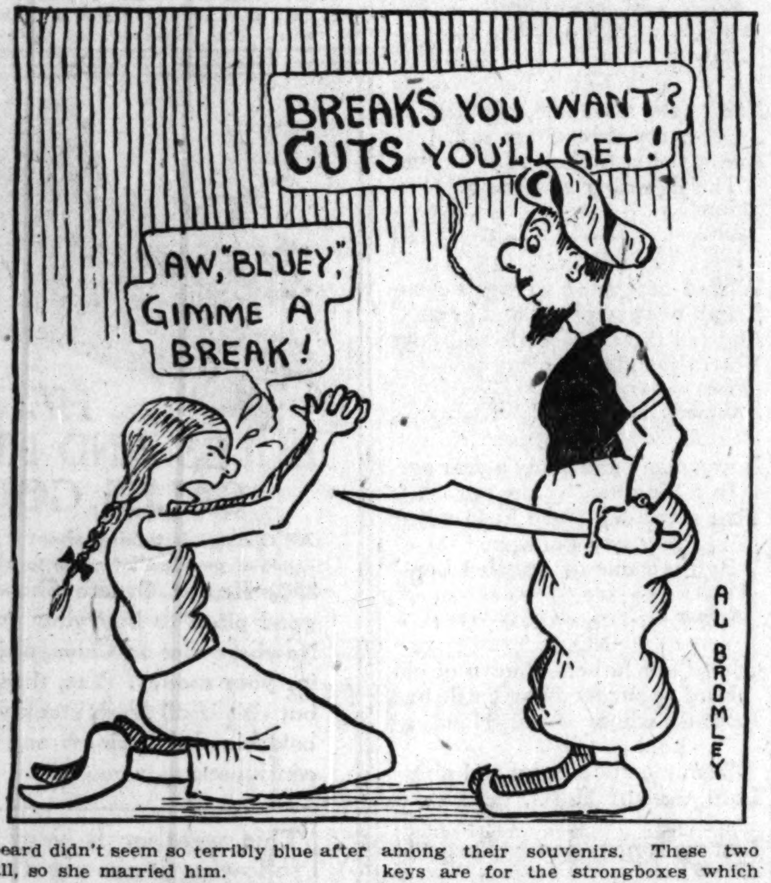
Snowshoe Al Springs a Story with Whiskers on It

And Exposes Barbers' Propaganda in Fairy Tale of Blue Beard



BREAKS YOU WANT? CUTS YOU'LL GET!
AW, "BLUEY", GIMME A BREAK!
AL BROMLEY

YESTERDAY I picked up my little niece's book of goofy fairy tales and read a story which I think is merely some propaganda of the Barbers' union, because the tale insinuates that any bozo with whiskers is a dirty villain. I consider this an unjust insinuation, because I happen to be personally acquainted with almost two hundred men who wear whiskers, and I wish to state positively that one of them is a nice guy. If you don't like fairy tales this is the place where you should detour, because here comes

BLUE BEARD.

Once upon a time there lived a dodo who had a flock of money, a gallon of diamonds, a 32 room modern castle, a wow of a cellar, and a weakness for women. But did the Quails fall for this hombre? On the contrary, they used to dodge down alleys and side streets in order to steer clear of him. Why? Because he had a mug like an Easter Egg. He had a red nose, gray eyes, white hair, and blue whiskers! He might have got by with the nose, lamps, and brain-mattress, but the Indigo Chin Foliage just ruined his color scheme and shattered any sex appeal he might otherwise radiate. It made him look like a billy goat that had just finished guzzling a blueperry pie.

Capitulation.

Some old dame in the neighborhood happened to be equipped with a pair of ritzy young daughters, and Mr. Blue Beard wanted to hook up with one of them; he didn't care which one—they both looked like bargains to him. Neither of the gals took him seriously; in fact, he reminded them of a comic valentine. He gave them candy and jewelry and they gave him the horse laugh. These babies chased him back and forth from one another until he had worn out seventy-two dollars' worth of shoes at six bucks per pair.

Then a bright idea wandered into his hatrack. He takes these two squabs and their mother, together with several other young people, to his castle and tosses a wild party what lasted a week. O, and did he put on the dog! I ain't saying "No!" Talk about liquor—huh! He went down in his cellar and opened everything except the windows.

Well, everything turned out fine; everybody had a swell time and the youngest daughter decided that his beard didn't seem so terribly blue after all, so she married him.

Recapitulation.

A month later our boy friend informs his wife that he must attend a convention in Nashville and will be gone for about six weeks. He told her to have a good time while he was gone; he suggested that she invite all her friends over to the shack; he even said it would be all right for her to throw a couple parties while he was away. Then he dragged out a big bunch of keys and says:

"Listen closely! These two keys are for the two large wardrobes where I keep my best furniture. Drag it out if you want, but don't let your old lady park on any of the frail chairs, as she weighs a ton. This key is for the safe which contains my silver and gold plate. Don't let any of your friends handle the stuff or it will probably be among their souvenirs. These two keys are for the strongboxes which hold the money and Liberty Bonds which I grabbed on the Teapot Dome deal. This key unlocks the chest where my jewels are kept. And now look here! See this little key? Well, it's for the small closet on the second floor near the bathroom. Keep out of that closet, Mama! Stay clear of it or Papa will send plenty of grief your direction!"

Whereupon Mr. Blue Beard climbed into his flivver and beat it. No sooner was he gone than all the wife's friends and former neighbors rushed over to see her. You see, this gang was afraid to come around when her husband was home, because they dreaded the sight of his blue razor-food. They galloped all over the joint and examined the rooms, the carpets, the furniture, the groceries, the booze, etc.

The Key to Knowledge.

Now, Mrs. Blue Beard was just like any other gal—she consisted mostly of curiosity. [I'm afraid that remark ain't going to do me any good.] And so, while her friends were romping all over the place, she was headed straight for that little closet on the second floor.

"I wonder what the big stiff's got in there!" says she to herself as she breezed up the stairs; "he's got a lot of nerve telling me to keep out! I'll shake him down for a flock of alimony if I find that he's pulling any funny stuff. Anyhow, how will he ever know if I give it the once-over?"

She unlocked the closet and opened the door slowly. Then she gave a terrible shriek and dropped the key on the floor. O, baby, what a private morgue this boy had! That closet looked like the interior of a butcher's refrigerator. Seven of Mr. Blue Whisker's former wives were hanging around on hooks, and it was evident that they had not departed from this planet in a natural manner. Yes, sir, the boy just couldn't bear to part with his women; instead of burying them he kept them in storage!

"Well, for the love of Mike!" snorts Mama; "this guy has certaintly been getting away with murder!"

The Fatal Reprieve.

Then she discovered she had got blood stains on the key, so she went to her room and tried to wash 'em off, but they wouldn't disappear. In the meantime all her friends and neighbors had beat it for home, so she spent the rest of the day trying to give that key a bath. And then the grief began! Mr. Indigo Foliage came back home that same night!

"Good evening, Mama," says he, "I've decided not to go to that convention in Nashville, as I am now in possession of information to the effect that it's going to be a very dry affair. Give me back my keys."

"O. K., kid," says Mama, "here they are."

"Aha, you little snooper!" howls Blue Beard; "there is blood stains on this little key! You've been in that closet, ain'tcha?"

"Boo hoo hoo hoohoohoohoo!!! wails Mama, laying on the floor and kicking her heels.

"§‡%&%&&%*!!!" says her husband; "all right, you're gonna go back in that closet again, but you ain't coming out! I think there's an extra hook in there, an' you can occupy it from now on. Wait till I go in the bedroom an' get my sword."

"Aw, Bluey, be a good sport an' lay off the rough stuff!" cries his Dumb Half, but her tears didn't register. Mr. Funny Whiskers rushed into his boudoir, grabbed his trusty blade, and trotted back with a mean look in his lamps.

"Woman," sneers him, "you might just as well quit crying, because it ain't gonna get you no place. I've been through this so often that I'm becoming tired of bumping off wives. Stick out your neck!"

"Aw, Bluey, lend me fifteen minutes, will yuh? I have to curl my hair first," weeps his Sparring Partner.

"All right," says her husband, "I'll give you fifteen—"

The Act Is Utterly Ruined.

At this moment the door is knocked clean off its hinges and in walks the wife's two brothers, carrying swords, bombs, and sawed-off shotguns. Anybody can see at a glance that these two bozos mean business.

"Hello, sister!" says the two brothers [this is a brother act, so naturally they both talk at the same time]; "we have come to croak your villainous husband. Golly, what a queer looking duck he turned out to be! What's he got on his chin—a lilac bush?"

"Gentlemen," says Blue Beard, "you have arrived fifteen minutes too soon. This is very annoying. I might go so far as to state that you've ruined the most exciting part of the story. According to the original plot, my wife is supposed to spend the next quarter hour gazing down the road and hoping that her two dear brothers will arrive in time to save her. An' here you bust in way ahead of time."

"We can't help it," says the two brothers, "because Mr. Snowshoe Al is running short on writing paper an' if we don't croak you in a hurry this story will have to be finished on the back of a used envelope."

"O, that's different," says Blue Beard; "well, snap into it, boys, an' bump me off in this same paragraph!" And darned if they didn't. Whereupon everybody else lived happy ever after.

Modern Dress Injures Drama, Actress Holds

LONDON.—(AP)—Modern feminine dress is killing the good old drama, says Mrs. Pat Campbell, the actress.

"Stars," in the good old days, were popular with the public, but managers and authors are afraid of them today when plays are no longer built around a central figure, she told the Oxford University English club.

"The young find the old style of the stage dull," Mrs. Campbell went on, "and the old find the new style stupid," and she wondered what was to become of it all.

"The lovely young actress of today looks at the tired teagowned, romantic ladies who were the fashion—not a hundred years ago—somewhere before 1914 with a certain amount of envy. When an actress' dress does not hide her knees, and her 'woman's glory' is bobbed, it is very difficult for her to look picturesquely tragic.

"Modern feminine gowns and dresses breathe the independent spirit of the age, and suggest cocktails and mutual chumminess with men, not romance and mystery."

"Good as New."

Some time ago, upon moving into an apartment with a sun parlor, I found myself in need of some sun parlor furniture.

Fortunately for me, a party in the building had some advertised for sale. Upon inquiring the price, I decided it was more than I wanted to pay. The lady waited until the last minute and, not finding a buyer, sold it to me for the price of $3. It consisted of a settee and chair in the unfinished wood. I had a brown fernery and a brown wicker table which I decided would make a set. I thereupon painted the four pieces red and black and, with a little hammering, they looked "good as new."

Every one admired it and when I moved again, not having any use for it myself, I was lucky enough to sell it to a friend for $20. I considered this quite a bargain, for I made $17 on the transaction.

TWENTY EAST DELAWARE PLACE

She Helps Night Students; Aided in Turn by $50

Assistant Director Polite to a Stranger.

By the Politeness Reporter.

At the curb, beneath an awning, at the entrance to the Drake hotel, stood a footman conversing with a couple of chauffeurs. He was much larger than his companions and much more gaily dressed. His blue uniform was trimmed with gold braid, and his hands were covered with spotlessly white gloves. He was a man of dignified bearing, and whenever a car drove up to the curb he opened its door with a graceful manner that was well worth watching.

The footman helped the passengers out of a limousine and waved one of his gloved hands toward a bellboy as a signal for action. Then he rejoined the chauffeurs. I became a fourth member of the group.

"What date is it?" asked the footman.

The drivers had to pause a moment to think. I wasn't sure either. The question had been asekd so suddenly. Finally, between us, we decided on the correct date.

* *

Back to the Farm.

"Every spring I think about my place up in the country," remarked one of the chauffeurs.

"Where in the country?" I inquired.

"Wisconsin," he replied. "I've got thirteen acres up there that I've been offered $65 an acre for, but I want to hold it. One of these days I'm going to take the family and go up there and raise ducks and geese and chickens for the market. It would be a living."

"And leave Chicago?" I asked.

"Why not?" he returned. "I've been driving a car down here for 20 years. I've seen it all. There's a creek up there, fed by a spring, and I'm enough of a mechanic to put in my own electric power. Went up there one summer and saw some one had cut down part of the wood. I put a sign up, 'no trespassing.' That wood lays there yet, just where the fellow cut it. I guess he came back, but he never took the wood away."

He smiled in memory.

Across the street there was the pound of a pile driver. To the east was the sound of a steam shovel on an excavating job.

"One time——" the chauffeur began again. But two ladies came from the hotel and towards the car. The chauffeur touched his cap. Duty prevented the finishing of his anecdote.

Work and Play.

I strolled on toward the excavating job. The steam shovel rested in water at the bottom of the hole it had dug. A man was splashing about in rubber boots. There was the inevitable group of spectators. But no one in the row of onlookers could tell me what was being built—either didn't know or was not inclined to pass on the information.

Two laborers had erected a seive for sand, but at the first thrust of a shovelful against the wire the contraption collapsed.

"You can easily put it up again," I ventured.

"You bet," grinned one of the men. "Son of a gun. That won't hurt nobody."

He spoke painstakingly in a language that was new to him.

Two well dressed women, near Seneca street, greeted each other and started to chat together. Each had her dog along. One of the pets was a huge police dog and the other a fluffy lap dog. They eyed each other while their mistresses conversed.

At the side entrance of one of the new, big apartment hotels a moving van was drawn up. The two moving men had a couple of chairs left to put on the load.

"Moving time," I commented.

They paused in their work and looked me over.

"And it's harder to pack a small load like this than a big one," one of them said.

"I guess this is Streeterville," I ventured.

"Don't know. We've never been in this neck of the woods before. We're making a long distance haul."

"How long?"

"Lake Geneva."

"That's a nice place out there," I agreed.

"Got to make good money nowadays to get along, no matter where you live," one of them philosophized.

I came to a fenced off space inside of which five or six youths were playing baseball. They probably had come from the college near by. Maybe from some office. Out for the exercise. The fellow at bat wore a yellow sweater.

"Take your time!" yelled the batter to one who had just made a wide throw. His tone was one of complaint. Perhaps they belonged to a team practicing for a contest.

An airplane flew over.

"That's the Bremen," announced the first baseman. Looking toward the sky, he yelled: "Come on down and play ball."

* *

In Wieboldt Hall.

I came to the towering mass of masonry which, the sign informed me, is Northwestern university, McKinlock campus. I entered Wieboldt hall.

The interior of the place, with its dark finish and small paned windows, had a cathedral-like atmosphere. There were only two persons in the hall. A girl was placing letters in a sign on the bulletin board, and a man in uniform sat near the elevator. The sign called attention to a "contemporary thought lecture" that was to be held. The magic card and I were at college.

I stepped into the elevator and the operator asked me where I wanted to go. We were reaching the fourth floor. I told him that floor would do.

One of the office doors was open on the fourth floor. I peered in and saw a young girl at the desk beyond the railing. She glanced up as I entered. She smiled, and waited for me to make my wants known.

$50 WINNER

Miss Eleanor Goodrich, Northwestern university, McKinlock campus, cashes in on her courtesy.

"So this is the Northwestern university," I said.

"This is the building for the schools of commerce and journalism," she explained. "Still, we try in this office to help in all departments. In fact, this is the personnel department."

"And your work?" I asked.

"Well," she smiled, "I guess you'd call me the assistant to the assistant. You see, we try to help students in their personal problems."

"But I'm not a student," I hesitated.

"The ages run all the way from 16 to 68," she suggested. "It may be a little hard for me to explain just what the personnel department means. I'm going to get you one of our little booklets that will make it perfectly clear."

She hunted until she found one of the booklets.

* *

Serious Study.

"You're through school, I suppose," I ventured.

"I graduated in the liberal arts up at Evanston last June."

"Did you like it better up there or down here?"

"Down here," she enthused. "I'll tell you why. You see, students here are night students. They work all day and take the opportunity offered mighty seriously. Out at Evanston, if a 'prof' cuts a class ten minutes, the students are hilarious. Down here, if a professor does that, the students are furious. They've come a long way; they're further along in years."

"In school for all they can get out of it," I agreed.

"We've got a map," she said, "that gives the location—the home addresses—of our 4,100 students. It's on this wall over here. You wouldn't believe, to look at it, that there are more than 4,000 pins in that map, but there are. Just night students. The red pins are for the old students, the yellow ones for the new students, and the blue are for the graduates."

"And who has to come the farthest to night school?" I asked.

"There's one from Michigan City on the east, one from Crystal lake on the west, and one from Kenosha on the north. Perhaps there are about a hundred duals."

"'Duals'?"

"By that, I mean students who go to Evanston, and here, too. Those whose courses overlap. Some of those who go to Evanston come down here for the courses in the Medill School of Journalism, for instance."

* *

Interested.

"And you're interested in all of their problems."

"My job is to help," she replied. "As an outsider, you could attend the Wednesday night lecture from 7 to 8. The class has a discussion group following. I don't know as they'd let you stay to that. The lectures are on scientific subjects. Or we may have a musician, or one of the doctors from the medical faculty. I don't know what line you might be interested in."

"I'm interested in all you've told me," I confided. "Interested most of all, though, in the interest you've taken in me—a stranger at the railing. I might have been one more to add to the 4,100. You might have answered my questions perfunctorily and thought more of getting through with the interview than about your work and about me. I'm the Politeness Reporter. And you——"

She was Miss Eleanor Goodrich, 403 Weiboldt hall, Northwestern university, Lake Shore drive and Chicago avenue. And 13 Emerson street, Evanston, when her work day is done.

Clothes Make Kitchen Maid? Not in Chicago

Girl Reporter Gets Lesson from Freda.

sciously I was aware that I was guiltless of any such. Powdering my nose restored somewhat my morale, and helped to cover a surreptitious inspection of the girl's clothes.

From the crown of her sassy beige hat to the soles of her brown suede slippers, she was as smartly turned out as any woman of means and taste who might be met promenading the boulevard. I had eschewed the ensemble note in my attire, but Freda made the most of it.

Her coat, of cloth and fur trimmed, was a dark brown. Underneath it I caught glimpses of a dress of the identical shade, in crêpe. She wore brown kid gloves, the beige felt hat aforementioned, with suede slippers to match her coat, and her hose were the shade known as sunburn.

Quite possibly this outfit represented practically her entire wardrobe, barring work clothes. It was, of course, her best. And her best was good.

Learning About Women.

The upshot of it was that Freda and I joined forces to find the place we wanted. It didn't take long, but long enough for me to augment my information about maids and places. And I learned about women from her—women, that is, who hire and fire the Fredas. We swapped information about prospects and places, and voted thumbs down on one we had both tried and found things not to our liking.

"She wanted only to bay ten dollarss," disapproved Freda—or Brunhilde. "And she hass only those two dark liddle roomss, and I am avraid that iss a bad boy she hass."

In Chicago "vor yearss this spring," as she told me, nothing but her accent remained to reveal her foreign origin. She had worked for German families two years, then spent a year in one place she liked in Winnetka. Her employers moved away, and she had worked here and there, since then.

"It's awfully hard," I sympathized, "to find a good place."

"Yess," she agreed, "uff course, there are blenty of blaces, but it iss hard to find the right one."

Later—much later—I came to appreciate just how tersely she had expressed the entire situation.

At the moment, Bradley place having finally been discovered, the two of us went into an Alphonse and Gaston debate—"you first, my dear Freda," etc. Since the other girl was in good faith and my own object merely an interview, I insisted that she apply first. She demurred only a moment, and I watched her off down the block with a promise to wait there for her. I waited—and waited. She did not return.

In Pursuit of a Girl.

At last, convinced that she had taken the position and might even now be preparing lunch for the family, I gave it up as a bad job and started out to discover what had happened. Then I recalled that I had forgotten to find out from Freda whether it is customary to march right up to the front door or round to the kitchen. That was solved for me.

In a small vestibule at the address of the ad a card stuck in one corner of a mailbox advised, "see about ad at first door west." I reconnoitered. The first door west was another vestibule. Apparently no one was home. I rang all four bells and got no answer.

Back again to the first entrance, where I rang the bell underneath the card. Correct this time, for it belonged to the first door west—in that building. Immediately a young woman, enveloped in a bungalow apron, a child at her heels, appeared at the inner door, eyed the classified section in my hand, and said:

"You came about the ad—that's at my mother's, around the corner, the first house."

No wonder it had taken Freda—or Brunhilde—so long. I found the first house, after hasty inspections at first floor entrances to upstairs apartments over a drug store on the corner. The right place was a huge, old fashioned frame house. Right or not, I rapped at the front door without avail. So I wended my way around to the kitchen.

Freda Is Found.

It was a big room—no kitchenette proportions there. A red checkered tablecloth, askew on a table bearing the remains of a meal, was visible in the window. The door was flung open by a slim girl in a red sweater and a gingham dress and, as I followed her through into a living room so dark that the lights were burning at midday, I noted a sink heaped with piles of other dishes, a broken crate on the floor, and rather general disorder.

Peering up at me from a chair in the crowded living room was a prepossessing elderly woman, shading her eyes against the glare of the lamp on the center table. Freda sat opposite her, eyeing me without a sign of recognition. A plump, rosy cheeked younger woman with a towel on her head and her sleeves rolled up above the elbow was taking her name and address.

"Why, honey," the elder woman queried at me, "what'd you come round to the kitchen for? Kitchen doors are only for peddlers. You didn't need do that."

I explained that I hadn't been able to make them hear. They exclaimed that it was a shame. Freda got up, preparatory to leaving. She had come in the front way, I saw. Then we got down to business.

Invalid, but Not Sick.

Mrs. L—— was a big hearted, good natured Irishwoman who went to some length to explain to me that, while she was an invalid, she wasn't sick. An attack of neuritis some months before had left her unable to walk, and she needed some one to keep house until she recovered. The place was at sixes and sevens now, though her two neighbors, the plump woman and the slim girl, were helping out just then.

"I'm not sick," she insisted, "but I do want somebody around who won't look like a graveyard all the time—bad enough for me to look that way—somebody cheerful. There isn't much to do at all, beyond a little extra baking—my husband's a policeman, and he certainly does like a bit of cake or pie now and then. I s'pose you can cook?"

Assured on that point, she informed me that Freda, who had just left, was also looking for the place—"but she wanted to see about it for some other girl." So then, I reflected, Freda hadn't cared about this job, either. I asked what the wages were.

"I pay twelve dollars a week," Mrs. L—— said. "And it's plenty—for what there is to do. Two hours' work a day is about all it takes to keep the place neat. There's no washing, of course, but there would be a few things, aprons of mine, like, to iron out. And I need help to get around—some one to hold my arm. Then I'm all right."

For all that there were the big and crowded rooms to be cared for, and the extra duties of nurse, I decided there must be plenty of worse places to work than with this jolly old lady. Plenty of leisure—no washing to bother with, and $12 weekly above expenses.

They're All Alike.

Practically all positions are alike, I found, in that no laundry work, except some ironing, is required. Nearly every one wants a girl to stay at night, and provides her with a room and board, though, to be sure, there are rooms—and rooms; and board isn't alike everywhere. Since jobs innumerable in the commercial world are held by girls who might do housework but who prefer to accept ten, twelve, eighteen and twenty dollars weekly, domestic work is better paid in comparison with these.

With a promise to consider the position in question, I made my adieu and the best time possible to the next address on my list, which happened to be on Roscoe place in the 500 block.

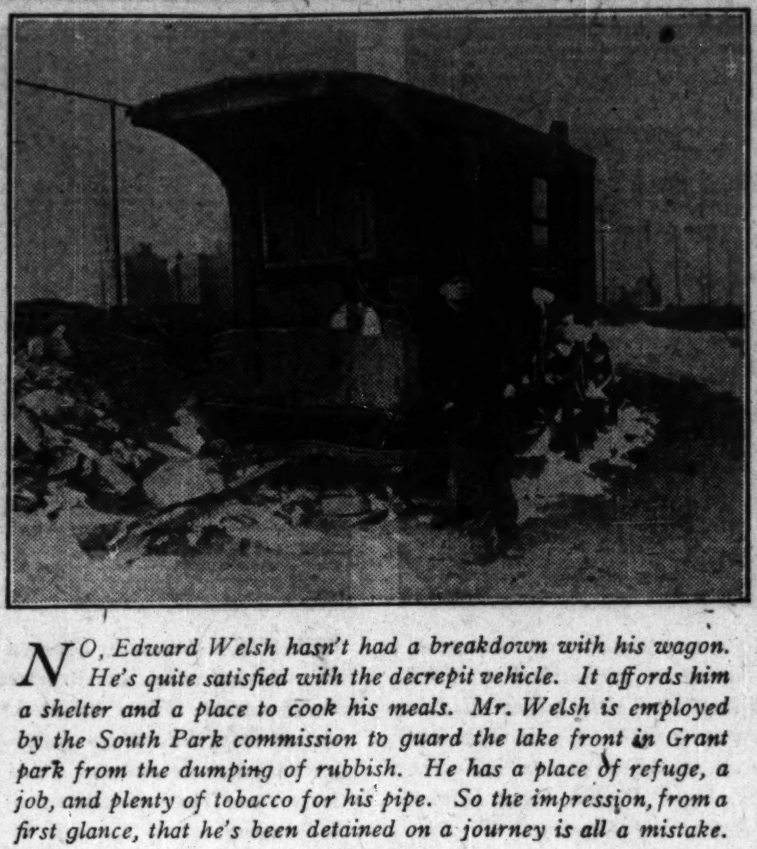
Confidently I entered the imposing lobby of a new flat building and rang the bell of the first apartment. No answer. I rang again, and then again. Then I explored the regions at the back of the building, and found a small boy playing on the porch, and an assortment of milk and cream bottles on the step.

To the collarless youth who opened the door a trifle at my knock, I confided my errand. He said to wait a minute—and shut the door. A moment later it was opened by a good looking young matron who eyed me from crown to toe in one sweeping glance, kept the door as vigilantly guarded as the boy had, informed me they had secured a maid—and shut the door.

I didn't learn much there, of course. Things might have been better—but the worst was yet to come. Also the best.

[This is the second of a series of "Maid in Chicago" true stories. The third will appear in the Metropolitan section next Sunday.]

A LONE WATCHMAN



No, Edward Welsh hasn't had a breakdown with his wagon. He's quite satisfied with the decrepit vehicle. It affords him a shelter and a place to cook his meals. Mr. Welsh is employed by the South Park commission to guard the lake front in Grant park from the dumping of rubbish. He has a place of refuge, a job, and plenty of tobacco for his pipe. So the impression, from a first glance, that he's been detained on a journey is all a mistake.

HIS TESTIMONIAL.

Mrs. Smithers had decided to have the floor of the drawing room polished, and, accordingly, sent to a large firm, asking them to pu a man on the job as soon as possible.

When the polisher arrived his manner was far from energetic and Mrs. Smithers was afraid he would not do the floor properly.

"Are you quite sure you understand the work?" she asked, after watching him for a time.

"You know Mrs. Girton's house, next door but one?" he said, rather indignantly. "Well, I refer you to her. On the polished floor of the dining room five persons broke their legs last winter and a woman slipped clean down the staircase. I polished all the floors!"—Tit-Bits, London.

A Great Saving.

After purchasing a coat for my small daughter in one of the reliable downtown stores, I came upon a bargain counter of hats, marked "your choice, 65 cents." In looking through the lot I found a beautiful velour trimmed with genuine beaver fur which fitted my child perfectly, matched the coat and had been reduced from $5.95; almost unbelievable.

My daughter wore it two seasons and now I shall pass it on to some other child who can wear it two more seasons.

It paid me to shop early. W. A. R.

A Remarkable Buy.

The keenest bargain I ever got was an all wool black and white coat with genuine civet fur collar for $16.75. It was man-tailored, too, and was made to sell for more than twice the amount paid, but was sold as a sample coat in a "bargain basement."

I considered myself fortunate—for I had been to every store in town without success! B. M.

For a Nickel.

In these days of high cost of living I don't believe any one ever got a much better bargain than mine—a pair of patent leather pumps for a nickel. It happened like this: I have an unusually hard foot to fit and always dread the shoe buying ordeal. Imagine my surprise, then, when a friend of mine came in one day and announced that she had bought me a pair of shoes. In some alarm I asked if they could be returned if they did not fit. She said no, but that I surely would not begrudge what I paid for them, and she handed me a bill for five cents. The shoes proved to be good looking and a perfect fit.

It happened that my friend worked in one of the loop stores which had become overstocked on certain unusual sizes of pumps. As they were not allowed to give away merchandise, they offered them for sale at that price to their employés and she had remembered me and my troublesome feet. E. Z.

Saved Money and Wear and Tear.

My eleven year old son is very hard on knickers. It made no difference what price I paid for them, they would last just two weeks, then they were beyond repair.

One day he came in with three suits on his arm asking if I wanted to buy one, as a man with a car full of clothing had sent them up. They were $1 a suit. Two of them looked like $1 but one was a beautiful all wool brown suit of heavy material. I assumed though it was a mistake, as it looked to be worth $18 or $20. I sent down the $3 and everything was all right. The suit fits him perfectly and it may sound unbelievable, but he has worn it six days a week for seven months without a patch and it will still last another month.

If I could get another suit like it I'd call it a bargain at $25. M. C.

LISTEN HERE, FOLKS:

This is a year in the Seed and Nursery business of general overproduction which occurs, according to statistics, only once in twenty years. Never since the war have prices of Grass Seed, Bulbs and Nursery Stock been so low as right now; and with the present increase in raw material and the price of labor, they will never be that cheap again.

If you contemplate using any Grass Seed, Bulbs, or Shrubs, buy right now because the market is your way and we will be glad to sell.

Dear Friends and Customers:

It has been a real pleasure to me that you have come to our special sales every Spring and Fall in such great numbers, so that we were often not able to wait on you right away. This has created a number of peddler wagons and fly-by-night stores to open and squat within the radius of a block or so, telling you that theirs is a branch store, just helping us out in the rush, but charging you more and giving you less for your money, while we pay for the advertising. I just want my friends, customers and prospective customers to be informed that we have only one store and have no affiliation with peddler wagons or other stores near here, and that we will be prepared to handle any kind of a rush as fast as you can come and as often as you can come.

The quality of our merchandise cannot be beaten; and I am sure that these very low prices cannot be beaten either, but they will do these four things:

1. Save you a lot of money on your garden purchase.
2. Move our tremendous supply quickly.
3. Call your attention to the fact that ours is a good house to buy from.
4. Bring in a lot of new friends and flower lovers.

Thanking you so much for your past favors and looking forward to your continued patronage, we remain, sincerely yours.

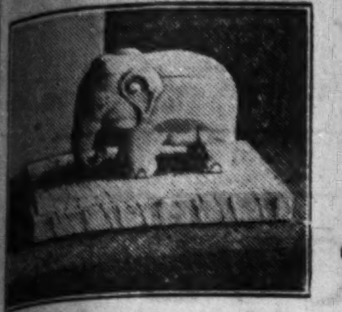
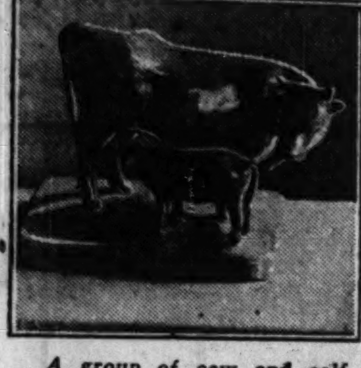
A Menagerie for the Early American Fan

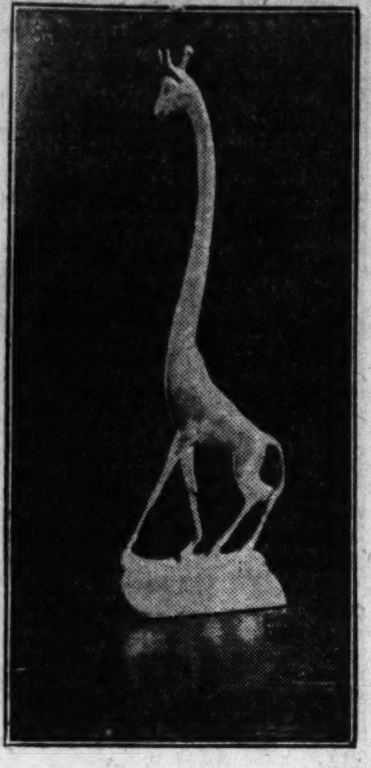
Birds and Beasts, Tame and Wild, in This Novelty Zoo



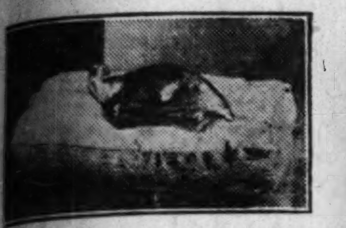
For the early American fan, a menagerie. This carved ivory elephant is one of the orientalia which the early sea merchants of New England brought to their wives in their sailing ships. It is old and therefore lovely in color.



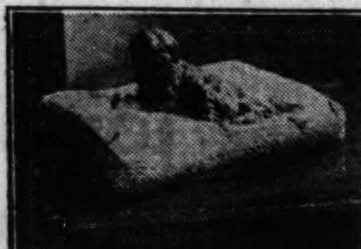
A group of cow and calf, one of those honest potteries so charming for their unpretentious sincerity. Such a piece is heavy enough to be useful as a paperweight. It resembles Bennington.



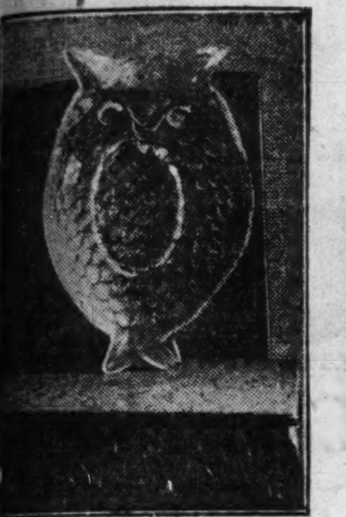
American — but not early American. He is a proof that modernism is not without art. A giraffe in brass, also for a doorstep, and delightful in his fantastic exaggerations.



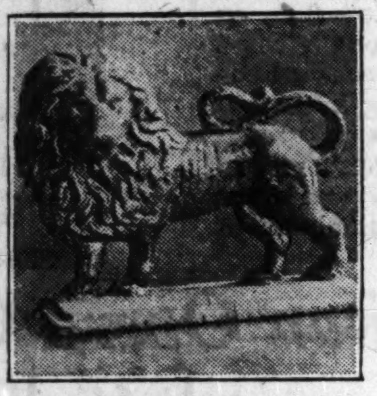
A glass turtle in a delightful green. His crudeness is his charm, and he is heavy enough to stop a door. He is old, even for a tortoise.



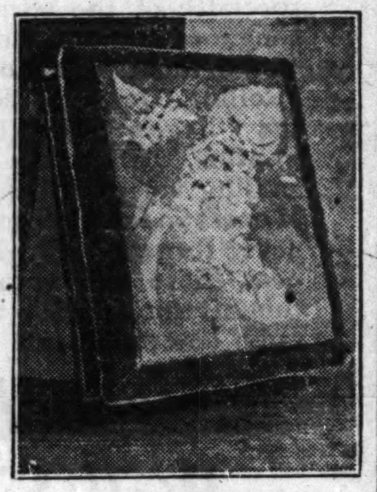
In the menagerie for collectors of Americana is a brass dog. His ancestry was English and a Yorkshire terrier. This one is after an English model.



A wise old owl. It is a deep dish of pressed glass in oyster white. It probably was used for piccalilli or some sort of condiment. It is an amusing piece.



A lion in castiron for a doorstep. Castiron came in in the early nineteenth century. It can be seen at its best on windows and balconies in New Orleans. To collect objects made of it is now a fad.



A footstool in walnut, covered with an old piece of needlepoint combined with bead work. The colors are lovely greens and whites on a red background, and the edges of the stool are old green velvet.

To Tell League of Nations of Samoa's Unrest

AUCKLAND, New Zealand.—(AP)—Sir George Richardson, former administrator of Western Samoa for the New Zealand government under its mandate for the league of nations, has arrived here to confer with the government before proceeding to Geneva to appear before the mandates committee.

Sir George, who was administrator of Samoa for five years, will give evidence to the committee, as representative of New Zealand, about the recent conditions of unrest there. These caused the government to send two cruisers to the island, with the result that 400 natives were arrested and several Europeans alleged to have been their leaders were expelled.

"There never has been any desire on the part of the natives for a change of the flag which flies over Samoa," Sir George says. "I regret that there has been any such suggestion. It was invented by conspirators on Apia beach who buttonhole tourists and talk this way."

Sir George has been succeeded by Col. Stephen St. Allen, who has the problem of determining the disposition of the arrested natives, who are being held.

What Do You Know About Our Trees?

Which Statements Are True; Which False?

How much do you know about trees? How many can you identify by their silhouette? You can distinguish between a Lombardy poplar and a weeping willow, but how about an elm and an oak?

This quiz is composed of statements, some true, some false, concerning trees, their appearance, manner of growing, uses and names. Decide whether you think the statement is true or false and then compare your decision with the answer elsewhere in this section.

Credit yourself with 2 points for every statement marked correctly. Then a final score of 70 is fair, 80 is good, 90 is excellent, and 100 means you are a nut!

Would Alter Dress of Girls in Italy

ROME.—(AP)—Bare arms, low necks and short skirts would be taboo for Italian high school and college girls if Minister of Education Fedele took the action asked in a letter now before him.

The body known as "the national committee for the correctness of the mode," has petitioned him, requesting that all those whose costume "does not conform to that modesty which is dictated by civilized Christian usage and sentiment" be barred from the institutions under his control.

The school supervisors in several large provincial cities have already publicly admonished girl students for "immodest dress," but with little effect, and the "correctness of the mode" committee wants government action.

France Offers Prizes for New Flying Records

PARIS.—(AP)—France yearns so strongly to recapture aviation records that were hers a few years ago that the government has hung up tempting prizes in cash for builders of airplanes.

The prizes, totaling several hundred thousand francs, are offered to French airplane makers if their products succeed in breaking the records for speed, altitude, duration and long distance. The time limit is Oct. 31, 1928.

In each case, the reward will be greater should the record be made by a seaplane rather than a land plane. For example, if a land plane made in France should establish and hold on to the speed record, the airplane builder would receive 140,000 francs and the maker of the motor 60,000. But if a seaplane does the trick, the builder would receive 200,000 francs from the government.

It was only a few years ago that France held all of the records simultaneously, speed, long distance and duration, but other countries have taken them from her at different times.

LESSONS IN AUCTION BRIDGE

By R. M. Rogers

ARTICLE 6.

Nearly half the success at bridge is due to skill in the bidding. Novices at the game either bid more than the hands warrant and incur a penalty or almost as often fail to handle the bidding advisedly enough to find the best declaration for the combined hands. A simple illustration of how this can happen would be for a dealer to make a bid, say of three diamonds when he holds the ace, king, queen at the top of six in the suit. He will probably make the three diamonds, but wouldn't go game, while if he had bid two diamonds his partner with such information would bid no trump and game would be made. If it was rubber game and only three diamonds were made while three no trumps could have been made and on the next deal the adversaries do go game there would be a difference of 600 points in the score, and the loss could be directly chargeable to the three diamond bid.

One of the things never to be forgotten is that the first bid is for information to partner and not necessarily for the purpose of play. It is to tell if possible how many tricks the bidder holds under his declaration and how many he has in the event that his partner should change the bid. Three different stories are told by a bid of one or two or three, and last Sunday's article told the difference in those stories.

If each partner knows how to count the tricks in his hand and always tells the truth when he bids, then it should be a matter of no great difficulty to ascertain rather accurately what the best final bid should be either for going game or preventing adversary from going game, or doubling the adversary who goes too far.

Without the knowledge of how to correctly count the number of tricks in the hand a truthful informatory bid cannot be made, and with those players who don't have that knowledge, bidding becomes guesswork and luck, rather than skill.

In counting tricks as a bidder, always assume that partner, if he has not passed, has three tricks in support of your bid. Also assume that if you name a suit as trump your left hand adversary will always hold the highest three trumps not in your own hand.

With a suit as trump count all trumps left in hand after third round one trick each and each trump that will win first, second, or third round one trick each.

In a side suit count an ace and king two tricks, an ace or king and one or queen and two, one trick each, and all cards in a suit that is, or after it is established and can be brought in, one trick each.

As a partner of the suit bidder in the trump suit count K or Q and one, or three small trumps, one trick. Holding less than the above will produce loss of one trick. Excess of three trumps, one trick each, A or K-Q two tricks.

In a side suit: A or K-Q, two tricks; A-K, four tricks; K and one or Q and two, one trick. All cards in suit when established, one trick each.

As a bidder of no trump, count an A or K-Q one trick each; an A-K or K-Q-J two tricks, and K and one or Q and two one trick each; all cards in a suit after it is established, one trick each. In no trump partner counts his hand in the same way if called upon for support, except as below.

Note: When partner of a suit bidder counts his hand, he counts the aces as two tricks each and he should do the same thing when estimating his bid in support of partner's no trump. The opponent, however, in either case only counts an ace as worth one trick.

As opponent of a suit bidder count side suits: A or K-Q, one trick; A-K, two tricks; K-Q-J one trick. In trumps any trump card that will win first, second or third round, one trick; any trump left after third round, one trick.

As opponent of no trump bidder, cards in established suit, one trick each. Cards left in suit that can be established if hand holds card of reentry, one trick each. A or K-Q, one trick. A-K, two tricks. K-Q-J, two tricks.

When a partner has passed a bidder must assume that he can only find in his partner's hand two tricks in support of any bid that he makes. Illustration:

Farm Bureau's Summer Series to Begin Soon

135 Radio Stations Put U. S. Service on Air.

As the 1927-'28 winter broadcast season closes 135 commercial and college radio stations are coöperating with the United States department of agriculture in broadcasting educational farming and home making features.

The winter release schedule of the radio service of the department will terminate tomorrow. A summer program, including four features—housekeepers' chats, farm flashes, the farm news digest, and the agricultural situation—will be carried by most of the coöperating stations.

Make Plans for Winter

Plans now are in the making for the 1928-'29 winter season program of the department. The experience of the past two years—the first two years of the radio service—will guide the preparation of next season's program, according to Morse Salisbury, chief of the service. One important change will provide listeners of each major agricultural section with broadcasts of farming information specialized to fit farming conditions peculiar to their region.

Commenting on the growing appreciation of radio's possibilities as an educational medium, Salisbury pointed to the results of a 1927 survey among farmers of two Kansas counties. Federal and state extension workers report in the summary of the survey, just published, that 34.8 per cent of the 188 farmer radio listeners interviewed in Sedgwick and Clay counties, Kansas, adopted improved farming practices as a result of information obtained over radio.

Many Farmers Use It.

The extension workers talked with 532 farm families in the two counties. They found that 188 of the families had radios. Radio broadcasts received on these sets had caused directly the adoption of 156 different improved farming and home making practices—11 per cent of all improved practices adopted on the 532 farms in the 9 years since extension work was inaugurated in the two counties.

"Considering the fact that radio has been at work in these communities for not more than 5 years, and extensively—as measured by the number of farm owned receiving sets—for much less than that period," said Salisbury, "these statistics indicate that radio is now and will increasingly be a most effective means of agricultural education."

Jeanne Gordon, Metropolitan Star, Will Sing Tonight

Jeanne Gordon, contralto with the Metropolitan Opera company will be the leading artist in the concert to be broadcast in the Atwater Kent radio hour tonight. The program will be broadcast by W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel. Assisting Miss Gordon will be a male chorus of sixteen voices under the direction of Reinald Werrenrath, popular American baritone; Phillip Bernath, cello soloist, and an orchestra with Robert Hood Bowers, conductor.

Miss Gordon will sing but two operatic numbers. She has selected from Mignon the song considered by many one of the loveliest in the entire range of opera—"Connaise tu le pays"—"Knowest thou yonder land where the orange grows?" It expresses the passionate longing of the orphan child for the home of her infancy.

Miss Gordon's other selection is the opening air from Carmen, "Haberna" or "Love Is Like a Wood Bird." This old Spanish song was interpolated by the composer. Bizet considered it particularly appropriate to the mood of Carmen who in the opening scene is piqued at Don José's indifference to her charms.

Miss Gordon is a Canadian and obtained most of her schooling at Havergal college in Toronto, and at the Toronto Conservatory of Music. She later studied abroad. Returning to New York, she sang for six weeks in motion picture houses before an engagement with Creatore and his orchestra brought her to public attention and started her on a rapid rise to the Metropolitan Opera company.

Jock Hutchison to Begin Golf Talks Next Sunday Night

Jock Hutchinson, golfing champion, is to give a series of golf lessons over W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel, starting next Sunday night at 10:10 o'clock. The famous professional, who has held many championships, is conducting a series of lessons daily in THE TRIBUNE, and he will supplement these instructions with weekly talks on W-G-N, in which he will describe the fine points of the game. Each Sunday talk will occupy ten minutes. Jock was expected to start his radio talks tonight, but a bad cold has spoiled his voice and is keeping him from the microphone.

English Minister Talks Tonight at Sunday Eve Club

Dr. T. Ferrier Hulme, Bristol, England, leader of the Wesleyan Methodist church of Great Britain, will be the speaker before the Sunday Evening club in Orchestra hall tonight and his address will be broadcast by WMAQ.

At the 7 o'clock service Dr. Albert W. Palmer will deliver the last of his informal Bible talks on Old Testament characters entitled "Some Typical Saints and Sinners."

The choir of 100, under the direction of Edgar Nelson, will sing, while Mark Love will be the soloist of the evening.

Dr. Copeland Smith's Question Box

A World of Free Men.

THE old, old question comes from Kingston avenue, Chicago: "Is it consistent to say that a just God would create man and permit him to live in such a way that he could sin and then punish him forever and ever because of that weakness?

There is a fault of logic known as begging the question. This question does it in several places. Sin is assumed to be weakness in a being free to do what he will. It also assumes as a matter that is settled amongst thinkers and Biblical students that a man who has been guilty of what my friend calls weakness will suffer forever and ever at the hands of God. That is not agreed by Biblical scholars as agreed Biblical teaching about punishment.

But the question remains and the answer is that there would have been no virtue in an automatic goodness. Man's freedom made him worth while to God—if I may bluntly put it like that. There were mechanical virtues enough in the universe and what God needed was somebody free to respond to His approaches—or to reject them.

I do not believe, personally, that God punishes folk for sinning against the conventions and restrictions which man creates. What He may punish man for is that unneighborliness and selfishness which opposes the best interests of that universal family to which we, with all living things, belong—and of which He is the All-Father. Another way of saying that is that God need not punish at all. The consequences of such selfishness are contained within the selfishness itself; just as the consequences of an unrestricted meat diet are contained within the diet itself and in our bodily reactions to it. To complain of that is to bring a charge against the constitution of the universe which seems as foolish as it is vain.

A Marriage Problem.

HERE is a story, which is probably typical of many. It comes from a lady here in Chicago, who says: I am 23 years of age and was married on the spur of the moment when 19, being divorced shortly after. I am now engaged to a school mate who knows all about the incident. We care for one another very much, but his mother seriously objects to our marriage. She thinks we are not suited to each other, and my being married before seems to her to be something terrible. She has a son at home who has recently got a divorce, but this seems quite all right to her. What do you think about it?

Quite a number of things. First of all, when I advocated a lethal chamber for interfering parents some time ago, I did so half seriously, but I am surprized to find that such a movement would be more or less popular. The mother has no business in the world to interfere, and you folk must brush her aside and settle your own future. I receive reports of at least ten tragedies a week through this cause. Vampire wives are very terrible persons, but I sometimes think that vampire mothers are worse. They exist and they are generally widows.

Of course, what one wants to know is the cause of your divorce. If it was due to some infidelity of your own, I doubt if you should not pay some of the price of that infidelity. That kind of thing makes the mothers of sons anxious for their happiness.

The root of the trouble is in that statement of yours that you were married on the spur of the moment. When the states of America will sacrifice some more of their state rights to allow the federal government to pass a law prohibiting marriage until at least three weeks' notice of marriage has been given, we may expect some drop in our mounting divorce statistics—and not till then.

Who Was Lilith?

FROM North Marshfield avenue, Chicago, comes a question asking how it happens that, if Lilith was Adam's first wife, Eve is so designated in our Bible. My correspondent refers me to Webster's Dictionary for a references to Lilith.

But there are, of course, many references to Lilith. The name is translated into English to mean either a screech owl, a night monster, or a night fairy—the idea of night or darkness being predominant in all the translations. In the marginal readings of Isaiah 34 and verse 14, some Bibles have the word "Lilith" where the text has "night monster." In Jewish mythology this night monster had her abode in the region around the Dead Sea, and seems to have been a kind of goddess of desolation.

Not until the seventh century after Christ does she seem to be identified with Adam, when a group of Mesapotamian Jews worshipped her. They said she was the first wife of Adam, but fled away from him and became a demon. The whole story is mythological—the Greeks not being the only nation that possessed a mythology—though Rabbinical literature uses Lilith for the teaching of certain moral precepts.

Festivals Jesus Kept.

A QUESTION from Thorndale avenue, Chicago, raises the whole question of what importance the observance of the literal example of Christ has for the Christian. My questioner asks, "Why, if we are so eager to follow Christ, do we not keep the Jewish feasts which He kept?"

Christ wore sandals. They are inappropriate to our streets and our climate. Nobody could accuse him of being custom-ridden. Indeed, one of the charges most frequently made against Him was that He did not encourage His disciples to keep the ancient Jewish customs. But it really is surprising how many of the feasts He kept are kept by us. For instance, the Jews kept a feast in the summer time called the feast of tabernacles, reminding them of their nomad days. We city dwellers keep that same feast when we adjourn to the country cottage or the auto camping ground. Good Friday and Easter coincide with the Passover and we keep those days in much the same sense of the deliverance wrought in our lives by religion.

But Christ never expected His followers to be literalists in the matter of conduct. He only left one literal commandment concerning conduct. That was concerned with the Lord's supper which He told us to keep in remembrance of Him—though we don't do it in large numbers. For the rest, He expected us to use our own sanctified common sense in the application of His teaching to our own lives and, above all, to avoid criticism of those who thought and acted differently.

I AM asked from South Bend, Ind., whether it is possible to get below the accretions of the years and define the original Christian religion.

I think it is possible and I think it is necessary. Christ refused to place the religious emphasis upon belief. He put it up on conduct and condemned those who thought that reclamation came by merely believing.

The original Christian religion is found in the tenth chapter of Luke and the verses from the 25th to the end of the chapter. There, both the Jewish lawyer and the Nazarene defined religion to consist in loving the Lord our God with all our heart, mind, understanding, and strength—and our neighbor as ourself. The implications of all that are enough to occupy the thought of a lifetime and the moral courage of a hero. Christ died because of His resolute determination to be true to that creed, which brought him into conflict with the self-interest and prejudices of men.

I am not sure, however, that all the rest is accretion. Man is a thinking animal and, in the course of his thinking, it was inevitable that he should ask who was this that dared to change life's values—thus producing a theology of the personality of Christ. It was also inevitable that man should ask what were the implications of loving God and one's neighbor—thus producing a theology of Atonement.

But there is much that is the result of preconception and prejudice and this is accretion, of course.

N. T. Manuscripts.

FROM Darlington, Wis., comes a question that I will give exactly as received: The oldest extant manuscripts of which the Bible is composed were written about 350 years after Christ. Why say that our Bible is translated from the original Greek when the original has long since been lost?

There are several copies of the N. T. which are nearly complete, if not entirely so. Two of them, called, respectively, the Codex Siniaticus and the Codex Vaticanus, date from the middle of the fourth century. That is to say, they were written within 300 years of the death of Christ. The Siniaticus is a complete copy of the New Testament, with other books also, including the whole of the Old Testament and what is called the Epistle of Barnabas. The Vaticanus—so called because it lies in the vatican, at Rome, contains the whole of the New Testament to the Epistle to the Hebrews. Both are in Greek, the language in which the New Testament was originally written. Hence, they are in the original Greek.

There are, of course, many other manuscripts in addition to these, estimated to number 3,829. This figure refers only to Greek manuscripts, not to a larger multitude of ancient Latin copies, some of them quite as old as the oldest Greek copies. It was by checking these manuscripts with each other for variations that the translators got their present pure text of the original copies so that the phrase they use when speaking of translating from the original Greek seems entirely justified.

The authenticity of the writings of the N. T., as distinct from the actual text of the writings themselves, is proved by references from times almost contemporaneous with the New Testament itself. Thus, Polycarp, who died A. D. 146, makes actual quotations in his writings, obviously written before this date, from N. T. books. The field is a wide one and cannot be covered in a short answer, but the evidence for the date of the N. T. books grows stronger and more various every year.

Alaskan Hears Sunday Sermon Saturday Night

Listens to Preaching from Australia.

Hearing on Saturday night a sermon preached in Australia on Sunday night is one of the marvels attained through radio and reported by Dr. Grafton Burke, director of the Hudson Stuck Memorial hospital at Fort Yukon, Alaska. Dr. Burke has just arrived here from his Alaskan post.

On a recent Saturday night at Fort Yukon, trying for long distance, Dr. Burke picked up a sermon being preached on Sunday night at the English cathedral in Sydney, Australia. A short time later the same evening, he tuned in a jazz concert being broadcast from Broadway in New York.

"We heard the sermon distinctly," says Dr. Burke, "and the music from Broadway was good enough to dance to."

Difference in Time.

The feat of hearing on Saturday night Alaskan time, a sermon being preached on Sunday night in Sydney, Australian time, is accounted for by the fact that in adjusting the time between east and west, a whole day is lost [or gained]. Even so, radio enthusiasts will cast longing eyes at Dr. Burke who, perched at the top of the world, can face the west and from Australia across 5,000 miles of water hear a sermon; and, the service over, face the east and tune in on a jazz concert in New York.

Dr. Burke has succeeded at various time in getting Yokahama, Japan; Glasgow, Scotland; Portland, Ore.; San Francisco and Los Angeles; Dallas, Tex., Chicago and other points.

"Not so long ago," says Dr. Burke, whose hospital is part of the missionary enterprise of the Episcopal church in Alaska, "when I wanted to send an important telegram to New York, I had to hitch up a dog team and mush three days to an interior cable station, wait three days there for an answer and then mush three days back to the hospital—nine days in all. Today the government wireless station at Fort Yukon takes the message and I have a reply back in a few hours."

Hears Best When It's Dark.

Dr. Burke has a four unit radio outfit. He gets power for it from a storage battery charged from the gasoline engine which furnished light and power for his hospital.

Discussing conditions which affect radio reception in Alaska, Dr. Burke said he has observed that on nights when it is darkest, the greatest distance is attained. He says that intense cold does not in itself affect reception, but during the long winter when the country is frozen in, results are more satisfactory. With the breakup of winter, when factories begin operation, river traffic opens, electric plants resume activities, and wireless stations are in use, the radio results are less satisfactory.

Dr. Burke says the efficiency of missionary and medical work has been improved 100 per cent by the combined use of the radio and airplane. A year ago, when an influenza epidemic was raging in Fort Yukon, it was a radio broadcast which brought a Red Cross nurse and other assistance by airplane and saved the situation.

String Quartet and Tenor Give Program on W-G-N Thursday

String quartet music and the tenor voice of Walter Pontius—these are features which will make the 7:30 to 8 program next Thursday night from W-G-N particularly interesting to listeners. Mr. Pontius has received many ovations from radio listeners since becoming a member of the W-G-N vocal group, and his choice of songs and classic rendition of each number is well known. The string quartet will be heard in popular selections from the world's store of quartet music. The W-G-N string quartet includes William Levitt and George Wlado, violinists; Gaston du Moulin, violist, and Johann Lingeman, cellist. Du Moulin is the conductor of the W-G-N concert orchestra, while Lingeman is an internationally famous cellist. Levitt, the first violin, won first prize in last year's national contest conducted by the National Music Clubs' federation.

RADIO IMPORTS GROW.

BY QUIN A. RYAN.

THE radio announcers we have with us always. They have become as much a part of our households as the goldfish and the world's fair spoons.

In considering this new guild of functionaries, all of us are inclined either to beam too indulgently as we contemplate our favorites among them, or, on the other hand, to think too derisively upon the shortcomings of the brethren as a whole. This isn't fair to the lads. They deserve neither the adulation they receive, nor yet the raspberry corsages.

Adulation only swells youthful heads that are too prone to inflation at the outset. The public's awe and admiration for the radio itself is fatuously taken to be awe and admiration for the individual, and lo! and behold! we find the young scalliwags commenting in the press on their art and their public and their cosmos, alongside of similar comments by "Miss Egg Rapids, Nebraska." The weather man is as much in the limelight as they are, but it doesn't go to his head.

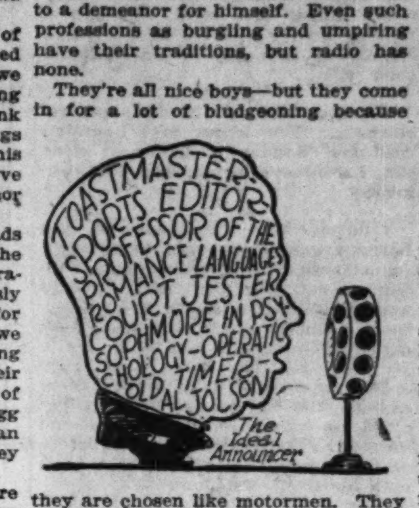
And yet—my, my how they are picked on! In half a dozen Broadway revues there are sketches burlesquing the radio barkers. From any bundle of listeners' letters or newspaper clippings we may gather that, after they are admitted every evening into the domestic circles, their deportment is frightful.

We are told that they cut up with lugubrious humor—they make themselves fraternally chummy—they drop their r's or forget to—they gargle European pronunciations—they spout tedious pages from the music encyclopedias—they employ a phraseology as sparkling as a ventriloquist's—and they devote a large part of their prize fight and ball game broadcasts to advertising their partner announcers. Whew!

The ideal announcer, if we total the complaints of the radio devotees, should be a correctly proportioned compound of toastmaster, sports editor, professor of the romance languages, court jester, sophomore in psychology, operatic old timer, and Al Jolson. And, in theory, the man who acts as interlocutor in the widest show on earth, probably ought to be such a paragon. The operating budgets of this gratuitous business of broadcasting, of course, cannot attract a personage of these multi-colored talents.

The true trouble with the radio announcer is that he has had no mother to guide him. His work has no precedent. It has, generally speaking, no rules and regulations. His racket is so new that he is still undecided as to a demeanor for himself. Even such professions as burgling and umpiring have their traditions, but radio has none.

They're all nice boys—but they come in for a lot of bludgeoning because they are chosen like motormen. They run no gantlet of mental or personality tests. They have just "growed," in the manner of Topsy and corned beef hash. They have been accepted because they own nice voices, or because they can double in piano playing, or because they are old employés from another department. Unless they are downright awful, the letters of commendation will come romping in, and then their jobs are safe.



The best of the announcers are only good readers. The more pompous and wise they sound in their introductions, the more you may be sure they are reading something that has been written for them by sombody else on the premises. But, like small time vaudevillians, much of their spare time is devoted to braggadocio. One of our Chicago voices whose pearly words were written for him by other men, has often boasted that his voice is so well known that he need never announce his call letters—yet, at the same time, he shouts his name on every occasion, for sweet publicity's sake.

Announcers ought to be spanked.

SAMUEL PUTNAM, writing his fortnightly sketch from Paris in "The Chicagoan"—"One has to live in Paris to realize, though the aware few elsewhere are suspecting it, that the old arts are as dead as the proverbial doornail or American prohibition. . . . In the meanwhile, new arts are flourishing all around us back home. There is the cinema, the first great and truly popular art, as some one has remarked, since the Gothic cathedrals and the chansons de geste. There is the popular sports writer, who has done more things to the language—but suppose we sidestep comparisons, being content to remark, merely, that there is more literature in the baseball and prize fight columns than in any 'literary supplement.' Then there is the radio and the radio announcer. Our Quin Ryans have done much here. Yes, there are lusty young arts frolicking all about us, but most of us are too highbrow to see them, while they think themselves too lowbrow to be anything so highbrow as art, if you know what I mean. And these infantile arts are coming, not out of Paris, but out of America."

WE HAD a visit again lat wee[illegible] from the Kenosha mailman who [illegible] the world's greatest radio-baseb[illegible] fan. It was the Kenosha mailm[illegible] who complained, last year, to the scores of housewives living along his postal route that he was missing the first half of the Cub games because he couldn't complete his walk until 4 o'clock. One bright lady was inspired with a helpful idea; she passed the plan down the line to the other housekeepers; and lo! one afternoon when the postman came around his route, he found that every house had its loud speaker in the front window or on the front porch, and all through the summer he marched his daily miles and never missed a ball or strike from the announcer's lips!

Waltzes, New and Old, on W-G-N Weekly

Waltzes—the classics and the moderns—are featured in the new "Waltz Time Reverie," broadcast every Wednesday night from W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel, between 7:30 and 8 o'clock. The early years of the century saw many popular waltzes, and these are being revived in part in this new program. The melodies are played by specially selected members of the W-G-N orchestra.

Clothes Make the Maid? Not in Chicago, She Finds

Aviation Club at Lane Tech Seeks Prizes

Tilden and Crane Also Enter Big Tourney.

By The Aviation Editor.

THE Lane Tech High School Aviation club is building for the all Chicago model airplane tourney which is being sponsored by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE. And Lane's club is confident that some of the prizes will be pinned on the chests of its members.

The model tournament will be held on three days. On May 19 at Soldiers' field the outdoor duration contest for scale models will be held. On May 26 the outdoor duration, open class, will be run off on the big meadow at Washington park while the indoor duration tourney will be held in the 132d Infantry armory, I. N. G., at Rockwell and Madison streets on May 27.

Lane has sponsored the building of model airplanes and a model airplane club for the last two years. Previous to 1926 there were several boys in school who built model airships and flew them but there wasn't a supervised effort to carry on the work. In 1926 William A. Sears, a flyer who gained considerable repute in the government air mail service, took over the model building and immediately plans were laid for the formation of a club.

* *

Make Scale Models Only.

The Lane Tech club makes scale models of planes only. Some of the boys have tried the single stick flying machines but Director Sears doesn't encourage this work.

"We want to build scale models," Mr. Sears said. "We want the models of real flying machines which will prove of value to the boys after they get out of school, and the club works along this plan."

Each boy must build a scale model of some popular type of airplane before he gets his club pin at Lane. Any boy in school can attend the club meetings and get advice and help by the members and Director Sears, but before the pin emblematic of a membership in the club is conferred upon a boy he must present a ship built from plans furnished by the club.

All materials used in the construction of the models can be purchased at the school. But the work of building the planes is done mainly in the boys' respective homes. This is necessary because Lane Tech is crowded for space in its old school building and until the new Lane Tech building is built the model work will be home work.

Have Plans for Course.

Principal Grant Beebe of Lane and Athletic Director Max Strass, who besides his athletic work takes a keen interest and lends a hand in the running of the various clubs in the school, hoping to increase the aviation work in the school when sufficient space for work and club rooms are available. It is hoped that the plans now in the process of drawing for the building of a new and greater Lane Tech high school, on the grounds now occupied by the Mid-City golf course at Addison

Girl Reporter Gets Lesson from Freda

Seeks Kitchen Work in Mediocre Getup.

By Kathleen McLaughlin.

WHEN you're in Rome they do say it's advisable to do as the Romans do. And when you set out to impersonate a maid in search of a job the same logic ought to apply.

My intentions certainly lay along that line—but I found myself somewhat handicapped by lack of knowledge of what maids do when they go job hunting. Then, too, there was the problems of what maids wear on such occasions.

Intent as I was on gleaning first hand information as to the reason for the popular unpopularity of the trade profession, or calling of domestic service, these things mattered to me. Indeed, they assumed unduly important proportions at first—proportions that faded into insignificance as my experience accumulated along with the number of my applications.

Somebody once remarked that clothes make the man. Maybe. But they don't make the maid. That was my mistake.

* *

The Mediocre Makeup.

My initial excursions in pursuit of a phantom job were made, as an earlier chapter related, in my unadvised impression of the wardrobe the average maid might be expected to adopt in her leisure hours.

The mediocre getup I chose avoided anything resembling the ensemble idea: brown hat, blue cloth coat, black dress, hose and shoes. All had seen adequate service but were good for considerable more. A sort of discreet neutrality, it was, between the chic and the shabby.

Then, quite by chance, I got an object lesson that left me temporarily clothes conscious and much amused.

One of the addresses I had selected from the want ad columns was on Bradley place, west of Lincoln avenue. Just about here an intersecting north and south street is apt to prove a bit puzzling to strangers in the vicinity. Eyes on the street numbers and my mind on my street guide, I was wandering down Lincoln avenue when a girl, coming in the opposite direction, halted me with a question.

"Pardon me—coot you tell me where iss Bradley blace?"

She had a wonderfully musical voice, a marked German accent, and a wealth of blonde hair. If her name wasn't Freda or Brunhilde or something equally Teutonic, it should have been.

Instantly I knew that we were in search of the same number, and that here was a potential rival for the position I intended to inquire about. Preserving my gravity with something of an effort, I asked what number she wanted. Righto! She named the one I was seeking.

"It seems," I told her, "that we're looking for the same place. Did you want to see about the ad?"

"Yess," she acknowledged, "I am looking vor a bosition."

Shaded by Comparison.

Only the situation itself saved me, for I giggled outright. The other girl, who could not possibly know that I was laughing at myself and not at her, looked at me doubtfully, then smiled a slow German smile as I explained that it was very funny we should have met.

What was much funnier than that was—that here was a bona fide maid, actually and earnestly in search of a job, and that her costume (for it was that) would have done credit to any business woman, be her calling what it may.

Subconsciously I developed holes in my glove finger tips, ravelings on my coat, a runner in one stocking. Con-

LEARNING ABOUT WOMEN

WHEN the newspaper woman set out to "hunt" a household job she encountered a fellow seeker whose clothes were better than her own. While the two scanned a street guide to find the location of an advertised address, the stranger told the reporter about kitchen work and how to get it—and about her fellow women.

LADIES' DAY

JUST how many of the fair sex understand baseball in all its finer points the photographer doesn't know, but he has caught the expressions on the faces of a group during "ladies' day" at the Cubs' ball park, and he leaves it for you to decide as to their reaction to the play that has just been made. At least one of their concerns, it would appear, was to keep warm.

NOT A SCENE IN TOKIO

ONE might easily imagine that this picture was snapped in the land of the Mikado. And no wonder, for Japanese carpenters built the three houses out of teak wood from Japan, and two hundred Japanese students did the interior decorating. In place of cherry trees we have the Chicago variety of timber, for the houses are located on Wooded island in Jackson park. During the World's Fair the bungalows were used for Japanese tearooms.

SOAP BOX ORATORY

AN added symbol of spring is the appearance again of open air oratory in Washington square. Or, rather, the sound of oratory and the reassembling of speakers and their listeners. This gathering has crossed the street to the steps of the Newberry library, and the address is being given by Sydney Percival Eaden, B. A. No doubt several members of the audience are having their "say" at the same time.

and Western avenues, will include this room for aviation.

Principal Beebe and Director Strass have plans for putting aviation ground work in the school as a credit course. The work would be run as a part of the regular mechanical course, and would be with both model and full sized planes. Some of Detroit's high schools already have instituted an aviation course, according to Principal Beebe.

There are several complete models in the Lane Tech club now. One boy even has built a model of a dirigible, and plans to fill the big gas bag housing with tiny balloons inflated with hydrogen. This flying machine of course would not be accepted in THE TRIBUNE'S tournament. Several of the models are exact reproductions in miniature of the big ships now in government and commercial service.

Director Sears states that his club boys would start building new machines and repairing their old planes to start in the tourney.

It is expected that more than 50 flyers will compete in the tourney under the colors of the Lane club.

Active at Tilden Tech.

Out at Tilden Tech high school, Principal Evans reports that his aviation club is working overtime to prepare for the tourney. E. R. Christiansen is the instructor at Tilden in charge of the boys, and he has been kept busy getting out supplies. More boys are taking to aviation at Tilden than ever before, and indications point to a big entry from the south side school.

Crane Tech also has an aviation club which has done considerable work with the models. Crane isn't going to be left behind and several of the west side boys are making ships for the meet.

The tournament is open to all boys. There is no entry fee, and THE TRIBUNE is providing the prizes. The tournament is a part of the national meet and the winners in the all-Chicago events will be sent to Detroit to participate in the national championships which will be held during the summer. The high points of the rules are printed below. All that is required to enter is to clip out the entry coupon appearing in THE TRIBUNE, and fill it out and mail as directed.

Chinese Topers Glimpse Smokes and Then Drink

CANTON.—(AP)—Cantonese topers prefer to see their snakes before drinking rather than after. Snake gall is an ingredient of a favorite winter beverage of local epicureans who have the price.

After the order is given a deft blue gowned waiter brings in a cageful of reptiles from which the guest may choose. Only three deadly species are considered suitable for the preparation of this ambrosia, the hooded cobra, the yellow and black banded bamboo viper, and the tree adder. When the guest has made his choice, the waiter, with skill born of long practice, lifts the snake from the cage, evades its fangs and quickly extracts the gall bladder, which is squeezed into a cup of hot rice wine. The operation does not kill the snake.

Cobra wine costs 50 cents a cup. Addicts say it has a bittersweet flavor, leaves a pleasant taste, and is very good for rheumatism.

Flesh of these three snake species is also considered a cold weather delicacy in Canton. It is mixed with chicken, bamboo shoots and mushrooms, and costs $2.50 a plate. A proper snake meat feast, with all trimmings, such as given by a wealthy host, costs about $100.

PARKING THE SKIRT.

A Topeka woman entered a doctor's office downtown one afternoon recently and observed the office girl at her desk exhibiting a rare mileage of silken stockings and bloomers. The visitor observed another office girl across the hall—a girl she knew—and she slipped over for a moment's visit.

"I thought I would tell you about that pretty little girl in the doctor's office," she said. "I believe you could tip her off to the fact that she is unconscious of the show she is putting on for the room full of men and women callers."

"Unconscious?" was the reply. "Say, that little flapper knows every inch of her stuff. She knows exactly where that skirt is parked every minute of the day."—Topeka, Kas., Journal.

A Gift.

Last summer my husband accidentally turned over an ash tray of which he was quite fond, since it had been a gift, breaking the glass bowl. For over six months I tried to buy a new bowl in the desired color.

On going to the store from which it had come, I found they did not sell these extra insets. I had almost given up and decided to throw the stand away.

A few days ago, in a furniture store near us, I saw ash trays similar to ours. I asked the manager if he could sell me one of the insets in orange. Imagine my surprise when he said, "No, but I can give you one."

Needless to say, he will always get our trade when we buy anything in furniture.

H. W.

That Honest Look.

I was visiting in Chicago last fall and one afternoon went to a show with the party I was visiting. We had to park the car a short distance from the theater and we window-shopped on the way over. I saw a coat in a window that I liked very much, so we went in and I tried it on. It was becoming but I did not have enough money with me to pay for it, so I told them I would pay a deposit on it and come back for it as soon as I could get a check cashed in the neighborhood where I was visiting. The saleslady called the manager over and asked him about it and he said, "We will take your check. You look honest to me."

Whenever I go to Chicago, which is very often, I always manage to do my shopping at that store. H. E. H.

From Small Job in Small Town to Big One in City

Woman Scores as Advertising Manager.

By Marion Reagan.

"A LAZY man is merely professionally misplaced. Give him something he is fitted for, something he likes to do, and he'll do it well, without the need of prodding."

That sounds encouraging. And simple. Just let every one pick out something he wants to do for a living instead of something he doesn't, and there'll be no more failures, no more malcontents.

But there's a trick in it. The rub comes in finding out what the lazy man, or failure, really wants to do and what it is he's fitted for. Usually, on close personal analysis, it turns out, by his own admission, that he is not fitted for much of anything useful, and what he really wants to do is something easy involving a large income, little responsibility, and plenty of leisure time.

And again, as known to most of us who have spent much time trying to search ourselves for talents, that intensive self-analysis and introspection is, in the long run, a waste of time. For the truth seems to be that most of us haven't any special, God given talents. Most of us are just ordinary folks, with ordinary intelligence, whose only chance for making a material success of our lives lies in training for something definite.

And it is perhaps because women, on the whole, do not train themselves for lifelong careers that the outstanding success of any one of them is "news."

Getting Down to Cases.

Now, Mary Leland, who is advertising manager for a large north side department store, set about getting into the advertising business in such a well planned manner, took such a sensible, well thought out course, that her experiences in following it, and what she has to say concerning it, should be of interest to that annually increasing number of confused young women who leave our high schools and colleges each June, diploma in hand, the confident predictions of well-wishers ringing in their ears, but who look down the vista of the future tremulous and uncertain.

She didn't just slip into a near-at-hand job in the small town she lived in, and she didn't wander into the well-beaten path of the pad and pencil parade of girls who open the door of business opportunity with the typewriter keys. Nor did she set herself any surpassing feat, difficult of accomplishment. Looking the commercial situation squarely in the face, she saw that the only way to get "in" was to be able to do some one special job. And, as she saw it, the wisest thing was, to pick a "special job" closely related to the higher-up position she wanted to get eventually.

Her List of Requirements.

She wanted to be an advertising manager. She chose advertising because it was lucrative, and, to her, fascinating. But there are so many who think the same thing about advertising that the field has become highly competitive and jobs harder and harder to get.

Miss Leland was young, just out of high school, and her chances for slipping under the advertising gate were slim. With a cool, level head she sat down to analyze and enumerate the qualities necessary for making a success of advertising, and decided on this list:

Merchandising—First of all she must know goods, must know how to sell, must have a certain amount of store experience.

Art—Every advertiser, she said, should know how to make a layout, should know how to judge good art work, how to direct an artist to make the illustrations she wants used. And that must involve technical knowledge and some skill.

Writing—She must learn how to put words together, not to startle any one with their literary effect, but to convey, clearly, her ideas.

Back and Forth to Chicago.

Adaptability—She must learn how to adapt herself to changed conditions, how to adapt herself to people, to do things as they want them done rather than as she might prefer to do them.

She came up to Chicago, went to the Art Institute, and studied design. She learned how to trim a window, to make display cards, to lay out an advertising page. With that ability she felt ready to apply to a small town department store for a job. She already had learned something of merchandising in her father's little department store in her home town, and writing was something she kept practicing constantly.

Through an ad in the paper she learned of an opening in Marshalltown, Ia. She answered, and got the position because of her art training and knowledge of small town department store work. The salary was not big, but it was enough to live on and the experience, she knew, was valuable. She stayed four years. At the end of that time she was ready to try for big city work. So she came back to Chicago, offering definite training and experience in exchange for the job she wanted to get. She got the job.

Not a Literary Job.

Curled up in a corner of a large davenport in her apartment on Belmont avenue, Miss Leland, a slight woman, with black, closely cut hair and laughing gray eyes, was talking recently to some younger friends who wanted to break into advertising. Modest, she took little credit for what she has accomplished in becoming an advertising manager of a store, and as she told the story of how others might follow her example it seemed a simple course. But while it is true that what she says, and what prominent educators say—that we can train ourselves to be practically anything we want to become—still in all fairness it must be admitted by any one who has met Miss Leland that she is an exceptionally bright young woman, with an unusual, imaginative flair which has materially aided, with her training, in making her successful.

"One difficulty," she points out "with many girls who want to be advertisers is that they think the position is literary. Girls who like to write flock into advertising and frequently fail, because fundamentally the business is not literary at all. It is a practical matter of being able, through words, to make goods move off store shelves."

AT HAPPINESS HOUSE

FOR the purpose of providing entertainment and education, the House of Happiness has been established at 3052 Gratten avenue. Eleven hundred boys and girls are enrolled in the club, paying annual dues of ten cents each. The manual arts class is popular with the boys, as the above scene, indicates. Left to right, are Edward Novak, Steve Dzivak, Ezra Young, instructor; Ray Murrey, Sam Henry, and Lawrence Cerocke.

BLINDNESS has not prevented these four men from finding a place in the working world. They are William O'Brien, John Martling, Hans Jung and Verner Vildgren, and they work on telephone and electric iron plugs at the Chicago Lighthouse, 3323 West 22nd street. Part of their task is performed with an automatic screw driver, in the use of which they are most proficient.

THE HORSE MARKET

THOSE who may have an idea that the day of Dobbin has passed would be surprised on a visit to the Randolph street horse market. There, on Tuesday and Friday mornings, the owners of nags lead them forth for the appraisal of buyers. The animals may be dubious about changes in ownership, but they at least have the consolation of knowing their services are still in demand.

AT THE TOP

Mary Gloria Leland started out to scale the heights via a straight line. Spurning all detours, she stuck to the path leading to an advertising managership. The path was stony, but she plunged on. She was determined to win, and she did.

Snowshoe Al Springs a Story with Whiskers on It

And Exposes Barbers' Propaganda in Fairy Tale of Blue Beard

By Snowshoe Al.

YESTERDAY I picked up my little niece's book of goofy fairy tales and read a story which I think is merely some propaganda of the Barbers' union, because the tale insinuates that any bozo with whiskers is a dirty villain. I consider this an unjust insinuation, because I happen to be personally acquainted with almost two hundred men who wear whiskers, and I wish to state positively that one of them is a nice guy. If you don't like fairy tales this is the place where you should detour, because here comes

BLUE BEARD.

Once upon a time there lived a dodo who had a flock of money, a gallon of diamonds, a 32 room modern castle, a wow of a cellar, and a weakness for women. But did the Quails fall for this hombre? On the contrary, they used to dodge down alleys and side streets in order to steer clear of him. Why? Because he had a mug like an Easter Egg. He had a red nose, gray eyes, white hair, and blue whiskers! He might have got by with the nose, lamps, and brain-mattress, but the Indigo Chin Foliage just ruined his color scheme and shattered any sex appeal he might otherwise radiate. It made him look like a billy goat that had just finished guzzling a blueperry pie.

Capitulation.

Some old dame in the neighborhood happened to be equipped with a pair of ritzy young daughters, and Mr. Blue Beard wanted to hook up with one of them; he didn't care which one—they both looked like bargains to him. Neither of the gals took him seriously; in fact, he reminded them of a comic valentine. He gave them candy and jewelry and they gave him the horse laugh. These babies chased him back and forth from one another until he had worn out seventy-two dollars' worth of shoes at six bucks per pair.

Then a bright idea wandered into his hatrack. He takes these two squabs and their mother, together with several other young people, to his castle and tosses a wild party what lasted a week. O, and did he put on the dog! I ain't saying "No!" Talk about liquor—huh! He went down in his cellar and opened everything except the windows.

Well, everything turned out fine; everybody had a swell time and the youngest daughter decided that his beard didn't seem so terribly blue after all, so she married him.

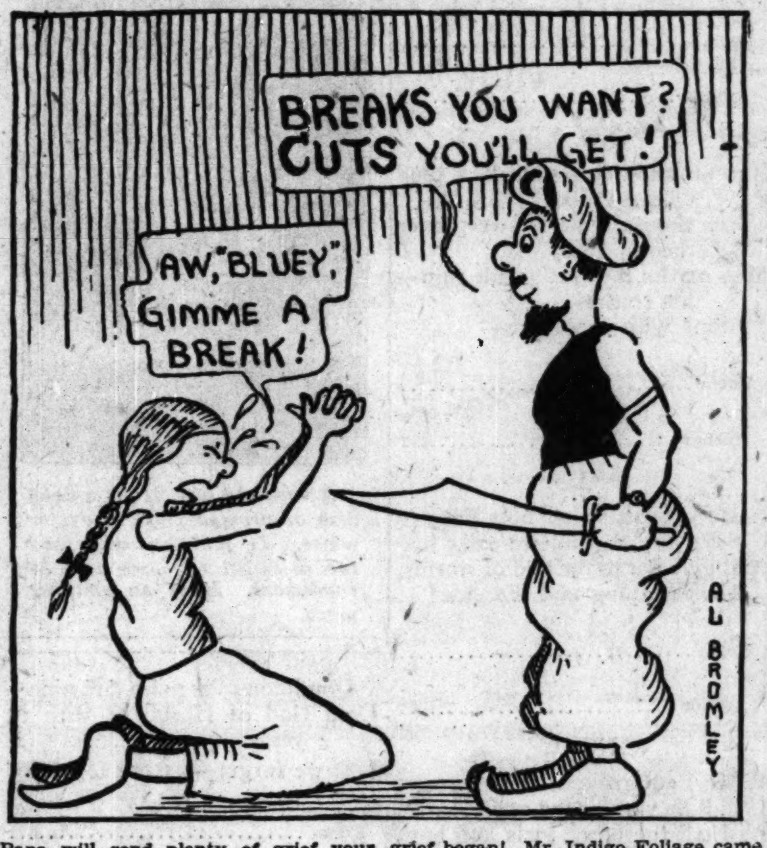
Recapitulation.

A month later our boy friend informs his wife that he must attend a convention in Nashville and will be gone for about six weeks. He told her to have a good time while he was gone; he suggested that she invite all her friends over to the shack; he even said it would be all right for her to throw a couple parties while he was away. Then he dragged out a big bunch of keys and says:

"Listen closely! These two keys are for the two large wardrobes where I keep my best furniture. Drag it out if you want, but don't let your old lady park on any of the frail chairs, as she weighs a ton. This key is for the safe which contains my silver and gold plate. Don't let any of your friends handle the stuff or it will probably be among their souvenirs. These two keys are for the strongboxes which hold the money and Liberty Bonds which I grabbed on the Teapot Dome deal. This key unlocks the chest where my jewels are kept. And now look here! See this little key? Well, it's for the small closet on the second floor near the bathroom. Keep out of that closet, Mama! Stay clear of it or Papa will send plenty of grief your direction!"



BREAKS YOU WANT? CUTS YOU'LL GET!
AW, "BLUEY", GIMME A BREAK!
AL BROMLEY

Whereupon Mr. Blue Beard climbed into his flivver and beat it. No sooner was he gone than all the wife's friends and former neighbors rushed over to see her. You see, this gang was afraid to come around when her husband was home, because they dreaded the sight of his blue razor-food. They galloped all over the joint and examined the rooms, the carpets, the furniture, the groceries, the booze, etc.

The Key to Knowledge.

Now, Mrs. Blue Beard was just like any other gal—she consisted mostly of curiosity. [I'm afraid that remark ain't going to do me any good.] And so, while her friends were romping all over the place, she was headed straight for that little closet on the second floor.

"I wonder what the big stiff's got in there!" says she to herself as she breezed up the stairs; "he's got a lot of nerve telling me to keep out! I'll shake him down for a flock of alimony if I find that he's pulling any funny stuff. Anyhow, how will he ever know if I give it the once-over?"

She unlocked the closet and opened the door slowly. Then she gave a terrible shriek and dropped the key on the floor. O, baby, what a private morgue this boy had! That closet looked like the interior of a butcher's refrigerator. Seven of Mr. Blue Whisker's former wives were hanging around on hooks, and it was evident that they had not departed from this planet in a natural manner. Yes, sir, the boy just couldn't bear to part with his women; instead of burying them he kept them in storage!

"Well, for the love of Mike!" snorts Mama; "this guy has certaintly been getting away with murder!"

The Fatal Reprieve.

Then she discovered she had got blood stains on the key, so she went to her room and tried to wash 'em off, but they wouldn't disappear. In the meantime all her friends and neighbors had beat it for home, so she spent the rest of the day trying to give that key a bath. And then the grief began! Mr. Indigo Foliage came back home that same night!

"Good evening, Mama," says he, "I've decided not to go to that convention in Nashville, as I am now in possession of information to the effect that it's going to be a very dry affair. Give me back my keys."

"O. K., kid," says Mama, "here they are."

"Aha, you little snooper!" howls Blue Beard; "there is blood stains on this little key! You've been in that closet, ain'tcha?"

"Boo hoo hoo hoohoohoohoo!!! wails Mama, laying on the floor and kicking her heels.

"§‡%&%&&%*!!!" says her husband; "all right, you're gonna go back in that closet again, but you ain't coming out! I think there's an extra hook in there, an' you can occupy it from now on. Wait till I go in the bedroom an' get my sword."

"Aw, Bluey, be a good sport an' lay off the rough stuff!" cries his Dumb Half, but her tears didn't register. Mr. Funny Whiskers rushed into his boudoir, grabbed his trusty blade, and trotted back with a mean look in his lamps.

"Woman," sneers him, "you might just as well quit crying, because it ain't gonna get you no place. I've been through this so often that I'm becoming tired of bumping off wives. Stick out your neck!"

"Aw, Bluey, lend me fifteen minutes, will yuh? I have to curl my hair first," weeps his Sparring Partner.

"All right," says her husband, "I'll give you fifteen—"

The Act Is Utterly Ruined.

At this moment the door is knocked clean off its hinges and in walks the wife's two brothers, carrying swords, bombs, and sawed-off shotguns. Anybody can see at a glance that these two bozos mean business.

"Hello, sister!" says the two brothers [this is a brother act, so naturally they both talk at the same time]; "we have come to croak your villainous husband. Golly, what a queer looking duck he turned out to be! What's he got on his chin—a lilac bush?"

"Gentlemen," says Blue Beard, "you have arrived fifteen minutes too soon. This is very annoying. I might go so far as to state that you've ruined the most exciting part of the story. According to the original plot, my wife is supposed to spend the next quarter hour gazing down the road and hoping that her two dear brothers will arrive in time to save her. An' here you bust in way ahead of time."

"We can't help it," says the two brothers, "because Mr. Snowshoe Al is running short on writing paper an' if we don't croak you in a hurry this story will have to be finished on the back of a used envelope."

"O, that's different," says Blue Beard; "well, snap into it, boys, an' bump me off in this same paragraph!" And darned if they didn't. Whereupon everybody else lived happy ever after.

Queen Sends Doll to London Museum

LONDON.—(AP)—Queen Mary has sent to the London museum a beautifully dressed doll, representing Queen Alexandra, the king's mother, when she was a girl.

The doll, which is 15 inches high, was made in 1863, and is perfectly dressed according to the fashion of the day, including a crinoline. The dress is made of silk in the queen's favorite mauve shade. A little panne velvet jacket is worn over the dress. It is lined with white silk and trimmed with white silk braid. The pink underskirt is worked in crochet. The correct hairdressing fashion of the time is illustrated in this doll. Pads were then worn at the nape of the neck and the hair tucked under. A net was worn over the head.

The doll's jewels consist of a large brooch at the neck of the dress and a small pearl necklace. There is also a long gold chain. A bouquet of pink roses is carried. All the garments are beautifully made by hand.

PHYSIOGNOMICAL.

"Pa, what are life's lines?"
"Wrinkles, my son."

Modern Dress Injures Drama, Actress Holds

LONDON.—(AP)—Modern feminine dress is killing the good old drama, says Mrs. Pat Campbell, the actress.

"Stars," in the good old days, were popular with the public, but managers and authors are afraid of them today when plays are no longer built around a central figure, she told the Oxford University English club.

"The young find the old style of the stage dull," Mrs. Campbell went on, "and the old find the new style stupid," and she wondered what was to become of it all.

"The lovely young actress of today looks at the tired teagowned, romantic ladies who were the fashion—not a hundred years ago—somewhere before 1914 with a certain amount of envy. When an actress' dress does not hide her knees, and her 'woman's glory' is bobbed/it is very difficult for her to look picturesquely tragic.

"Modern feminine gowns and dresses breathe the independent spirit of the age, and suggest cocktails and mutual chumminess with men, not romance and mystery."

Would Alter Dress of Girls in Italy

ROME.—(AP)—Bare arms, low necks and short skirts would be taboo for Italian high school and college girls if Minister of Education Fedele took the action asked in a letter now before him.

The body known as "the national committee for the correctness of the mode," has petitioned him, requesting that all those whose costume "does not conform to that modesty which is dictated by civilized Christian usage and sentiment" be barred from the institutions under his control.

The school supervisors in several large provincial cities have already publicly admonished girl students for "immodest dress," but with little effect, and now government action is wanted.

DON'T TELL HER I TOLD YOU.

"And they are keeping their engagement a secret, aren't they?"
"Well that's what they are telling everybody."—Tit-Bits.

Try These POETIC POSERS

Before subscribing to any memory courses, see if you can still recollect those verses you learned as a child. Is enough poetry on the tip of your tongue to score 60 per cent of these "Poetic Posers"? Credit yourself with five for each title guessed correctly and five for the author's name. Seventy is above average, while 80 means at least two honorary degrees. If it is 90, then you must be a book clerk. One hundred? Impossible.

Answers, if you are posed, may be consulted. They are to be found elsewhere on this page.

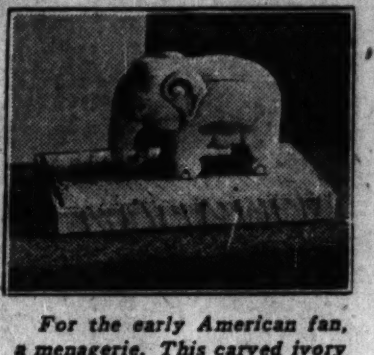
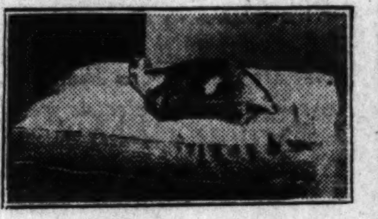
A Menagerie for the Early American Fan

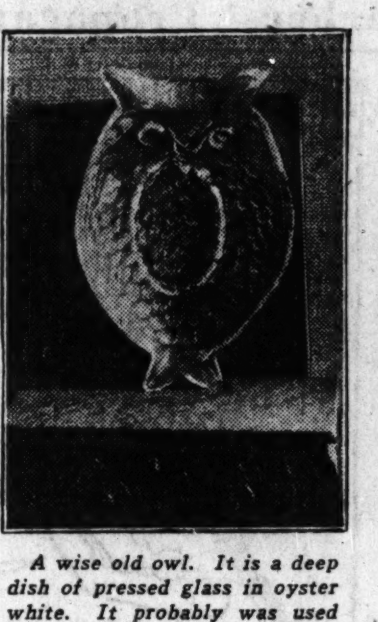
Birds and Beasts, Tame and Wild, in This Novelty Zoo



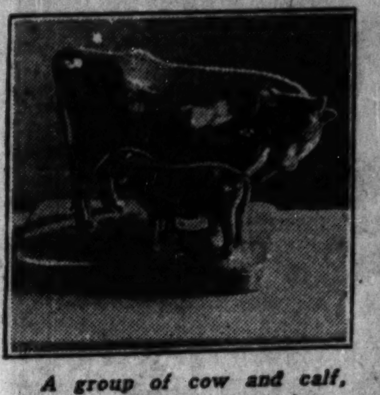
For the early American fan, a menagerie. This carved ivory elephant is one of the orientalia which the early sea merchants of New England brought to their wives in their sailing ships. It is old and therefore lovely in color.



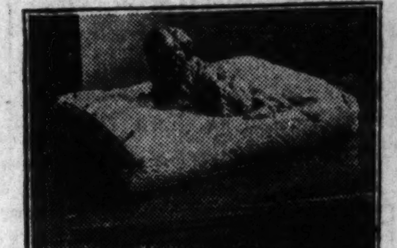
A glass turtle in a delightful green. His crudeness is his charm, and he is heavy enough to stop a door. He is old, even for a tortoise.



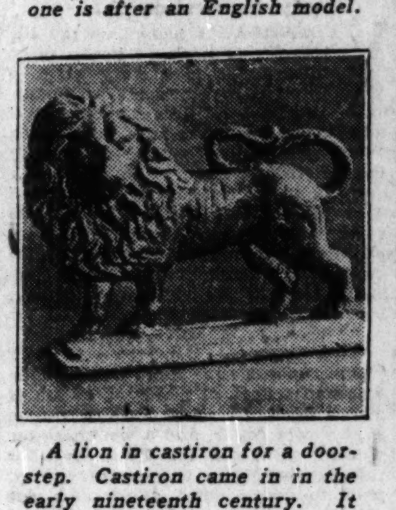
A wise old owl. It is a deep dish of pressed glass in oyster white. It probably was used for piccalilli or some sort of condiment. It is an amusing piece.



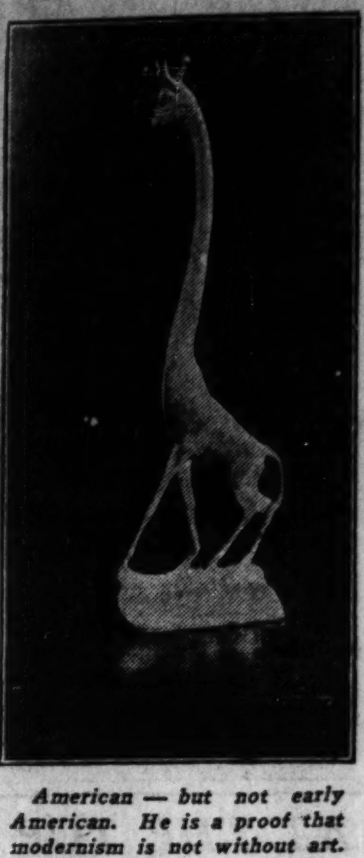
A group of cow and calf, one of those honest potteries so charming for their unpretentious sincerity. Such a piece is heavy enough to be useful as a paperweight. It resembles Bennington.



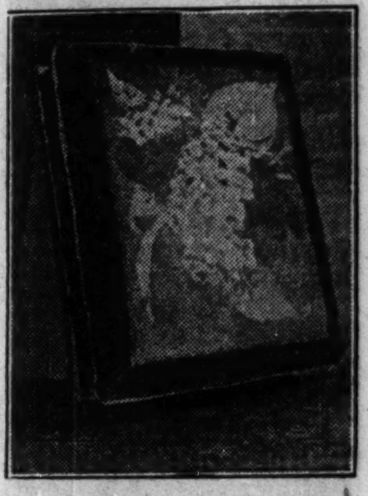
In the menagerie for collectors of Americana is a brass dog. His ancestry was English and a Yorkshire terrier. This one is after an English model.



A lion in castiron for a doorstep. Castiron came in in the early nineteenth century. It can be seen at its best on windows and balconies in New Orleans. To collect objects made of it is now a fad.



American — but not early American. He is a proof that modernism is not without art. A giraffe in brass, also for a doorstep, and delightful in his fantastic exaggerations.



A footstool in walnut, covered with an old piece of needlepoint combined with bead work. The colors are lovely greens and whites on a red background, and the edges of the stool are old green velvet.

A SLIGHT ERROR.

She waited on the corner joyously, then pensively, then expectantly, then casually, then anxiously, and two hours passed.

"Man," she said, "is a perfidious animal, faithless and untrue, incapable of consummating a promise," and so she became a cynic.

Two hundred yards down the street he said the same thing about women—she was on the wrong corner.—London Tit-Bits.

THEY NEVER WILL BE MISSED.

The stout old gentleman rushing along the platform just missed his train and returned puffing and blowing, to be greeted by a porter with the question:

"Missed your train, sir?"

"No," was the reply. "I didn't like the look of it, so I chased it off the platform!"—Birmingham Post.

Shanghai Sees Criminal Go to His Execution

SHANGHAI—(AP)—Mediaeval justice in modern trappings was the theme of a striking tableau recently presented to the modern international city of Shanghai, where thousands along its busiest thoroughfares gazed on the public ride of a condemned criminal to execution in a gasoline driven tumbril.

Kiang Che-chui was convicted of kidnaping and sentenced to death by the Chinese judges of the Shanghai provisional court. Hoping to make an example to discourage the gangs of kidnapers which are infesting Shanghai, foreign ruled and Chinese ruled alike, the court ordered that he have a public ride to execution.

He made this journey in a police motor van, driven by a British sergeant, with Chinese constables on the running board. W. E. Fairbairn, British chief inspector of the Shanghai municipal police, and a Chinese detective followed in a motorcycle side car.

Kiang stood defiantly in his tumbril, one hand handcuffed to a beam at the top of the van. Placards told of his crime and his imminent doom.

Not all features of the spectacle were new. In the old mandarin days criminals were dragged through the streets in chains, wearing inscriptions telling their crimes. Two years ago 12 Chinese were paraded through the international settlement before execution, in the authorities' effort to stamp out crime. But Kiang's motor ride was the most modern version of an old tableau. At the end of it the headsman of Lunghua awaited him.

The Shanghai international settlement is policed by an international force, whose chiefs are mostly British. But Chinese criminals, once arrested, are tried by judges of their own race in the provisional court and sentences are carried out by the Chinese authorities of Kiangsu province.

C. OF C. CHIEF

Chicago will plead the cause of the woman factory owner in sessions of the United States Chamber of Commerce opening Monday, May 7, when Mrs. S. E. Delavan Cowles, president of the Chicago Woman's Association of Commerce, will take a delegation to the capital in the interest of women in the manufacturing industries.

Mrs. Cowles, pictured above, is the only woman on the list of national councilors privileged to be heard in the sessions. She will be accompanied by Miss Katie Certa, Miss Edith S. Cook, and Miss Helen Lee Dewey, all members of the Chicago association. The delegation leaves this week.

STORIES of GIRLS

By Margaret Orr.

BOBBY said we could go to grass. Help her find a job? Never. She had a scheme of her own. Her plan was to find a job and make herself so obnoxious that at the end of the first day she would be paid for the week and fired.

Her business downfall began in her own dislike of business and with Maybelle.

The first job Bobby ever had was in a small office, headquarters for the pamphlet spreading mania of the Society for the Protection of International Katzenjammers—whatever those might be.

The boss was a fourflusher who had come up through the rankest ranks and now on $2,500 a year considered himself a "self-made man"—the ultimate peak.

Maybelle was his stenographer. Bobby was hired because Maybelle demanded a first vice president for herself.

That first day Maybelle told Bobby "interesting details of the general's private life," how to pad the "swindle sheet" on expenses, and not to take the job seriously.

Bobby immediately liked Maybelle. But she hated business.

When "the boss" rang for Maybelle that young lady, being busy with the lipstick, waved Bobby into the boss' private office, and told her above all things not to be afraid of the big bal—or babboon.

* * *

So, when, in the middle of a letter, he dictated "you was," Bobby stopped him with a learned lecture on the bliss of reaching the third grade. Then she got wound up on little intimate things about her folks and the beautiful garbage the neighbors wasted and if he liked butter and what kind of a business did he misrepresent, anyway.

And he, being the world's weakest he-man, didn't have the nerve to fire the dear child, but merely told Maybelle later not to let that creamed squash into his room again.

So Bobby had a spasm of filing. She filed letters under the name of the firm, the writer, or the date of the month, just as she felt that day.

She plied Maybelle with questions and "got the dirt" on every one. They bought a small coffee percolator and when the boss was on one of his frequent "financial calls" (poetic term for personal adventure) the girls had a "wee drop" to pep them up for a long, hard afternoon of gosisp.

Inasmuch as people seldom came into the Katzenjammer lair, except to sell powder or lead pencils, the girls, with true feminine instinct, fell to sewing birthday gifts, presents for new babies, or hope chest treasures.

* * *

One day a director blew in. The boss was on a financial call. On the office door was a large piece of paper on which lay some silk and a pattern. Two girls were busily cutting out a dress, one of them gowned only in [illegible] which the other had been pinning on to fit her!

The fit suddenly became a convulsion.

Bobby, in her panic, flew at the director and asked him how he dared come in without knocking, to leave his name and she'd send him a pamphlet concerning the work in three weeks.

He assured her that the work in three weeks would be so dead it would never hear the resurrection trumpet, and walked off in a pre-apoplectic [illegible].

Bobby and Maybelle, scenting danger, decamped at 3:48 p. m., leaving a note of "resignation" for the boss.

"No, I never been fired," she explained to us. "But I can't find a job. There's plenty of work in offices. But it's too hard—no chance to sew. But my scheme works slick—if it works. It will give me the money and the chance to make all my clothes. I hate business. And I may be what you say—unadjusted—with two x's. But I'm not so dumb, am I?"

Clothes Make Kitchen Maid? Not in Chicago

Girl Reporter Gets Lesson from Freda.

sciously I was aware that I was guiltless of any such. Powdering my nose restored somewhat my morale, and helped to cover a surreptitious inspection of the girl's clothes.

From the crown of her sassy beige hat to the soles of her brown suede slippers, she was as smartly turned out as any woman of means and taste who might be met promenading the boulevard. I had eschewed the ensemble note in my attire, but Freda made the most of it.

Her coat, of cloth and fur trimmed, was a dark brown. Underneath it I caught glimpses of a dress of the identical shade, in crêpe. She wore brown kid gloves, the beige felt hat aforementioned, with suede slippers to match her coat, and her hose were the shade known as sunburn.

Quite possibly this outfit represented practically her entire wardrobe, barring work clothes. It was, of course, her best. And her best was good.

Learning About Women.

The upshot of it was that Freda and I joined forces to find the place we wanted. It didn't take long, but long enough for me to augment my information about maids and places. And I learned about women from her—women, that is, who hire and fire the Fredas. We swapped information about prospects and places, and voted thumbs down on one we had both tried and found things not to our liking.

"She wanted only to bay ten dollarss," disapproved Freda—or Brunhilde. "And she hass only those two dark liddle roomss, and I am avraid that iss a bad boy she hass."

In Chicago "vor yearss this spring," as she told me, nothing but her accent remained to reveal her foreign origin. She had worked for German families two years, then spent a year in one place she liked in Winnetka. Her employers moved away, and she had worked here and there, since then.

"It's awfully hard," I sympathized, "to find a good place."

"Yess," she agreed, "uff course, there are blenty of blaces, but it iss hard to find the right one."

Later—much later—I came to appreciate just how tersely she had expressed the entire situation.

At the moment, Bradley place having finally been discovered, the two of us went into an Alphonse and Gaston debate—"you first, my dear Freda," etc. Since the other girl was in good faith and my own object merely an interview, I insisted that she apply first. She demurred only a moment, and I watched her off down the block with a promise to wait there for her. I waited—and waited. She did not return.

In Pursuit of a Girl.

At last, convinced that she had taken the position and might even now be preparing lunch for the family, I gave it up as a bad job and started out to discover what had happened. Then I recalled that I had forgotten to find out from Freda whether it is customary to march right up to the front door or round to the kitchen. That was solved for me.

In a small vestibule at the address of the ad a card stuck in one corner of a mailbox advised, "see about ad at first door west." I reconnoitered. The first door west was another vestibule. Apparently no one was home. I rang all four bells and got no answer.

Back again to the first entrance where I rang the bell underneath the card. Correct this time, for it belonged to the first door west—in that building. Immediately a young woman, enveloped in a bungalow apron, a child at her heels, appeared at the inner door, eyed the classified section in my hand, and said:

"You came about the ad—that's at my mother's, around the corner, the first house."

No wonder it had taken Freda—or Brunhilde—so long. I found the first house, after hasty inspections at first floor entrances to upstairs apartments over a drug store on the corner. The right place was a huge, old fashioned frame house. Right or not, I rapped at the front door without avail. So I wended my way around to the kitchen.

Freda Is Found.

It was a big room—no kitchenette proportions there. A red checkered tablecloth, askew on a table bearing the remains of a meal, was visible in the window. The door was flung open — a slim girl in a red sweater and a gingham dress and, as I followed her through into a living room so dark that the lights were burning at midday, I noted a sink heaped with piles of other dishes, a broken crate on the floor, and rather general disorder.

Peering up at me from a chair in the crowded living room was a prepossessing elderly woman, shading her eyes against the glare of the lamp on the center table. Freda sat opposite her, eyeing me without a sign of recognition. A plump, rosy cheeked younger woman with a towel on her head and her sleeves rolled up above the elbow was taking her name and address.

"Why, honey," the elder woman queried at me, "what'd you come round to the kitchen for? Kitchen doors are only for peddlers. You didn't need do that."

I explained that I hadn't been able to make them hear. They exclaimed that it was a shame. Freda got up, preparatory to leaving. She had come in the front way, I saw. Then we got down to business.

Invalid, but Not Sick.

Mrs. L—— was a big hearted, good natured Irishwoman who went to some length to explain to me that, while she was an invalid, she wasn't sick. An attack of neuritis some months before had left her unable to walk, and she needed some one to keep house until she recovered. The place was at sixes and sevens now, though her two neighbors, the plump woman and the slim girl, were helping out just then.

"I'm not sick," she insisted, "but I do want somebody around who won't look like a graveyard all the time—bad enough for me to look that way—somebody cheerful. There isn't much to do at all, beyond a little extra baking—my husband's a policeman, and he certainly does like a bit of cake or pie now and then. I s'pose you can cook?"

Assured on that point, she informed me that Freda, who had just left, was also looking for the place—"but she wanted to see about it for some other girl." So then, I reflected, Freda hadn't cared about this job, either. I asked what the wages were.

"I pay twelve dollars a week," Mrs. L—— said. "And it's plenty—for what there is to do. Two hours' work a day is about all it takes to keep the place neat. There's no washing, of course, but there would be a few things, aprons of mine, like, to iron out. And I need help to get around—some one to hold my arm. Then I'm all right."

For all that there were the big and crowded rooms to be cared for, and the extra duties of nurse, I decided there must be plenty of worse places to work than with this jolly old lady. Plenty of leisure—no washing to bother with, and $12 weekly above expenses.

They're All Alike.

Practically all positions are alike, I found, in that no laundry work, except some ironing, is required. Nearly every one wants a girl to stay at night, and provides her with a room and board, though, to be sure, there are rooms—and rooms; and board isn't alike everywhere. Since jobs innumerable in the commercial world are held by girls who might do housework but who prefer to accept ten, twelve, eighteen and twenty dollars weekly, domestic work is better paid in comparison with these.

With a promise to consider the position in question, I made my adieu and the best time possible to the next address on my list, which happened to be on Roscoe place in the 500 block.

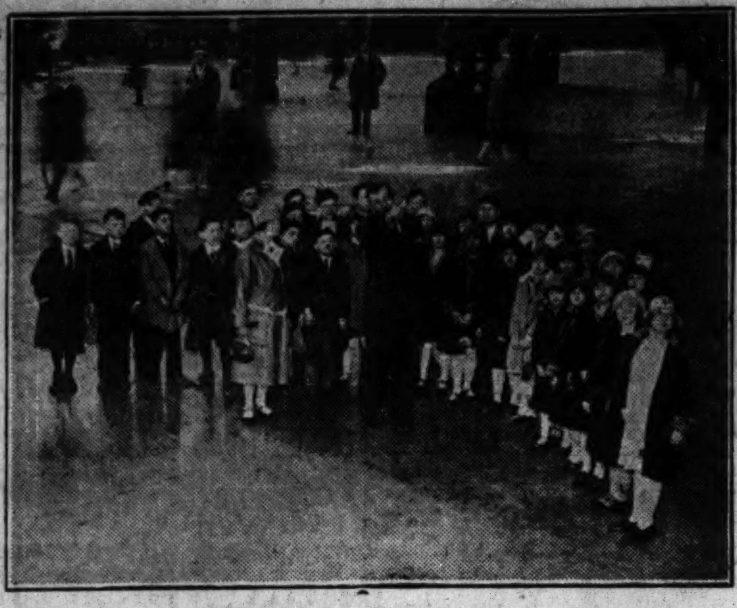
Confidently I entered the imposing lobby of a new flat building and rang the bell of the first apartment. No answer. I rang again, and then again. Then I explored the regions at the back of the building, and found a small boy playing on the porch, and an assortment of milk and cream bottles on the step.

To the collarless youth who opened the door a trifle at my knock, I confided my errand. He said to wait a minute—and shut the door. A moment later it was opened by a good looking young matron who eyed me from crown to toe in one sweeping glance, kept the door as vigilantly guarded as the boy had, informed me they had secured a maid—and shut the door.

I didn't learn much there, of course. Things might have been better—but the worst was yet to come. Also the best.

[This is the second of a series of "Maid in Chicago" true stories. The third will appear in the Metropolitan section next Sunday.]

STUDY UNION STATION



PUPILS from the 5 A class at the Anderson school, Division and Lincoln streets, have not come to the Union Station to take a train. They are still in school, really. Chester Kaufmann, engineer, standing in the center of the group with the teacher, Miss Mamie Garrity, is explaining how the great building was constructed. Thus the class receives first hand knowledge to supplement book learning.

Living Men's Faces Carved on Building

LONDON.—(AP)—Faces of living men are carved in stone on the new million pound building of the Imperial Chemical industries nearing completion at Westminster.

One of the faces is that of the head of the concern, Sir Alfred Mond. All the other carvings are said to be excelent likenesses of many men prominent in the chemical world.

The sculpture around the building also includes figures of peacocks, which are said to be there as a symbol of incorruptibility, following the ancient tradition that the flesh of the peacock is incorruptible.

Accused—Yes, I did not want to die without keeping my promise to my grandfather.

Judge—What was that?

Accused—That I would open a jeweler's shop.—Pages Gates Yverdon.

Saved Money and Wear and Tear.

My eleven year old son is very hard on knickers. It made no difference what price I paid for them, they would last just two weeks, then they were beyond repair.

One day he came in with three suits on his arm asking if I wanted to buy one, as a man with a car full of clothing had sent them up. They were $3 a suit. Two of them looked like $3 but one was a beautiful all wool brown suit of heavy material. I surely thought it was a mistake, as it looked to be worth $18 or $20. I sent down the $3 and everything was all right. The suit fits him perfectly and it may sound unbelievable, but he has worn it six days a week for seven months without a patch and it will still last another month.

If I could get another suit like it I'd call it a bargain at $25. M. C.

A Remarkable Buy.

The keenest bargain I ever got was an all wool black and white coat with genuine civet fur collar for $16.75. It was man-tailored, too, and was made to sell for more than twice the amount paid, but was sold as a sample coat in a "bargain basement."

I considered myself fortunate—for I had been to every store in town without success! B. M.

For a Nickel.

In these days of high cost of living I don't believe any one ever got a much better bargain than mine—a pair of patent leather pumps for a nickel. It happened like this: I have an unusually hard foot to fit and always dread the shoe buying ordeal. Imagine my surprise, then, when a friend of mine came in one day and announced that she had bought me a pair of shoes. In some alarm I asked if they could be returned if they did not fit. She said no, but that I surely would not begrudge what I paid for them, and she handed me a bill for five cents. The shoes proved to be good looking and a perfect fit.

It happened that my friend worked in one of the loop stores which had become overstocked on certain unusual sizes of pumps. As they were not allowed to give away merchandise, they offered them for sale at that price to their employés and she had remembered me and my troublesome feet. E. Z.

"Good as New."

Some time ago, upon moving into an apartment with a sun parlor, I found myself in need of some sun parlor furniture.

Fortunately for me, a party in the building had some advertised for sale. Upon inquiring the price, I decided it was more than I wanted to pay. The lady waited until the last minute and, not finding a buyer, sold it to me for the price of $3. It consisted of a settee and chair in the unfinished wood. I had a brown fernery and a brown wicker table which I decided would make a set. I thereupon painted the four pieces red and black and, with a little hammering, they looked "good as new."

Every one admired it and when I moved again, not having any use for it myself, I was lucky enough to sell it to a friend for $20. I considered this quite a bargain, for I made $17 on the transaction. A. R. W.

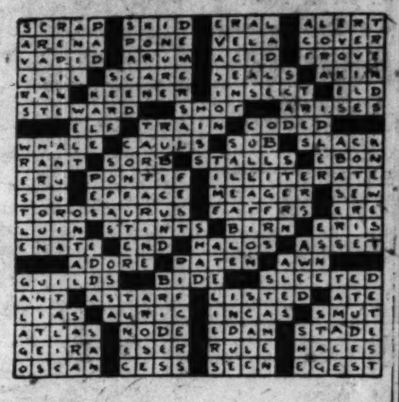
ANSWER TO LAST WEEK'S PUZZLE



NATURAL PREFERENCE.

An election story often told in British parliamentary circles had its origin in a meeting between Sir Henry Bentinck, the tory leader, and a wealthy farmer of radical leanings. To Sir Henry's pleadings for support the farmer replied:

"Vote for you? I would sooner vote for the devil!"

"But," replied Sir Henry suavely, "in the event of your friend not standing for election?"—Passing Jest.

SENTENCE SERMONS

BY THE REV. ROY. L. SMITH.

Your Mind Is Like—

—A room crowded with people—it needs a frequent airing.

—A highway—it soon develops ruts unless watched.

—A high powered car— it needs a steady driver.

—A garden—it will grow up to weeds if it is not watched.

—A storage battery—it needs a certain amount of recharging.

You Can't Learn—

—Everything by listening only to those with whom you agree.

—Much by listening exclusively to your own remarks.

—Enough to be contemptuous of anybody's honest opinions.

—Much from many, but you can learn something from everybody.

—Life's lessons by running away from hardships.

France Offers Prizes for New Flying Records

PARIS.—(AP)—France yearns strongly to recapture aviation records that were hers a few years ago that the government has hung up tempting prizes in cash for builders of airplanes.

The prizes, totaling several hundred thousand francs, are offered to French airplane makers if their products succeed in breaking the records for speed, altitude, duration and long distance. The time limit is Oct. 31, 1928.

It was only a few years ago that France held all of the records simultaneously, speed, long distance and duration, but other countries have taken them from her at different times.

LISTEN HERE, FOLKS:

This is a year in the Seed and Nursery business of general overproduction which occurs, according to statistics, only once in twenty years. Never since the war have prices been so low as right now on Grass Seeds, Bulbs and Nursery Stock; and with the present increase in raw material and the price of labor, they will never be this cheap again.

If you contemplate using any Grass Seed, Bulbs, or Shrubs, buy right now because the market is your way and we will be glad to sell.

Dear Friends and Customers:

It has been a real pleasure to me that you have come to our special sales every Spring and Fall in such great numbers, so that we were often not able to wait on you right away. This has created a number of peddler wagons and fly-by-night stores to open and squat within the radius of a block or so, telling you that theirs is a branch store, just helping us out in the rush, but charging you more and giving you less for your money, while we pay for the advertising. I just want my friends, customers and prospective customers to be informed that we have only one store and have no affiliation with peddler wagons or other stores near here, and that we will be prepared to handle any kind of a rush as fast as you can come and as often as you can come.

The quality of our merchandise cannot be beaten; and I am sure that these very low prices cannot be beaten either, but they will do these four things:

1. Save you a lot of money on your garden purchase.
2. Move our tremendous supply quickly.
3. Call your attention to the fact that ours is a good house to buy from.
4. Bring in a lot of new friends and flower lovers.

Thanking you so much for your past favors and looking forward to your continued patronage, we remain, sincerely yours,

What Do You Know About Our Trees?

Which Statements Are True; Which False?

How much do you know about trees? How many can you identify by their silhouette? You can distinguish between a Lombardy poplar and a weeping willow, but how about an elm and an oak?

This quiz is composed of statements, some true, some false, concerning trees, their appearance, manner of growing, uses and names. Decide whether you think the statement is true or false and then compare your decision with the answer elsewhere in this section.

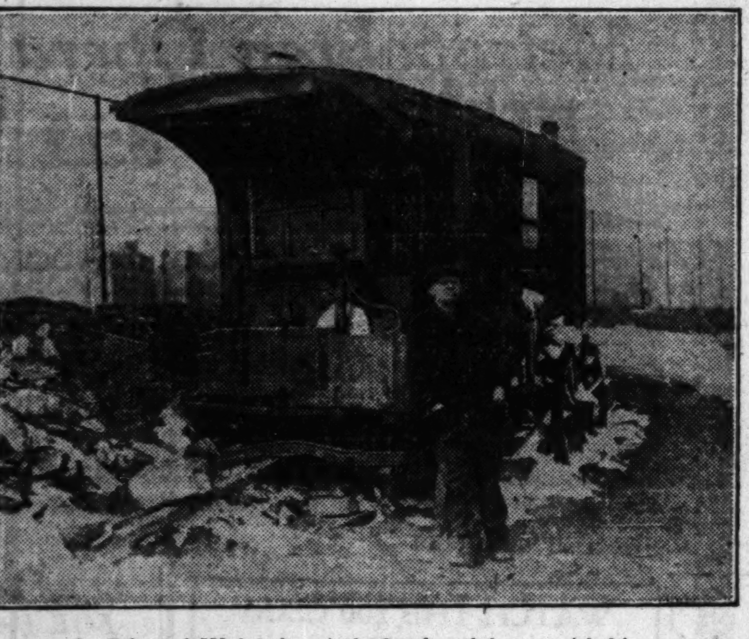
A LONE WATCHMAN



NO, Edward Welsh hasn't had a breakdown with his wagon. He's quite satisfied with the decrepit vehicle. It affords him a shelter and a place to cook his meals. Mr. Welsh is employed by the South Park commission to guard the lake front in Grant park from the dumping of rubbish. He has a place of refuge, a job, and plenty of tobacco for his pipe. So the impression, from a first glance, that he's been detained on a journey is all a mistake.

Jewels Worn by Pair of Queens Prove Dazzling

LONDON.—(AP)—When royalty dines with royalty, queens display their jewels.

Queen Mary of England and Queen Souriya of Afghanistan were both resplendent in dazzling gems when their Afghan majesties entertained their British majesties at the royal Afghan legation here during the visit of the Asiatic rulers.

It was a magnificent affair. The ground salons were decorated with cerise carnations and tulips. A string band played. The king and queen of Afghanistan, wearing British orders, and attended by the Afghan officers of state, received King George and Queen Mary, who wore Afghan orders. The prince of Wales was also present, as well as the duke and duchess of York and Prince Henry.

Queen Mary wore a magnificent dress of pale gold metal brocade, embroidered with crystal and diamonds. Her head dress was a diamond diadem with swinging pearl drops, and her other jewels were pearls and diamonds. She also wore the collar and star of the Afghan order presented to her by King Amanullah.

The queen of Afghanistan, in a dress of silver lame with an overdress of diamante and a long train glittering with diamond embroidery, and wearing very pale rose stockings and silver shoes, sat on the left of Queen Mary. She wore a diamond tiara in her hair and diamond and ruby bracelets.

There were no speeches. The guests included Ambassador Houghton and the other foreign ambassadors, Sir Austen Chamberlain, Lord Birkenhead, and the Afghan princes of the royal party.

The front of the legation was ablaze with hundreds of colored electric lights.

WARD'S ALWAYS CONSIDER QUALITY FIRST

LESSONS IN AUCTION BRIDGE

By R. M. Rogers

ARTICLE 6.

Nearly half the success at bridge is due to skill in the bidding. Novices at the game either bid more than the hands warrant and incur a penalty or almost as often fail to handle the bidding advisedly enough to find the best declaration for the combined hands. A simple illustration of how this can happen would be for a dealer to make a bid, say of three diamonds when he holds the ace, king, queen at the top of six in the suit. He will probably make the three diamonds, but wouldn't go game, while if he had bid two diamonds his partner with such information would bid no trump and game would be made. If it was rubber game and only three diamonds were made while three no trumps could have been made and on the next deal the adversaries do go game there would be a difference of 600 points in the score.

One of the things never to be forgotten is that the first bid is for information to partner and not necessarily for the purpose of play. It is to tell if possible how many tricks the bidder holds under his declaration and how many he has in the event that his partner should change the bid. Three different stories are told by a bid of one or two or three, and last Sunday's article told the difference in those stories.

If each partner knows how to count the tricks in his hand and always tells the truth when he bids, then it should be a matter of no great difficulty to ascertain rather accurately what the best final bid should be either for going game or preventing adversary from going game, or doubling the adversary who goes too far.

Without the knowledge of how to correctly count the number of tricks in the hand a truthful informatory bid cannot be made, and with those players who don't have that knowledge, bidding becomes guesswork and luck, rather than skill.

In counting tricks as a bidder, always assume that partner, if he has not passed, has three tricks in support of your bid. Also assume that if you name a suit as trump your left hand adversary will always hold the highest three trumps not in your own hand.

With a suit as trump count all trumps left in hand after third round one trick each and each trump that will win first, second, or third round one trick each.

In a side suit count an ace and king two tricks, an ace or king and one or queen and two, one trick each, and all cards in a suit that is, or after it is established and can be brought in, one trick each.

As a partner of the suit bidder in the trump suit count K or Q and one, or three small trumps, one trick. Holding less than the above will produce loss of one trick. Excess of three trumps, one trick each, A or K-Q.

In a side suit: A or K-Q, two tricks; A-K, four tricks; K and one or Q and two, one trick. All cards in suit when established, one trick each.

As a bidder of no trump, count an A or K-Q one trick each; an A-K or K-Q-J two tricks, and K and one or Q and two one trick each; all cards in a suit after it is established, one trick each. In no trump partner counts his hand in the same way if called upon for support, except as below.

Note: When partner of a suit bidder counts his hand, he counts the aces as two tricks each and he should do the same thing when estimating his bid in support of partner's no trump. The opponent, however, in either case only counts an ace as worth one trick.

As opponent of a suit bidder count side suits: A or K-Q, one trick; A-K, two tricks; K-Q-J one trick. In trumps any trump card that will win first, second or third round, one trick; any trump left after third round, one trick.

As opponent of no trump bidder, cards in established suit, one trick each. Cards left in suit that can be established if hand holds card of reentry, one trick each. A or K-Q, one trick. A-K, two tricks. K-Q-J, two tricks.

When a partner has passed a bidder must assume that he can only find in his partner's hand two tricks in support of any bid that he makes. Illustration:

Farm Bureau's Summer Series to Begin Soon

135 Radio Stations Put U. S. Service on Air.

As the 1927-'28 winter broadcast season closes 135 commercial and college radio stations are coöperating with the United States department of agriculture in broadcasting educational farming and home making features.

The winter release schedule of the radio service of the department will terminate tomorrow. A summer program, including four features—housekeepers' chats, farm flashes, the farm news digest, and the agricultural situation—will be carried by most of the coöperating stations.

Make Plans for Winter

Plans now are in the making for the 1928-'29 winter season program of the department. The experience of the past two years—the first two years of the radio service—will guide the preparation of next season's program, according to Morse Salisbury, chief of the service. One important change will provide listeners of each major agricultural section with broadcasts of farming information specialized to fit farming conditions peculiar to their region.

Commenting on the growing appreciation of radio's possibilities as an educational medium, Salisbury pointed to the results of a 1927 survey among farmers of two Kansas counties. Federal and state extension workers report in the summary of the survey, just published, that 34.8 per cent of the 188 farmer radio listeners interviewed in Sedgwick and Clay counties, Kansas, adopted improved farming practices as a result of information obtained over radio.

Many Farmers Use It.

The extension workers talked with [illegible] farm families in the two counties. They found that 188 of the families had radios. Radio broadcasts received on these sets had caused directly the adoption of 156 different improved farming and home making practices—[illegible] per cent of all improved practices adopted on the 532 farms in the 9 years since extension work was inaugurated in the two counties.

"Considering the fact that radio has been at work in these communities for not more than 5 years and extensively—as measured by the number of farm owned receiving sets—for much less than that period," said Salisbury, "these statistics indicate that radio is now and will increasingly be a most effective means of agricultural education."

Jeanne Gordon, Metropolitan Star, Will Sing Tonight

Jeanne Gordon, contralto with the Metropolitan Opera company will be the leading artist in the concert to be broadcast in the Atwater Kent radio hour tonight. The program will be broadcast by W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel. Assisting Miss Gordon will be a male chorus of sixteen voices under the direction of Reinald Werrenrath, popular American baritone; Phillip Ber[illegible]h, cello soloist, and an orchestra with Robert Hood Bowers, conductor.

Miss Gordon will sing but two operatic numbers. She has selected from Mignon the song considered by many one of the loveliest in the entire range of opera—"Connaise tu le pays"—"Knowest thou yonder land where the orange grows?" It expresses the passionate longing of the orphan child for the home of her infancy.

Miss Gordon's other selection is the opening air from Carmen, "Haberna" or "Love Is Like a Wood Bird." This old Spanish song was interpolated by the composer. Bizet considered it particularly appropriate to the mood of Carmen who in the opening scene is piqued at Don José's indifference to her charms.

Miss Gordon is a Canadian and obtained most of her schooling at Havergal college in Toronto, and at the Toronto Conservatory of Music. She later studied abroad. Returning to New York, she sang for six weeks in motion picture houses before an engagement with Creatore and his orchestra brought her to public attention and started her on a rapid rise to the Metropolitan Opera company.

Jock Hutchison to Begin Golf Talks Next Sunday Night

Jock Hutchinson, golfing champion, is to give a series of golf lessons over W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel, starting next Sunday night at 10:10 o'clock. The famous professional, who has held many championships, is conducting a series of lessons daily in THE TRIBUNE, and he will supplement these instructions with weekly talks on W-G-N, in which he will describe the fine points of the game. Each Sunday talk will occupy ten minutes. Jock was expected to start his radio talks tonight, but a bad cold has spoiled his voice and is keeping him from the microphone.

English Minister Talks Tonight at Sunday Eve Club

Dr. T. Ferrier Hulme, Bristol, England, leader of the Wesleyan Methodist church of Great Britain, will be the speaker before the Sunday Evening club in Orchestra hall tonight and his address will be broadcast by WMAQ.

At the 7 o'clock service Dr. Albert W. Palmer will deliver the last of his informal Bible talks on Old Testament characters entitled "Some Typical Saints and Sinners."

The choir of 100, under the direction of Edgar Nelson, will sing, while Mark Love will be the soloist of the evening.

Dr. Copeland Smith's Question Box

A World of Free Men.

THE old, old question comes from Kingston avenue, Chicago: "Is it consistent to say that a just God would create man and permit him to live in such a way that he could sin and then punish him forever and ever because of that weakness?

There is a fault of logic known as begging the question. This question does it in several places. Sin is assumed to be weakness in a being free to do what he will. It also assumes as a matter that is settled amongst thinkers and Biblical students that a man who has been guilty of what my friend calls weakness will suffer forever and ever at the hands of God. That is not agreed by Biblical scholars as agreed Biblical teaching about punishment.

But the question remains and the answer is that there would have been no virtue in an automatic goodness. Man's freedom made him worth while to God—if I may bluntly put it like that. There were mechanical virtues enough in the universe and what God needed was somebody free to respond to His approaches—or to reject them.

I do not believe, personally, that God punishes folk for sinning against the conventions and restrictions which man creates. What He may punish man for is that unneighborliness and selfishness which opposes the best interests of that universal family to which we, with all living things, belong—and of which He is the All-Father. Another way of saying that is that God need not punish at all. The consequences of such selfishness are contained within the selfishness itself; just as the consequences of an unrestricted meat diet are contained within the diet itself and in our bodily reactions to it. To complain of that is to bring a charge against the constitution of the universe which seems as foolish as it is vain.

A Marriage Problem.

HERE is a story, which is probably typical of many. It comes from a lady here in Chicago who says: I am 23 years of age and was married on the spur of the moment when 19, being divorced shortly after. I am now engaged to a school mate who knows all about the incident. We care for one another very much, but his mother seriously objects to our marriage. She thinks we are not suited to each other, and my being married before seems to her to be something terrible. She has a son at home who has recently got a divorce, but this seems quite all right to her. What do you think about it?

Quite a number of things. First of all, when I advocated a lethal chamber for interfering parents some time ago, I did so half seriously, but I am surprized to find that such a movement would be more or less popular. The mother has no business in the world to interfere, and you folk must brush her aside and settle your own future. I receive reports of at least ten tragedies a week through this cause. Vampire wives are very terrible persons, but I sometimes think that vampire mothers are worse. They exist and they are generally widows.

Of course, what one wants to know is the cause of your divorce. If it was due to some infidelity of your own, I doubt if you should not pay some of the price of that infidelity. That kind of thing makes the mothers of sons anxious for their happiness.

The root of the trouble is in that statement of yours that you were married on the spur of the moment. When the states of America will sacrifice some more of their state rights to allow the federal government to pass a law prohibiting marriage until at least three weeks' notice of marriage has been given, we may expect some drop in our mounting divorce statistics—and not till then.

Who Was Lilith?

FROM North Marshfield avenue, Chicago, comes a question asking how it happens that, if Lilith was Adam's first wife, Eve is so designated in our Bible. My correspondent refers me to Webster's Dictionary for a references to Lilith.

But there are, of course, many references to Lilith. The name is translated into English to mean either a screech owl, a night monster, or a night fairy—the idea of night or darkness being predominant in all the translations. In the marginal readings of Isaiah 34 and verse 14, some Bibles have the word "Lilith," where the text has "night monster." In Jewish mythology this night monster had her abode in the region around the Dead Sea, and seems to have been a kind of goddess of desolation.

Not until the seventh century after Christ does she seem to be identified with Adam, when a group of Mesapotamian Jews worshipped her. They said she was the first wife of Adam, but fled away from him and became a demon. The whole story is mythological—the Greeks not being the only nation that possessed a mythology—though Rabbinical literature uses Lilith for the teaching of certain moral precepts.

Festivals Jesus Kept.

A QUESTION from Thorndale avenue, Chicago, raises the whole question of what importance the observance of the literal example of Christ has for the Christian. My questioner asks, "Why, if we are so eager to follow Christ, do we not keep the Jewish feasts which He kept?"

Christ wore sandals. They are inappropriate to our streets and our climate. Nobody could accuse him of being custom-ridden. Indeed, one of the charges most frequently made against Him was that He did not encourage His disciples to keep the ancient Jewish customs. But it really is surprising how many of the feasts He kept are kept by us. For instance, the Jews kept a feast in the summer time called the feast of tabernacles, reminding them of their nomad days. We city dwellers keep that same feast when we adjourn to the country cottage or the auto camping ground. Good Friday and Easter coincide with the Passover and we keep those days in much the same sense of the deliverance wrought in our lives by religion.

But Christ never expected His followers to be literalists in the matter of conduct. He only left one literal commandment concerning conduct. That was concerned with the Lord's supper which He told us to keep in remembrance of Him—though we don't do it in large numbers. For the rest, He expected us to use our own sanctified common sense in the application of His teaching to our own lives and, above all, to avoid criticism of those who thought and acted differently.

I AM asked from South Bend, Ind., whether it is possible to get below the accretions of the years and define the original Christian religion.

I think it is possible and I think it is necessary. Christ refused to place the religious emphasis upon belief. He put it up on conduct and condemned those who thought that reclamation came by merely believing.

The original Christian religion is found in the tenth chapter of Luke and the verses from the 25th to the end of the chapter. There, both the Jewish lawyer and the Nazarene defined religion to consist in loving the Lord our God with all our heart, mind, understanding, and strength—and our neighbor as ourself. The implications of all that are enough to occupy the thought of a lifetime and the moral courage of a hero. Christ died because of His resolute determination to be true to that creed, which brought him into conflict with the self-interest and prejudices of men.

I am not sure, however, that all the rest is accretion. Man is a thinking animal and, in the course of his thinking, it was inevitable that he should ask who was this that dared to change life's values—thus producing a theology of the personality of Christ. It was also inevitable that man should ask what were the implications of loving God and one's neighbor—thus producing a theology of Atonement.

But there is much that is the result of preconception and prejudice and this is accretion, of course.

N. T. Manuscripts.

FROM Darlington, Wis., comes a question that I will give exactly as received: The oldest extant manuscripts of which the Bible is composed were written about 350 years after Christ. Why say that our Bible is translated from the original Greek when the original has long since been lost?

There are several copies of the N. T. which are nearly complete, if not entirely so. Two of them, called, respectively, the Codex Siniaticus and the Codex Vaticanus, date from the middle of the fourth century. That is to say, they were written within 300 years of the death of Christ. The Siniaticus is a complete copy of the New Testament, with other books also, including the whole of the Old Testament and what is called the Epistle of Barnabas. The Vaticanus—so called because it lies in the vatican, at Rome, contains the whole of the New Testament to the Epistle to the Hebrews. Both are in Greek, the language in which the New Testament was originally written. Hence, they are in the original Greek.

There are, of course, many other manuscripts in addition to these, estimated to number 3,829. This figure refers only to Greek manuscripts, not to a larger multitude of ancient Latin copies, some of them quite as old as the oldest Greek copies. It was by checking these manuscripts with each other for variations that the translators got their present pure text of the original copies so that the phrase they use when speaking of translating from the original Greek seems entirely justified.

The authenticity of the writings of the N. T., as distinct from the actual text of the writings themselves, is proved by references from times almost contemporaneous with the New Testament itself. Thus, Polycarp, who died A. D. 146, makes actual quotations in his writings, obviously written before this date, from N. T. books. The field is a wide one and cannot be covered in a short answer, but the evidence for the date of the N. T. books grows stronger and more various every year.

Secrecy Claimed by Dutch Inventor

LONDON.—Interest is shown here in the report that a young Dutch inventor claims to have discovered a method whereby absolutely "secret" wireless telegraph and telephone messages may be transmitted without involving wave distortion. He says that, if necessary, ten secret messages may be sent simultaneously.

Alaskan Hears Sunday Sermon Saturday Night

Listens to Preaching from Australia.

Hearing on Saturday night a sermon preached in Australia on Sunday night is one of the marvels attained through radio and reported by Dr. Grafton Burke, director of the Hudson Stuck Memorial hospital at Fort Yukon, Alaska. Dr. Burke has just arrived here from his Alaskan post.

On a recent Saturday night at Fort Yukon, trying for long distance, Dr. Burke picked up a sermon being preached on Sunday night at the English cathedral in Sydney, Australia. A short time later the same evening, he tuned in a jazz concert being broadcast from Broadway in New York.

"We heard the sermon distinctly," says Dr. Burke, "and the music from Broadway was good enough to dance to."

Difference in Time.

The feat of hearing on Saturday night Alaskan time, a sermon being preached on Sunday night in Sydney, Australian time, is accounted for by the fact that in adjusting the time between east and west, a whole day is lost [or gained]. Even so, radio enthusiasts will cast longing eyes at Dr. Burke who, perched at the top of the world, can face the west and from Australia across 5,000 miles of water hear a sermon; and, the service over, face the east and tune in on a jazz concert in New York.

Dr. Burke has succeeded at various time in getting Yokahama, Japan; Glasgow, Scotland; Portland, Ore.; San Francisco and Los Angeles; Dallas, Tex., Chicago and other points.

"Not so long ago," says Dr. Burke, whose hospital is part of the missionary enterprise of the Episcopal church in Alaska, "when I wanted to send an important telegram to New York, I had to hitch up a dog team and mush three days to an interior cable station, wait three days there for an answer and then mush three days back to the hospital—nine days in all. Today the government wireless station at Fort Yukon takes the message and I have a reply back in a few hours."

Hears Best When It's Dark.

Dr. Burke has a four unit radio outfit. He gets power for it from a storage battery charged from the gasoline engine which furnished light and power for his hospital.

Discussing conditions which affect radio reception in Alaska, Dr. Burke said he has observed that on nights when it is darkest, the greatest distance is attained. He says that intense cold does not in itself affect reception, but during the long winter when the country is frozen in, results are more satisfactory. With the break-up of winter, when factories begin operation, river traffic opens, electric plants resume activities, and wireless stations are in use, the radio results are less satisfactory.

Dr. Burke says the efficiency of missionary and medical work has been improved 100 per cent by the combined use of the radio and airplane. A year ago, when an influenza epidemic was raging in Fort Yukon, it was a radio broadcast which brought a Red Cross nurse and other assistance by airplane and saved the situation.

Waltzes, New and Old, on W-G-N Weekly

Waltzes—the classics and the moderns—are featured in the new "Waltz Time Reverie," broadcast every Wednesday night from W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel, between 7:30 and 8 o'clock. The early years of the century saw many popular waltzes, and these are being revived in part in this new program. The melodies are played by specially selected members of the W-G-N orchestra.

Inside the Loud Speaker

BY QUIN A. RYAN.

THE radio announcers we have with us always. They have become as much a part of our households as the goldfish and the world's fair spoons.

In considering this new guild of functionaries, all of us are inclined either to beam too indulgently as we contemplate our favorites among them, or, on the other hand, to think too derisively upon the shortcomings of the brethren as a whole. This isn't fair to the lads. They deserve neither the adulation they receive, nor yet the raspberry corsages.

Adulation only swells youthful heads that are too prone to inflation at the outset. The public's awe and admiration for the radio itself is fatuously taken to be awe and admiration for the individual, and lo! and behold! we find the young scalliwags commenting in the press on their art and their public and their cosmos, alongside of similar comments by "Miss Egg Rapids, Nebraska." The weather man is as much in the limelight as they are, but it doesn't go to his head.

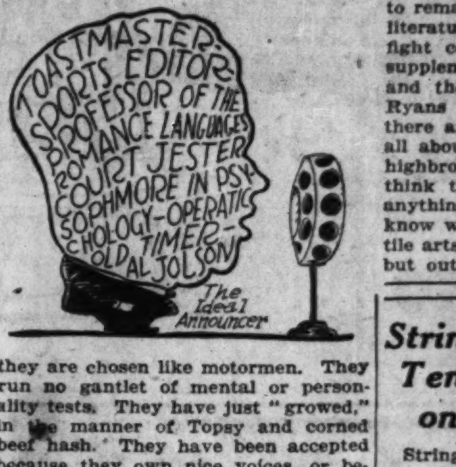
And yet—my, my how they are picked on! In half a dozen Broadway revues there are sketches burlesquing the radio barkers. From any bundle of listeners' letters or newspaper clippings we may gather that, after they are admitted every evening into the domestic circles, their deportment is frightful.

We are told that they cut up with lugubrious humor—they make themselves fraternally chummy—they drop their r's or forget to—they gargle European pronunciations—they spout tedious pages from the music encyclopedias—they employ a phraseology as sparkling as a ventriloquist's—and they devote a large part of their prize fight and ball game broadcasts to advertising their partner announcers. Whew!

The ideal announcer, if we total the complaints of the radio devotees, should be a correctly proportioned compound of toastmaster, sports editor, professor of the romance languages, court jester, sophomore in psychology, operatic old timer, and Al Jolson. And, in theory, the man who acts as interlocutor in the widest show on earth, probably ought to be such a paragon. The operating budgets of this gratuitous business of broadcasting, of course, cannot attract a personage of these multi-colored talents.

The true trouble with the radio announcer is that he has had no mother to guide him. His work has no precedent. It has, generally speaking, no rules and regulations. His racket is so new that he is still undecided as to a demeanor for himself. Even such professions as burgling and umpiring have their traditions, but radio has none.

They're all nice boys—but they come in for a lot of bludgeoning because they are chosen like motormen. They run no gantlet of mental or personality tests. They have just "growed," in the manner of Topsy and corned beef hash. They have been accepted because they own nice voices, or because they can double in piano playing, or because they are old employés from another department. Unless they are downright awful, the letters of commendation will come romping in, and then their jobs are safe.



The best of the announcers are only good readers. The more pompous and wise they sound in their introductions, the more you may be sure they are reading something that has been written for them by sombody else on the premises. But, like small time vaudevillians, much of their spare time is devoted to braggadocio. One of our Chicago voices whose pearly words were written for him by other men, has often boasted that his voice is so well known that he need never announce his call letters—yet, at the same time, he shouts his name on every occasion, for sweet publicity's sake.

Announcers ought to be spanked.

SAMUEL PUTNAM, writing his fortnightly sketch from Paris in "The Chicagoan"—"One has to live in Paris to realize, though the aware few elsewhere are suspecting it, that the old arts are as dead as the proverbial doornail or American prohibition. . . . In the meanwhile, new arts are flourishing all around us back home. There is the cinema, the first great and truly popular art, as some one has remarked, since the Gothic cathedrals and the chansons de geste. There is the popular sports writer, who has done more things to the language—but suppose we sidestep comparisons, being content to remark, merely, that there is more literature in the baseball and prize fight columns than in any 'literary supplement.' Then there is the radio and the radio announcer. Our Quin Ryans have done much here. Yes, there are lusty young arts frolicking all about us, but most of us are too highbrow to see them, while they think themselves too lowbrow to be anything so highbrow as art, if you know what I mean. And these infantile arts are coming, not out of Paris, but out of America."

String Quartet and Tenor Give Program on W-G-N Thursday

String quartet music and the tenor voice of Walter Pontius—these are features which will make the 7:30 to 8 program next Thursday night from W-G-N particularly interesting to listeners. Mr. Pontius has received many ovations from radio listeners since becoming a member of the W-G-N vocal group, and his choice of songs and classic rendition of each number is well known. The string quartet will be heard in popular selections from the world's store of quartet music. The W-G-N string quartet includes William Levitt and George Wlado, violinists; Gaston du Moulin, violist, and Johann Lingeman, cellist. Du Moulin is the conductor of the W-G-N concert orchestra, while Lingeman is an internationally famous cellist. Levitt, the first violin, won first prize in last year's national contest conducted by the National Music Clubs' federation.

RADIO IMPORTS GROW.

Clothes Make the Maid? Not in Chicago, She Finds

Aviation Club at Lane Tech Seeks Prizes

Tilden and Crane Also Enter Big Tourney.

By The Aviation Editor.

THE Lane Tech High School Aviation club is building for the all Chicago model airplane tourney which is being sponsored by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE. And Lane's club is confident that some of the prizes will be pinned on the chests of its members.

The model tournament will be held on three days. On May 19 at Soldiers' field the outdoor duration contest for scale models will be held. On May 26 the outdoor duration, open class, will be run off on the big meadow at Washington park while the indoor duration tourney will be held in the 132d infantry armory, I. N. G., at Rockwell and Madison streets on May 27.

Lane has sponsored the building of model airplanes and a model airplane club for the last two years. Previous to 1926 there were several boys in school who built model airships and flew them but there wasn't a supervised effort to carry on the work. In 1926 William A. Sears, a flyer who gained considerable repute in the government air mail service, took over the model building and immediately plans were laid for the formation of a club.

* *

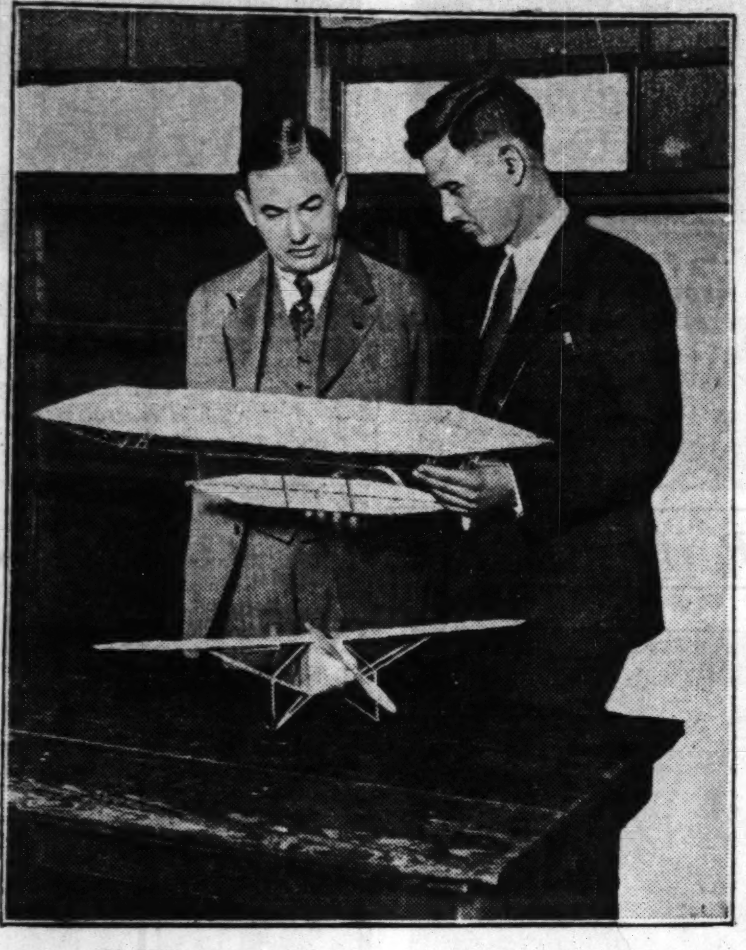
Make Scale Models Only.

The Lane Tech club makes scale models of planes only. Some of the boys have tried the single stick flying machines but Director Sears doesn't encourage this work.

"We want to build scale models," Mr. Sears said. "We want the models of real flying machines which will prove of value to the boys after they get out of school, and the club works along this plan."

Each boy must build a scale model of some popular type of airplane before he gets his club pin at Lane. Any boy in school can attend the club meetings and get advice and help by the members and Director Sears, but before the pin emblematic of a membership in the club is conferred upon a boy he must present a ship built from plans furnished by the club.

LEAD LANE AVIATION CLUB



MAX STRASS, dean of boys at Lane Tech High school, and William Sears, instructor in aviation and faculty adviser for the Lane Aviation club, are inspecting two models built by the boys of the north side prep school. On the table is a model of Col. Lindbergh's trans-Atlantic plane, the Spirit of St. Louis. Mr. Sears is holding a model of a dirigible built by one of the Lane boys. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

All materials used in the construction of the models can be purchased at the school. But the work of building the planes is done mainly in the boys' respective homes. This is necessary because Lane Tech is crowded for space in its old school building and until the new Lane Tech building is built the model work will be home work.

Have Plans for Course.

Principal Grant Beebe of Lane and Athletic Director Max Strass, who besides his athletic work takes a keen interest and lends a hand in the running of the various clubs in the school, hoping to increase the aviation work in the school when sufficient space for work and club rooms are available. It is hoped that the plans now in the process of drawing for the building of a new and greater Lane Tech high school, on the grounds now occupied by the Mid-City golf course at Addison

Girl Reporter Gets Lesson from Freda

Seeks Kitchen Work in Mediocre Getup.

By Kathleen McLaughlin.

WHEN you're in Rome they do say it's advisable to do as the Romans do. And when you set out to impersonate a maid in search of a job the same logic ought to apply.

My intentions certainly lay along that line—but I found myself somewhat handicapped by lack of knowledge of what maids do when they go job hunting. Then, too, there was the problems of what maids wear on such occasions.

Intent as I was on gleaning first hand information as to the reason for the popular unpopularity of the trade, profession, or calling of domestic service, these things mattered to me. Indeed, they assumed unduly important proportions at first—proportions that faded into insignificance as my experience accumulated along with the number of my applications.

Somebody once remarked that clothes make the man. Maybe. But they don't make the maid. That was my mistake.

* *

The Mediocre Makeup.

My initial excursions in pursuit of a phantom job were made, as an earlier chapter related, in my unadvised impression of the wardrobe the average maid might be expected to adopt in her leisure hours.

The mediocre getup I chose avoided anything resembling the ensemble idea: brown hat, blue cloth coat, black dress, hose and shoes. All had seen adequate service but were good for considerable more. A sort of discreet neutrality, it was, between the chic and the shabby.

Then, quite by chance, I got an object lesson that left me temporarily clothes conscious and much amused.

One of the addresses I had selected from the want ad columns was on Bradley place, west of Lincoln avenue. Just about here an intersecting north and south street is apt to prove a bit puzzling to strangers in the vicinity. Eyes on the street numbers and my mind on my street guide, I was wandering down Lincoln avenue when a girl, coming in the opposite direction, halted me with a question.

"Pardon me—coot you tell me where iss Bradley blace?"

She had a wonderfully musical voice, a marked German accent, and a wealth of blonde hair. If her name wasn't Freda or Brunhilde or something equally Teutonic, it snould have been.

Instantly I knew that we were in search of the same number, and that here was a potential rival for the position I intended to inquire about. Preserving my gravity with something of an effort, I asked what number she wanted. Righto! She named the one I was seeking.

"It seems," I told her, "that we're looking for the same place. Did you want to see about the ad?"

"Yess," she acknowledged, "I am looking vor a bosition."

Shaded by Comparison.

Only the situation itself saved me, for I giggled outright. The other girl, who could not possibly know that I was laughing at myself and not at her, looked at me doubtfully, then smiled a slow German smile as I explained that it was very funny we should have met.

What was much funnier than that was—that here was a bona fide maid, actually and earnestly in search of a job, and that her costume (for it was that) would have done credit to any business woman, be her calling what it may.

Subconsciously I developed holes in my glove finger tips, ravelings on my coat, a runner in one stocking. Con-

LEARNING ABOUT WOMEN

While the two scanned a street guide to find the location of an advertised address, the stranger told the reporter about kitchen work and how to get it—and about her fellow women.

LADIES' DAY

JUST how many of the fair sex understand baseball in all its finer points the photographer doesn't know, but he has caught the expressions on the faces of a group during "ladies' day" at the Cubs' ball park, and he leaves it for you to decide as to their reaction to the play that has just been made. At least one of their concerns, it would appear, was to keep warm.

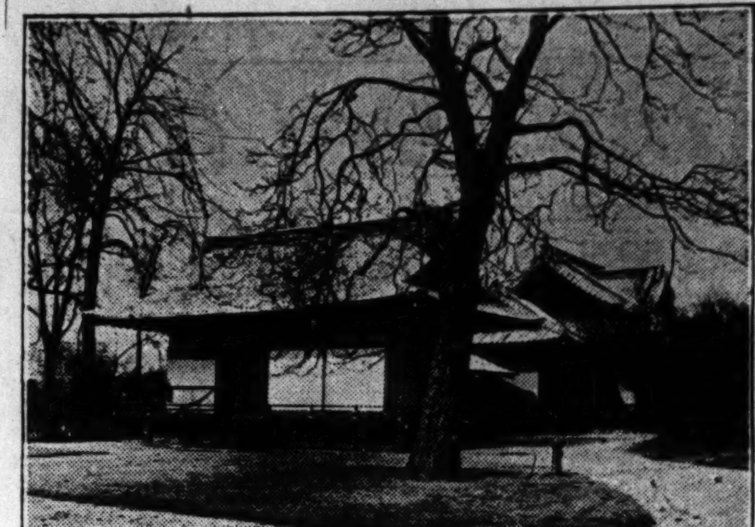
NOT A SCENE IN TOKIO



ONE might easily imagine that this picture was snapped in the land of the Mikado. And no wonder, for Japanese carpenters built the three houses out of teak wood from Japan, and two hundred Japanese students did the interior decorating. In place of cherry trees we have the Chicago variety of timber, for the houses are located on Wooded island in Jackson park. During the World's Fair the bungalows were used for Japanese tearooms.

No doubt several members of the audience are having their "say" at the same time.

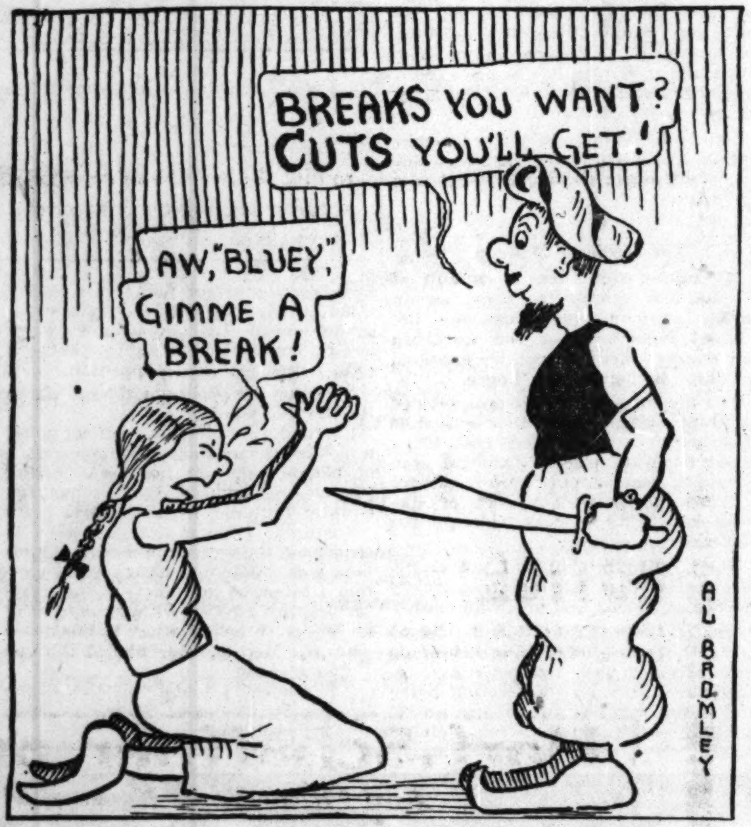
Snowshoe Al Springs a Story with Whiskers on It

And Exposes Barbers' Propaganda in Fairy Tale of Blue Beard

By Snowshoe Al.



BREAKS YOU WANT? CUTS YOU'LL GET!
AW, "BLUEY", GIMME A BREAK!
AL BROMLEY

YESTERDAY I picked up my little niece's book of goofy fairy tales and read a story which I think is merely some propaganda of the Barbers' union, because the tale insinuates that any bozo with whiskers is a dirty villain. I consider this an unjust insinuation, because I happen to be personally acquainted with almost two hundred men who wear whiskers, and I wish to state positively that one of them is a nice guy. If you don't like fairy tales this is the place where you should detour, because here comes

BLUE BEARD.

Once upon a time there lived a dodo who had a flock of money, a gallon of diamonds, a 32 room modern castle, a wow of a cellar, and a weakness for women. But did the Quails fall for this hombre? On the contrary, they used to dodge down alleys and side streets in order to steer clear of him. Why? Because he had a mug like an Easter Egg. He had a red nose, gray eyes, white hair, and blue whiskers! He might have got by with the nose, lamps, and brain-mattress, but the Indigo Chin Foliage just ruined his color scheme and shattered any sex appeal he might otherwise radiate. It made him look like a billy goat that had just finished guzzling a blueperry pie.

Capitulation.

Some old dame in the neighborhood happened to be equipped with a pair of ritzy young daughters, and Mr. Blue Beard wanted to hook up with one of them; he didn't care which one—they both looked like bargains to him. Neither of the gals took him seriously; in fact, he reminded them of a comic valentine. He gave them candy and jewelry and they gave him the horse laugh. These babies chased him back and forth from one another until he had worn out seventy-two dollars' worth of shoes at six bucks per pair.

Then a bright idea wandered into his hatrack. He takes these two squabs and their mother, together with several other young people, to his castle and tosses a wild party what lasted a week. O, and did he put on the dog! I ain't saying "No!" Talk about liquor—huh! He went down in his cellar and opened everything except the windows.

Well, everything turned out fine; everybody had a swell time and the youngest daughter decided that his beard didn't seem so terribly blue after all, so she married him.

Recapitulation.

A month later our boy friend informs his wife that he must attend a convention in Nashville and will be gone for about six weeks. He told her to have a good time while he was gone; he suggested that she invite all her friends over to the shack; he even said it would be all right for her to throw a couple parties while he was away. Then he dragged out a big bunch of keys and says:

"Listen closely! These two keys are for the two large wardrobes where I keep my best furniture. Drag it out if you want, but don't let your old lady park on any of the frail chairs, as she weighs a ton. This key is for the safe which contains my silver and gold plate. Don't let any of your friends handle the stuff or it will probably be among their souvenirs. These two keys are for the strongboxes which hold the money and Liberty Bonds which I grabbed on the Teapot Dome deal. This key unlocks the chest where my jewels are kept. And now look here! See this little key? Well, it's for the small closet on the second floor near the bathroom. Keep out of that closet, Mama! Stay clear of it or Papa will send plenty of grief your direction!"

Whereupon Mr. Blue Beard climbed into his flivver and beat it. No sooner was he gone than all the wife's friends and former neighbors rushed over to see her. You see, this gang was afraid to come around when her husband was home, because they dreaded the sight of his blue razor-food. They galloped all over the joint and examined the rooms, the carpets, the furniture, the groceries, the booze, etc.

The Key to Knowledge.

Now, Mrs. Blue Beard was just like any other gal—she consisted mostly of curiosity. [I'm afraid that remark ain't going to do me any good.] And so, while her friends were romping all over the place, she was headed straight for that little closet on the second floor.

"I wonder what the big stiff's got in there!" says she to herself as she breezed up the stairs; "he's got a lot of nerve telling me to keep out! I'll shake him down for a flock of alimony if I find that he's pulling any funny stuff. Anyhow, how will he ever know if I give it the once-over?"

She unlocked the closet and opened the door slowly. Then she gave a terrible shriek and dropped the key on the floor. O, baby, what a private morgue this boy had! That closet looked like the interior of a butcher's refrigerator. Seven of Mr. Blue Whisker's former wives were hanging around on hooks, and it was evident that they had not departed from this planet in a natural manner. Yes, sir, the boy just couldn't bear to part with his women; instead of burying them he kept them in storage!

"Well, for the love of Mike!" snorts Mama; "this guy has certaintly been getting away with murder!"

The Fatal Reprieve.

Then she discovered she had got blood stains on the key, so she went to her room and tried to wash 'em off, but they wouldn't disappear. In the meantime all her friends and neighbors had beat it for home, so she spent the rest of the day trying to give that key a bath. And then the grief began! Mr. Indigo Foliage came back home that same night!

"Good evening, Mama," says he, "I've decided not to go to that convention in Nashville, as I am now in possession of information to the effect that it's going to be a very dry affair. Give me back my keys."

"O. K., kid," says Mama, "here they are."

"Aha, you little snooper!" howls Blue Beard; "there is blood stains on this little key! You've been in that closet, ain'tcha?"

"Boo hoo hoo hoohoohoohoo!!! wails Mama, laying on the floor and kicking her heels.

"§‡%&%&&%*!!!" says her husband; "all right, you're gonna go back in that closet again, but you ain't coming out! I think there's an extra hook in there, an' you can occupy it from now on. Wait till I go in the bedroom an' get my sword."

"Aw, Bluey, be a good sport an' lay off the rough stuff!" cries his Dumb Half, but her tears didn't register. Mr. Funny Whiskers rushed into his boudoir, grabbed his trusty blade, and trotted back with a mean look in his lamps.

"Woman," sneers him, "you might just as well quit crying, because it ain't gonna get you no place. I've been through this so often that I'm becoming tired of bumping off wives. Stick out your neck!"

"Aw, Bluey, lend me fifteen minutes, will yuh? I have to curl my hair first," weeps his Sparring Partner.

"All right," says her husband, "I'll give you fifteen—"

The Act Is Utterly Ruined.

At this moment the door is knocked clean off its hinges and in walks the wife's two brothers, carrying swords, bombs, and sawed-off shotguns. Anybody can see at a glance that these two bozos mean business.

"Hello, sister!" says the two brothers [this is a brother act, so naturally they both talk at the same time]; "we have come to croak your villainous husband. Golly, what a queer looking duck he turned out to be! What's he got on his chin—a lilac bush?"

"Gentlemen," says Blue Beard, "you have arrived fifteen minutes too soon. This is very annoying. I might go so far as to state that you've ruined the most exciting part of the story. According to the original plot, my wife is supposed to spend the next quarter hour gazing down the road and hoping that her two dear brothers will arrive in time to save her. An' here you bust in way ahead of time."

"We can't help it," says the two brothers, "because Mr. Snowshoe Al is running short on writing paper an' if we don't croak you in a hurry this story will have to be finished on the back of a used envelope."

"O, that's different," says Blue Beard; "well, snap into it, boys, an' bump me off in this same paragraph!" And darned if they didn't. Whereupon everybody else lived happy ever after.

A Great Saving.

After purchasing a coat for my small daughter in one of the reliable downtown stores, I came upon a bargain counter of hats, marked "your choice, 65 cents." In looking through the lot I found a beautiful velour trimmed with genuine beaver fur which fitted my child perfectly, matched the coat and had been reduced from $5.95; almost unbelievable.

My daughter wore it two seasons and now I shall pass it on to some other child who can wear it two more seasons.

It paid me to shop early. W. A. R.

A Remarkable Buy.

The keenest bargain I ever got was an all wool black and white coat with genuine civet fur collar for $16.75. It was man-tailored, too, and was made to sell for more than twice the amount paid, but was sold as a sample coat in a "bargain basement."

I considered myself fortunate—for I had been to every store in town without success! B. M.

For a Nickel.

In these days of high cost of living I don't believe any one ever got a much better bargain than mine—a pair of patent leather pumps for a nickel. It happened like this: I have an unusually hard foot to fit and always dread the shoe buying ordeal. Imagine my surprise, then, when a friend of mine came in one day and announced that she had bought me a pair of shoes. In some alarm I asked if they could be returned if they did not fit. She said no, but that I surely would not begrudge what I paid for them, and she handed me a bill for five cents. The shoes proved to be good looking and a perfect fit.

It happened that my friend worked in one of the loop stores which had become overstocked on certain unusual sizes of pumps. As they were not allowed to give away merchandise, they offered them for sale at that price to their employés and she had remembered me and my troublesome feet. E. Z.

Living Men's Faces Carved on Building

LONDON.—(AP)—Faces of living men are carved in stone on the new million pound building of the Imperial Chemical industries nearing completion at Westminster.

One of the faces is that of the head of the concern, Sir Alfred Mond. All the other carvings are said to be excelent likenesses of many men prominent in the chemical world.

The sculpture around the building also includes figures of peacocks, which are said to be there as a symbol of incorruptibility, following the ancient tradition that the flesh of the peacock is incorruptible.

POSITION WANTED.

A Chinese newspaper contained this letter from an applicant for work:

"Sir: I am Wang. I can drive a typewriter with good noise and my English is great. My last job has left itself from me, for the good reason that the large man has dead. It was on account of no fault of mine. So, honorable sirs, what about it? If I can be of big use to you, I will arrive on same date that you should guess."

Overpays Fine for Fishing, Is Offered Bath

STARNBERG, Upper Bavaria.—(AP)—Even tenors of international fame are not permitted to fish in Bavarian lakes without police permits.

This regulation, forbidding fishing without license, was brought drastically to the knowledge of Leo Slezak, noted tenor, during his recent visit to the Starnberg lake, Upper Bavaria.

One fine morning Slezak decided to have an hour of fishing at the lake. He hadn't settled down on the shore for more than ten minutes when he saw a spiked helmet advancing towards him.

"You are not permitted to fish here," the policeman told Slezak, "and for doing so I have to fine you five marks." Slezak did not say anything but reached into his pocket and handed a ten mark bill to the representative of the law. The policeman, taking the ten marks, said: "Sorry, I have no change, but if you'll take a bath in this lake I'll have to fine you another five marks and then we are square."

Would Alter Dress of Girls in Italy

ROME.—(AP)—Bare arms, low necks and short skirts would be taboo for Italian high school and college girls if Minister of Education Fedele took the action asked in a letter now before him.

The body known as "the national committee for the correctness of the mode," has petitioned him, requesting that all those whose costume "does not conform to that modesty which is dictated by civilized Christian usage and sentiment" be barred from the institutions under his control.

The school supervisors in several large provincial cities have already publicly admonished girl students for "immodest dress," but with little effect, and now government action is wanted.

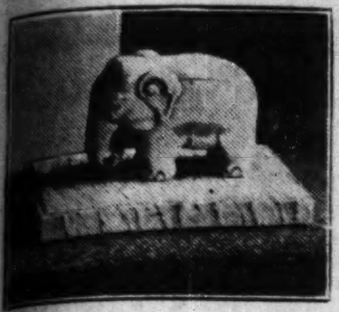
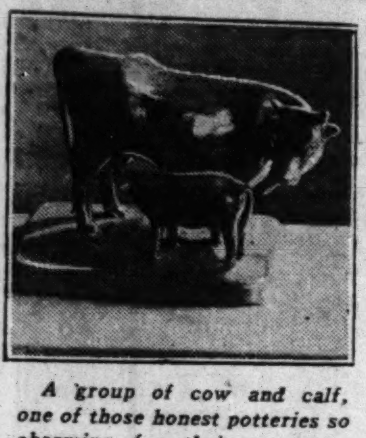
A Menagerie for the Early American Fan

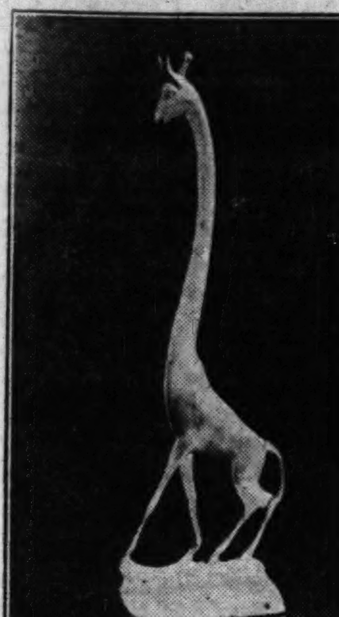
Birds and Beasts, Tame and Wild, in This Novelty Zoo



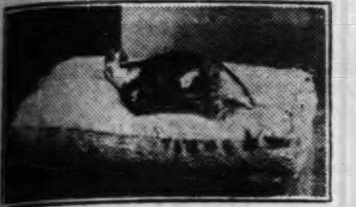
For the early American fan, a menagerie. This carved ivory elephant is one of the orientalia which the early sea merchants of New England brought to their wives in their sailing ships. It is old and therefore lovely in color.



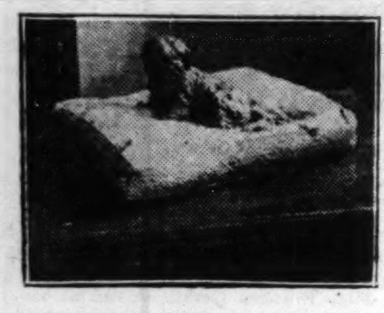
A group of cow and calf, one of those honest potteries so charming for their unpretentious sincerity. Such a piece is heavy enough to be useful as a paperweight. It resembles Bennington.



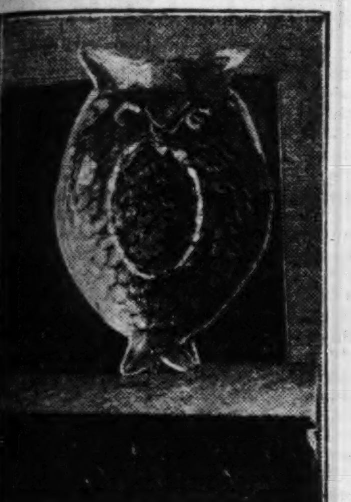
American — but not early American. He is a proof that modernism is not without art. A giraffe in brass, also for a doorstep, and delightful in his fantastic exaggerations.



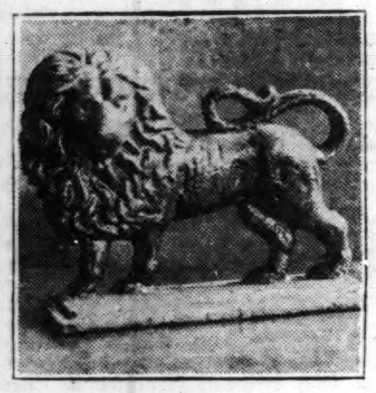
A glass turtle in a delightful green. His crudeness is his charm, and he is heavy enough to stop a door. He is old, even for a tortoise.



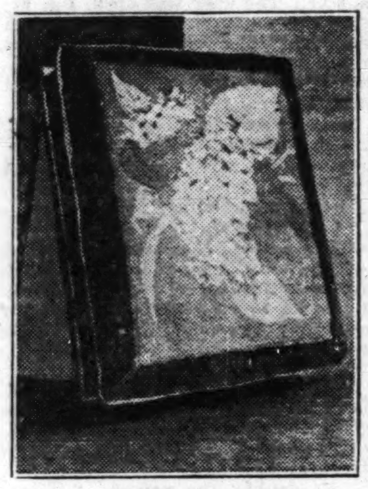
In the menagerie for collectors of Americana is a brass dog. His ancestry was English and a Yorkshire terrier. This one is after an English model.



A wise old owl. It is a deep dish of pressed glass in oyster white. It probably was used for piccalilli or some sort of condiment. It is an amusing piece.



A lion in castiron for a doorstep. Castiron came in in the early nineteenth century. It can be seen at its best on windows and balconies in New Orleans. To collect objects made of it is now a fad.



A footstool in walnut, covered with an old piece of needlepoint combined with bead work. The colors are lovely greens and whites on a red background, and the edges of the stool are old green velvet.

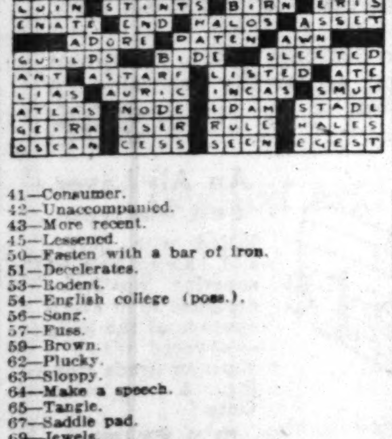
ANSWER TO LAST WEEK'S PUZZLE



NATURAL PREFERENCE.

An election story often told in British parliamentary circles had its origin in a meeting between Sir Henry Bentinck, the tory leader, and a wealthy farmer of radical leanings. To Sir Henry's pleadings for support the farmer replied:

"Vote for you? I would sooner vote for the devil!"

"But," replied Sir Henry suavely, "in the event of your friend not standing for election?"—Passing Jest.

Peace on Earth Now the Slogan of South China

CANTON, China.—(AP)—"Peace on earth, good will toward our British neighbors at Hongkong" is now the government sanctioned slogan of South China.

Since Gen. Li Chai-sum, head of the Cantonese government, and Sir Cecil Clementi, governor of British Hongkong, exchanged visits several weeks ago, relations between the two governments have been more cordial than at any time during the last five years, reports from both British and Chinese sources agree.

Gen. Li went to Hongkong and was the guest of the British governor, and then Sir Cecil came to Canton as the guest of Gen. Li. The "peace on earth" slogan was decreed by the Chinese authorities.

Several humorous incidents occurred during the exchange of visits of the two officials. When Li went to Hongkong, Hongkong Chinese flew the Chinese nationalist flag for the first time. As a result the Hongkong flagmakers worked overtime supplying the demand.

When Sir Cecil came to Canton the union jack was the order of the day, and in turn the local flagmakers reaped their harvest, sewing machines hummed day and night before the British chief arrived, and even the paintmakers' shops felt the strain. Antiforeign slogans were scrubbed from walls and the "peace on earth" phrase took its place. Those who failed to fly the union jack were fined $5.

When Sir Cecil arrived a Chinese gunboat boomed out a salute of 17 guns and a celestial band in scarlet and sky blue uniforms smothered all noises in "God Save the King."

After two days of birds' nest soup, fatted calf and sharks' fins feasts Sir Cecil was taken for a launch ride along the Canton waterfront, this event closing his visit to Canton. Ahead of the official launch was another bearing a Chinese band, which played "The End of a Perfect Day."

Since the British governor's departure rumors of a ten million dollar loan from Hongkong to the Canton government have been rife.

NOT IN ACTION.

"That is a skyscraper," announced the guide.

Old Lady—O, my! I'd love to see it work.

and Western avenues, will include this room for aviation.

Principal Beebe and Director Strass have plans for putting aviation ground work in the school as a credit course The work would be run as a part of the regular mechanical course, and would be with both model and full sized planes. Some of Detroit's high schools already have instituted an aviation course, according to Principal Beebe.

There are several complete models in the Lane Tech club now. One boy even has built a model of a dirigible, and plans to fill the big gas bag housing with tiny balloons inflated with hydrogen. This flying machine of course would not be accepted in THE TRIBUNE's tournament. Several of the models are exact reproductions in miniature of the big ships now in government and commercial service.

Director Sears states that his club boys would start building new machines and repairing their old planes to start in the tourney.

It is expected that more than 50 flyers will compete in the tourney under the colors of the Lane club.

Active at Tilden Tech.

Out at Tilden Tech high school, Principal Evans reports that his aviation club is working overtime to prepare for the tourney. E. R. Christiansen is the instructor at Tilden in charge of the boys, and he has been kept busy getting out supplies. More boys are taking to aviation at Tilden than ever before, and indications point to a big entry from the south side school.

Crane Tech also has an aviation club which has done considerable work with the models. Crane isn't going to be left behind and several of the west side boys are making ships for the meet.

The tournament is open to all boys. There is no entry fee, and THE TRIBUNE is providing the prizes. The tournament is a part of the national meet and the winners in the all-Chicago events will be sent to Detroit to participate in the national championships which will be held during the summer. The high points of the rules are printed below. All that is required to enter is to clip out the entry coupon appearing in THE TRIBUNE, and fill it out and mail as directed.

Chinese Topers Glimpse Smokes and Then Drink

CANTON.—(AP)—Cantonese topers prefer to see their snakes before drinking rather than after.

Snake gall is an ingredient of a favorite winter beverage of local epicureans who have the price.

After the order is given a deft blue gowned waiter brings in a cageful of reptiles from which the guest may choose. Only three deadly species are considered suitable for the preparation of this ambrosia, the hooded cobra, the yellow and black banded bamboo viper, and the tree adder. When the guest has made his choice, the waiter, with skill born of long practice, lifts the snake from the cage, evades its fangs and quickly extracts the gall bladder, which is squeezed into a cup of hot rice wine. The operation does not kill the snake.

Cobra wine costs 50 cents a cup. Addicts say it has a bittersweet flavor, leaves a pleasant taste, and is very good for rheumatism.

Flesh of these three snake species is also considered a cold weather delicacy in Canton. It is mixed with chicken, bamboo shoots and mushrooms, and costs $2.50 a plate. A proper snake meat feast, with all trimmings, such as given by a wealthy host, costs about $100.

PARKING THE SKIRT.

A Topeka woman entered a doctor's office downtown one afternoon recently and observed the office girl at her desk exhibiting a rare mileage of silken stockings and bloomers. The visitor observed another office girl across the hall—a girl she knew—and she slipped over for a moment's visit.

"I thought I would tell you about that pretty little girl in the doctor's office," she said. "I believe you could tip her off to the fact that she is unconscious of the show she is putting on for the room full of men and women callers."

"Unconscious?" was the reply. "Say, that little flapper knows every inch of her stuff. She knows exactly where that skirt is parked every minute of the day."—Topeka, Kas., Journal.

TAKING HER OUT.

Little Mary—I'm glad mother let me come to the show with you.

Little Willie—So am I. Now give me your dime. I hate to see a girl pay for herself.

To Tell League of Nations of Samoa's Unrest

AUCKLAND, New Zealand.—(AP)—Sir George Richardson, former administrator of Western Samoa for the New Zealand government under its mandate for the league of nations, has arrived here to confer with the government before proceeding to Geneva to appear before the mandates committee.

Sir George, who was administrator of Samoa for five years, will give evidence to the committee, as representative of New Zealand, about the recent conditions of unrest there. These caused the government to send two cruisers to the island, with the result that 400 natives were arrested and several Europeans alleged to have been their leaders were expelled.

"There never has been any desire on the part of the natives for a change of the flag which flies over Samoa," Sir George says. "I regret that there has been any such suggestion. It was invented by conspirators on Apia beach who buttonhole tourists and talk this way."

Sir George has been succeeded by Col. Stephen St. Allen, who has the problem of determining the disposition of the arrested natives, who are being held.

PLAIN ARITHMETIC.

Bobbie, a pupil of the primary school, chanced to stray over into the more advanced class and there noticed an instructor performing an experiment in the physical laboratory.

"What are you doing with that water, sir?" asked Bobbie.

"Analyzing it, my dear boy," was the reply.

"Analyzing it? What's that?"

"Finding out what it contains."

"Well, what does it contain?"

"Two-thirds hydrogen and one-third oxygen."

"Gee, professor," said Bobbie, "then there ain't no water in it at all, is there."

Poincare Sees Hope for Wine Trade with U.S.

PARIS.—(AP)—Premier Raymond Poincare, who is reputed to be reasonably dry and usually drinks water, is nevertheless solicitous of the prosperity of the French wine industry and doesn't despair of America changing her ways in respect to prohibition.

"All countries have the right to legislate as they see fit," he told an audience in the southern French wine region, "but it isn't forbidden to hope that some day even America will admit there is truth in the saying of a charming Anglo-Saxon poet concerning wine: 'I am Health; I am Heart; I am Life' [which he quoted in good English]."

He went on to say that "if wine were harmful, it would be known. One would have known it long ago."

He said the recently created international wine bureau was at work and "we will continue to defend wine and seek to convince those who speak ill of it."

All this, of course, was comfort to those who live by the vineyards and the wine trade which have suffered from the dryness of America.

From Small Job in Small Town to Big One in City

Woman Scores as Advertising Manager.

By Marion Reagan.

"A LAZY man is merely professionally misplaced. Give him something he is fitted for, something he likes to do, and he'll do it well, without the need of prodding."

That sounds encouraging. And simple. Just let every one pick out something he wants to do for a living instead of something he doesn't, and there'll be no more failures, no more malcontents.

But there's a trick in it. The rub comes in finding out what the lazy man, or failure, really wants to do and what it is he's fitted for. Usually, on close personal analysis, it turns out, by his own admission, that he is not fitted for much of anything useful, and what he really wants to do is something easy involving a large income, little responsibility, and plenty of leosure time. But, as most of us—who have spent our lives looking for just such jobs—know, they are hard to get.

And again, as known to most of us who have spent much time trying to search ourselves for talents, that intensive self-analysis and introspection is, in the long run, a waste of time. For the truth seems to be that most of us haven't any special, God given talents. Most of us are just ordinary folks, with ordinary intelligence, whose only chance for making a material success of our lives lies in training for something definite. "Genius" says a well known educator, "is a gift from God, but talent can be developed by training."

And it is perhaps because women, on the whole, do not train themselves for lifelong careers that the outstanding success of any one of them is "news."

Getting Down to Cases.

Now, Mary Leland, who is advertising manager for a large north side department store, set about getting into the advertising business in such a well planned manner, took such a sensible, well thought out course, that her experiences in following it, and what she has to say concerning it, should be of interest to that annually increasing number of confused young women who leave our high schools and colleges each June, diploma in hand, the confident predictions of well-wishers ringing in their ears, but who look down the vista of the future tremulous and uncertain.

She didn't just slip into a near-at-hand job in the small town she lived in, and she didn't wander into the well-beaten path of the pad and pencil parade of girls who open the door of business opportunity with the typewriter keys. Nor did she set herself any surpassing feat, difficult of accomplishment. Looking the commercial situation squarely in the face, she saw that the only way to get "in" was to be able to do some one special job. And, as she saw it, the wisest thing was to pick a "special job" closely related to the higher-up position one wanted to get eventually.

Her List of Requirements.

She wanted to be an advertising manager. She chose advertising because it was lucrative, and, to her, fascinating. But there are so many who think the same thing about advertising that the field has become highly competitive and jobs harder and harder to get.

Miss Leland was young, just out of high school, and her chances for slipping under the advertising gate were slim. With a cool, level head she sat down to analyze and enumerate the qualities necessary for making a success of advertising, and decided on this list:

Merchandising—First of all she must know goods, must know how to sell, must have a certain amount of store experience.

Art—Every advertiser, she said, should know how to make a layout, should know how to judge good art work, how to direct an artist to make the illustrations she wants used. And that must involve technical knowledge and some skill.

Writing—She must learn how to put words together, not to startle any one with their literary effect, but to convey, clearly, her ideas.

Back and Forth to Chicago.

Adaptability—She must learn how to adapt herself to changed conditions, how to adapt herself to people, to do things as they want them done rather than as she might prefer to do them.

She came up to Chicago, went to the Art institute, and studied design. She learned how to trim a window, to make display cards, to lay out an advertising page. With that ability she felt ready to apply to a small town department store for a job. She already had learned something of merchandising in her father's little department store in her home town, and writing was something she kept practicing constantly.

Through an ad in the paper she learned of an opening in Marshalltown, Ia. She answered, and got the position because of her art training and knowledge of small town department store work. The salary was not big, but it was enough to live on and the experience, she knew, was valuable. She stayed four years. At the end of that time she was ready to try for big city work. So she came back to Chicago, offering definite training and experience in exchange for the job she wanted to get. She got the job.

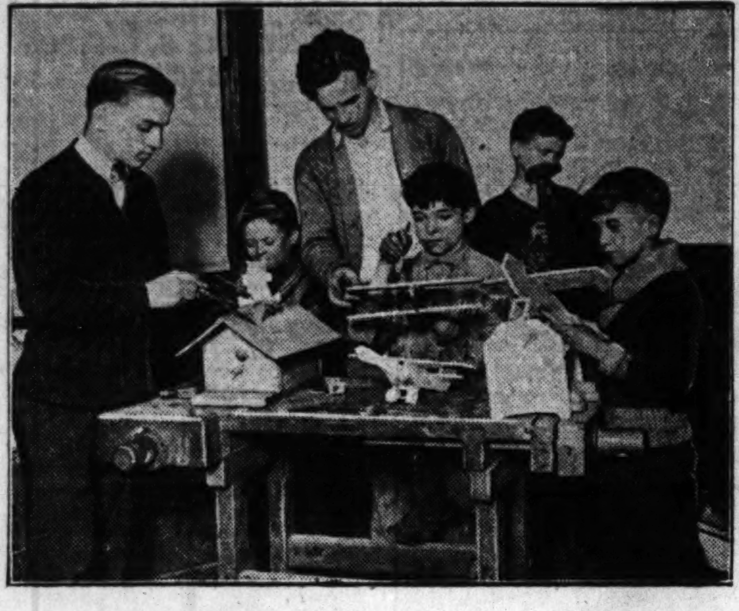
Not a Literary Job.

Curled up in a corner of a large davenport in her apartment on Belmont avenue, Miss Leland, a slight woman, with black, closely cut hair and laughing gray eyes, was talking recently to some younger friends who wanted to break into advertising. Modest, she took little credit for what she has accomplished in becoming an advertising manager of a store, and as she told the story of how others might follow her example it seemed a simple course. But while it is true that what she says, and what prominent educators say—that we can train ourselves to be practically anything we want to become—still in all fairness it must be admitted by any one who has met Miss Leland that she is an exceptionally bright young woman, with an unusual, imaginative flair which has materially aided, with her training, in making her successful.

"One difficulty," she points out "with many girls who want to be advertisers is that they think the position is literary. Girls who like to write flock into advertising and frequently fail, because fundamentally the business is not literary at all. It is a practical matter of being able, through words, to make goods move off store shelves."

AT HAPPINESS HOUSE



FOR the purpose of providing entertainment and education, the House of Happiness has been established at 3052 Gratten avenue. Eleven hundred boys and girls are enrolled in the club, paying annual dues of ten cents each. The manual arts class is popular with the boys, as the above scene indicates. Left to right, are Edward Novak, Steve Dzivak, Ezra Young, instructor; Ray Murrey, Sam Henry, and Lawrence Cerocke.

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

AT THE TOP

Mary Gloria Leland started out to scale the heights via a straight line. Spurning all detours, she stuck to the path leading to an advertising managership. The path was stony, but she plunged on. She was determined to win, and she did.

SENTENCE SERMONS

THEY NEVER WILL BE MISSED.

The stout old gentleman rushing along the platform just missed his train and returned puffing and blowing, to be greeted by a porter with the question:

"Missed your train, sir?"

"No," was the reply. "I didn't like the look of it, so I chased it off the platform!"—Birmingham Post.

Accused—That I would open a jeweler's shop.—Pages Gates Yverdon.

France Offers Prizes for New Flying Records

PARIS.—(AP)—France yearns so strongly to recapture aviation records that were hers a few years ago that the government has hung up tempting prizes in cash for builders of airplanes.

The prizes, totaling several hundred thousand francs, are offered to French airplane makers if their products succeed in breaking the records for speed, altitude, duration and long distance. The time limit is Oct. 31, 1928.

It was only a few years ago that France held all of the records simultaneously, speed, long distance and duration, but other countries have taken them from her at different times.

Girl at Cleaner's Gets $50 Toward Musical Education

A Would-Be Pianist Is Polite to a Stranger

By the Politeness Reporter.

IT was necessary to stand up on the southbound "L," and, standing close beside me, were two women talking about their vacations this summer.

"I told my husband," said one, "that I was going on a vacation this summer, and he said, 'All right.'"

"I wouldn't have liked that," laughed her friend.

"No," agreed the other, good naturedly, "shows how much he's apt to miss me."

They agreed that June was the best vacation month. One of them recalled going up to her cabin in the middle of May once, and finding snow on the ground.

I got off the "L" at 63d street. The man in the cigar store near the station told me I was at what might be called the edge of the Woodlawn district. When I asked the waitress in a nearby restaurant how far I was from the lake, she wanted to know what lake.

I started east on 61st street and, at St. Lawrence avenue, came to evidence of what had just been an automobile collision. When I reached the spot a policeman and several bystanders, who had been attracted to the event, were leaving the scene. Only the participants in the accident and their cars remained. The men were grouped about the damaged car, which belonged to a mail carrier.

As he had been alone in his car, the carrier was now the sole debater on his side of the argument. The other three men had a clear idea of what happened, and the mail carrier had a clear idea, and the two ideas failed to jibe. Both factions gave me their version.

Compromise.

"We were starting to drive in the alley," explained the trio, "and the car came along and hit us."

"I was driving along," explained the carrier, "and their car bumped into me."

"Which car was damaged?" I asked.

"Just mine," said the mailman.

So we all looked at his machine, but one of the trio ventured that the fender probably had been damaged prior to the recent accident.

"Maybe we can compromise," suggested the carrier.

"Yes," said the leader of the trio, "if you say 25 cents or so——"

"Twenty-five cents or so?" the mailman gasped. "Well, you can come back and look at my tracks and see just how it happened. I don't know how much damage is done. I don't know whether my wheels are lined up or not."

The magic card seemed to want me to make a suggestion, although I was dubious about being a third party entering into a dispute between parties of the first and second part. However, I said:

"Why don't you drive over to a nearby garage, ascertain the extent of the damage, and settle accordingly?"

This seemed to please all parties and they climbed into the car and drove off.

I went on down 61st street. At the corner of Champlain avenue there was a store which seemed at the moment to have attracted the trade of youthful purchasers of penny candy. The clerk was trying to meet the whims of three small boys who were interested particularly in small squares of butterscotch. After one of the boys had bought a square he looked eagerly to see whether the slip of paper inside the wrapping called for an extra piece. Much to his chagrin, the slip was a blank.

Pigeons and Peanuts.

A boy possibly 12 years old entered. He was wearing what was obviously a new suit. A bystander of his own age twitted him with, "Where'd you get the new suit?"

There was no comeback.

"Why don't you wear a clean shirt with it?" taunted the other.

I went on down to Cottage Grove avenue. In front of the drug store on the corner there was a flock of tame pigeons. A woman stood watching them with amusement, and a man was feeding them peanuts.

"See," I remarked, "the courageous ones who come close get all the peanuts, and the timid ones are left hungry."

The man made no comment.

A blue roadster started to cross the street out of turn and was speedily called to account by the policeman on watch.

"And yet," I added, taking the car incident as an illustration, "the timid ones are less apt to come to grief."

I walked along automobile row toward the Chicago university campus. There was a vacant space filled with used cars, and a man was painting price signs on the windshields. I came to Midway Gardens, but it was afternoon and I heard nothing of its music. At night, no doubt, it would be a place of brilliant lights and activity. Across the stretch of campus loomed the university buildings.

The Desert Scene.

I found myself retracing my steps on 61st street. There was a tailor establishment, the name on the window was Katz, and I presume it was Mr. Katz with whom I talked. He talked while he plied his needle — an interesting man who—if I remember rightly had been in the neighborhood some thirteen years.

I spoke to him about an enlarged and colored snapshot which hung in a frame on his wall.

"Everybody likes that picture," he told me. "There was a decorator came across it in a place where it had been left behind and I bought it of him, but the customers like it so well I wouldn't take a good deal for it."

It was the picture of an Indian woman and her papoose—southwest desert scene. I went over and looked at the inscription and saw that the piece had been put out by the Santa Fé railroad.

"Were you ever down in Arizona?" I asked Mr. Katz.

"No," he replied. "I had all the traveling I wanted in the days before I got married. I traveled in England and Scotland and Germany and Poland. Of course, if it was a man's business to travel it might be all right."

In front of the radio store on South Park avenue and 61st street a group of fans was listening to a broadcast of the ball game. I asked one of the listeners what the score was and he said he didn't know, as he had just arrived. The faces of the others all wore expressions of serious attention.

The Girl at the Cleaner's.

In the shop of Becker, the cleaner, a young woman stood behind the tile counter. The door was open, for, despite the chilliness of the day, the windows on the south and west sides of the office permitted a flood of sunshine to enter the place and lend warmth.

The girl was phoning as I entered, and she excused herself while she finished her conversation. I told her I was rather lost in the neighborhood, as it was not familiar to me.

"I wouldn't feel lost anywhere on the south side," she ventured. "But I don't know much about the north side or west side. I've some friends, who used to live in Hibbing, on the north side and sometimes I go up to see them."

"Hibbing?" I questioned.

"Hibbing, Minn.," she explained. "I graduated from high school there in '25."

"O, yes," I said, "I've heard about that high school."

"No doubt," she agreed. "It cost three million dollars and is the second best in the country. It's because the iron ore is so rich up there. They even had to change the town because they found iron ore beneath it."

"You're a courteous young woman," I ventured. "You fit in well with the sunshine."

"We're going to put up an awning," she told me. "I like to be courteous, unless it is that some one tries to sell me something. I don't want to buy anything, because I'm saving my money to study music. That's what I came to Chicago for, but I didn't have enough saved."

For the Music Fund.

"That's usually the way," I said; "artistic ambitions and a lack of the wherewithal to pursue one's studies. How do you like managing a shop?"

"Well, it's an old saying," she smiled, "laugh and the world laughs with you. There are so many kinds of people. What are you selling?"

"But if I sold you," I ventured, "then it would take from your savings for those musical studies. It so happens that I'm The Politeness Reporter and bearer of the magic card. The magic card wants to add $50 to that fund you're saving for going to school next fall."

Miss Frances Gerzin stared at me, then looked out the window toward the undertaking parlors on the further corner, to the sign of Dr. Aronberg, dentist, above the drug store across the street. Then she looked back at me.

"Is it true?" she asked.

I assured her it was.

"And some day," I called back, as I started toward the door, "we'll come to hear one of your piano recitals."

THE HORSE MARKET

THOSE who may have an idea that the day of Dobbin has passed would be surprised on a visit to the Randolph street horse market. There, on Tuesday and Friday mornings, the owners of nags lead them forth for the appraisal of buyers. The animals may be dubious about changes in ownership, but they at least have the consolation of knowing their services are still in demand.

Queen Sends Doll to London Museum

LONDON.—(AP)—Queen Mary has sent to the London museum a beautifully dressed doll, representing Queen Alexandra, the king's mother, when she was a girl

The doll, which is 15 inches high, was made in 1863, and is perfectly dressed according to the fashion of the day, including a crinoline. The dress is made of silk in the queen's favorite mauve shade. A little panne velvet jacket is worn over the dress. It is lined with white silk and trimmed with white silk braid. The pink underskirt is worked in crochet. The correct hairdressing fashion of the time is illustrated in this doll. Pads were then worn at the nape of the neck and the hair tucked under. A net was worn over the head.

The doll's jewels consist of a large brooch at the neck of the dress and a small pearl necklace. There is also a long gold chain. A bouquet of pink roses is carried. All the garments are beautifully made by hand.

A SLIGHT ERROR.

She waited on the corner joyously, then pensively, then expectantly, then casually, then anxiously, and two hours passed.

"Man," she said, "is a perfidious animal, faithless and untrue, incapable of consummating a promise," and so she became a cynic.

Two hundred yards down the street he said the same thing about women—she was on the wrong corner.—London Tit-Bits.

Clothes Make Kitchen Maid? Not in Chicago

Girl Reporter Gets Lesson from Freda.

Certainly I was aware that I was guiltless of any such. Powdering my nose restored somewhat my morale, and helped to cover a surreptitious inspection of the girl's clothes.

From the crown of her sassy beige hat to the soles of her brown suede slippers, she was as smartly turned out as any woman of means and taste who might be met promenading the boulevard. I had eschewed the ensemble note in my attire, but Freda made the most of it.

Her coat, of cloth and fur trimmed, was a dark brown. Underneath it I caught glimpses of a dress of the identical shade, in crêpe. She wore brown kid gloves, the beige felt hat aforementioned, with suede slippers to match her coat, and her hose were the shade known as sunburn.

Quite possibly this outfit represented practically her entire wardrobe, barring work clothes. It was, of course, her best. And her best was good.

Learning About Women.

The upshot of it was that Freda and I joined forces to find the place we wanted. It didn't take long, but long enough for me to augment my information about maids and places. And I learned about women from her—women, that is, who hire and fire the Fredas. We swapped information about prospects and places, and voted thumbs down on one we had both tried and found things not to our liking.

"She wanted only to bay ten dollars," disapproved Freda—or Brunhilde. "And she hass only those two dark liddle roomss, and I am avraid that iss a bad boy she hass."

In Chicago "vor yearss this spring," as she told me, nothing but her accent remained to reveal her foreign origin. She had worked for German families two years, then spent a year in one place she liked in Winnetka. Her employers moved away, and she had worked here and there, since then.

"It's awfully hard," I sympathized, "to find a good place."

"Yess," she agreed, "uff course, there are blenty of blaces, but it iss hard to find the right one."

Later—much later—I came to appreciate just how tersely she had expressed the entire situation.

At the moment, Bradley place having finally been discovered, the two of us went into an Alphonse and Gaston debate—"you first, my dear Freda," etc. Since the other girl was in good faith and my own object merely an interview, I insisted that she apply first. She demurred only a moment, and I watched her off down the block with a promise to wait there for her. I waited—and waited. She did not return.

In Pursuit of a Girl.

At last, convinced that she had taken the position and might even now be preparing lunch for the family, I gave it up as a bad job and started out to discover what had happened. Then I recalled that I had forgotten to find out from Freda whether it is customary to march right up to the front door or round to the kitchen. That was solved for me.

In a small vestibule at the address of the ad a card stuck in one corner of a mailbox advised, "see about ad at first door west." I reconnoitered. The first door west was another vestibule. Apparently no one was home. I rang all four bells and got no answer.

Back again to the first entrance where I rang the bell underneath the card. Correct this time, for it belonged to the first door west—in that building. Immediately a young woman, enveloped in a bungalow apron, a child at her heels, appeared at the inner door, eyed the classified section in my hand, and said:

"You came about the ad—that's at my mother's, around the corner, the first house."

No wonder it had taken Freda—or Brunhilde—so long. I found the first house, after hasty inspections at first four entrances to upstairs apartments over a drug store on the corner. The right place was a huge, old fashioned frame house. Right or not, I rapped at the front door without avail. So I wended my way around to the kitchen.

Freda Is Found.

It was a big room—no kitchenette proportions there. A red checkered tablecloth, askew on a table bearing the remains of a meal, was visible in the window. The door was flung open by a slim girl in a red sweater and a gingham dress and, as I followed her through into a living room so dark that the lights were burning at midday, I noted a sink heaped with piles of other dishes, a broken crate on the floor, and rather general disorder.

Peering up at me from a chair in the crowded living room was a prepossessing elderly woman, shading her eyes against the glare of the lamp on the center table. Freda sat opposite her, eyeing me without a sign of recognition. A plump, rosy cheeked younger woman with a towel on her head and her sleeves rolled up above the elbow was taking her name and address.

"Why, honey," the elder woman queried at me, "what'd you come round to the kitchen for? Kitchen doors are only for peddlers. You didn't need do that."

I explained that I hadn't been able to make them hear. They exclaimed that it was a shame. Freda got up, preparatory to leaving. She had come in the front way, I saw. Then we got down to business.

Invalid, but Not Sick.

Mrs. L—— was a big hearted, good natured Irishwoman who went to some length to explain to me that, while she was an invalid, she wasn't sick. An attack of neuritis some months before had left her unable to walk, and she needed some one to keep house until she recovered. The place was at sixes and sevens now, though her two neighbors, the plump woman and the slim girl, were helping out just then.

"I'm not sick," she insisted, "but I do want somebody around who won't look like a graveyard all the time—bad enough for me to look that way—somebody cheerful. There isn't much to do at all, beyond a little extra baking—my husband's a policeman, and he certainly does like a bit of cake or pie now and then. I s'pose you can cook?"

Assured on that point, she informed me that Freda, who had just left, was also looking for the place—"but she wanted to see about it for some other girl." So then, I reflected, Freda hadn't cared about this job, either. I asked what the wages were.

"I pay twelve dollars a week," Mrs. L—— said. "And it's plenty—for what there is to do. Two hours' work a day is about all it takes to keep the place neat. There's no washing, of course, but there would be a few things, aprons of mine, like, to iron out. And I need help to get around—some one to hold my arm. Then I'm all right."

For all that there were the big and crowded rooms to be cared for, and the extra duties of nurse, I decided there must be plenty of worse places to work than with this jolly old lady. Plenty of leisure—no washing to bother with, and $12 weekly above expenses.

They're All Alike.

Practically all positions are alike, I found, in that no laundry work, except some ironing, is required. Nearly every one wants a girl to stay at night, and provides her with a room and board, though, to be sure, there are rooms—and rooms; and board isn't alike everywhere. Since jobs innumerable in the commercial world are held by girls who might do housework but who prefer to accept ten, twelve, eighteen and twenty dollars weekly, domestic work is better paid in comparison with these.

With a promise to consider the position in question, I made my adieu and the best time possible to the next address on my list, which happened to be on Roscoe place in the 500 block.

Confidently I entered the imposing lobby of a new flat building and rang the bell of the first apartment. No answer. I rang again, and then again. Then I explored the regions at the back of the building, and found a small boy playing on the porch, and an assortment of milk and cream bottles on the step.

To the collarless youth who opened the door a trifle at my knock, I confided my errand. He said to wait a minute—and shut the door. A moment later it was opened by a good looking young matron who eyed me from crown to toe in one sweeping glance, kept the door as vigilantly guarded as the boy had, informed me they had secured a maid—and shut the door.

I didn't learn much there, of course. Things might have been better—but the worst was yet to come. Also the best.

[This is the second of a series of "Maid in Chicago" true stories. The third will appear in the Metropolitan section next Sunday.]

SENTENCE SERMONS
BY THE REV. ROY. L. SMITH.

Your Mind Is Like—

—A room crowded with people—it needs a frequent airing.
—A highway—it soon develops ruts unless watched.
—A high powered car—it needs a steady driver.
—A garden—it will grow up to weeds if it is not watched.
—A storage battery—it needs a certain amount of recharging.
—A big house—many of the rooms are seldom used.
—A savings bank—you cannot take out what you have not put in.

You Can't Learn—

—Everything by listening only to those with whom you agree.
—Much by listening exclusively to your own remarks.
—Enough to be contemptuous of anybody's honest opinions.
—Much from many, but you can learn something from everybody.
—Life's lessons by running away from hardships.

A Gift.

Last summer my husband accidentally turned over an ash tray of which he was quite fond, since it had been a gift, breaking the glass bowl. For over six months I tried to buy a new bowl in the desired color.

On going to the store from which it had come, I found they did not sell these extra insets. I had almost given up and decided to throw the stand away.

A few days ago, in a furniture store near us, I saw ash trays similar to ours. I asked the manager if he could sell me one of the insets in orange. Imagine my surprise when he said, "No, but I can give you one."

Needless to say, he will always get our trade when we buy anything in furniture. H. W.

That Honest Look.

I was visiting in Chicago last fall and one afternoon went to a show with the party I was visiting. We had to park the car a short distance from the theater and we window-shopped on the way over. I saw a coat in a window that I liked very much, so we went in and I tried it on. It was becoming but I did not have enough money with me to pay for it, so I told them I would pay a deposit on it and come back for it as soon as I could get a check cashed in the neighborhood where I was visiting. The saleslady called the manager over and asked him about it and he said, "We will take your check. You look honest to me."

Whenever I go to Chicago, which is very often, I always manage to do my shopping at that store. H. E. H.

LESSONS IN AUCTION BRIDGE

By R. M. Rogers

ARTICLE 6.

Nearly half the success at bridge is due to skill in the bidding. Novices at the game either bid more than the hands warrant and incur a penalty or almost as often fail to handle the bidding advisedly enough to find the best declaration for the combined hands. A simple illustration of how this can happen would be for a dealer to make a bid, say of three diamonds when he holds the ace, king, queen at the top of six in the suit. He will probably make the three diamonds, but wouldn't go game, while if he had bid two diamonds his partner with such information would bid no trump and game would be made. If it was rubber game and only three diamonds were made while three no trumps could have been made and on the next deal the adversaries do go game there would be a difference of 600 points in the score.

One of the things never to be forgotten is that the first bid is for information to partner and not necessarily for the purpose of play. It is to tell if possible how many tricks the bidder holds under his declaration and how many he has in the event that his partner should change the bid. Three different stories are told by a bid of one or two or three, and last Sunday's article told the difference in those stories.

If each partner knows how to count the tricks in his hand and always tells the truth when he bids, then it should be a matter of no great difficulty to ascertain rather accurately what the best final bid should be either for going game or preventing adversary from going game, or doubling the adversary who goes too far.

Without the knowledge of how to correctly count the number of tricks in the hand a truthful informatory bid cannot be made, and with those players who don't have that knowledge, bidding becomes guesswork and luck, rather than skill.

In counting tricks as a bidder, always assume that partner, if he has not passed, has three tricks in support of your bid. Also assume that if you name a suit as trump your left hand adversary will always hold the highest three trumps not in your own hand.

With a suit as trump count all trumps left in hand after third round one trick each and each trump that will win first, second, or third round one trick each.

In a side suit count an ace and king two tricks, an ace or king and one or queen and two, one trick each, and all cards in a suit that is, or after it is established and can be brought in, one trick each.

As a partner of the suit bidder in the trump suit count K or Q and one, or three small trumps, one trick. Holding less than the above will produce loss of one trick. Excess of three trumps, one trick each, A or K-Q.

In a side suit: A or K-Q, two tricks; A-K, four tricks; K and one or Q and two, one trick. All cards in suit when established, one trick each.

As a bidder of no trump, count an A or K-Q one trick each; an A-K or K-Q-J two tricks, and K and one or Q and two one trick each; all cards in a suit after it is established, one trick each. In no trump partner counts his hand in the same way if called upon for support, except as below.

Note: When partner of a suit bidder counts his hand, he counts the aces as two tricks each and he should do the same thing when estimating his bid in support of partner's no trump. The opponent, however, in either case only counts an ace as worth one trick.

As opponent of a suit bidder count side suits: A or K-Q, one trick; A-K, two tricks; K-Q-J one trick. In trumps any trump card that will win first, second or third round, one trick; any trump left after third round, one trick.

As opponent of no trump bidder, cards in established suit, one trick each. Cards left in suit that can be established if hand holds card of reentry, one trick each. A or K-Q, one trick. A-K, two tricks. K-Q-J, two tricks.

When a partner has passed a bidder must assume that he can only find in his partner's hand two tricks in support of any bid that he makes. Illustration:

Farm Bureau's Summer Series to Begin Soon

135 Radio Stations Put U. S. Service on Air.

As the 1927-'28 winter broadcast season closes 135 commercial and college radio stations are coöperating with the United States department of agriculture in broadcasting educational farming and home making features.

The winter release schedule of the radio service of the department will terminate tomorrow. A summer program, including four features—housekeepers' chats, farm flashes, the farm news digest, and the agricultural situation—will be carried by most of the coöperating stations.

Make Plans for Winter

Plans now are in the making for the 1928-'29 winter season program of the department. The experience of the past two years—the first two years of the radio service—will guide the preparation of next season's program, according to Morse Salisbury, chief of the service. One important change will provide listeners of each major agricultural section with broadcasts of farming information specialized to fit farming conditions peculiar to their region.

Commenting on the growing appreciation of radio's possibilities as an educational medium, Salisbury pointed to the results of a 1927 survey among farmers of two Kansas counties. Federal and state extension workers report in the summary of the survey, just published, that 34.8 per cent of the 188 farmer radio listeners interviewed in Sedgwick and Clay counties, Kansas, adopted improved farming practices as a result of information obtained over radio.

Many Farmers Use It.

The extension workers talked with 532 farm families in the two counties. They found that 188 of the families had radios. Radio broadcasts received on these sets had caused directly the adoption of 156 different improved farming and home making practices—11 per cent of all improved practices adopted on the 532 farms in the 9 years since extension work was inaugurated in the two counties.

"Considering the fact that radio has been at work in these communities for not more than 5 years and extensively—as measured by the number of farm owned receiving sets—for much less than that period," said Salisbury, "these statistics indicate that radio is now and will increasingly be a most effective means of agricultural education."

Jeanne Gordon, Metropolitan Star, Will Sing Tonight

Jeanne Gordon, contralto with the Metropolitan Opera company will be the leading artist in the concert to be broadcast in the Atwater Kent radio hour tonight. The program will be broadcast by W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel. Assisting Miss Gordon will be a male chorus of sixteen voices under the direction of Reinald Werrenrath, popular American baritone; Phillip Bernolfo, cello soloist, and an orchestra with Robert Hood Bowers, conductor.

Miss Gordon will sing but two operatic numbers. She has selected from Mignon the song considered by many one of the loveliest in the entire range of opera—"Connaise tu le pays"—"Knowest thou yonder land where the orange grows?" It expresses the passionate longing of the orphan child for the home of her infancy.

Miss Gordon's other selection is the opening air from Carmen, "Haberna" or "Love Is Like a Wood Bird." This old Spanish song was interpolated by the composer. Bizet considered it particularly appropriate to the mood of Carmen who in the opening scene is piqued at Don José's indifference to her charms.

Miss Gordon is a Canadian and obtained most of her schooling at Havergal college in Toronto, and at the Toronto Conservatory of Music. She later studied abroad. Returning to New York, she sang for six weeks in motion picture houses before an engagement with Creatore and his orchestra brought her to public attention and started her on a rapid rise to the Metropolitan Opera company.

String Quartet and Tenor Give Program on W-G-N Thursday

String quartet music and the tenor voice of Walter Pontius—these are features which will make the 7:30 to 8 program next Thursday night from W-G-N particularly interesting to listeners. Mr. Pontius has received many ovations from radio listeners since becoming a member of the W-G-N vocal group, and his choice of songs and classic rendition of each number is well known. The string quartet will be heard in popular selections from the world's store of quartet music. The W-G-N string quartet includes William Levitt and George Wlado, violinists; Gaston du Moulin, violist, and Johann Lingeman, cellist. Du Moulin is the conductor of the W-G-N concert orchestra, while Lingeman is an internationally famous cellist. Levitt, the first violin, won first prize in last year's national contest conducted by the National Music Clubs' federation.

English Minister Talks Tonight at Sunday Eve Club

Dr. T. Ferrier Hulme, Bristol, England, leader of the Wesleyan Methodist church of Great Britain, will be the speaker before the Sunday Evening club in Orchestra hall tonight and his address will be broadcast by WMAQ.

At the 7 o'clock service Dr. Albert W. Palmer will deliver the last of his informal Bible talks on Old Testament characters entitled "Some Typical Saints and Sinners."

The choir of 100, under the direction of Edgar Nelson, will sing, while Mark Love will be the soloist of the evening.

ON TRIBUNE PROGRAMS

Michel Gusikoff.

Frederick Gunster.

Edwin Franko Goldman.

THREE of the artists who will be heard this week on chain programs from W-G-N, the Chicago Tribune station on the Drake Hotel. Mr. Gusikoff, concertmaster of numerous symphony orchestras and one of the country's leading violinists, and Mr. Gunster, a lyric tenor, will be heard Tuesday night, while Mr. Goldman, conductor of the Goldman band, will be on the air tomorrow night.

Dr. Copeland Smith's Question Box

A World of Free Men.

THE old, old question comes from Kingston avenue, Chicago: "Is it consistent to say that a just God would create man and permit him to live in such a way that he could sin and then punish him forever and ever because of that weakness?

There is a fault of logic known as begging the question. This question does it in several places. Sin is assumed to be weakness in a being free to do what he will. It also assumes as a matter that is settled amongst thinkers and Biblical students that a man who has been guilty of what my friend calls weakness will suffer forever and ever at the hands of God. That is not agreed by Biblical scholars as agreed Biblical teaching about punishment.

But the question remains and the answer is that there would have been no virtue in an automatic goodness. Man's freedom made him worth while to God—if I may bluntly put it like that. There were mechanical virtues enough in the universe and what God needed was somebody free to respond to His approaches—or to reject them.

I do not believe, personally, that God punishes folk for sinning against the conventions and restrictions which man creates. What He may punish man for is that unneighborliness and selfishness which opposes the best interests of that universal family to which we, with all living things, belong—and of which He is the All-Father. Another way of saying that is that God need not punish at all. The consequences of such selfishness are contained within the selfishness itself; just as the consequences of an unrestricted meat diet are contained within the diet itself and in our bodily reactions to it. To complain of that is to bring a charge against the constitution of the universe which seems as foolish as it is vain.

A Marriage Problem.

HERE is a story, which is probably typical of many. It comes from a lady here in Chicago, who says: I am 23 years of age and was married on the spur of the moment when 19, being divorced shortly after. I am now engaged to a school mate who knows all about the incident. We care for one another very much, but his mother seriously objects to our marriage. She thinks we are not suited to each other, and my being married before seems to her to be something terrible. She has a son at home who has recently got a divorce, but this seems quite all right to her. What do you think about it?

Quite a number of things. First of all, when I advocated a lethal chamber for interfering parents some time ago, I did so half seriously, but I am surprized to find that such a movement would be more or less popular. The mother has no business in the world to interfere, and you folk must brush her aside and settle your own future. I receive reports of at least ten tragedies a week through this cause. Vampire wives are very terrible persons, but I sometimes think that vampire mothers are worse. They exist and they are generally widows.

Of course, what one wants to know is the cause of your divorce. If it was due to some infidelity of your own, I doubt if you should not pay some of the price of that infidelity. That kind of thing makes the mothers of sons anxious for their happiness.

The root of the trouble is in that statement of yours that you were married on the spur of the moment. When the states of America will sacrifice some more of their state rights to allow the federal government to pass a law prohibiting marriage until at least three weeks' notice of marriage has been given, we may expect some drop in our mounting divorce statistics—and not till then.

* *

Who Was Lilith?

FROM North Marshfield avenue, Chicago, comes a question asking how it happens that, if Lilith was Adam's first wife, Eve is so designated in our Bible. My correspondent refers me to Webster's Dictionary for a references to Lilith.

But there are, of course, many references to Lilith. The name is translated into English to mean either a screech owl, a night monster, or a night fairy—the idea of night or darkness being predominant in all the translations. In the marginal readings of Isaiah 34 and verse 14, some Bibles have the word "Lilith" where the text has "night monster." In Jewish mythology this night monster had her abode in the region around the Dead Sea, and seems to have been a kind of goddess of desolation.

Not until the seventh century after Christ does she seem to be identified with Adam, when a group of Mesopotamian Jews worshipped her. They said she was the first wife of Adam, but fled away from him and became a demon. The whole story is mythological—the Greeks not being the only nation that possessed a mythology—though Rabbinical literature uses Lilith for the teaching of certain moral precepts.

Festivals Jesus Kept.

A QUESTION from Thorndale avenue, Chicago, raises the whole question of what importance the observance of the literal example of Christ has for the Christian. My questioner asks, "Why, if we are so eager to follow Christ, do we not keep the Jewish feasts which He kept?"

Christ wore sandals. They are inappropriate to our streets and our climate. Nobody could accuse him of being custom-ridden. Indeed, one of the charges most frequently made against Him was that He did not encourage His disciples to keep the ancient Jewish customs. But it really is surprising how many of the feasts He kept are kept by us. For instance, the Jews kept a feast in the summer time called the feast of tabernacles, reminding them of their nomad days. We city dwellers keep that same feast when we adjourn to the country cottage or the auto camping ground. Good Friday and Easter coincide with the Passover and we keep those days in much the same sense of the deliverance wrought in our lives by religion.

But Christ never expected His followers to be literalists in the matter of conduct. He only left one literal commandment concerning conduct. That was concerned with the Lord's supper which He told us to keep in remembrance of Him—though we don't do it in large numbers. For the rest, He expected us to use our own sanctified common sense in the application of His teaching to our own lives and, above all, to avoid criticism of those who thought and acted differently.

I AM asked from South Bend, Ind., whether it is possible to get below the accretions of the years and define the original Christian religion.

I think it is possible and I think it is necessary. Christ refused to place the religious emphasis upon belief. He put it up on conduct and condemned those who thought that reclamation came by merely believing.

The original Christian religion is found in the tenth chapter of Luke and the verses from the 25th to the end of the chapter. There, both the Jewish lawyer and the Nazarene defined religion to consist in loving the Lord our God with all our heart, mind, understanding, and strength—and our neighbor as ourself. The implications of all that are enough to occupy the thought of a lifetime and the moral courage of a hero. Christ died because of His resolute determination to be true to that creed, which brought him into conflict with the self-interest and prejudices of men.

I am not sure, however, that all the rest is accretion. Man is a thinking animal and, in the course of his thinking, it was inevitable that he should ask who was this that dared to change life's values—thus producing a theology of the personality of Christ. It was also inevitable that man should ask what were the implications of loving God and one's neighbor—thus producing a theology of Atonement.

But there is much that is the result of preconception and prejudice and this is accretion, of course.

N. T. Manuscripts.

FROM Darlington, Wis., comes a question that I will give exactly as received: The oldest extant manuscripts of which the Bible is composed were written about 350 years after Christ. Why say that our Bible is translated from the original Greek when the original has long since been lost?

There are several copies of the N. T. which are nearly complete, if not entirely so. Two of them, called, respectively, the Codex Siniaticus and the Codex Vaticanus, date from the middle of the fourth century. That is to say, they were written within 300 years of the death of Christ. The Siniaticus is a complete copy of the New Testament, with other books also, including the whole of the Old Testament and what is called the Epistle of Barnabas. The Vaticanus—so called because it lies in the vatican, at Rome, contains the whole of the New Testament to the Epistle to the Hebrews. Both are in Greek, the language in which the New Testament was originally written. Hence, they are in the original Greek.

There are, of course, many other manuscripts in addition to these, estimated to number 3,829. This figure refers only to Greek manuscripts, not to a larger multitude of ancient Latin copies, some of them quite as old as the oldest Greek copies. It was by checking these manuscripts with each other for variations that the translators got their present pure text of the original copies so that the phrase they use when speaking of translating from the original Greek seems entirely justified.

The authenticity of the writings of the N. T., as distinct from the actual text of the writings themselves, is proved by references from times almost contemporaneous with the New Testament itself. Thus, Polycarp, who died A. D. 146, makes actual quotations in his writings, obviously written before this date, from N. T. books. The field is a wide one and cannot be covered in a short answer, but the evidence for the date of the N. T. books grows stronger and more various every year.

Alaskan Hears Sunday Sermon Saturday Night

Listens to Preaching from Australia.

Hearing on Saturday night a sermon preached in Australia on Sunday night is one of the marvels attained through radio and reported by Dr. Grafton Burke, director of the Hudson Stuck Memorial hospital at Fort Yukon, Alaska. Dr. Burke has just arrived here from his Alaskan post.

On a recent Saturday night at Fort Yukon, trying for long distance, Dr. Burke picked up a sermon being preached on Sunday night at the English cathedral in Sydney, Australia. A short time later the same evening, he tuned in a jazz concert being broadcast from Broadway in New York.

"We heard the sermon distinctly," says Dr. Burke, "and the music from Broadway was good enough to dance to."

Difference in Time.

The feat of hearing on Saturday night Alaskan time, a sermon being preached on Sunday night in Sydney, Australian time, is accounted for by the fact that in adjusting the time between east and west, a whole day is lost [or gained]. Even so, radio enthusiasts will cast longing eyes at Dr. Burke who, perched at the top of the world, can face the west and from Australia across 5,000 miles of water hear a sermon; and, the service over, face the east and tune in on a jazz concert in New York.

Dr. Burke has succeeded at various time in getting Yokahama, Japan; Glasgow, Scotland; Portland, Ore.; San Francisco and Los Angeles; Dallas, Tex., Chicago and other points.

"Not so long ago," says Dr. Burke, whose hospital is part of the missionary enterprise of the Episcopal church in Alaska, "when I wanted to send an important telegram to New York, I had to hitch up a dog team and mush three days to an interior cable station, wait three days there for an answer and then mush three days back to the hospital—nine days in all. Today the government wireless station at Fort Yukon takes the message and I have a reply back in a few hours."

Hears Best When It's Dark.

Dr. Burke has a four unit radio outfit. He gets power for it from a storage battery charged from the gasoline engine which furnished light and power for his hospital.

Discussing conditions which affect radio reception in Alaska, Dr. Burke said he has observed that on nights when it is darkest, the greatest distance is attained. He says that intense cold does not in itself affect reception, but during the long winter when the country is frozen in, results are more satisfactory. With the break-up of winter, when factories begin operation, river traffic opens, electric plants resume activities, and wireless stations are in use, the radio results are less satisfactory.

Dr. Burke says the efficiency of missionary and medical work has been improved 100 per cent by the combined use of the radio and airplane. A year ago, when an influenza epidemic was raging in Fort Yukon, it was a radio broadcast which brought a Red Cross nurse and other assistance by airplane and saved the situation.

BY QUIN A. RYAN.

THE radio announcers we have with us always. They have become as much a part of our households as the goldfish and the world's fair spoons.

In considering this new guild of functionaries, all of us are inclined either to beam too indulgently as we contemplate our favorites among them, or, on the other hand, to think too derisively upon the shortcomings of the brethren as a whole. This isn't fair to the lads. They deserve neither the adulation they receive, nor yet the raspberry corsages.

Adulation only swells youthful heads that are too prone to inflation at the outset. The public's awe and admiration for the radio itself is fatuously taken to be awe and admiration for the individual, and lo! and behold! we find the young scalliwags commenting in the press on their art and their public and their cosmos, alongside of similar comments by "Miss Egg Rapids, Nebraska." The weather man is as much in the limelight as they are, but it doesn't go to his head.

And yet—my, my how they are picked on! In half a dozen Broadway revues there are sketches burlesquing the radio barkers. From any bundle of listeners' letters or newspaper clippings we may gather that, after they are admitted every evening into the domestic circles, their deportment is frightful.

We are told that they cut up with lugubrious humor—they make themselves fraternally chummy—they drop their r's or forget to—they gargle European pronunciations—they spout tedious pages from the music encyclopedias—they employ a phraseology as sparkling as a ventriloquist's—and they devote a large part of their prize fight and ball game broadcasts to advertising their partner announcers. Whew!

The ideal announcer, if we total the complaints of the radio devotees, should be a correctly proportioned compound of toastmaster, sports editor, professor of the romance languages, court jester, sophomore in psychology, operatic old timer, and Al Jolson. And, in theory, the man who acts as interlocutor in the widest show on earth, probably ought to be such a paragon. The operating budgets of this gratuitous business of broadcasting, of course, cannot attract a personage of these multi-colored talents.

The true trouble with the radio announcer is that he has had no mother to guide him. His work has no precedent. It has, generally speaking, no rules and regulations. His racket is so new that he is still undecided as to a demeanor for himself. Even such professions as burgling and umpiring have their traditions, but radio has none.

They're all nice boys—but they come in for a lot of bludgeoning because they are chosen like motormen. They run no gantlet of mental or personality tests. They have just "growed." in the manner of Topsy and corned beef hash. They have been accepted because they own nice voices, or because they can double in piano playing, or because they are old employés from another department. Unless they are downright awful, the letters of commendation will come romping in, and then their jobs are safe.

The best of the announcers are only good readers. The more pompous and wise they sound in their introductions, the more you may be sure they are reading something that has been written for them by sombody else on the premises. But, like small time vaudevillians, much of their spare time is devoted to braggadocio. One of our Chicago voices whose pearly words were written for him by other men, has often boasted that his voice is so well known that he need never announce his call letters—yet, at the same time, he shouts his name on every occasion, for sweet publicity's sake.

Announcers ought to be spanked.

SAMUEL PUTNAM, writing his fortnightly sketch from Paris in "The Chicagoan"—"One has to live in Paris to realize, though the aware few elsewhere are suspecting it, that the old arts are as dead as the proverbial doornail or American prohibition, . . . In the meanwhile, new arts are flourishing all around us back home. There is the cinema, the first great and truly popular art, as some one has remarked, since the Gothic cathedrals and the chansons de geste. There is the popular sports writer, who has done more things to the language—but suppose we sidestep comparisons, being content to remark, merely, that there is more literature in the baseball and prize fight columns than in any 'literary supplement.' Then there is the radio and the radio announcer. Our Quin Ryans have done much here. Yes, there are lusty young arts frolicking all about us, but most of us are too highbrow to see them, while they think themselves too lowbrow to be anything so highbrow as art, if you know what I mean. And these infantile arts are coming, not out of Paris, but out of America."

Secrecy Claimed by Dutch Inventor

LONDON.—Interest is shown here in the report that a young Dutch inventor claims to have discovered a method whereby absolutely "secret" wireless telegraph and telephone messages may be transmitted without involving wave distortion. He says that, if necessary, ten secret messages may be sent simultaneously.

THE GUMPS AUSTRALIA
SIDNEY SMITH
WOULDN'T YOU LIKE TO BE LUCKY LITTLE CHESTER AND HAVE A RICH UNCLE TAKE YOU ON HIS PALATIAL AIRSHIP FOR A WONDERFUL VACATION IN AUSTRALIA? NICE THINGS TO EAT - LOTS OF TOYS AND EVERYTHING A BOY COULD WANT TO MAKE EVERY DAY SEEM LIKE CHRISTMAS?
OH, BOY! I DREAMPT I WAS A LITTLE ROBIN - AND A GREAT BIG HAWK WAS CHASING ME IN AND OUT AMONG THE STARS - I GUESS THAT'S BECAUSE I'M NOT USED TO SLEEPING A MILE ABOVE THE CLOUDS -
2
THIS MUST BE THE MOST WONDERFUL AIRSHIP IN THE WORLD - IT'S JUST LIKE A GREAT BIG BEAUTIFUL HOTEL - WHEN I TELL THE KIDS AT HOME ABOUT THIS SHIP THEY'LL NEVER BELIEVE ME -
IF YOU PLEASE, SIR - YOUR UNCLE BIM WISHES TO SEE YOU IN THE CHART ROOM - WHEN YOU HAVE QUITE FINISHED YOUR REPAST - THANK YOU. SIR
I'VE HAD ENOUGH BREAKFAST - TELL UNCLE BIM I'M COMING RIGHT AWAY - WHAT WOULD COLUMBUS - MAGELLAN - CAPT. COOK AND THE OTHER DARING SEA ROVERS OF THE PAST THINK IF THEY SHOULD COME TO LIFE AND SEE A MODERN AIRSHIP MAKING A TRIP IN SAFETY AND COMFORT - IN LESS THAN ONE WEEK - THAT COST THOSE EARLY NAVIGATORS MONTHS AND EVEN YEARS OF SUFFERING AND HARDSHIPS?
BY MERELY GLANCING AT THIS INSTRUMENT BOARD - THE PILOT LEARNS HOW MANY MILES PER HOUR THE SHIP IS TRAVELING - THE PRESSURE OF THE AIR - THE HEIGHT ABOVE SEA LEVEL - DIRECTION OF AIR CURRENTS - AND A SCORE OF OTHER IMPORTANT THINGS CONCERNING AERIAL NAVIGATION - GEE WHIZ! I'LL BET HE WISHES THEY HAD SIGNS AND STOP LIGHTS UP IN THE CLOUDS -
I SUPPOSE, CHESTER, WHEN YOU GROW UP YOU'LL WAN'T TO BE AN NAVIGATOR -
WHEN I GROW UP I'M GOING TO BE CAPTAIN OF THE BIGGEST AND FASTEST AND FINEST AIRSHIP IN THE WHOLE WORLD -
I CAN SEE A TINY LITTLE TOY STEAM SHIP - WAY WAY DOWN THERE ON THE OCEAN -
TAKE MY GLASSES - AND YOU WILL SEE THAT "TOY STEAM SHIP" IS A MAIL BOAT FROM THE ORIENT CARRYING THOUSANDS OF PASSENGERS -
I'M GOING TO WRITE A LETTER TO MY PAPA AND MAMA - AND TO MY SCHOOL TEACHER - AND ALL THE KIDS THAT I KNOW AT HOME - I'LL TELL THEM ABOUT WHAT A NICE TIME I AM HAVING AND WHAT I SAW - AND EVERYTHING -
TIRED BUT HAPPY - CHESTER IS SOUND ASLEEP - DREAMING OF HOME - WHILE THE MAMMOTH AIRSHIP LIKE A SILVER COMET SPEEDS SWIFTLY THROUGH THE NIGHT ON ITS WAY TO AUSTRALIA -

I'M GOING TO SEE WHY THIS WATER IS IN SUCH A HURRY TO GET SOMEWHERE
GASOLINE ALLEY
-KING
MORE RAIN! WELL IT'S GOOD FOR THE GROWING THINGS EVEN IF IT ISN'T SO NICE FOR BOYS THAT WANT TO PLAY
WHERE DOES ALL THE WATER GO, UNCA WALT?
SOME IS EVAPORATED INTO THE AIR BY THE SUN, SOME STAYS IN THE SOIL, AND SOME SOAKS DOWN TO THE ROCK BENEATH.
SOME OF THE WATER RUNS ALONG ON THE ROCK AND FINALLY COMES OUT IN A LITTLE SPRING-LIKE THIS.
AND WHERE DOES THIS WATER GO TO?
IT TRAVELS AS A TINY LITTLE STREAM UNTIL IT MEETS ANOTHER STREAM AND THEY JOIN HANDS AND GO DOWN THE VALLEY TOGETHER
THEY FIND OTHER LITTLE BROOKLETS AND TOGETHER GROW LARGER AND LARGER DOES IT ALL COME FROM LITTLE SPRINGS, UNCA WALT?
IT DOES EXCEPT JUST AFTER A RAIN. NOW YOU SEE IT'S BIG ENOUGH TO BE CALLED A BROOK OR A CREEK.
LET'S SEE WHERE IT GOES NEXT.
IT MEETS OTHER BROOKS AND THEY BECOME A RIVER.
IT TAKES A LOT O' SPRINGS TO MAKE A RIVER.
THEN THE RIVER SOMETIMES FLOWS INTO A LAKE AND SPREADS OUT SO THAT YOU CAN'T SEE THAT IT MOVES AT ALL.
DOES IT STOP HERE?
NO IT FLOWS OUT OF THE LAKE AGAIN AND KEEPS ON FINDING STREAMS AND OTHER RIVERS.
LET'S GO SEE.
IT BECOMES A GREAT RIVER THAT ALL SORTS OF BOATS AND STEAMSHIPS CAN TRAVEL ON.
AND IT MAKES A PLACE FOR THE FISHES TO LIVE.
THEN AT LAST IT GETS TO THE SEA AND LOSES ITSELF IN THE MIGHTY OCEAN WHICH IS FED BY COUNTLESS RIVERS LIKE THIS ONE DOES THE OCEAN FILL UP?
IT WOULD, BUT THE SUN PULLS THE WATER UP INTO THE CLOUDS AGAIN AND THEY MAKE THE RAIN THAT FILLS THE SPRINGS.
DOESN'T IT EVER GET TIRED, UNCA WALT?

HEAD OF THE SUBD. SALES DEPT.,
1009 N. State-st.
KRENN & DATO, Inc.,
Exclusive agent for the Edith Rockefeller McCormick Properties.

A BIG MAN MENTALLY.

A prominent Illinois corporation, whose operations are international in their scope, has grown so rapidly for the past two years that it has become necessary for us to promote a large number of star salesmen to executive positions.

We have interviewed hundreds of men to pick the highest class selling organization we believe has ever been assembled. We are not so much interested in salesmen as we are in men of an executive caliber. Our growth has been so phenomenal that our executive staff has not developed in keeping with our sales staff and we have a number of openings for exceptional men to spend a short period of time learning our business and then step into a bigger position.

We have approximately 400 men operating on our sales staff. Many of these men earn as high as $300 to $500 per week.

Many of our territories are worth $2,500 to $10,000 per year on repeat business alone. This enables us to select our men very carefully before we give them gratis this amount of commissions on previously worked up business.

We are not interested unless you have previously earned $6,000 per year or better; unless you can make contact with big men and talk to them on a basis of equality; unless you have a record of honesty and integrity; unless you are between the ages of thirty and forty-five. Please do not waste our time or yours unless you have the above qualifications.

You may phone the undersigned for an appointment, and, should you be able to interest us over the phone, we will give you a personal interview. Superior 0835. Mr. Walter Jordan, or address Y E 59, Tribune.

A NEW IDEA.

Men to work nights on our property.

We have started our $50,000 newspaper advertising campaign.

We will have flood lights on our property at night which will make it as bright as day. These flood lights will show the houses sponsored by the Herald and Examiner, of which we are building 20. Also, balance of property will be lighted.

Streets are now being paved; 14 miles of sewer mains about completed; 16 miles of water mains laid; 18 miles of sidewalks finished; thousands of electric ornamental lamp posts installed. Thousands of trees ordered. Houses finished and already occupied.

Ideal lots, $790. $118 down.

Flood Lights. Flood Lights.

We are starting right now to build a community development adjacent to Park Ridge. We are proud of it and what we are doing and for the convenience of people who cannot go out during the day we will show this community development at night. Also free Moving Picture Shows right on the property.

We need men and women to take care of people out at the property after 8 p. m.

Highest commission and real co-operation.

You can make a valuable connection with us if you act at once. Experience is not necessary, as we train you.

JENNINGS & GAHAGAN
REALTY CORPORATION.
Suite 415, 77 W. Washington-st.

A REAL FUTURE.

A large manufacturing concern with a million dollar rating, established 31 years, has opening for a high grade specialty salesman.

To save our time and yours please analyze yourself and if you feel that you can measure up to our qualifications we want to talk to you personally. Our man must be between the ages of 25 and 50. He must have a pleasing personality, a good record and ability TO DO WHAT HE IS TOLD AND DO IT CONSTANTLY. He is now ready to make just one more change and then stick.

We co-operate with national and direct by mail advertising. This is not stocks, bonds, real estate, insurance, nor house to house, but high grade equipment, sold to a large classification of retail merchants.

This is a permanent position with an excellent opportunity for rapid promotion to district sales manager's position. If you feel you can qualify, phone J. J. Paskell, State 8700, after 9 a. m. Monday. Out of town applicants, address Y J 112, Tribune.

A SALESMAN

Apply in person, Room 1352, First National Bank Bldg., between 9 and 1.

A MAN OF EXCEPTIONAL MENTALITY

A manufacturer, rated AAA1, operating nationally, has an opening for a man of successful selling experience. Prefer one who has met and sold chief executives, although in the final analysis personality will be the determining factor.

We are not so much interested in a salesman as we are in a man with potential executive ability—one who can learn our business and then qualify to direct others. For such a man there is a brilliant future.

This is not stocks, bonds, real estate, insurance, check writers, or books. NOR IS IT POSTERS.

Do not investigate unless you feel confident that your services are worth $8,000 per year or more.

We can use a man immediately in each of the following territories: Minneapolis, Detroit, Indianapolis, Kansas City, St. Louis, Cincinnati, Northern Indiana and 1 for Wisconsin. There is no Chicago territory available.

We will grant you a personal interview if you are able to interest us over the telephone. Phone D. F. Burns on Monday for an appointment. Randolph 4745; or, if you prefer, address Y J 217, Tribune.

A $1,000 BONUS FOR $50,000 BUSINESS.

Polish, Lithuanian, Greek, Bohemian and Italian sales managers only.

An established real estate concern which never has conducted a foreign department is about to organize one on a basis where managers can make more money than has heretofore been possible in such a position. You must be a producer and have a record for big sales; must hire your own men and know how to develop your own leads through advertising, circularization and canvassing.

Have south side property only which sells readily; well known district; will pay more commission than you are now getting and will allow liberal drawing accounts to those whose records entitle them to this accommodation. Here's an opportunity greater than you realize, have millions in property and hundreds of business lots, including valuable corners. Also well developed building plan.

If you are now employed it will pay you to investigate this superior opportunity for making money. Apply in person only. Ask for Mr. Cryer.

An old established real estate and construction company has placed 30,000 people in their homes in the past 20 years, want a high class representative to call on prospects obtained from newspaper advertising and to make appointments to show our model homes.

This position is not created from a newspaper campaign but from steady, consistent newspaper advertising which makes this organization one of the best known in the field.

To the right man experience in this line is not essential and we will teach you the business. $75 to $100 a week should be the compensation for the man who will work six to eight hours a day. This is not a canvassing proposition. References will be required. Write at once, stating your qualifications.

Address P B 77, Tribune.

ATTENTION, MEN WHO WILL WORK.

I mean really be on the job 8 or 10 hours if necessary, and who sincerely want to earn money—not just spend the time looking for something easy.

Let us talk it over. Call Room 1617 Tribune Tower, 9 to 5 daily, 7 to 10 Monday and Tuesday evenings.

An old established real estate and construction company who has placed 30,000 people in their homes in the past 20 years want a high class representative to call on prospects obtained from newspaper advertising and to make appointments to show our model homes.

This position is not created from a newspaper campaign but from steady, consistent newspaper advertising which makes this organization one of the best known in the field.

BARTLETT'S BUSINESS IS GOOD.

We need women to assist us with our thousands of qualified leads.

Our stenographic force has been enlarged to enable us to get out the leads to our sales force while fresh. We want real saleswomen who will honestly and conscientiously work with us. When you work with us you work as a saleswoman, not as a potential buyer.

For this we make an expense allowance and pay you a liberal commission. This firm is leading its field today because we do as we say and give our sales force all the co-operation possible.

We are anticipating the opening of a new development, and it's up to you to get in NOW, at the opening of the season. It should be your chance to earn more real cash than in any other line today. If you think you are the woman for us, come in and talk it over. Apply Monday between 9 a. m. and 5 p. m. Ask for Miss N. Ball.

A NEW PROFESSION MAKES ITS ANNOUNCEMENT TO WOMEN.

Ten years ago a Chicago woman started alone in a new work—today it is one of the most important professions for women.

In this new work hundreds of women with some educational background are making splendid incomes, ranging from $2,500 to $6,000 per year.

The founder of this profession for women is Mrs. Olive Beaupre Miller, the creator and editor of The Book House Group.

Mrs. Miller explains the purpose of her work when she says:

> "My earnest wish is to place the whole matter of reading before you in its true light, as the very basis of your child's thought, of his views of life, of the moral and ethical standards he is forming, the spirit that is awakening and quickening in him, the character that is unfolding."

Now women all over the country, personal representatives of Mrs. Miller, explain to mothers the use and value of My Bookhouse. None of them feel they could be engaged in work that contributes more to human welfare and happiness.

MORE OF THESE FORWARD-LOOKING, AMBITIOUS WOMEN ARE NEEDED TO CARRY ON MRS. MILLER'S WORK.

Progress in character-building reading for children has been so rapid during the past two or three years that twice as many women are needed to engage in this work at once.

Experience is unnecessary. Mrs. Miller's system of "Right Reading for Children" is fully explained and outlined to you by trained members of this organization. Then personal assistance is given until you have become a regular staff member.

In deciding to look into this matter now, please consider that you may be doing TWO GREAT THINGS FOR YOURSELF: First:

Getting into work that will give you daily inspiration and new happiness.

Second:

Greatly increasing your income in pleasant educational work with mothers.

Call or write Miss Sheerer, The Bookhouse for Children at 360 North Michigan avenue, Chicago, Illinois. Telephone Dearborn 8957.

CO-OPERATIVE APTS.
If you want a moderately priced co-operative apt. this is the last chance to get it. We have a few apts. left in the 3 story walk-up buildings, and when these are sold there will be no more east of Broadway and south of Grace-st. There are no other apts. for sale today except in the tall bldgs. and priced accordingly. Our locations are just as good, our prices are less than half. Take the same advantage the earlier buyers have. A LOW PRICED APT. IN A HIGH PRICED LOCALITY. Walk up to your apartment and SAVE ONE-HALF IN PRICE and upkeep. Just use common sense in buying a co-operative home.

REAL ESTATE LOANS.

SECOND MORTGAGE LOANS

Suppose your first mortgage is well made, that is to say, it is well made with respect to maturity, prepayments, interest, and other favorable conditions.

It is pretty tough on a well made first mortgage to have to be associated with a second mortgage which is not made so well.

For the sake of the well made first mortgage, why not give consideration to making a second mortgage that the first won't be ashamed of?

The Morris Plan Bank as agent makes second mortgage loans that firsts aren't ashamed of. The maturities are right, the pre-payments are right, the interest is right, and the commission is right; in addition to which, the loan being made through the good offices of a strong state bank, the home owner is assured that all of his interests are properly protected.

While our rates are pretty generally known, it won't hurt for us to tell them to you again; 6% accruing interests and a commission which works out as follows:

$35.00 PER $1,000 FOR 1 YEAR.
$65.00 PER $1,000 FOR 2 YEARS.
$90.00 PER $1,000 FOR 3 YEARS.

LINCOLN

Quality and Service at Average Car Cost

Contrary to the belief of many automobile enthusiasts, it is not necessary to possess wealth in order to own and drive that supreme motor car—a Lincoln. The splendid reconditioned Lincolns, offered exclusively by AUTHORIZED DEALERS, put Lincoln luxury within the reach of the man who would otherwise purchase a new car of ordinary quality. His Lincoln will give him more miles of motoring, with greater comfort and satisfaction, than he could get anywhere else on a similar investment.

The reconditioned models sold by AUTHORIZED LINCOLN DEALERS are, almost without exception, as serviceable as the day they left the factory. Each is put in perfect mechanical condition by specially trained Lincoln mechanics before being offered to a new owner. Each has the appearance of pristine newness, every mark of use having been erased in the reconditioning process. You will probably have to be told which cars are new and which reconditioned when you visit the showrooms of your nearest AUTHORIZED DEALER.

Be sure to see him before you buy your next car. He'll give you the history of every reconditioned Lincoln on his floors, explain the unqualified guarantee that goes with each, and arrange terms to suit your convenience. Your present car may be applied as part payment.

DISTRIBUTORS WANTED.
Chicago, Ind., Minn., Mo.

Huntley Mfg. Co., Brooklyn, N. Y., established in 1853, will consider applications immediately from four men of good character to take over distribution of their line in the Chicago district, also the Indiana, Minn., and Missouri territories.

We have a remarkable product, a strong international personnel and tremendous financial resources, and we are accepted by the wholesaler and jobber, who you will sell in carload lots, as the oldest and most powerful corporation in the east, having the world's largest and most magnificent plant manufacturing our particular line.

Unusual activity in our field in the Middle West forces us to meet a competitive market on a local distributor basis, which is a decided change from our seventy-five year old policy of operating exclusively from our main plants at Brocton, N. Y., and subsidiary factories at Tillsonburg, Ont., Canada, but has been employed with unusual success during the last few years by our competitors, and therefore provides a brand new formula for us, and also offers a real opportunity for four men only to fill a newly created, attractive permanent position, of a caliber seldom offered by an establishment as internationally famous as "Huntley of Brocton."

R. G. Dun & Co. rate us AA1. This authentic information is very important to you because you have turned to the business opportunity page of this newspaper for investment, and this is just such an opportunity and is only open to applicants who have anticipated exactly this type of an opening in the future, and have sufficient good judgment and vision in handling their affairs in the past, that they are now able to invest $1,000 to $1,200 immediately to finance part of their initial distribution supply. The general rule of computing a fair return on an investment cannot be applied in this instance, for this is an investment plus your personal services and should show a profit of about $750 monthly, which should appeal to the progressive man who has found difficulty in selecting a profitable and dependable business that can be operated with such moderate capital with reasonable prospects of realizing profits within a comparatively short time.

Applicant must be over 30 years of age, preferably one who has had some experience conducting a business of his own or directing others, and to such a man experience in our line will not be necessary. Write fully about yourself in strict confidence to address below, stating qualifications, references, age, nationality, religion, and territory interested in and our Mr. J. S. Francis will come out to Chicago and interview you in a week.

[Executive Offices], Brocton, N. Y.

COTTON MARKETS EASIER

Although the sentiment in the cotton trade is bullish, based on delayed planting and indications of much replanting, with rains over a considerable territory and buying by Wall Street and the south, there was sufficient profit taking to carry prices down and make a close at around the lowest of the day, with net losses on futures in Chicago 4 to 12 points, while other markets were off 1 to 8 points.

Spots were 10 points lower at 21.75c in New York and unchanged in New Orleans at 21.10c. Houston was 21c and Galveston 21.05c. Liverpool closed unchanged to 1 point lower, with sales of 3,000 bales.

There was buying toward the last on a frost warning from Washington covering east Tennessee, northern Georgia, eastern Alabama and the Carolinas. Prices follow:

THE CALLAHAN SALES COMPANY, FORMERLY DISTRIBUTORS FOR THE AIR WAY VACUUM CLEANER,

on Tuesday, April 24, the Airway organization that they built gave a banquet to M. J. Callahan and F. C. Callahan at the La Salle hotel. There were over 200 present. They showed the most wonderful spirit of loyalty that has ever been shown to men. The organization represented the work of over 5 years of the Callahans, who started business Jan. 29, 1923, and did nearly a million dollar business in 1927 with the co-operation and loyalty of the organization. At the banquet the organization gave each of the Callahans a loving cup 2½ ft. high, with all of their names engraved on it; 70% of the men that were in the sales organization 4 years ago are still there. The Callahans started without a man and hired and trained every one of them and it is stated that they are the highest class, highest type, highest paid sales organization in Chicago. This wonderful sales organization had to be given up by the Callahan Sales Co. and taken over by the Airway on account of a 10 day notice in their contract. Some firm, some place, somewhere have something to sell that needs experienced, house to house organization men to sell it. If you have something of merit to sell which requires sales organization men, address us or call in person.

Instant Results on House Property

"I had unavailingly expended time, money and effort to sell my apartment building. I reconciled myself to the fact that I had a "lemon," and decided to desist from further endeavor. However, my wife was confident that she knew where any house, if saleable, could be sold. She inserted a three day ad in The Tribune and the following day greeted me with the news that she had a present for me. To my surprise it was 15 applications for our house, secured by The Tribune Want Ads! We found it easy to make a satisfactory sale."

Regardless of Season Vacant Apartments Are Tenanted with Desirable Families Through Tribune Want Ads

"Saturday, November 11, I placed an ad in The Tribune Want Ad Section describing an apartment I wanted to rent. By 11 a. m. the apartment had been rented to a very desirable party. The best part of it was that so many people answered the ad I was able to pick a family that I believed best answered my requirements. I never knew that renting out of season could be so easy!"

Tribune Want Ads Move Farm Lands as Easily as City Property

"I was ill and my Doctor advised me to leave Illinois and move to California. This meant that I had to sell my farm.

"At that time I knew that there was little demand for farm lands, but in the face of this I advertised my farm for sale in a Tribune Want Ad.

"I received 17 answers in 4 days, and sold the farm to the first applicant 72 hours after I had received his inquiry, accepting $11,000 as first payment."

Agents Maintain 85 to 95% Occupancy in Hotels Through Tribune Want Ads

"During the past six months a number of our hotels, namely: The Lincoln Park West, The Belmont Harbor, The Commodore, The Kenmore Beach and The Nautilus—all Bannerman projects, have advertised exclusively in The Tribune Want Ad Section.

"During this time we have successfully and quickly filled one of these hotels that was opened for occupancy June 1, and we have likewise been able to maintain an 85 to 95% occupancy in all our other hotels.

"Naturally we try to maintain in these hotels an atmosphere of attractive refinement which will appeal to discriminating people. We feel, however, that the advertising we have done in The Want Ad Section of The World's Greatest Newspaper has been of paramount importance in keeping these hotels well filled."

The Selling Power of Tribune Ads Sways Buyers in Distant Cities

"When I found that I could not sell a house of ours locally, I used The Chicago Tribune. Within four days five letters came asking for details. But another prospect called in person. She lived in Grand Rapids, but wanted to move to Jackson, so she answered my ad. Two days later she and her husband bought my white elephant for cash. I made $1,500 on that single Tribune Ad."

$10,000 Worth of Business from a Single Ad

"I inserted a three line ad in your paper under 'Real Estate Loans' and received several replies. I made a $10,000 loan on a good piece of property. I never would have believed that $2.60 would buy $10,000 worth of good substantial business. It took The Chicago Tribune to change my mind. Yours for business."

A Tribune Want Ad Swings a $200,000 Apartment House Deal

"I was in Cincinnati closing up an exchange of Cincinnati property for 12th street property in Chicago. I met Mr. A. E. Foster, who owned the Elberon Apartments on Price Hill, Cincinnati. He stated that he had been trying to dispose of them but had not met with much success. He placed the property in my hands to exchange. Upon my return to Chicago, I placed a four line ad in The Sunday Tribune. I received a reply from Cincinnati making a tentative offer. I returned there and closed the deal for what is now known as the Robinson Apartments for fifty lots, two flat buildings, some cash, and assumed a mortgage, the whole involving about $200,000. I received a good commission and returned home about $5,000 better off—all through a four line ad in the Sunday Edition of The World's Greatest Newspaper."

Distant Timber Lands—These Too Find Buyers in The Tribune Market

In every type of Real Estate Deal- Tribune Want Ads produce results!

EVERY year The Tribune Want Ad Section prints more real estate advertising than its three greatest competitors combined. Perhaps an explanation of this could be expressed in terms of markets—in comparisons that would show how The Tribune's weekday circulation, in city and suburbs alone, exceeds the total weekday circulation of any other Chicago newspaper — by computing the greater wealth of The Tribune's Market compared to that of any other media. But—

Above circulation . . . above wealth . . . above numbers, moves the spirit that makes Tribune Want Ads the greatest real estate medium in Chicago, and this is the responsiveness of Tribune Want Ad readers. A responsiveness that makes it possible for the man with a $200,000 apartment building for sale to find a buyer in The Tribune Market as promptly as the woman with a four room flat to sublet can find a tenant.

On this page are printed the actual experiences of real estate owners. The range of the transactions they recount covers everything from timber land to co-operative apartments . . . yet basically every one of them strikes this note:

Regardless of the type of deal involved the results were satisfactory!

It is in this, then, that the leadership of Tribune Want Ads as a real estate sales medium lies! Real estate dealers and owners have learned from experience that no matter what type of property they have to sell The Tribune Market offers the greatest opportunities for a profitable deal.
